PLAINFIELD EVENING NEWS.

ESTABLISHED 1884. PLAINFIELD, N. J., "THE COLORADO OF THE EAST," TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1891. PRICE TWO CENTS.

—Don't forget the grocers' excursion to Boynton Beach on Labor Day.

—A person wounded must die within a year and a day to make the person inflicting the wound guilty of murder.

—Col. Rhodes of Elizabeth will drill Crescent Division, Uniformed Rank, Knights of Pythias, at the Crescent Rink Wednesday evening.

—Mr. John V. Miller of Laing's Hotel, in another column, advertises that it as a first-class family resort and that special attention is paid to permanent and transient guests.

—The State Board of Taxation visited Elizabeth yesterday and inspected the work of the Union County Board of Assessors, with which they express themselves as being much gratified.

—Graceland, a new station on the Central road is at present being "boomed." It is a prettily situated place and will grow. An advertisement in another column will give information to prospective buyers.

—Mr. John McGrath, the Irish comedian is to appear at the Elkwood to-night in one of his original sketches. Mr. McGraff is not only said to be a good comedian but is also said to be one of the best clog dancers in the business.

—There were 196 failures in the United States reported to Bradstreet's during the week, against 181 in the preceding week and 134, 176, 186 and 143 in the corresponding weeks of 1890, 1889, 1888 and 1887 respectively. The total number of failures in the United States January 1st to date is 7,926 against 6,797 in 1890.

—Mr. M. Sequine, the proprietor of Laing's Livery Stables, began business in this city five years ago, and has now been in the livery business twenty years. Thoroughly understanding it in every branch, he caters for the best class of trade. By the most honest services have been and will continue to be appreciated by the people of Plainfield. He keeps no broken down horses or carriages and only gentlemanly and attentive drivers. Should drivers in any case address you, and the consumer will report the fact, it never occurs a second time. Boarded horses receive the best of care. His advertisement appears in another column.

—Concerning the World's Fair at Chicago, an exchange says: "There seems to be little prospect that the railroads will accede to the general demand for half-fare rates on exhibits both ways. The concessions they offer will do exhibitors little good. They propose to charge full rates on exhibits up to the Exposition and return them free if unsold. It is admitted that most of the goods coming here to be exhibited at the World's Fair never will be returned, but will be sold here after the Exposition is over, and consequently annoying the peace and quietness of the neighborhood. She refused to accompany the officers to the station house and they did not wish to use any unnecessary force, they procured a carriage and drove her handed her behind the bars. She is an old offender and has given the public considerable trouble.

When arraigned before City Judge Codington this morning she pleaded guilty to the charge and was sentenced to the county jail for sixty days.

Saturday's Races.

There were several interesting trotting events on the track of the Gentlemen's Driving Park Saturday afternoon.

The first race was between Charles Brower's horse, "Reputation," John Osborne's "Atone" and John Hayes' "Andy." "Reputation" won both heats. Time 2.42½ and 2.48.

Chas. Brower's "Shamrock" and Mr. Morris' "Lammermoor" trotted the next race. "Shamrock" won the first heat in 2.34½ and "Lammermoor" the second in 2.34½.

A race to road wagons between J. W. Johnson's "Colonel" and Nat Robbins' "Doctor," followed. "Colonel" won both heats. Time 2.49½ and 2.49½.

Mr. O. T. Waring's "Copeland" trotted one-half a mile in 1.18½.

THAT DECOMPOSED BODY.

It Has Not as Yet Been Identified.

The remains of the unfortunate young man which were found Saturday under the bridge which crosses the lake in the rear of Mr. John I. Holly's farm on Park avenue yesterday still lie in one of the barns on the grounds of the Gentlemen's Driving Park on Park avenue, awaiting identification. Several persons viewed the remains yesterday with a view to identifying them but they all failed to do so.

It was thought yesterday that the body was that of John Hampshire, a blacksmith who was employed on the large coal storage plant of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company at South Plainfield. He disappeared about two weeks ago, after receiving his pay, but it is thought that he returned to Pennsylvania to join his wife and child. People who are well acquainted with him say that he is a larger man, and that the body found does not resemble him in any way. Another missing man is a Mr. Jacob Lipsker, a travelling salesman, residing in Jersey City. During the afternoon of yesterday Constable Soper who has charge of the remains gave a permit to Aaron Wolburg of 411 Grove street, Jersey City. Mr. Wolburg is the father-in-law of Lipsker. He said he thought the body might be that of his son-in-law, and he hoped to identify it by means of a badly bruised fore-finger on the left hand. The flesh was so much decomposed that an examination of the hand was impossible. From the general appearance of the remains, however, Mr. Wolburg said they were not those of Jacob Lipsker.

The affair is just as much of a mystery as ever. Some people are still of the belief that a foul murder has been committed and others think that the young man was accidentally drowned or committed suicide.

As reported in THE NEWS of yesterday, the coroner's inquest was set down for this afternoon at two o'clock.

The Dog a Nuisance.

Mr. J. M. Schorb, Jr., was arrested recently on a complaint of Mr. George Brown of Craig place, North Plainfield. Schorb was charged with violating the borough ordinances inasmuch that a dog that accompanied him home late at nights was a nuisance and disturbed the peace and quietness of that vicinity by barking. Mr. Brown's wife is ill and the noise disturbed her very much. Schorb had been requested on several occasions to go by another route or leave the dog at home. This he refused to do and as stated above his arrest followed. Last evening he was given a trial before borough magistrate Crossley, adjudged guilty and fined two dollars and costs. Borough Counsel Chas. Scott Love represented the borough. A large crowd was present at the trial.

The Bicycle Recovered.

The bicycle belonging to Mr. Wallace V. Miller, which was advertised as stolen, in yesterday's NEWS has been recovered. Yesterday morning Mr. Preston of 17 West Second street noticed a wheel standing in front of her house. As it was raining at the time she took it inside. When she saw the advertisement in yesterday's NEWS she immediately sent word to Mr. Miller and he is now in possession of his safety. It is thought that the person who stole the bicycle became frightened and abandoned it where it was found.

A Highwayman Arrested.

John Warne, the negro who held up and robbed a hotel-keeper named Meeker at Union, a few miles from this city, was taken to that village yesterday and arraigned before Justice Woodruff. Mr. Meeker charged the prisoner with atrocious assault and robbery, while Wm. Sayles charged him with assaulting his ten-year-old daughter Annie. The prisoner denied the latter charge, but said he would admit Meeker's complaints and plead guilty to save the county any expense. He was remanded to the jail.

A Bicyclist Injured.

Saturday afternoon, two men who were seated in light wagons were racing their horses on South avenue. When near Netherwood one of the wagons collided with a bicyclist who was mounted on a high bicycle. The wheelman was thrown violently to the ground. His chin and hand were cut. Dr. Fritts who was passing at the time examined the young man's injuries and found they were not of a serious nature.

Injured by a Horse.

Frank Hand of Somerset street, met with a painful accident yesterday afternoon. He is a blacksmith and was engaged shoeing a horse. The animal is a mustang and when Mr. Hand attempted to shoe it it began kicking and prancing around in a wild manner. While attempting to quiet the horse it jumped on Mr. Hand's right foot and badly crushed it.

—Prophet Devoe claims that producing rain with explosions means killing frosts. Interrupting nature's laws upsets the weather system. The experiments in Texas, he says, have caused the heavy hail-storms in the West, and he predicts that if the Government persists in bringing down rains in some States the farmers in others will sue, on the ground that their rights have been interfered with. This would result in a bigger drain on the Treasury than the pension list. It is evident that Devoe will not tolerate rivals in his "weather trade."

Balmaceda and Abbett.

There is a parallelism between the political events in New Jersey during the past month or two, and those which led to the war in Chili. President Balmaceda was clothed with extraordinary power to make appointments. He could make and unmake mayors of cities and governors of provinces. He was the representative of centralization, and he used his powers to secure emolument to himself and his friends and to maintain his supremacy. He aspired even to name his own successor, because the constitution forbade his own re-election. He deposed the mayor and appointed henchmen of his own in their places, defied congress and finally assumed supreme and dictatorial control of all affairs of state. Leon Abbett has caused his legislature to clothe him with powers never given to any other governor of New Jersey. No other man ever had such appointing powers in this State. He has used these powers in the most dictatorial and partisan way, putting henchmen of his own everywhere in office. He even dictates who shall be nominated for Democratic candidate for mayor of Newark, and who for Jersey City. If the people of any county—Cumberland for example—vote against license, he appoints those who have authority to grant all the licenses they think politic. He names and unnames the men who shall preside over the schools, the asylums, the charitable institutions of this State.

The people of Chili rose up in actual warfare against this centralization of power and abuse, and they have just gained a decisive victory. The people of New Jersey do not resort to war, except such as is carried on at the ballot box. But they have in many of the Democratic strongholds of the State, declared political war against Abbett. The men of his own party, men who have always fought centralization, the men who wanted conscientiously to uphold in their own party what they have avowedly condemned in other parties, have come out against him, and the battle is to be fought next November. The insurgents won in Chili. They have taken Valparaiso, which is the chief city and size of Newark. Will the Democratic insurgents take Newark? It is to be hoped they will, and that Balmaceda Abbett may be driven into any refuge he can find outside of the State of New Jersey.—Elizabeth Journal.

—William M. Small and Gerald Berry, contractors, trading as Small and Berry; filed a declaration last Wednesday in the United States Circuit Court to recover $30,000, alleged to be due them from the Board of Commissioners of Somerville. The summons to the commissioners is made returnable September 10th. The suit is for the payment of the balance of a sewer contract.—Hagerdon County Democrat.

THE OYSTER SEASON HERE.

What a Big Handler Says About Them.—Many Vessels and Many Men Will Soon be at Work in the Trade.

For two-thirds of a year from to-day the months will have an "R" in them, only during which period tradition, and, until last year, a law of the State, pronounced the eating of oysters healthy. The first of September opens the regular oyster season, and, notwithstanding the bounteousness of the products of the earth, the dealers in bivalves anticipated a busy season.

"People have appetites for all things in season, and when that for oysters comes round they must be satisfied," said a prominent dealer, when asked if he did not think the big supply of fruit and its cheapness would operate against a successful opening of the season.

"We get our oysters principally from Long Island and Keyport," continued the dealer, "and Rockaways are as good as any others. The Shrewsbury supply is big. Nearly nine-tenths of the oysters nowadays are planted, and when gathering the oysters they take up any size, no matter whether ripe or not. In my young days we would not pick up anything smaller than about six inches in circumference. Now they take them any size.

"The fact is, oysters are scarce, and there is a demand for the full supply, if they are good, at any time. If there is an overstock then they are not over-good. The natural beds are nearly all broken up. Oysters ought to have a rest. I believe that the protection law is a good thing.

"Now the oysters planted in Virginia are almost as good as blue points. There are some splendid ranges on the eastern shore of Virginia, all planted.

"Prunes will be about twenty shillings or three dollars, and cullings from $2 to $3 at the opening of the season. Most of the demand comes from the West and South, but the Northern trade will be brisk."

The repeal of the law in some of the States forbidding the sale of oysters during a portion of the year had no effect whatever in increasing the trade. Certain localities and people demand oysters all the year round, and have had them right along, despite the law, and the only benefit accruing from the repeal was to relieve the conscience of those engaged in the sale of them. Summer oysters come from Brigantine, Cape May and Absecon waters.

Just now Shrewsbury and New York Sound oysters are being sold in this city to a certain extent, and, as they are considered a delicacy, those on the Summer oysters named, they are much favored by epicures for preparing their appetites for the still better ones from Maurice River cove and the western shore of Delaware bay. They also bring a much better price than the ordinary Summer oysters.

"It was at first thought that the Maurice River beds would this year turn out their production of primes and cullings in more equal proportions than last year, but closer examination proves that this will not be so, the proportion being as last year, one-fourth prime and three-fourths cullings. However, the cullings are said to be good, healthy and fat. The oysters that got their head last year were rather under a cloud, promises this year to resume their old-time excellence and turn out about half and half in size."

At sunrise to-day from 150 to 200 boats began the work of dredging in Maurice River cove, while as many more began work in the sound and at Rockaway. The first catch will at once be placed on floats to "drink" or "freshen" for a few hours, and then be landed on cars, and on the morning of September 2 will be for sale. They will continue to arrive by railroad, but the bulk will, in the course of a few days, come by boat. On the same morning from seventy-five to 150 boats will begin work on the Westorn shore beds. The force of men and boats will be gradually increased as the season advances until fully 500 boats and many thousand men will be employed.

The entire products of these beds will be shipped to all points throughout Pennsylvania, North New Jersey and New York.

To Hold a Re-Union.

The members of the National Turn Verein of Newark, the Elizabethport Turn Verein, the Gavanes Turn Verein of Brooklyn and the Plainfield Gesang and Turning Society are to hold a reunion in this city on the third Sunday in September. On Sunday last delegates from the above-named societies held a meeting in this city and completed the arrangements for the event. Mr. Metscher of the National Turn Verein of Newark was chosen chairman of the Committee, and Mr. Henry Haurand of this city was elected secretary. Several valuable prizes will be offered for the best exercises of turning. The societies will spend the day at Washington Rock.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

CITY CLERK COOK'S SHORTAGE.

The Expert Claims That he is $2,950 Short in His Accounts.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Sept. 1st, (Special.)—At a meeting of Council last night the report of expert Haggerty was read. It showed that the accounts of City Clerk Cook were $2,950 short. Alderman McMurtrie, Republican, allowed Mr. Cook credits which reduced the shortage to $2,550.

Mr. Cook was given the privilege of the floor and he stated that the examination was carried on to satisfy the animosity of his enemies and that if he were allowed credit for the various amounts to which he was entitled the city would owe him about $125.

An attempt was made to elect a city clerk as Mr. Cook's successor but after taking four ballots they abandoned the effort as no candidate could be decided upon.

An Amusing "Bluff."

A story is going the rounds about a steady-going joker, who may have been a Plainfielder. A large party of friends were gathered at a hotel table. Dinner had been served and coffee was passed around. On the table were two bowls, one containing sugar, the other salt. Out of the latter, a guest helped himself to a couple of spoonfuls and put them in his coffee. The mistake was so palpable that all but the victim, who was engaged in telling an interesting story, paused, and waited expectantly until the salted coffee should be drunk. The prospective victim, still unconscious of the joke, and the roars of laughter that the rest were restraining with difficulty, calmly stirred his coffee, raised the cup and drank a big mouthful. Not a muscle of his face changed. His story continued and he calmly sipped the remainder of the coffee and then ordered another cup-full.

The rest were dumbfounded. The second cup arrived, and was treated to salt for a "sweetner" the same as its predecessor.

Then, casually, noticing the concentrated looks of the others, the imbiber of this nauseating drink, said "why, what's up, boys?" An acquaintance answered that they were astonished at his drinking salted coffee. To this he replied:

"Oh! that's it, eh? That's nothing. Always do it. Splendid cure for indigestion. Don't feel bad at all, after you get used to it."

In a half-minute they were all trying coffee with salt. It was horrible.

Later when a friend remarked to him, "Why I did not know you drank your coffee that way!" he replied, "No! I didn't know it either. I was 'bit,' and they were waiting to laugh at me. Good 'bluff,' wasn't it? But Lord! that coffee! ugh."

The Axle Broke.

While John Walker, the colored coachman of Mr. Ackerman, of Scotch Plains, was driving along Somerset street, North Plainfield, this afternoon the axle of the left front wheel of the buggy he was in broke off close to the hub.

The intelligent animal he was driving stopped short, and no further damage was done.

The injured vehicle was drawn out of the way of traffic on Manning avenue, and later carried off for repairs.

THE HOUSEHOLD

ALL READ THE EVENING NEWS.

In several of the states, notably in Pennsylvania, the soldiers of the National Guard displayed this summer a proficiency in drill and a graceful bearing that were gratifying. Some of the regiments showed improved drill and discipline since last year.

A colored man died in a pauper home in New York lately, aged 116 years. But what was the good of his living so long? Life is to be counted by the work men do, not by length of days. Many accomplish more in fifty years than other people could in a hundred.

"Where are all the men?" asks in despair again the summer resort girl who is fond of dancing. The answer once more is, The men are off canoeing, bicycling or tramping, getting strength for next winter's work. Birds outdoors and wearing comfortable old clothes. If the summer resort girl wants their company she will have to undertake summer outdoor sports and tramps herself.

At the same time low down anarchistic cranks and liars are telling the socialist congress in Brussels that misery here is increasing and that "the United States is a hell," comes word that during the month of July farm mortgages in Kansas were paid off to the amount of $631,-483. This was only in the ordinary course of events, as the money from this summer's crops was not yet available.

About Ginseng.

A curious illustration of the fluctuations of a medical remedy is given in The Popular Science Monthly by J. Jones Bell. A little less than two centuries ago the digging, drying and shipping of ginseng was scarcely less important commercially in Canada than the fur industry itself. In China in the beginning of the Eighteenth century the root was worth its weight in gold in Pekin for medicinal purposes. The Chinese believed it would cure all ailments, especially indigestion, nervous troubles and hypochondria.

A Jesuit father, Lafitan, discovered the plant in Canada and showed his people the profit there would be in it. At once there arose a ginseng craze. Not cotton in the south, not sealskins in Alaska are more important than ginseng then became in Canada. General agriculture was neglected for it and mankind fell to digging. As a natural result the quality of the plant degenerated and then ginseng disappeared almost entirely, and the trade died out.

European and American doctors declare that ginseng has no especial medicinal value, but to the Chinaman it is only less sacred than his joss and the spirit of his ancestors. The Chinese, being a good old conservative people who never change their minds, have held fast by ginseng for 1900 years. It is curious to find that the Canadian ginseng trade is reviving again with the advent of Chinamen in numbers in America. It is not likely that the craze will ever strike our northern neighbor as it did in 1716, still there is big money in ginseng again. The druggist buys it from the rural digger at one dollar a pound and sells it at retail for five dollars a pound.

What Would Happen?

If French papers are to be credited, the madness which Gustav Freytag has pointed out as coming from the exercise of unlimited power has already overtaken the German emperor. The full narration of the scene on the imperial yacht after the emperor's departure from England is one to make an American thank fate that he does not live in a monarchy. The story that the second officer of the vessel really did go below and shoot himself after the emperor struck him a blow on the cheek became he hesitated to give up command of the yacht to the lunatic ruler has not been fully confirmed. But it is not like European journalism for a responsible and leading French paper to make out of whole cloth the dispatch that Emperor William ordered all the officers of the yacht to go off duty and go below, because he himself was going to run that ship. The Almighty was going to show him how to do it as they went along. Then it is related that a sailor purposely ran against the madman and threw him down so that he broke his kneecap and thus saved the yacht and all on board from destruction.

Yet if even half the tale is true, it shows the mind of William II to be in a dangerous condition. Is this the man who is to guide the destinies of a powerful and splendid people like the Germans?

If worst should come to worst, moreover, and the emperor become a raving lunatic, as the kings of Bavaria did before him, and a regency for the empire would become necessary, would the liberty loving Germans submit to it? Would they not take the opportunity to rise in their might and once for all throw off imperialism and monarchy and proclaim Germany a republic? If they should do this the house of Hohenzollern would go down forever, and one more fair republic would rise in Europe upon the ruins of the king idea. Then Germany and France could be friends.

WHEEL WITHIN A WHEEL

A Story That There Is an Inside Alliance.

IT IS SAID TO BELIEVE IN FORCE.

Ex-President Hall, of Missouri, Reported to Have Stated That His Life Was Imperilled by the "Anti-Monopolists" of the Alleged Farmers' Alliance.

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 1.—The Star says: "It transpired during the recent state meeting of the Farmers' Alliance at Warrensburg, Mo., that there, was an organization within the Alliance which believed in force as a measure to obtain the objects of the Alliance. It was the knowledge of the existence of this 'force element' that defeated the subtreasury resolution which was championed especially by the latter element.

Forty-eight for Force.

"The force party has had forty-eight delegates in the convention. One of them, speaking to a reporter about the organization, said: 'If the minority will not do what the majority will, it is high time for the majority to hang the minority.'

"If all Alliance won't do their business bullets will, and there are a lot of us pledged to go that far.'"

His Life Declared Forfeited.

Ex-President Hall, who asserts that his life has been declared a forfeit in the underground meetings of the people, was said to keenly alive to this existence. This secret order calls itself the "Anti-Monopolists," but very few if any farmers belong to it. The strength lies mainly in the cities, and the farmers are said to be its catspaws to rake its political chestnuts from the fire.

The New York State Fight.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—The Herald says: "Storm signals are flying for the Democratic state convention. So bitter grows the strife between factions that the governorship may be lost."

The Pope's Successor.

ROME, Sept. 1.—Excitement prevails in Rome over the coming papal conclave. It is said that Pope Leo desires a foreigner, and especially a Frenchman, to succeed him.

A BIG LABOR BATTLE.

A Stubborn Fight Probable Between Ax Manufacturers and the Union.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—The American Ax and Tool company is composed of nine ax factories, situated at Johnsonville, N. Y.; East Douglass, Mass.; Beaver Falls, Pa.; Cleveland, O.; Mill Hall, Pa.; Gowanda, N. Y.; Bellefonte, Pa., and Ballston Spa, N. Y. This company controls about one-half the production of axes, the other half being produced by the Kelly Ax company, Louisville, Ky.; Collins Ax company, Hartford, Conn.; A. G. Peck, Cohoes, N. Y., and several small factories controlling local trade.

The employes of the first five manufactories of the American Ax company have gone out on a strike caused by the efforts of the company to discourage the growth of the labor unions.

These factories are the largest and most important ones in the company. Both sides appear very confident of winning. The company claims that it will permit the shops to run down before allowing the unions to exist in them, and the men declare that they will leave the different towns and cease work rather than abandon their organization. The Federation of Labor has agreed to pay each married man engaged in the strike the sum of ten dollars per week and each unmarried man three dollars per week while the strike lasts.

To Employ Convict Labor.

NASHVILLE, Sept. 1.—The extra session of the forty-seventh general assembly of Tennessee convened later today for the reading of the governor's message adjourned for the day. In his message the governor incidentally suggests the purchase of undeveloped coal lands, upon which the penitentiary be erected, with a view to working the mines with convict labor and selling the coal to the public.

A Strike at Haverhill.

HAVERHILL, Mass., Sept. 1.—About forty lasters and dealers are employed at the shoe factory of the Field-Thayer manufactory have struck against a reduction of five cents a case in their work. The Field-Thayer company have first and second grades under a first grade price list. They now demand that the union give them a second grade list.

A Blow at the Miners.

NASHVILLE, Sept. 1.—Senator Polk, of Maury county, will introduce in the senate today a resolution setting forth that the miners at Briceville are in a state of insurrection, and empowering the governor to call such troops as necessary to suppress their unlawful acts. The introduction of the resolution will create a sensation.

ALMY'S HIDING PLACE SEARCHED.

He Had a Large Braid of Christie Ward-ell's Hair.

HANOVER, N. H., Sept. 1.—A search was made in Mr. Warden's cattle barn, in which the murderer, Frank C. Almy, hid for so long a time without detection, which resulted in the finding of the necktie case which Christie Warden gave her murderer as a Christmas gift.

Other articles were also found, among them a silver napkin ring, some penciled sketches made by Christie, a large braid of the victim's hair, a dozen verses of sentimental poetry in the murderer's handwriting and a package of four handkerchiefs, marked with the initial "C." From the same hiding place were also taken ten unopened cans of salmon, sardines and corned beef, besides a bottle half full of Medford rum.

Almy's Name Was Lewis.

FRANKLIN FALLS, N. H., Sept. 1.—Fresh doubts as to the identity of Almy have been raised by a visit to the prisoner of E. J. Higgins, an employe of the Winnisquogee Paper company, who was well acquainted with Frank Lewis. Mr. Higgins was amazed to find in Almy W. F. Lewis, who he said worked about six months ago on his father's farm. He roomed by himself, and he never would allow any one in his room, even to make the bed. He was well educated, reticent as to his past, fond of female society and carried a revolver.

J. F. Bryant, who had also known Lewis at the time he worked for the Higgins family, was confident that Almy and Lewis were the same.

THE DEAD NUMBER SIXTY-THREE.

Two More Bodies Found in the Park Place Ruins at New York.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—The united efforts of police and firemen, with detectives, supplemented by the energy of the contractor, Mr. Crimmins, were unavailing last week to discover and remove all the dead bodies in the ruins of the New York place building that collapsed a week ago last Saturday.

The bodies of two more victims of the disaster were discovered yesterday, buried beneath a pile of rubbish in Rosenfeld & Co.'s vault under the sidewalk. They were slightly bruised and much decomposed.

The first body was positively identified as the body of Samuel Blitz, twenty years old, an employe of Rosenfeld & Co., who lived at 363 Houston street.

The other body was identified as that of Newman Goldschmidt, aged twenty-nine, an employe of Rosenfeld & Co., of 417 East Seventy-ninth street.

Mayor Grant says he personally found these bodies while exploring the ruins. It is believed that other bodies will be found and a large gang of men are at work today.

Hopkins Refused $5,000,000.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—Timothy Hopkins, it is said, has refused an offer of $5,000,000 to withdraw his opposition to the probate of his adopted mother's will, and will on Sept. 17 file his claims. It will be claimed, it is said, that Mrs. Searles was not in sound mental condition when she executed the will.

Shot by a Gambler.

CHATTANOOGA, Sept. 1.—Charles McNamara, a gambler, shot and killed Reese Smith, a gambler, in a gambling establishment over 883 Market street, about 2 a. m. The murderer escaped. There is said to be a woman in the case and sensational developments are expected.

Train Wreckers Died Hard.

STATESVILLE, N. C., Sept. 1.—The jury in the Bostons bridge disaster case brought in a verdict attributing the wreck to a loose rail, from which the spikes had been removed. The negroes, Bostons, the jury also censures the railroad company for running trains over the bridge.

Ex-Senator Keagle Represented.

DENVER, Sept. 1.—Ex-Senator Reagan, of Texas, has been recommended for the office of interstate commissioner by the committee appointed for the purpose by the several commercial organizations.

Rev. Spurgeon Has a Relapse.

LONDON, Sept. 1.—Mr. Spurgeon has had another relapse.

DOWN TO SUDDEN DEATH

Four Persons Killed in an Indiana Wreck.

THIRTY-ONE OTHERS ARE INJURED

A Number of the Unfortunates Were Literally Cooked by the Steam That Escaped from Bursting Pipes—The Disaster Caused by a Broken Wheel.

EVANSVILLE, Ind., Sept. 1.—A wreck occurred on the Cannelton branch of the Louisville, Evansville and St. Louis rail road about 11 a. m. in which four lives were lost, thirteen persons were badly hurt and eighteen slightly injured. The flange on one of the forward trucks on the engine broke while the train was running at the rate of thirty miles an hour. The train at the time was on a trestle two miles from Troy, Ind.

Plunged Down the Embankment.

The engine passed over the trestle and plunged down the embankment. The train was a mixed one, the passenger coaches being next to the engine.

The coaches followed the engine into the ditch and rolled over on top of it. About thirty passengers were on board. The steam pipes were broken by the fall and the scalding fluid entered the coach.

Scalded by the Steam.

Many of the passengers were women and children. Their screams were appalling. As soon as those who were slightly injured extricated themselves they began the work of rescue. All were taken out, but none escaped injury. Many were so badly burned that their flesh was cooked in places until it came off.

A List of the Dead.

Barbara Neimyer, aged eighteen years, daughter of a township farmer of Perry county, was taken out dead. She had been scalded.

Mrs. Canaugh, of Troy, Ind., was badly burned and will die. Her little ten-year old son was taken from the wrecked coach and died before reaching home.

Emma Schen, ten years old, died after being taken out.

Jacob App, engineer, and his fireman, John Tolle, went down with the wreck. Both are scalded, but not fatally.

The Severely Injured.

The names of the most severely injured follow: Katie Hoffman, Sidney Hess, Henry Bodine, Michael Elberthorn, William Newman, Mrs. William Chase and child, Maggie Hudson, Maurice Durbin and G. F. Bolt. The wounded are all at Tell City and are receiving careful attention.

SEAL PIRATES FIRED UPON.

The Russian Man of War Alert Captures a Canadian Schooner.

VICTORIA, B. C., Sept. 1.—The sealing schooner Geneva has arrived here. She is the first home of those venturesome schooners that made the Russian side of the sea. Two days after reaching Behring sea she was ordered out by H. M. S. Pleasant, and Captain Seward, knowing his owners would be heavy losers if he came home, made for the Russian side, and brought up twelve miles off the rookery at Copper island.

He ran in between the American schooners Teresa and J. Hamilton Lewis and at once sent a boat to the former to see what luck she had. The Teresa gave the news, that on Aug. 2 Captain Alexander Mc Lean, of the Rich, was ashore in two boats, when ten Russian guards rushed on them over the sand hills and started shooting with rifles. Only Captain McLean was struck. His kneecap was smashed and his left hand hit.

Then both schooners made off to their position, twelve miles from Copper island. The Russian man-of-war Alert, thirteen guns, the next day steamed out after the three schooners at full speed. All of them put on every stitch of canvas and for twelve miles there was a long chase. Then the wind fell off and she came up to within a mile of the Lewis and fired a ball that smashed the bowsprit in halves and brought her to. The Lewis was taken in tow and rapidly disappeared.

A BOLD BANK ROBBERY.

HIGGINSVILLE, Mo., Sept. 1.—About 3:30 p. m. the American bank, at Corder, five miles east of this city, was robbed.

Two men stepped into the bank with drawn revolvers. Cashier W. L. Groves was ordered to throw up his hands. One of the men held him under cover of a revolver, and the other coolly proceeded to place all the cash in sight into a large grain sack.

Having completed their work they rushed through the back door and mounted two horses hitched in the alley. They were soon by several persons and were fired upon. They returned the fire in regular James boys style. They then dashed up Main street, firing right and left, and in a few minutes were out of sight. They secured about $700 in cash. They were seen by no less than forty people.

Ex-Minister Carter Very Ill.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Sept. 1.—Dispatch as received here say that H. A. P. Carter, ex-Hawaiian minister to the United States, is lying dangerously ill at Hamburg, Germany. His physicians say there are very anxious to apprise the ex-minister's relatives of the serious illness of Mr. Carter, but cannot obtain their address.

To Raid the Cherokee Strip.

ARKANSAS CITY, Kan., Sept. 1.—A secret order of boomers has been organized all along the border of southern Kansas. All ready over 3,000 members have been sworn in. They propose to arm themselves early in October, raid the Cherokee strip and make a determined stand if sold the strip for homes.

Swiss-Americans Celebrate.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 1.—The Swiss-Americans of Pittsburg, Allegheny, Wheeling, Steubenville and the immediate tri-state region celebrated the 600th birthday of the founding of the republic of Switzerland. About 10,000 Swiss-Americans were in town and 3,000 were in the procession.

He Was Ducked to Death.

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Sept. 1.—Henry Robson, a ten-year-old boy living in Rosedale, complained of feeling ill. He said he had been swimming and the other boys had ducked him. He was nearly strangled. Last evening the boy died, and his father has had warrants issued for the arrest of his companions.

TROOPS COMPLIMENTED.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—Lieutenant William H. Bowen, of the army, who inspected the Connecticut National Guard during its recent encampment, has sent to the war department a very complimentary report giving the result of his observations. A novelty of the encampment was a special bicycle service by a corps of First regiment men, and this feature is specially commended.

"The men were armed," says Lieutenant Bowen, "with the Colts repeating carbine and with the revolver. A man mounted on a bicycle can go to many places where it would be impossible to take a horse and the wheel can beat the flag in sending messages in nearly every case. As a fighting force it may not be favored, but as messengers, patrols and advance guard, in my opinion, it would be advisable.

"I would recommend that various companies of the war department the advisability of experimenting with the bicycle. The duties of the military bicyclist are those of carrying dispatches, skirmishing and reconnoitering. As applied to the signal service, the wheels, in my opinion, would almost double its usefulness."

Of the colored troops Lieutenant Bowen says: "They were simply perfect, and in getting through the brush, as demonstrated on guard duty, they exhibited the traits of Indians, and in scouting exhibited an acuteness that was absolutely marvelous." Lieutenant Bowen writes in terms of praise of the conduct of officers at the encampment. Of the 2,479 enlisted men in the national guard 2,388 were in camp.

RESCUED FROM A RAFT.

Only Eight of the Sea Gull's Crew of Twenty-six Were Saved.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—The steamship Arizona, just arrived, brought with her eight members of the crew of the ship Sea Gull, which was wrecked in a terrible gale of wind on the African coast. There were twenty-six all told in the Sea Gull's crew, and of these all were drowned save the eight men picked up by the Arizona. When the Arizona found them they were floating on a small raft in the middle of the Atlantic ocean frantically waving signals of distress. All of them were terribly emaciated from hunger and exposure, and some were hardly able to stand when lifted to the Arizona's deck.

On board the big steamship everything was done for their comforts and when they arrived here they were much improved in their condition. The officers as well as passengers, among whom there was considerable excitement, showered attentions upon the shipwrecked men. The eight survivors are the first mate, the cook and six of the crew.

The President's Busy Day.

CAPE MAY POINT, N. J., Sept. 1.—The president passed a busy day catching up with accumulated business. Herbert Morrissey was appointed collector of customs at Plymouth, Mass. Thomas Wagner was recognized as consul for Nicaragua at Baltimore. Adolph Huttemeyer was commissioned postmaster at Ridgewood, N. J. Secretary Rusk is a guest of the president, who is getting ready for a day's shooting on Maquanuskin meadows.

He Must Redeem $25,000,000.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—Secretary Foster said last evening that from present indications he would be required to redeem about $25,000,000 4½ per cent. bonds. The amount so far presented for extension is $23,221,-650, and there are about $3,000,000 of the bonds in the course of preparation for extension. The circular extending the time in which 4½ per cent. bonds may be presented for extension at 2 per cent. will be issued Sept. 2.

Indians for Chicago.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—Hon. Henry Ballentine, United States consul at Bombay and special commissioner of the World's Columbian exposition to India, will take passage on the City of New York Wednesday for the orient. He has completed arrangements with the World's fair directors for the bringing of an entire Indian village to Chicago in 1893. The citizens of Chicago have guaranteed $500,000 to import these people.

Blaine Is Watching Chili.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—The Chilian situation, so far as the United States government is advised, has not changed within the past twenty-four hours. No steps have been taken toward recognizing the insurgent party as the ruling party of Chili. Secretary Blaine is constantly advised by Acting Secretary Wharton of the Chilian situation.

To Harmonize the Hibernians.

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 1.—At a secret meeting of the officers of the two rival branches of the Ancient Order of Hibernians held in this city steps were taken to harmonize all differences, and it is probable that within a very short time a complete reconciliation will be effected. The rehabilitated organization will be strongly anti-Parnell.

Attacked by a Lion.

MONTREAL, Sept. 1.—While Robinson's circus parade was in progress several of the big lions broke loose, terrorized the city, and Lowlof, the equestrian director, tried to quiet them. One of the lions struck him some terrible blows, laying his skull bare, cutting his ear in a fearful manner and wounding him severely.

The Allegheny Railroad Case Decided.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 1.—In the United States court Judge Reid handed down a decision in the celebrated Allegheny Railroad case. He decided that the railroad shall be sold in accordance with the manner prayed for by the Pennsylvania Railroad company without divesting it of the mortgages except the income mortgage.

TORTURED BY FIENDISH TRAMPS.

Mr. and Mrs. John Wilkinson, of Monroe, Mich., Brutally Maltreated and Finally Slain—A Mob Runs Down the Heartless Miscreants and Shoots Them to Death.

HARTFORD, Sept. 1.—Frederick Bushenhagen and his wife Emily, each past seventy, who came from Germany forty years ago and who lived on a farm half a mile from the main road, in a secluded section of the town of Bloomfield, west of Hartford, were found Monday in an old well on their place. The bodies showed evidence that the couple had been murdered.

Blood on the Doorstep.

Returning by the house at 9 p. m. he again called, and failing to arouse anybody examined the outside of the building and found blood on a rear doorstep. He aroused the neighbors and together they searched the house and fields, but could not find the old people. At 5 a. m. the search was renewed. There were blood stains and traces of a scuffle on the yard fence, and marks in the earth led to the well where the deceased were found.

Was the Murderer a Tramp?

It seems probable that the tragedy occurred early Sunday morning, and that the murderer was a tramp who slept in the barn Saturday night. It is thought that Bushenhagen found him there Sunday morning on going out for firewood; that a quarrel ensued, and that the old man was killed by blows with a coupling pin which was found near the barn. The supposition is that the aged woman ran out half dressed to aid her husband. On her body there was only a chemise, a skirt and one stocking.

Dead Women Tell No Tales.

The murderer probably deemed it best to silence the only witness of his crime, and seizing which he killed her. There was no robbery, and it is evident that the murderer did not enter the house. The officers believe that the murder grew out of a row caused by the old man finding the tramp in the barn or by the latter demanding money. About 7 a. m. Sunday residents on the main road noticed the absence of the murder saw a tramp pass toward Hartford. He was a large man, heavily built, with two weeks' growth of beard, wearing overalls and dark coat, and with an overcoat thrown over his shoulder.

The coroner has begun an investigation. At present there is no clew to the identity of the murderer. Bushenhagen served in the Twenty-second Connecticut regiment. As age came on he had not been able to do much on his little farm, and the couple were very poor. A bankbook was found on the table in the house showing fifty dollars on deposit in the Hartford Savings bank.

Two Men Arrested.

The selectmen of Bloomfield held a meeting and voted to offer a reward of $200 for the capture of the murderer. This is the largest amount a town can offer under the law. Two men have been arrested. One was caught in the town of Bloomfield by Officer Pinney and one in Windsor by Deputy Sheriff Dick Netherington. Both answer the general description of the tramp. Officer Pinney took his man to the lock-up in Bloomfield. The other is in the Hartford county jail.

The man arrested in Windsor was a German named Louis Lauer. He said he formerly kept near Bushenhagen, but had not seen him for four years. He was released from jail last Wednesday, after eighteen months' confinement, and was seen with Bushenhagen on Friday. He is believed to be the murderer.

Tortured and Murdered.

MONROE, Mich., Sept. 1.—John Wilkinson and his wife were brutally tortured and murdered by two tramps at their farm, near here. The motive of the tramps was robbery. They found the couple alone at home late in the afternoon and demanded from Wilkinson a sum of money which they had asserted he had recently received. Wilkinson refused, whereupon the tramps set upon the farmer and his wife, and after beating them almost to insensibility tortured them in the most cruel manner in the hope of extorting from them the hiding place of their money.

Overtaken by Swift Retribution.

Failing in this the tramps became enraged and finished their fiendish work by murdering the couple. Retribution, however, was quick, and justice of the most summary nature was dealt out to the fiends. A ten-year-old son of Farmer Wilkinson, who had been in an outhouse, heard the shrieks of his mother and gave the alarm. The tramps fled, but were captured by a posse of citizens who came upon them near Maybee station.

Riddled with Bullets.

They were not even given time to say their prayers, but were shot on sight by the infuriated citizens. The bodies were completely riddled with bullets.

The Vanderbilts Not in Control.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—Absolute denial is authorized of the reports that the Vanderbilts had obtained control of the Union Pacific. It is believed, however, that interests represented by J. Pierpont Morgan have acquired control, but that no change in the management will be made until the annual election is held.

Mr. Scott Too Ill to Be Moved.

ERIE, Pa., Sept. 1.—Ex-Congressman William L. Scott passed a bad night and was perceptibly weaker. Drs. Pepper and Brandes decided in the afternoon that it would be unwise to attempt the removal to Newport, R. I., in his present enfeebled condition. Dr. Pepper has returned to Newport.

Shot by Mistake for a Deer.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., Sept. 1.—At Cranberry lake, in the Adirondacks, a young man named Harlow, of South Edwards, was shot and killed by his brother Alfred. Guide McCallom was also shot by a sportsman named Melillo, who mistook him for a deer.

Edwards May Be Chilli's President.

LOWDON, Sept. 1.—It is reported here that Don Augustin Edwards will be the next president of Chili. He is one of the wealthiest Chilians, and in the early period of the insurrection supplied funds lavishly for the support of the revolutionary cause.

Kingston Defeats Van Burens.

CHICAGO, Sept. 1.—As was fully anticipated by all horsemen, Kingston had a very easy task in defeating Van Buren in the eight and a half furlong match race at Garfield park. In the stretch he led by three lengths, and came under the wire the easiest of winners by two lengths. Time, 1.20¾. Kingston carried 126 and Van Buren ninety-five pounds.

A Purse for Corbett and Mitchell.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 1.—President Noel, of the Olympic Athletic club, has telegraphed Jim Corbett, offering him a purse of $11,000 for a fight to a finish with Charley Mitchell. Corbett has accepted the offer, and a cablegram has been sent to Mitchell with a request for an early reply.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF.

Fire at Ceres, N. Y., destroyed half a dozen buildings. Loss, $30,000.

Captain White, of the City of Panama, threatened to throw the Salvador can commandant overboard when he demanded the surrender of five passengers at La Libertad.

In the presence of Secretary Tracy and a number of naval experts the new triple expansion of the cruiser Maine were successfully started.

It is said that Russell Harrison asked Collector Wanamaker for the revenue cutter Grant with which to meet his wife and sister on their arrival from Europe. Secretary Foster refused the request.

John Callahan was sentenced to three years imprisonment in Kingston penitentiary for stealing $15,000 from the Hamilton (Ont.) Street Railroad company.

Governor Campbell Is Quite Ill.

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 1.—Governor Campbell was unable to leave his room today, and it is now indefinite when he will be able to begin heavy campaign work. His physician says that the only thing now that will do him any good is a change of air. It is probable that within the next two or three days the governor will leave for some place in the east.

One Thousand Miles Laid Waste.

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., Sept. 1.—One thousand square miles of rich farming lands in Faulk county are black with smoldering ashes, and hundreds of thousands of bushels of grain and tons of hay have gone up in smoke. The fire was the worst ever known in Dakota. So far no loss of life has been reported, but the losses of property are incalculable.

Eight of the Sims Gang Caught.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—The acting attorney general has received a telegram from United States Marshal Walker dated De Soto, Miss., stating that he had captured eight of the Sims gang, who had fled from Alabama. Sims escaped. The Sims gang were moonshiners and killed two United States officials some time ago.

Basquedano Temporary President.

VALPARAISO, Chili, via GALVESTON, TEX., Sept. 1.—Order is gradually being restored in Chili. General Basquedano has been recognized as president ad interim of the republic by the members of the Junta here and little doubt is felt but that this action will be ratified by the members now en route from Iquique.

Atwood Fooled the Highwaymen.

HAVERHILL, Mass., Sept. 1.—H. E. Atwood and wife, of Ayer Village, while driving through the woods at night were held up by two highwaymen. Atwood, however, whipped his horse, which gave a leap and threw off the men, who were thrown left to lie in the rear. Atwood had $500 in his pocket.

Knights Tempting on Parade.

THE CATS AND THE MONKEY.

Like Other Fables It Presents a Moral for Serious Considerations.

Two hungry cats, having stolen some cheese, could not agree how to divide it. So they called in a monkey to decide the case.

"Let me see," says the monkey, with an arch look, "this slice weighs more than the other." With that, he bit off a large piece, in order, as he said, to make them even.

The other scale was now too heavy. This gave the upright judge a fine pretense to take a second mouthful.

THE LAW MUST HAVE ITS COURSE.

"Hold! hold!" cried the two cats; "give each of us his share of the rest, and we will be content."

"If you are content," says the monkey, "justice is not. The law, my friends, must have its course."

So he nibbled first one piece, and then the other. The poor cats, seeing their cheese in a fair way to be all eaten, most humbly begged the judge to give himself no further trouble.

"Not an inch, I beseech you, my friends," says the judge; "we owe justice to ourselves as well as to you. What is left is due to me in right of my office."

So saying, he crammed the whole into his mouth, and very gravely dismissed the court.

Moral—This fable teaches us that it is better to bear slight wrong rather than to resort to law for trifles.—School and Home.

A Pig Tale.

This story was recently told in Golden Days: Among a certain litter of New Jersey pigs there was one black runt to which the owner's children took a great fancy and taught a number of tricks. One was to hide an apple and send the pig in search of it. At this the animal became very expert, until it seemed that an apple could not be hidden anywhere that the pig could not find it. But the hired man thought otherwise; so one day he tied a weight to an apple and threw it into the duck pond, where the water was about two feet deep. The pig went nosing around until he reached the pond, hesitated a moment, then jumped in, dived to the bottom and reappeared with the apple in his mouth. The very next day, while the children were in great glee over this performance, the pig disappeared, presumably stolen by some jealous neighbor.

Two years later, while the farmer was in town on business, he purchased a black hog that pleased him and brought it home. The hog was driven into the yard, where he stopped, looked critically around the premises and then, with a grunt of satisfaction, trotted to one corner of the yard, and there rooted for a few seconds. Then he trotted to the duck pond and dived beneath the water. When he reappeared and swam ashore he looked disappointed; but the farmer and his family were delighted, because they had recovered their pet.

An Anecdote of Emin Pasha.

One morning lately a friend took me to see a German gentleman who has traveled several times across Africa, most recently the way as Mr. Stanley went on his famous tours, except that he had only a very few men with him. His name is Dr. Peters, and you bigger ones who are fond of reading books about African travel may have seen his name.

At first we talked for a long time of things which I don't think would interest you, but then Dr. Peters began to tell us of how he used to watch Emin Pasha prepare African birds for museums. Emin did it as an amusement in his leisure time, and he did it wonderfully well, very, very carefully. Sometimes the corpses of the little dead birds, with their gay plumage, would be hung all about his tent, and then he would write down all he had found out about them. I believe the other day, at a meeting of a German ornithological society, the big word means concerning the natural history of birds, it was stated that Dr. Emin had just sent 300 birds, representing 126 different species, to Germany. He had caught and prepared them all in the months' time, while on a tour from the African coast to Tabora, which place you should look up on your map. Wouldn't it be delightful to roam about on such an expedition for a few months?

In the Days of Beau Nash.

"HEY-DEY! BUT I'LL CUT A CARAG AMAIN!"

A popular fad in the days of Beau Nash
Fell heir to a deal of old trash.
Said he, "I will wear them.
There's no one to share them.
Hey-day! but I'll cut a great dash!"

TRIFLES LIGHT AS HAIR.

SOME OF THE FOLDEROLS THAT MAKE UP THIS WIGGED WORLD.

Dressing Women's Hair—The Cradle and the Grave at the Bang Curler's—A Man of Eighteen Months and a Woman of Eighty-Seven Among the Customers.

The proprietor of one of the best known women's hairdressing establishments in Brooklyn, who has been in the business almost since childhood, was quite willing to talk when approached by a reporter yesterday afternoon.

"Busy? Very, just now," she said in answer to the first question propounded. "Many of my customers are preparing to leave the city. Consequently I have my hands full giving their hair a last dressing before they go. What do I have most to do? Well, a large part of my summer business is in the manufacture and sale of bangs for winter wear. Then there are the cutting and curling of bangs, shampooing, bleaching and dyeing, singeing and hair dressing which, from the list of November, I have to do with shampooing in relative importance."

"Is the women who come to you young or old?"

"One of my customers today was a miss of eighteen months whose little bang had to be combed. Another was a woman of at least eighty-seven. We have to treat all impartially. We never neglect her false hair to treat. As most of my hairdressing is bang cutting and curling, the majority of my customers are between sixteen and twenty-eight years of age. There is much more false hair worn than people think, especially in 'tuck up' switches. Why? Because false hair can often times be handled much more artistically than natural. The heavier the hair the less artistic it can be arranged as a rule. And it is impossible to keep an artificial curl in long for any length of time. The bangs of what we call water curls, that is, which dampness and perspiration will not affect, are made of natural curly hair. Of late years people are giving more attention to their hair than formerly, but still women will forget that their hair should not be kept up all night. It should regularly be let down, brushed and braided."

"What about shampooing?"

"We do work just as barbers do upon men subjects—with a lotion and a bath. Of course, the labor is in rubbing the scalp thoroughly through the long masses of a woman's hair. Then we have to dry it carefully, which is a tedious process. I think the time required for shampooing a woman's hair is about four times that required for a man's. We do not have so much shampooing as we ought. A woman's head should be thoroughly gone over in this way at least once a month. But some people who are very clean otherwise think their hair should take care of itself. Of course, we do the most shampooing in the summer months. In the fall and winter, with the beginning of balls, parties and wedding receptions, hairdressing proper makes up for a falling off in the use of the shampoo. The dressing we do mostly at the residences of our customers."

"Are women having their hair cut as much as formerly?"

"No, indeed. The short hair craze is dying out. But the bang has come to stay.

"What more would you like to know? About bleaching and dyeing? Well, bleached hair has given way to red or auburn, and every one is striving to obtain a shade of the latter. A prominent actress called upon me to bleach the hair the beautiful yellow and gold. Auburnine is the preparation with which we change a woman's locks to chestnut brown or red. How many of my customers are having their hair colored? Twenty or thirty in a hundred at least. We cannot turn dark hair white, or rather dare not, while it is on the head. The acids used I should be afraid to put on the scalp. No, we don't do much dark coloring of white hair. That the women prefer to do at home. Bloodine makes gray hair whiter."

"Is it true that women are very sensitive about being observed in the hands of the hairdresser?"

"That depends. If they have abundant hair they never ask for a screen. Otherwise they are quite likely to demand it."

"Is much singeing done? There is. With a wax taper it is possible to singe the end of almost every hair. This prevents the hair bleeding and losing its strength—consequently from falling out. I believe that frequent cutting of the hair is what makes so many men baldheaded."

"Aren't many women in the same predicament?"

"Comparatively few. I think baldheaded women generally have had long hair which has dragged itself out by its own weight. As a rule people with greasy perspire, men or women, do not have good hair. I do not believe that sex has anything to do with the quality of hair. Some men's hair is finer than that of women, and vice versa.

"Hair cutting? Yes, some. Where do you get the hair used in manufactures? It is all imported. We never buy hair in this country because it is what we call 'raw'—of uneven length and uncleaned. In Paris, the long tresses which are bought of the peasant girls are boiled and sorted according to color into various lengths of 26, 24, 22 and less inches. It is sold by the ounce, after, of course, the color, quality, including length and gloss, and lengths are taken into consideration. Gray hair is the most expensive. Then come certain shades of blond, the drab, for instance, which is peculiar to Swedes and which we cannot get by bleaching. Next is red hair and, finally, various shades of brown and black. It is a curious fact that hair cannot be raised in this country. Women who come here with long tresses very soon find they are losing them."

"Don't women ever bring their hair to you to sell?"

"Very seldom. As I said, good hair for manufacture does not grow in this country. Yes, we do occasionally take it from a lady. This is one reason why the stories about 'Jack, the hair slipper,' are to be discredited. Usually a man cuts the girls' hair from a spirit of mischief. There could be no motive for his act. Certainly he could not sell the locks. I don't know that I can give you a good idea of the value of the commodity. Here is a switch twenty-four inches in length, of black, a common color. Well, that is worth about three dollars an ounce."

"What are my prices? Well, to cut and curl the bang I charge twenty-five cents. This operation requires about twenty minutes. For singeing, which takes half an hour; dressing, half an hour, and shampooing, from half an hour to an hour, fifty cents each. The bleaching and auburnine, one dollar and two dollars a bottle, we supply at the rate of one dollar an hour. Sometimes two or three applications are sufficient to make the darkest hair a most beautiful tint.

"You have heard all you can remember? Well, if there are any points you don't understand I shall be very happy to explain."—Brooklyn Eagle.

How to Take Care of the Complexion.

A noted French dermatologist recommends a certain number of hours' sleep at night, with an afternoon siesta each day, as the best and only sure remedy for a faded complexion. One or two Turkish baths a week, with a great deal of rest, will transform sallowness into freshness and color. A veil worn on the street, especially in the springtime, prevents the fine dust playing havoc with the skin. The face should be washed every night with pure soap and hot water and dried with a soft flannel cloth. Nearly all cosmetics are harmful and should be eschewed. Rice powder is healing and healthy, but it should be carefully removed from the face before retiring.

How to Treat Sunstroke.

When a person is seized with symptoms of sunstroke, or heat apoplexy, the chief aim should be to abstract heat from the body. Cold douches and exposure to a current of free cold air are the readiest treatments. In India it is a common practice to plunge a sunstruck person into a well or puddle of water. Because of the well known effect of quinine in reducing temperature, the hypodermic use of this agent has been employed with excellent effect.

How to Wash Clothes.

Plunge the clothes in warm water, to which has been added some washing powder and a small quantity (say a tablespoonful per gallon) of ammonia. Knead them for a few minutes and allow them to rest for, say, half an hour; then scrub off and add more water, powder and a smaller quantity of ammonia. Allow the clothes to soak for several hours, at the end of which time they can be removed, rinsed in cold water and hung up to dry. Every particle of dirt will have been removed by the decomposing chemical action of the powder and ammonia upon the alkaline matter contained in the body stains on the clothes. Linen and white clothes should be boiled after steeping, before rinsing in cold water. By this simple process much muscular energy will be saved and clothing be made to last longer.

How to Use Pepper.

Many people are under the impression that black and white peppers are the products of two separate plants. Both are the dried seeds of a creeping plant known as piper nigrum. The white only differs from the black by having been blanched by soaking in water and the removal of the skin. But as much of the white pepper consists of inferior seeds which, having shriveled and fallen from the plant, have been blanched by the exposure, it is wisest to use only the black.

How to Select Lobsters.

There are many ways of telling good lobsters from bad. If they are freshly caught and alive the claws will move violently when you press the eyes with your fingers. The heaviest are always best. If the shell yields upon moderate pressure they are not good. If the tail of a really boiled lobster is flabby, or will not spring back when pulled, reject it. Medium sized lobsters are best, but they should not be too old. If the shell is thick crusted it is a certain sign that they are old.

How to Prevent Dry Rot.

Many a building has fallen in because of dry rot in the joists and beams which supported them. This disease can be easily prevented by soaking the timber in a solution of copperas. The sulphuric acid of the solution reaches every part of the timber and has an effect upon it somewhat analogous to that which charring has upon the surface of telegraph poles. Beams prepared in this way have been tried side by side with some which were not treated, and it was found that the soaked beams remained sound for many years, while the others had acquired the "dry rot" and decayed.

How to Cure Burns.

If a burn or scald is instantly covered with washing soda, cotton, lint or any dry, harmless powder and the air excluded it can safely be left to nature to heal rapidly. If these be not at hand, cover the parts with sweet oil. A salve of burgundy pitch, beeswax and olive oil put on with a linen bandage is also an excellent remedy.

How to Select Silk.

There are so many imitations of silk upon the market that a few simple rules will be useful for discerning the good material from the bad. If you gather the fabric into folds, across its width, and the folds are sharp like those of paper, it is bad; the folds of good silk will be rounded and soft. To ascertain if white silk contains cotton suspend a piece in a wide mouthed bottle containing chloride of lime. The threads of cotton will remain white, while the chlorine gas evolved from the lime will change the silk to a dull yellow.

Men's Dress.

A popular color for morning suits is brown. There are dozens of shades of that color. The russet browns and the dull browns in which there is a slight mingling of gray are the shades that go best. Trousers have undergone some slight alterations as regards shape since last year. They are straight and of medium width. The English style follows the shape of a pegtop somewhat, and are worn loose at the knees and tight over the boots. Stripe patterns are, perhaps, considered better taste than checks.

The frock coat is more fashionable than ever, and only in a few details does it show any change in shape, the most marked feature being the increased length of the skirts. A frock coat is considered to look very elegant on tall men with good figures, but neither a very tall, thin man nor a fat, stout man finds it as becoming to the figure as a sack coat.

Sleep in Sickness.

Concerning sleep, in connection with sickness, there is a good deal of heresy regarding the matter among otherwise well informed people. "Let her sleep too long!" "Be sure to wake him when it is time to give the medicine; it will be a great deal better for him not to sleep too long at one time." How often we have heard these words, or words to that effect, when, in fact, in nine cases out of ten, and very likely in ninety-nine cases out of the hundred, they were the exact opposite of the truth. Gentle, restful sleep is better than any medicine, and how often—even how almost invariably—does the "change for the better," for which anxious friends are waiting so prayerfully, come during sleep, making its first manifestation when the patient awakes with brightened eye, stronger voice, a faint tinge of returning health mantling the features in place of the wan hue of threatening death.

In the words of Sancho Panza, we may all say, "Blessed be the man who invented sleep!" Many, of course, critical situations in which a troubled, imperfect sleep may properly be broken by administering medicines, but in these later days physicians quite generally give the caution that in case of restful sleep the patient is not to be awakened, and the administering of medicines.—Good Housekeeping.

PLAINFIELD EVENING NEWS.

ESTABLISHED 1884. PLAINFIELD, N. J., "THE COLORADO OF THE EAST," WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 2, 1891 PRICE TWO CENTS.

THAT LOW & CO. SCHEME

THE COMING AGAIN CALLED TO ACCOUNT.

Application This Afternoon for a Writ of Certiorari Made on Behalf of Many Prominent Citizens.

Application was made to-day at noon before Judge VanSyckel at Tom's River Court House, Ocean county, by Counsellor R. V. Lindabury of Elizabeth, in behalf of a number of prominent citizens of this city for a writ of certiorari to bring into the Supreme Court the ordinance granting J. M. Low a contract for a system of Water-Works, together with the contract which the Council by resolution instructed the Mayor and Clerk to sign. Notice was served on Mayor Gilbert Monday night, together with the bill of complaint as signed by the citizens.

One point made is that the Mayor's veto was not entered in full on the minutes as required by the charter. This is only a technical objection, however, to help make a case. The second and important point is that Plainfield already has a company supplying all the water needed, and that the franchise and contract to Low and six unknowns were merely to help along a sewerage scheme of theirs at the expense of the taxpayers.

Suspicious Characters at Netherwood

Readers of THE NEWS will no doubt remember the series of Saturday night burglaries which took place in this city recently. The burglars in every instance escaped. It is asserted that the robbers had a rendezvous near the Netherwood station, and a special officer was detailed to watch them—three in number, one colored, another short and stout, and the third tall and very slim. The officer located his men, but as yet he has been unable to capture any of them, as he says, they are aware of the fact that he is watching them.

Some few weeks ago the Netherwood depot was robbed, although it was not generally known, and some $25 or $30 in cash was taken. This robbery is credited to the three suspicious characters who on Monday were again seen loitering about the depot, after a brief absence from these parts.

John F. Plummer's Settlement With His Creditors.

John F. Plummer and Emily M., his wife, of Tacoma, Wash., yesterday put on record in the Union county clerk's office at Elizabeth a deed conveying extensive tracks of land in Plainfield and Netherwood to William L. Strong of New York, to hold in trust by him for the benefit of the seven principal creditors of the late firm of John F. Plummer & Co., of New York. A trust deed from Mr. Strong to the creditors, viz., the Central National Bank and National Bank of Commerce, New York; Rockville National Bank, New England, Springfield, and North Adams Manufacturing companies, and Hockanum Company, also was recorded.

Trouble With a Prisoner.

A man known as "Packer" Wilson who works at the Fourth Ward Hotel in this city, was arrested at Dunellen Monday night for fast driving and sentenced by Justice Coles to pay $10. In lieu of the money, which he did not possess, he was sent to the county jail at New Brunswick. Wilson has but one leg and walks with a crutch. He refused to enter the wagon which was to take him to the county seat and belabored Constable Warden unmercifully with his crutch when an attempt was made to force him in. He was finally landed, and now has to answer to a charge for assaulting an officer. The constable was very badly bruised by the assault.

A New Order for Plainfield.

An organization known as the "Ancient Order of Foresters," will be installed in this city on Thursday evening by members of the Bound Brook Lodge, twenty-five of whom come to Plainfield on Thursday evening of last week for that purpose, but owing to some misunderstanding the arranged programme was omitted. The new lodge has been given power to transact business, although, it is understood, its charter has not yet been received.

The Bound Brook Chronicle Consumed.

Some incendiary set fire to the office of the Bound Brook Chronicle Monday night by breaking open a window and inserting a quantity of oily waste which he had previously ignited with a match. The building was entirely destroyed, together with its contents. The type was melted and the iron machinery was twisted out of shape by the heat. Postmaster W. B. R. Mason of Bound Brook is the editor and proprietor of the Chronicle.

Tennis Tournament.

Among the entries so far recorded, of lawn-tennis players who will compete in the tournament of the Hillside avenue Lawn Tennis Club, are Messrs. G. D. Mellick, E. H. Booth, S. S. Guion, C. A. Marvin, W. F. Hobbie, D. C. Ivins, G. H. Squires, A. T. Slosson, Wharton, S. A. Cruikshank, R. A. Beebe, S. West, H. West, A. Cox, E. L. Wyz, Jr., H. W. Beebe, C. E. Schmeely, J. P. Murray, H. Huntington.

—Gazelle Engine Company No 1, will hold its regular monthly meeting this evening at eight o'clock.

Clemens, Mich., where there are sulphur springs, said to have remarkable curative qualities, especially in cases of rheumatism with which Mrs. Laire has been a sufferer for several years. Mr. Laire accompanied her and they are also heartily rejoiced with the result of the visit.

SOLVING THE MYSTERY

THE BODY FOUND AT HOLLY'S DECLARED HOFFMAN'S.

Identified by the Wife of His Former Employer and Others.—Cause of Death Unknown.

Yesterday afternoon at two o'clock an inquest was held over Hoffman's remains found in the lake in the rear of Mr. John I. Holly's farm on Park avenue, Saturday afternoon. The investigation as to the cause of his death took place at the Campbell Club House and was conducted by Acting Coroner Wood, County Physician Donahue and a jury comprising the following persons: David L. Randolph, foreman; Chas. Brower, Percy C. Cox, John Teeple, Berthune Dunham, Lebbeus Ayres, Chas. Compton, Robert Kyle, Manley Giles, John Munson, James Steers and Cornelius Teeple.

The boy who found the body was the first witness examined. His testimony consumed an hour. He told of the finding of the remains and of his giving the alarm.

Mr. Z. Spence Anderson of Passaic testified that he had viewed the remains and that in his opinion the body was that of Hoffman. Mr. Anderson's story was that two weeks ago last Sunday Hoffman, who worked for a farmer named Francis Engel, went to his house and asked to see a sister. The latter was employed as a servant at the Anderson house. According to Mr. Anderson's story, it had been the custom of the sister to visit Hoffman at Carlstadt on alternate Sundays. She was much surprised to see her brother at her employer's house, and asked him what he wanted. He replied that he came to give her his bank book, because he feared he was going to die. Then he left her, with the remark that he would return in about half an hour. That day and the next passed, and no news of the young German came to his sister. The Chief of Police in Passaic was asked to look for him, but no success attended the search. On Monday Mrs. Engel went to the Anderson house and told of the finding of the body in Plainfield.

Then a middle-aged German woman, who said she was the wife of Francis Engel, was put on the stand. Only one bit of testimony was elicited from this witness, that is a statement that the paper upon which was written a recommendation for Hoffman and signed Engel. Mrs. Engel said that she believed the signature to be that of her husband. Mrs. Engel was asked to give a description of Hoffman. She said she could not. The man had worked at her house, she said, for six years. She said the man carried a hunting-case watch, with a chain and a square locket. The man found in Spring Lake wore an engraved watch with a locket round it. She said Hoffman's suit was blue cloth, with yellow and white specks in it. The man in the water had on a black suit. She saw the body of the man as it lay in the rough pine box before she went into the parlor. She testified that she recognized the body as that of Hoffman. Later she said she looked at the clothes only.

Kate Hoffman was next called, and said she was the sister of Michael Hoffman. She would not look upon the body and could give no testimony to prove that the man who was found was her brother. The County Physician was not called upon to give any testimony. He had not examined the man's lungs to ascertain whether he had been drowned. The jury rendered a verdict that "the evidence of Mrs. Engel and Mr. Anderson is conclusive proof that the body found is that of Michael Hoffman, who came to his death from causes unknown to the jury."

Michael Hoffman was a native of Germany. People in Carlstadt who knew him speak highly of his habits, and his *employer was astonished when, on Sat*urday, August 15, Hoffman stopped work and asked him for his money. He told Mr. Engel that his heart was broken and that he was going away. His employer *tried to get some explanation from Hoff*man, and so did his wife, who kept Hoffman's bank book for him. Hoffman merely repeated his demand for the book and the bankbook, representing $850, and $32 in cash were given to him. Hoffman then went to see his sister and turned over the bank book to her, repeating that his heart was broken. She, also, could obtain no explanation from him.

Undertakers Terrill and Cole of this city last evening took charge of the remains of Hoffman and brought them to this city. They will be forwarded to Passaic this evening, where they will be interred.

The New York Sun of this morning has the following to say:

Dr. Olin Jenkins of Plainfield examined the body to-day, and said it had been in the water at least four weeks. The belief still exists that the man was murdered. Katie Hoffman instructed a Plainfield undertaker to send the body to Passaic, where she will bury it.

National Guard at State Reform School.

To encourage and stimulate the in*mates of the State Reform School in* their military drilling, the Gattling Gun Company B, of Camden, have volunteered to give an exhibition drill at the school on Wednesday of next week. Upon the arrival of the guardsmen at the school they will be received by the School Batallion under Col. D. B. Murphy. At 4 o'clock p. m. the company will give a skirmish drill, at 3 p. m. a dress drill, which will be followed by a dress parade and review by the school batallion.

—The Borough Council will hold its regular mid-week meeting Friday evening at eight o'clock.

LAWS OF HYGIENE.

How Life Can Be Prolonged With a Good Constitution As a Starter.

When a count is taken it may be expected that the winning side in the match for health and longevity will be those who live carefully and in an orderly fashion. Cornaro, Humboldt, Cheyne, Von Moltke, Dr. Graham, and our old friend Dr Taylor, who recently died over 100 years of age, are all practical examples of living according to the principles of hygiene, temperately and systematically.

Of Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes the same may be said, as it appears, with some emphasis. Recently he has spoken of his manner of life, and attributes his good health and the remarkable vigor of his mind at eighty-one to the extreme care he has long taken of himself. Never robust, he was, nevertheless, wiry in his youthful life, and since he passed eighty his hygienic vigilance is unceasing. The rooms that he daily occupies are equipped with barometers, thermometers, aerometers and other instruments, the observation of which may prevent his incurring the slightest risk of taking cold. He knows that pneumonia is the most formidable foe of old age, and he is determined to keep it at a distance if possible.

He never gets up during Winter until he knows the temperature, or takes his bath without having the water accurately tested. He lives by rule, and the rule is inflexible. His time is scrupulously divided—so much allotted to reading, so much to writing, so much to exercise, so much to recreation. His meals are studies of prudence and digestion.

One might think that it would be a serious infliction to keep up existence by such devices, unvarying methods. But the little doctor enjoys them, having settled firmly into these habits years ago. Philosophically prescribed for himself, he thinks sometimes that he may attain the hundred, which he would dearly like, if he could retain, as he has retained thus far, the full possession of all his faculties.

No serious man of broad view can regard the interest Dr. Holmes takes in his health as at all excessive, especially as it not only concerns the keeping of a man with us of whom literary America is proud, but is a scientific demonstration of the value of systematic hygiene applied to the preservation of body and mind of an advanced age.—Newark Journal.

All the Comforts of Home.

One of the brightest efforts of Mr. Wm. Gillette is his domestic volume of laughable incidents compiled in a comedy entitled "All the Comforts of Home." He took his ideas from a German comedy entitled "Ein Gluckliche Familie," and has since cleverly transferred its delightful original humor into an English dress in the merriest of American fashions. It has a very interesting plot, bright and most original scenes, and employs a host of happy characters that are artistically depicted by Mr. Charles Frohman's select company of comedians. The company is a long and most prosperous run on its production in New York, and like other of Mr. Gillette's work has proved very popular. The story is a jealous old husband of a second wife suspects the spouse of lack of faith because he has got hold of a tender letter of hers making an appointment with a fair unknown. The name of Victor Smyth, Victor is really in love with the young wife's stepdaughter, and *pretends to make love at the encouragement of his budding af*fections. The English Othello hurries his wife and daughter off to the Continent, leaving his house in charge of a scapegrace nephew who is deeply in debt and deeply in love with the ladies' during his uncle's absence in order to liquidate a note which is coming due. These lodgers are a queer set, comprising a nervous old invalid subject to all the ills that human recreditudes, a brainless fop, the pray of the bailiffs, an ogling comic opera singer, a retired tradesman fond of flirting with friendly fear of his termagant wife, who detects him in compromising relations with the comic opera singer, a guileless young daughter of the retired tradesman and of the native termagant. There are various other subsidiary characters, and in truth the cast is a long one. Of course the graceless nephew falls in love with the guileless daughter of the termageant and the tradesman, and of course all sorts of tanglements and bewilderments grow out of the use of a private gentleman's house by a troop of ill-assorted lodgers.—Ex.

A New Use for Bones.

The Home Journal says: "A gardener who has tested it for three years, says that broken pieces of bone do much better than broken crockery for draining flower pots. The plants suck the fertilizing quality out of the bones and make such a vigorous growth that the plants in pots supplied with bones could be told at once." And to this the Morristown Banner says: "We know a lovely old lady who loves flowers, who has for years mixed bones through the soil in her flower pots, and urged her friends to do it if they would have a profusion of flowers."

A Youthful Prisoner.

Charles Doty, a twelve-year-old lad was committed to the county jail yesterday morning by Justice Nash to await the action of the Grand Jury. The charge against him was larceny. Mrs. Boice, the proprietress of a boarding house situated at the corner of Third street and Central avenue is the complainant. She charges young Doty with stealing $6.33 from her.

A Horse Thief Wanted at Summit.

Chief of Police Edward B. Kelly, of Summit, went to Trenton yesterday to obtain a requisition from Gov. Abbett for a horse thief, who is in jail in New York for stealing a valuable animal from Summit. Chief Kelly obtained the necessary papers and last night started for Albany to present them to Gov. Hill.

Fruits Very Cheap.

Fruits are very cheap this year. In the local markets peaches are as low as 25 cents a basket. Watermelons are 10 cents each. A basket of pears costs 25 cents and *apples are quoted at 10 cents a bas*ket. Egg plants, squash, muskmelons, etc., are but two and three cents each.

—The corn crop in the greater part of Union county is reported to be phenomenally large. There have been no heavy winds, as in former years, to blow down the corn, but a great deal of it has already fallen. The heavy growth of stalks and ears and the unusual softness of the ground by reason of so much rain, have combined to cause the corn to topple over and fall in a great many fields. This will damage the crop, to an extent, by the yield will be great notwithstanding this little disadvantage.

Little Julia Corraled the Calves.

Little Julia Fitzpatrick, of Bound Brook, is only eleven years old, but keeps her eyes open for the main chance. One day last week she saw twenty-seven calves wandering aimlessly about the road. Miss Julia promptly corralled the calves and marched them off to the pound-master, who paid her twenty-five cents per head, or $6.75 altogether.

Hands Across the Sea.

Every indication of good fellowship, every incident that draws closer together England and America, the great English speaking nations, ought to be made the most of. English is the language of the future, because already more civilized people use it than any other, also because those who speak it are the coming race. Troublous times are in store for the monarchies in Europe. England is a kingdom in little more than the name, her government being nearly as free as our own. In the crash that is sure to come among monarchies and empires, it will be well for the free English speaking peoples to stand together. They can rule the world.

Significant signs show that the feeling of brotherhood between Great Britain and the United States is increasing. It will grow still more rapidly when Ireland's wrongs are redressed. Pleasant it is to read of the special services held in Westminster Abey in memory of our dead poet, Lowell. Archdeacon Farrar himself conducted the beautiful and impressive service, and said of Lowell: "He was one of the sacred unions binding England and America more closely together. He was loved and his memory will be revered by the two mightiest nations of the earth."

Pleasant it is to read, too, that a special committee of English ladies has taken up the work of furthering the interests of our Columbian fair. At the head of the committee is no less a person than the queen's own daughter, Princess Christian, which shows the feeling of the British royal family toward America at least. We can recall with satisfaction, too, that this interest among the women of England in our World's fair is due to the efforts of the accomplished and patriotic president of the American women's commission for the exposition, Mrs. Potter Palmer.

A Day in the Wheat Pit.

The following from late Chicago dispatches rather tends to excite a mild wonder whether the lunatics are mostly confined in asylums. And after reading the dispatch, taking in the lightning change business of grain and pork and how the longs became short and the shorts became long and everything left off not far from where it started, there is still further room for inquiry mildly. What is the good of it all?

When the bell sounded this morning to inform the waiting brokers that the ball was open, a shout went up which almost lifted the roof. Everybody wanted to buy wheat, and there was little or none for sale. Before the echoes of the opening bell had died away, December wheat had sold at $1.09 and $1.11. In a minute or so it went to $1.13¾, back to $1.10¾, and then on another upsurge touched $1.14—all this in the first twenty minutes. The business was not of large volume, for few were bold enough to sell on the first rise. The selling was mostly done by the longs, who had a good profit and wanted to secure it. At 11 o'clock it was reported that New York and foreign houses had turned sellers, and if there was frenzy in the previous buying there was little short of insanity in the selling rave which followed. December wheat started to tumble as soon as the first selling order was known, and the drop from $1.14 to $1.06 was quick and easy. But a reaction of a cent or two followed.

The excitement in wheat extended to other markets. Corn sold up to 60¾ cents for September, oats to 39¾ cents, and pork to $10.65. But all went off sharply on the break in wheat. Rye was also on the rampage. September sold up to $1.10, and held there for a long time. A week ago today the same option in rye closed at 76¾ cents. Old operators say they have never seen anything like the excitement and such wide and rapid fluctuations. Some individual losses must have been appalling.

After the long hour the longs showed much of the panic which the shorts had exhibited in the forenoon. Early buyers turned sellers and the bears put on short lines. September 1 sold rapidly to $1.08, but rallied some later. Everything else followed in the wake of wheat on the break, but on the excited advance, September corn broke to 60 cents; September rye, after touching $1.11¾, fell to $1.08, and September pork from $10.65, during the excitement, to $9.80.

It is some years since man began to improve on nature's work by making artificial stone, and it is announced that one has at last been devised which is better for architectural purposes than anything ever yet found ready made. It is a compound of iron, sulphur and silicon, the three being united by partly chemical, partly mechanical action. This stone is of remarkable strength, and is produced in any color desired. It can be molded into any architectural form. Besides this it may be cast into sewer pipes, and is valued for bridge foundations and culverts because its surface can be polished to perfect smoothness.

Among the anecdotes revived by the death of George Jones, of The New York Times, is one that can hardly be regarded to the credit of the story of how Connolly, of the Tweed ring, offered to Mr. Jones $5,000,000 in cold cash if he would refrain from attacking the ring and would suppress the proofs he held of its rotten dealings. Mr. Jones refused and the fortune of The Times was made. But, honestly, how many men, not over rich, would have refused $5,000,000 for simply keeping their mouths shut?

It is a satisfaction to know that the Mississippi river has been bented to its source at last. This is now declared to be, not Lake Itasca, but "a great ultimate reservoir nine miles above Lake Itasca." This makes the total length of the Mississippi 2,553 miles.

EVA AT THE FOOTLIGHTS

Starring in New Jersey as Mrs. Robert Ray Hamilton.

THE PLAY IS "ALL A MISTAKE."

The Plot of Her Sensational Piece Is Founded Upon Her Affair with Hamilton, but She Figures as a Heroine of High Character—Josh Mann the Villain.

BOSTON, N. J., Sept. 2.—That curious woman who calls herself Mrs. Robert Ray Hamilton, but whom the courts decided to be Mrs. Joshua Mann, has once more shuffled the cards and has made a new deal in the entertaining if uncertain game of adventure which she began so many years ago. In this small New Jersey town she made her debut as an actress last night in a play embracing and centering about the incidents of her life with Robert Ray Hamilton. Months ago it was known that some one had written a play for her which was to be called "The Habbertons," and it was also known that Habberton was selected because it would suggest to the public the fact that the play would deal with the Robert Ray Hamilton episode.

"All a Mistake."

Eva has been spending the months of retirement in restoring her shattered nerves and in developing that histrionic talent which everyone has confident she possesses. That she studied assiduously and with some intelligence was shown by her performance last night.

During the last two months rehearsals have been frequent. Among the first moves Manager Gardiner made was to change the title of the play. He decided that "The Habbertons" was not as attractive as it might be, and substituted "All a Mistake," relying upon the pub lishing of the name, Mrs. Robert Ray Hamilton, in big black type just under the title, to put people in mind of what was "all a mistake."

Her Style of Play Bill.

There has not been any great amount of money back of the enterprise. For the past week various small New Jersey towns have been billed with posters reading like this:

THE SEASON'S SENSATION.

MRS. ROBERT RAY HAMILTON,

UNDOUBTEDLY THE MOST FAMOUS WOMAN IN THE LAND,

FOR ONE NIGHT ONLY,

ALL A MISTAKE.

SUPPORTED BY A COMPETENT COMPANY OF METROPOLITAN PLAYERS.

Eva as a Heroine.

About 250 people came out to see her in the evening. The plot of the play follows the incidents known to the public, but it follows them in a distorted way. Eva Mann is made out to be a heroine and a martyr. Robert Ray Hamilton as a weak but noble hearted man of the world. Both are victims of the wiles of a character who is supposed to be Josh Mann and of an other character a cast off mistress of the hero, who never appeared. Robert Ray Hamilton is masquerading under the name of Roland Livingstone. Josh Mann is called Jean Vanteck. Eva Mann is called Nadine, a friendless orphan, surrounded by low and vicious persons. Nurse Donnelly may be strainedly discovered in a Mrs. Pyncheon, a drunken house keeper for the Livingstones.

The Plot of the Play.

To strip the charac ters of their names in the play Robert Ray Hamilton is made to meet and love Eva Mann, thereby enraging his bosom friend, Josh Mann, and his cast off mistress. The wicked Josh hires a man to personate a priest, and thus when Robert Ray and Eva think they are married, they are not. Eva finds out the truth through the drunken housekeeper, thinks Robert Ray has deceived her, and prepares to fly. She is prevented, and a second and genuine marriage takes place. They go to the seashore, followed by the machinations of the same villains.

The drunken house keeper comes in with a knife and tries to stab Eva, Robert Ray interferes and accidentally stabs the drunken housekeeper. Crowd rushes in.

Eva Takes the Blame.

Eva takes the blame and Robert flies—which is new and much revised version of the story of the crime for which Eva did time in the Trenton penitentiary. The last act does not pretend to follow the facts, unless it is intended as a work of prophecy for in it Eva is about to marry Josh because she thinks Robert Ray is dead, and would wish her to marry his bosom friend. Robert Ray comes back just in the nick o' time, and villain Josh sneaks away exposed, while the castoff mistress takes poison and dies.

She Makes Up Well.

Eva certainly makes up well. Her stage presence takes ten years from her life and much of the hardness from her face. Considering the fact that she never acted before on the stage, her poses and her stage walk are quite good. Her form shows to advantage, and her bare arms are round and white and tapering.

But when it comes to reading the lines Eva Mann is not there at all. If ever a Romanoff dramatic school has been placing sort this play requires it. Eva Mann expressed tremendous passion in her gestures, while her voice had about as little expression as a grist mill in rain water. The contrast was highly entertaining.

The Star Was Overshadowed.

When she said, "Oh, that Roland were here in spirit," she waved her arms and body frantically, but maintained an even tone set aside in good society for observations about the weather. When she cast up her eyes and tried to blush it was a cause for a far from polite titter in the Opera house. The company is about of the barn storming average with one or two exceptions, who are a trifle above it. Mrs. Mann's gowns would not create a sensation on a city stage. But in her costume in the last act she got great applause, her neck and arms showing to fine advantage. The lady who played the cast off mistress did very creditably, acting far better than the star.

An Old Landmark Gone.

SCITUATE, Mass., Sept. 2.—The old town house, erected in 1636, was burned last evening. The building was not occupied and was practically valueless, except as an old landmark.

Lunatics at Large.

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 2.—Two inmates of the Essex county insane asylum, near Newark, made their escape yesterday. They were caught after a long chase.

THE WORLD OF POLITICS.

Young Garfield Snowed Under by the Anti-Sherman Men.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 2.—At the state senatorial convention of districts Twenty-four and Twenty-six the late President Garfield's son, James R. Garfield, was a candidate from Lake county. His name was put before the convention by Captain Burrows, a political opponent of President Garfield during the latter's career. Young Garfield was snowed under on the first ballot by ex-Speaker Lampson, of Ashtabula. Lampson received 105 votes to Garfield's 65. What made the convention interesting was the fight between Sherman and Foraker, who are actively building fences for the United States senatorship. Lampson is a Foraker man and Garfield a Shermanite.

Wright for Auditor General.

HARRISBURG, Sept. 2.—Delegates are arriving slowly for the Democratic state convention to be held on Thursday. It seems to be the general belief here that Wright, for auditor general, and A. L. Tilden, for state treasurer, will be the ticket. Chairman Kerr has his headquarters at the Lochiel house. Colonel Skinner, of Fulton, will likely be temporary chairman of the convention and Congressman Mutchler or Mortimer F. Elliott permanent presiding officer. The platform, it is said, will ignore all except state issues.

Prohibitionists at Albany.

ALBANY, Sept. 2.—The Prohibition convention was called to order this morning at Barman's Bleeker hall by Clay Bascom, of Troy. It is understood that a regular state ticket will be nominated.

It is hinted that there is a sentiment in favor of the proposed Republican nominee, Andrew D. White. Possible independent nominations for governor are William S. Wardell, W. Jenning Demarest, of New York city, and W. S. Powell, a wealthy farmer of Columbia county.

The speakers are to be National Chairman Hickey, Mrs. L. Bailey and Martha H. Bryer.

Jones May Run Independently.

NEW YORK, Sept. 2.—The World says: News comes from Saratoga that Lieutenant Governor Jones has had a conference there with a number of anti-Hill Democrats who pretend to have a pull with labor interests, and that the result of the talk is a feeling on the part of the lieutenant governor that if he will run on an independent ticket he may be elected governor. One of the participants says that Lieutenant Governor Jones feels that he hasn't any chance of getting the regular Democratic nomination.

Hall Fighting the Subtreasury Scheme.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 2.—Ex-President U. S. Hall, of the Missouri Alliance, has issued an appeal to all the subtreasury leaders asking them to meet and select delegates to the national meeting of anti-subtreasury men to be held here Sept. 15. Hall is making a hard fight notwithstanding his recent defeat. He declares the subtreasury scheme is a measure to ruin the Alliance.

Harmony in Erie County.

BUFFALO, Sept. 2.—The Democratic county committee have adopted the compromise rules agreed upon by the Cleveland and Erie county democracy conference committee's. A resolution was adopted congratulating the Democracy of Erie county upon the restoration of harmony.

Hill's Supporters Victorious.

UTICA, N. Y., Sept. 2.—There was a rebel hot fight at the Democratic caucus in Utica and Oneida counties between Cleveland and Hill supporters, and the Hill men won. The Hill caucus was managed by Judge Samuel A. Beardsley.

They Favor White's Nomination.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., Sept. 2.—The First district Republican convention for Jefferson county elected delegates to the state convention favorable to the nomination of Andrew D. White for governor.

The Democratic Colored League.

HARRISBURG, Sept. 2.—The executive committee of the Democratic Colored league have decided to hold the next convention of the league at Pittsburg, on the 20th of this month.

Mr. Scott Removed to Newport.

ERIE, Pa., Sept. 2.—W. L. Scott passed a better night, and at a conference of his physicians it was decided to remove him to Newport without delay. President Newell's private car will be ready, and at 5:30 last evening was attached to the Lake Shore limited, containing besides Mr. Scott and the immediate members of his family Dr. Pepper and Brindle, Matthew H. Taylor and R. H. Townsend, of Philadelphia. The ex-congressman progressed as well as could be expected when he was lifted from his carriage to the private car.

Mrs. Hamm's Verdict Doubled.

SUSQUEHANNA, Pa., Sept. 2.—Mrs. James Hamm, of Forest City, has been awarded $8,412.80 damages against the Delaware and Hudson Railroad company for the death of her husband, who was run down by a train on that road in 1888. Mrs. Hamm had previously been awarded $4,000 damages, but the company appealed to the supreme court, which put the case back to the lower court for retrial with the above result.

An Australian Ballot Law Decision.

BOSTON, Sept. 2.—A decision has been sent down by Judge Lathrop, of the supreme court, applicable to the Australian ballot act. Citizens of Revere attempted to oust a member of the board of selectmen because several persons who had no right to vote voted for the candidate. Judge Lathrop holds that where votes are not challenged their legality cannot afterwards be a subject of inquiry.

Two Thieves Caught.

HARRISON, N. J., Sept. 2.—A desperate fight for the possession of nearly $2,000 worth of diamond jewelry took place near the Bull's Head last evening. James Wilhelm and James Norton caught Charles Bowen, of Orange, and Dennis Giffons, of Newark, just after they had robbed Peter Hauck's residence. The thieves fought desperately, but were captured.

Murderous Fight for a Woman.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 2.—Austin Reed was killed on a dancing platform, at Ross Cave, by being shot near the heart by Elmer Malone. They fought over a woman with whom Reed was dancing, and who Malone claimed as a partner. Joseph Farbacher, who took Reed's part, was dangerously stabbed in the back.

Cashier Banta Dismissed.

NEW YORK, Sept. 2.—The trustees of the New York Life Insurance company have directed the dismissal from the company's employ of Theodore M. Banta, the cashier, who made the charges of mismanagement against the president and trustees of the company four years ago.

CORRUPTION CHARGED.

Treasurer Wright Accuses Philadelphia's Appraisers.

A SYSTEMATIC SWINDLING SCHEME

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 2.—City Treasurer W. E. Wright has forwarded a letter to Auditor General McCamant asking that he join with him in the dismissal of Mercantile Appraisers Edward N. Patton, Albert Crawford, Samuel F. Housemen, Harry Hunter and James F. Bell, constituting the board of mercantile appraisers for the city and county of Philadelphia, and makes the following charges against them:

Charges of Corruption.

1. That the appraisers have regularly and deliberately, for the purpose of defrauding the state, assessed fictitious persons and those from whom no payment of mercantile taxes was or could be exacted.

2. That they have regularly exempted from the payment of the tax those who were subject to and perfectly able to pay it.

3. That they have grossly underrated many hundreds of prominent merchants and dealers for purposes best known to themselves.

A Systematic Swindling Scheme.

4. That they sent out notices of assessment placing certain taxpayers in a high class while they have returned them to this department as assessed in a lower class, thus enabling third parties to collect from the taxpayers the larger sum while the smaller amount only was paid into the treasury, and the state was defrauded of the difference.

5. That their plan as to reductions and exception has been a systematic scheme of swindling which has resulted invariably in oppression to the citizen, in loss to the state and in demoralization to the community.

THE BRITISH LION GROWLS.

He Does Not Like to See Russia in the Dardanelles.

LONDON, Sept. 2.—The question of the Dardanelles becoming a passageway for Russian warships to the Mediterranean just now exceeds in interest even the war in Chili. Well authenticated rumors say that the foreign office will not stand idly by and see the Mediterranean invaded by a Russian fleet under the guise of volunteer transports or otherwise. The main question seems to be whether England will be so pre-occupied with the sustainance in such a course by the powers of the triple alliance.

No doubt is entertained that Russia has been encouraged to her present aggressive attitude by the understanding with France, and feels safe with France as a friend against any unsupported action on the part of Great Britain.

The situation is becoming very grave and is so regarded both in Berlin and London. Lord Salisbury, it is reported, will shorten his vacation in order to deal with the problem, which is greatly complicated by the unprecedented coolness of the sultan toward the British government. A Constantinople dispatch says that the French and Russian ambassadors have been planning into the sultan's ears the fact that, with all England's enormous navy, Russia of intended aggrandizement at the expense of Turkey, the only great power that has actually taken possession of any important part of the sultan's domains is England herself, and that England, before professing friendship for Turkey, ought to give up Egypt, if not also Cyprus.

The sultan therefore is, for the time being, prejudiced against England on account of Egypt, although also upholding Bulgaria against Russian machinations.

It is remembered that the Crimean war was preceded by England's rejection of a Russian proposal that England should take Egypt and allow Russia to have Constantinople, and there is an uneasy feeling that Russia will fight again rather than permit England to hold Egypt without compensation to Russia.

Bank Wrecker Simmons' Scheme Failed.

NEW YORK, Sept. 2.—Judge Benedict declined to accept Cornelius H. and Jacob Tallmar as bondsmen in the sum of $50,000 for James A. Simmons, under sentence of six years' imprisonment for bank wrecking. He discovered that Simmons had given the parties an indemnity contract for the sum, and said that he did not care to aid any one to break the law. He appeared on the face. Simmons wishes his liberty pending appeal.

New York State Equalization Table.

ALBANY, Sept. 2.—The state board of equalization have issued the annual table of equalization of the state. The total assessed and equalized value of real estate is $6,807,894,879. The total of real and personal property is $6,772,993,746. There is no change made, the amount declared from certain counties being added to others.

The Molly Dead Man Identified.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Sept. 2.—The body of the man found dead on the Holly farm near Plainfield, N. J., has been identified as that of Michael T. Hoffman, by Mrs Frances Engel, of Carlstadt, N. J. On Aug. 14 Hoffman said to her, "I'm going away; my boiler explodes." Since then he has not been seen alive.

City Clerk Cook's Shortage.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Sept. 2.—The shortage of H. D. Cook, city clerk of New Brunswick, is $2,900. He has been stealing the city's money for the past six years.

I have used Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy for constipation and acknowledge it is worthy of all that can be said of it for directions of that kind.—Nellie A. McQuade, 250 Main street, Amsterdam, N. Y.—ADV.

Victorious Chilians May Demand Our Minister's Recall.

ALL AMERICANS ARE IN DISFAVOR.

Some of Admiral Brown's Acts Alleged to Have Increased the Bad Impression Caused by the Itata Affair—The Feeling May Affect Yankee Trade in Chili.

VALPARAISO, Sept. 2.—There is no disguising the fact that there is a very bitter feeling against the Americans on the part of the successful revolutionists. This feeling is so strong that unless it is placated in some way it may seriously affect American commercial interests in Chili for some time. The capture of the Itata first created the impression that the United States government was actively unfavorable to the revolutionary cause. This impression was intensified by the action of Admiral Brown when he visited Quintero bay on Aug. 26 to witness the landing of General Canto's army.

Suspicions of Admiral Brown.

The admiral desired to see the maneuvre, and invited some of the other naval officers in Valparaiso to come to the flagship San Francisco and go to Quintero bay. Only the German officers accepted. The San Francisco did not anchor at Quintero bay, but steamed around until the landing was effected and then headed for Valparaiso. Upon the arrival of the San Francisco here Lieutenant Dyer visited Intendente Vial to secure permission to send a cable dispatch to the navy department. This visit has been constructed by the adherents of the Junta as proof positive that Admiral Brown was acting as a government spy on the movements of the opposition and no amount of explanation has been sufficient to remove this impression.

They Don't Like Minister Egan.

Then other things have served to strengthen the feeling against the United States. Not the least important among them is the very general belief that Minister Egan has been an active partisan of Balmaceda and has used his influence in preventing the state department from recognizing the belligerent rights of the insurgents. Acting Secretary of State Wharton's action in ignoring Senors Monts and Foster, the congressional envoys, even when it is a recognized fact that they represent the only government of the country, has increased the feeling against citizens of the United States.

Admiral Brown's action in refusing to give up the political refugees who have found an asylum aboard his ships has also added to the general irritation.

May Demand His Recall.

It is the general belief that Admiral Brown is acting under instructions or by the advice of Mr. Egan. The minister is expected to arrive here tomorrow for the purpose of consulting with the admiral as to the final disposition of the refugees. The feeling against Mr. Egan is very violent and there is little question that his recall will soon be demanded.

Balmaceda Reported Killed.

NEW YORK, Sept. 2.—A report reached this city yesterday from Santiago that Balmaceda, ex-dictator of Chili, had been killed in the mountains while trying to effect his escape.

Balmaceda Off for Europe.

PARIS, Sept. 2.—A retired English officer in this city announces that he has a telegram from Balmaceda saying that he will come to Europe at the first chance.

A Duel Near Washington.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—A duel on the frontier style took place in a barn on the farm of General E. F. Beale, near this city. Nathius Robinson was recently discharged from General Beale's employ, but came back to see about a mare he had left. Hot words concerning payment for pasturing arose between Robinson and Foreman George Dugneau, and both men drew pistols and fired at each other. Dugneau was shot twice and died in ten minutes. Robinson surrendered.

A POLICE STATION.

[Copyright by American Press Association.]

In every large town or city a well equipped and organized police force is necessary to the safety and protection of the community. Very little attention, however, has been given to the planning or construction of police stations by architects, and their arrangement and general construction is open to criticism from a practical as well as an esthetic point of view.

The police force of a town is usually entirely under the control of one man, known as the chief inspector, whose jurisdiction extends over the entire limits of the city. The city is then divided into a certain number of precincts, with a station house in each for the accommodation of the officers and patrolmen.

The number of men assigned to a precinct of course depends upon the size of the city and various other conditions. An average precinct in the city of New York would require not less than eighty men, which are divided into two platoons, under the directions of the captain of the precinct and his assistant. Each platoon is divided into two sections, with a sergeant in charge of each section, and it is so arranged that only one half of the patrolmen in each section shall be on duty at a time.

feet frontage, and is so planned as to secure an open space on each side of the building for light and air, with the cells for prisoners in the rear.

The building is of brick, trimmed with stone. The front is faced with pressed brick. The main entrance opens directly into the desk room or office, and is protected by a neat stone porch with turned columns. In the center, and suspended from the ceiling of the porch, is a handsome lamp, which lights the entrance at night. A good sized vestibule, shut off by double doors, separates the outside entrance from the desk room. The desk room or office is where all complaints are made, bonds given and where all general business transactions take place. The roll call also takes place in this room, and in it all applications for excuses, etc., are made to the captain. This room should be large enough to allow the men to assemble in platoons before the captain preparatory to marching out.

At the left of the main office is the captain's sitting and bed room. The sitting room has an open fireplace, and is pleasantly lighted from the front by two large windows. The bedroom is lighted from the side. Back of the captain's bedroom is a roundsman's room. Behind the office, upon the opposite side of the building, is the sergeant's room. Back of these are the toilet rooms and staircase hall, from which stairs ascend to the different stories.

The cells and yard at the rear occupy the full width of the lot. The cells are about 8 feet wide by 7½ feet in length and 8½ in height, with a corridor extending entirely around it. This corridor is lighted by windows at the side. The doors of the cells consist of strong iron grilles hung upon wrought iron hinges, which are securely fastened in the masonry with heavy bolts, and with locks which are operated from the outside. The cells are two stories in height, with an iron staircase ascending to the same. If desired, the cells could be carried up one or more additional stories. Between the main hall and the cells in the first story is a men's large sitting room, with wash bowls and slop jar for general use. Across the corridor, upon the opposite side of the building, are ten rooms for sergeants and a detectives' room.

In the stories above are provided sleeping apartments for the sergeants and roundsmen. Usually the sergeants occupy a room together, while the men occupy single beds in a large room in the front or rear. In addition to the sleeping apartments in the stories above are provided bathrooms and suitable toilet rooms.

The floors of the building throughout are of yellow pine, thoroughly kiln dried, and finished with four coats of varnish rubbed smooth.

The stairs are of iron with hardwood rails. All other inside woodwork is of light oak, filled and finished with three coats of varnish rubbed smooth. Doors and all furniture finished in the same manner. The advantage of having woodwork finished in this manner is that it can be easily kept clean. The cells are of course built of masonry. The cost of this building would be from $15,000 to $20,000.

How to Drain Land in Level Pieces.

Sink a well down to the first porous stratum. The water from the upper soil will flow readily into the well, especially if drain pipes or tiles be laid in its direction.

How to Make Ginger Beer.

Into one gallon of boiling water put one pound of lump sugar, one ounce best unbleached Jamaica ginger well bruised, three-quarters of an ounce of cream of tartar and two sliced lemons. Stir the ingredients frequently in a covered vessel until lukewarm, then add one and a half or two ounces of yeast and keep it in a moderate warm place, so as to excite a brisk fermentation. The next day rack and strain through flannel. Let it work for a day or two, then strain again and bottle, wiring down the corks.

Do not eat hurriedly or bolt your food—it is vulgar as well as being bad for digestion. A knife should not be held by the blade nor a fork by the prongs. Grasp both knife and fork by the handle, directing both by extending the forefinger along the backs close to the handle. Never eat potatoes, vegetables or anything for that matter with the knife blade, which was made for cutting only; the fork was designed for carrying food to the mouth. Always be polite and pleasant to those with whom you are dining and endeavor to anticipate their wants. Do not reach across the table for the salt, bread, etc.; if they are not close beside you ask your neighbor or a servant for them politely.

How to Get Rid of Moths.

Sprinkle furniture and cushions thoroughly with benzine. It is sure death to moths, and will not spot or injure the most delicate fabric.

How to Dress.

Somebody has said "dress according to your means." But this motto is illogical. Probably the only persons who dress according to their means are paupers. Millionaires do not dress better than clerks who earn twelve to fifteen dollars a week—frequently not so well. Servants very often dress better than their mistresses. There exists a positive mania for deceiving others as to our wealth and position, and consequently the clerks and servants live in cheap—often dirty—rooms and eat the poorest and least nourishing food to enable them to wear "false feathers." Men and women should dress neatly and comfortably, but according to their station in life as well as means. Nourish your bodies and minds before indulging your vanity. "Fine feathers do not make fine birds."

How to Remove Rust from Knives.

When knives or other steel cutlery become rusty they should be cleaned at once. To remove the rust rub with a flannel dipped in sweet oil; then cover it with slaked lime and allow it to rest for twenty-four hours; wipe clean and finish off with some powdered whiting and a chamois leather. This will make the articles as bright as new. An excellent way to prevent steel knives and forks rusting is to plunge the blades in a pan of boiling after washing and remove them just before they are used. When they are wiped they will be perfectly bright, and if kept in this way cannot get rusty.

How to Prevent Lamps Smoking.

A smoky lamp is generally caused by the wick being too high. This can be prevented by regulating the wick. Soak the wick in strong vinegar before using and dry it thoroughly before putting it into the lamp. Most of the unpleasantness attending the use of oil lamps can be prevented by this simple precaution.

How to Kill Aphides on Rose Trees.

Some use tobacco paper, two pounds soaked in a gallon of boiling water and strained. Others use liquid ammonia. But by far the best preparation is fir tree oil—one ounce to two quarts of cold water. This should be mixed over night. In the morning, if the water is hard, a scum will be found floating on the solution. This must be skimmed off, else it will blacken the leaves. It is then sprinkled upon the affected plants, and the operation repeated every ten or fifteen days. This solution will not injure or discolor even the most delicate azalea blossom, while it effectually destroys the aphides.

How to Join Broken Amber.

Broken pipestems or other articles made of amber may be mended in the following way: Smear the parts with linseed oil; heat the fracture over the gas jet (protecting the other parts from the heat) and press the edges together when they become soft and adhesive. Allow the joint to cool gradually and polish slowly with a little whitening and water, finishing with olive oil. Amber may be improved by boiling it in rape oil for twelve to twenty-four hours.

How to Clear Moss from Walks.

Gravel walks in gardens and shaded places are frequently covered with an unsightly growth of moss. This can be effectually prevented by watering the walks with a solution of sulphate of copper (blue vitriol).

How to See Down a Well.

By the use of a piece of looking glass, when the sun is shining brightly, you may discover a minute object in the bottom of a deep well. A ray of light is thrown down by the reflective power of the mirror. When the well is so situated that the reflection cannot be made to reach the perpendicular point, two or three mirrors can be used, throwing the reflection of one on the other until the desired focus is obtained.

GIANT SOLDIERS.

The very biggest of the British soldiers are in the East Indian army. They are eight or ten feet tall. They weigh five or six tons apiece. These giant soldiers are not men, however. They go on four feet instead of two. In fact, they are elephants.

Strange to say, the first elephants ever seen by Europeans, centuries ago, were soldiers too. The Europeans had to fight them, as well as men, in the great wars of the east. In those days, elephants went into battle clad in armor. Sometimes they bore towers on their backs, filled with warriors. Some of those old soldier elephants were trained to cut and thrust with huge scimiters, which they carried with their trunks. An elephant can lift half a ton with his trunk. Think, then, what a tremendous weapon such a swordsman could swing.

A RAW RECRUIT.

Now the European employs elephants in their armies in the East. The British soldier elephants in India today, however, are not fighters. They are workers; they bear their baggage and drag the heavy cannon.

Not long ago seventeen "raw recruits" were shipped from Rangoon to Madras. Most of them were newly captured animals purchased for the government of India up in the country of British Burmah. One by one these huge animals were hoisted from the wharf in a great sling and lowered into the hold of the ship, as shown in the accompanying picture from Little Men and Women, which gives its readers the interesting facts here quoted. The elephants did not like going to sea in that way at all. They struggled mightily. They roared. They grabbed at the rigging with their trunks as they were slung up in midair. And then down in the hold they were so furious that it was more difficult to get them out of the sling than it had been to get them in.

Keep the Passions in Check.

An old man was once walking with a little boy. They came across four shrubs. The old man said to his youthful companion:

"Pull up the least one."

He obeyed with ease.

"Now the next."

He obeyed, but it did not come so easily.

"And the third."

It took all his strength to move its roots, but he succeeded.

"Now the fourth."

In vain the lad put forth all his strength. He only made the leaves tremble; he could not move the roots. They had gone strongly into the earth, and no effort could dislodge them.

Then the wise old man said to the ardent youth:

"This, my son, is just what happens with our passions. When they are young and weak, one may, by a little watchfulness over self and the help of a little self denial, easily tear them up; but if we let them cast their roots deep into our souls, there is no human power can uproot them. For this reason, my child, watch well over the first movements of your soul, and study, by use of prayer, to keep your passions each in check."—Golden Days.

HE SITS ON THE POST TO PLEASE HER.

Dog came by with a growl and a grumble,
Made Clarinthia start and stumble:
Poor Rheenser got a tumble.
Yoo, hoo, hoo, hoo, hoo!
—St. Nicholas.

The Spice Islands.

The Moluccas or Spice islands are a numerous group in the Eastern archipelago; none of them are large; the surface of the whole group is mountainous, several peaks attaining to the height of 8,000 feet. They are volcanic in structure, some of the islands containing active volcanoes and numerous hot springs, which are subject to frequent occurrence. Some of the mountains present a beautiful appearance, being wooded to the summit; the soil is rich, the climate warm and very moist, but owing to the smallness of the islands and the prevalence of the monsoons the heat is seldom excessive. As the climate is quite unsuited for corn, the natives depend for food on the sago palm, the bread fruit tree and the cocoanut. Spice is the article of produce most important to Europeans, cloves, nutmegs and mace being exported in large quantities. Sandal wood is obtained here, and small quantities of gold, coral and mother of pearl are found, while some trade is carried on with China in edible birds' nests and that other peculiar delicacy, the fins of sharks. The Portuguese, Spanish and Dutch have alternately struggled for pre-eminence on these valuable islands. They were captured by the British in the beginning of the present century, but were finally restored to the Dutch by the treaty of Paris in 1814.

Training Baby's Ears.

There are ears and ears, and almost as much as any other feature do they add or detract from the beauty of a face.

An ear that is small, back against the head—an ear that is small, flattish, thin and rather transparent, this ear is a comfort to possess; but a large "meaty" ear, with deep, crupping propensities at the top—an ear that stands boldly out from the head and seems to bend itself forward to catch each passing sound or syllable—this ear is not a thing desirable. It gives its "wearer" the appearance of an animal of some alert species, and proclaims "breed" loudly and emphatically.

This superabundance of ear can be mitigated to some extent. Not by depletion or removal of any parts, but by bringing it into a more becoming position by means of soft bandages. The infant that shows signs of prominent ears should be provided with a thin cap of soft silk or mull, fitting snugly against the unruly members. It was once the fashion for the little ones to wear caps during babyhood, but nowadays a cap is rarely seen, although a baby's face in such even more charming by this soft, white framing and ears are thus kept flat against the head.—Detroit Free Press.

ESTABLISHED 1884. PLAINFIELD, N. J., "THE COLORADO OF THE EAST," THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 3, 1891. PRICE TWO CENTS.

KNOCKED OUT AGAIN.

THE SUPREME COURT STOPS THE COMBINE'S LATEST SCHEME.

The Application of the Citizens of Plainfield Against the Schemers Granted.—The Bill of Complaint in Full.

THE NEWS yesterday told of how a number of indignant Plainfield citizens applied during the afternoon, through counsel, to Judge Van Syckel, of the Supreme Court, in session at Toms River, for a writ of certiorari to stop the combine in its latest little game to saddle on the city a burden which nobody wants but the combine, for some unknown but strongly suspected reason.

The matter was being argued when THE NEWS went to press.

Chancellor Runyon, possibly through not knowing the ilk, was induced to appear for "the combine," and made a determined effort to prevent the granting of the writ, and failing in that struggled for delay, but his efforts were unavailing. All his ingenious arguments could not persuade the court, and it promptly granted the writ to have the Supreme Court investigate the combine's methods in this transaction, as it will also investigate its other transactions which are not deemed for the public good.

The writ takes up the Low Water Ordinance and Contract to the Supreme Court, where it will remain until the people have had a chance to retire the schemers to private life, to be always remembered for their treachery to those who innocently trusted them, and as the only officials who ever brought disgrace on the good name of Plainfield.

The complaint upon which the writ was granted is as follows:

The petition of Mason W. Tyler, Rowland Cox, Jeremiah Evarts Tracy, Charles J. Fiske, George H. Babcock, Pliny Fiske, Ernest L. Waitz, Eric H. Erickson, John M. Whiton, John Bushnell, William E. Lowe, William Thompson, Joseph M. Titsworth and George H. Goddard, residents and taxpayers of the City of Plainfield in the County of Union and State of New Jersey, respectfully shows:

1. That on the twenty-seventh day of July, eighteen hundred and ninety-one, the Common Council of the City of Plainfield adopted an ordinance entitled "An Ordinance to provide for the obtaining and furnishing of a supply of water to the City of Plainfield for the purpose of extinguishing fires and other lawful uses and purposes," a copy of which ordinance marked "Schedule A" is hereto annexed, and made a part hereof.

2. That on or about the sixth day of August eighteen hundred and ninety-one, the Honorable Alexander Gilbert, Mayor of said City of Plainfield, returned the said ordinance, with his objections thereto, to the said Common Council, and filed it and them with the clerk thereof, a copy of which objections is hereto annexed, marked "Schedule B" and made a part hereof.

3. That on the twenty-first day of August eighteen hundred and ninety-one the said Common Council, by a majority of all the members thereof, re-adopted the said ordinance notwithstanding the objections of the said Mayor thereto.

4. That the said ordinance so passed by the said Common Council to pass ordinances notwithstanding the objection of the Mayor of said city is contained in section twenty-nine of the charter of the city, being an act entitled "An act to amend the charter of the City of Plainfield," approved April 4, 1872, Laws p. 1154, a copy of which section is hereto annexed, marked "Schedule C" and made a part hereof.

5. That upon the re-adoption of said ordinance the said Common Council failed to comply with the provision of said section twenty-nine of said city which required the said Council to enter the objections of the Mayor to the said ordinance at length on its journal before proceeding to reconsider the same, and that the only action of the said Common Council with respect to said objections was that contained in an account of their proceedings set out at the foot of said ordinance.

5. That before re-adopting said ordinance, and in the same session at which the said Common Council passed a resolution approving the contract therein referred to and directing the Mayor and City Clerk of said City to execute the same on its behalf, copies of which resolution and contract were not laid before said "Schedule D" and "Schedule E" are hereto annexed and made parts thereof.

7. That the said Common Council at the same meeting at which it re-adopted the said ordinance, also adopted another ordinance entitled "An ordinance to provide for sewerage in the City of Plainfield," a copy of which last mentioned ordinance marked "Schedule F" is hereto annexed and made a part hereof.

8. That the said consent which said Common Council attempted to give by the ordinance marked "Schedule A" is to the formation of a corporation under the act entitled "An act for the construction, maintenance and operation of water works for the purpose of supplying the cities, towns and villages of this State with water" approved April 21, 1876, Rev. p. 1388; that there is no other statute under which a water company can be legally formed with the consent of said Common Council, or under which a corporation can acquire either the right to use the public streets or to exercise the right of eminent domain.

9. That the said Common Council did not possess a sewer system of its own; that the only action it has ever taken looking towards the construction of a sewer system is by the said city is that contained in the contract marked "Schedule E" and the ordinance marked "Schedule F" and that the consent which the said Common Council attempted to give by the said ordinance marked "Schedule F" is to the formation of a corporation under an act entitled "An act for the construction, maintenance and operation of systems of sewerage in cities, towns and boroughs" approved June 12, 1890, Laws p. 457.

10. That a water company already exists, and has its works now in operation in this city, known as the Consumers' and Plainfield Water Supply Company, having an unimpaired capital of two hundred thousand dollars, and ample facilities for supplying the said city, and the inhabitants thereof with pure and wholesome water in any quantity which it or they may reasonably require during the next twenty-five years. That said Plainfield Water Supply Company in the month of February last made a written and standing offer to the said city to supply it with hydrants and water for extinguishing fires at fifteen dollars a hydrant per year, which offer is still open; that the said Plainfield Water Supply Company has at least as great facilities for supplying water to said city and its inhabitants as is proposed by the contract marked "Schedule E" of the said company to be organized by the parties therein referred to, and that except the flushing of sewers for which the said city has no right to pay as hereinafter pointed out, it offers precisely the same service as that required by said proposed contract; but that nevertheless, and notwithstanding, as your petitioners believe at least four-fifths of the tax-payers of said city desire that the offer of the Plainfield Water Supply Company should be accepted. A bare majority of the Common Council have combined in a persistent refusal to do so, and are seeking by every means in their power to bind said city to said proposed contract at an extra expense to the city of ten dollars per hydrant per annum, or fifteen thousand to four thousand dollars a year for a period of twenty-five years.

In consideration of which your petitioners respectfully apply to your Honor to grant them the State's writ of certiorari, issuing out of and under the seal of the Supreme Court Judicature of this State, to be directed to "Inhabitants of the city of Plainfield," requiring them to certify and send to the said Supreme Court the said ordinance herein marked "Schedule A," and the said resolution herein marked "Schedule D," and all things touching and concerning the same that herein may be done and of right, and according to the laws and constitution of this State ought to be done.

In support of this application, and upon the foregoing facts, your petitioners present the following points:

1. That said ordinance marked "Schedule A" was re-adopted by the Common Council of said city notwithstanding the Mayor's objections thereto, without the entry of said objections at length on the journal of said Council, as required by section twenty-nine of the charter of said city.

2. That the said act of the Legislature of April 2, 1876, under which alone a corporation can be formed such as that to which the said ordinance purports to give consent, is a contravention of the constitution and laws of this State against special legislation.

3. That the said Common Council has no right, power or authority under the charter of said city of Plainfield or any law of this State to annex to its consent to the formation of a water company a condition that said Company, or the promoters or organizers thereof shall obtain a contract to provide said city with a system of sewerage.

4. That the said city had no right, power or authority to pay the sum of six thousand and two hundred dollars per year, or any part thereof, or any other sum to flush sewers which it does not own, and does not propose to acquire, and which if constructed as proposed will be private property. In this respect the said ordinance, resolution and contract are also in direct and palpable violation of the provision of the constitution of this State against giving municipal aid to any individual, association or corporation.

R. V. LINDABURY,
Attorney for Petitioners.

Dated August 31, 1891.

The schedules referred to in the foregoing petition are in substance as follows:

Schedule B is the message of the Mayor vetoing the ordinance.

Schedule C is section 29 of the City Charter.

Schedule D is the resolution approving the contract for hydrants.

Schedule F is the ordinance granting a franchise to construct a sewer system.

THREATENED TO KILL HIM.

An Unknown Visitor at Mr. J. F. MacDonald's Home.

Some person as yet unknown, visited the residence of Mr. J. F. MacDonald on East Front street at a late hour last night, rang the door bell and inquired if Mr. MacDonald was at home. On being informed that he was not, he inquired for Mrs. MacDonald. He was told that she could not see her and he left the stoop muttering that he would kill him anyhow. Shortly afterward Mr. MacDonald in company with some friends arrived home. They noticed a man loitering around the house but paid no attention to him. When Mr. MacDonald went into the house and was informed of the threat the fellow had made he immediately telephoned for the police. Policeman Lynch hastened to the place, but the fellow had disappeared coming and made his escape in the darkness.

38TH NEW JERSEY VOLUNTEERS.

The Re-Union at Somerville To-Day.

A re-union of old soldiers is always interesting. The thirty-eighth New Jersey Volunteers had one to-day. They meet at Somerville.

The Women's Relief Corps and the Winfield Scott Post, G. A. R., of this city, will attend.

Re-unions revive old memories, and must also create big appetites,—if the provisions ordered are a sign. About half a ton of fish, hundreds of ears of corn, several thousand clams, a couple of hundred of chickens, and unnumbered loaves of bread and cake are a few of the items.

A good time is anticipated.

The Firemen's Excursion.

The Firemen's Association of Plainfield have arranged with the New Jersey Central Railroad for their round trip to the State Firemen's Convention and Tournament to be held at Atlantic City from Sept. 28th to Oct. 2d. A special reduced rate of $6.15 for the round trip has been secured. Tickets will be good from Sept. 28th until Oct. 2d inclusive. Tickets will be on sale at early as Sept. 23d 1891 at Alex Titsworth's, No. 28 North avenue.

I have recommended Dr. David Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" to many in Shelton and Birmingham, and I have yet to find one who has not been benefited by it.—C. L. Seaver, Birmingham, Conn.—ADV.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. George Van Emburgh of East Second street was tendered a very pleasant surprise by a number of friends Tuesday evening, the occasion being her birthday anniversary.

Herman Schwed, of the firm of Schwed Bros., the clothiers, sailed from Bremen on Tuesday last week, by Steamer Havel, for New York. He is expected to arrive here to-day.

According to the New York papers Mr. Charles Ward of Evona, who is now playing with the "By Daylight" troupe, is scoring a big success. Mr. Ward is well-known here and his success is very gratifying to his friends.

Plainfield people have discovered that in their Mayor, Alexander Gilbert, the city has probably its most gifted orator. On several occasions recently he has been called upon to preside at meetings, and they seem more like the productions of a scholar and orator than of a business man. And yet Mayor Gilbert has heretofore gained his reputation as a business man among business men. For twenty-eight years Mr. Gilbert was cashier of the Fulton and Market National Bank, New York. He entered the institution as a mere lad. He sat at its chief money counter when only twenty-four years old, and there he has sat ever since, in spite of several most tempting offers to take the presidential chair in other banking houses. Notwithstanding his close association with business men, Mr. Gilbert has preserved his interest in every sort of enterprise that makes the life of a city man in the country worth living. He was made Mayor last Fall. In his public documents he has shown the keenest grasp of things. Although a popular man when elected, he has steadily grown in popular favor, until to-day it is doubtful if there is anyone courageous enough to stand against him. should he be willing to accept another term, and it is not altogether out of the question, but the plaudits of republicans may insist upon his taking some higher office in the gift of the people.—New York World.

Assessors Meet.

The Somerset County Board of Assessors held their annual meeting to adjust taxes for the year, at the Court House in Somerville, on Tuesday. Wm. Opie acted as Chairman and C. L. Voorhees was Secretary. All the townships were represented. The board was in session until late. The total valuation in county is $16,650,000; county tax, $70,000; State school tax, $40,629.

Johnson Convicted.

Samuel Johnson (colored) was tried in the Somerset county court last Friday for breaking and entering with intent to commit rape. Carrie and Jennie Levien of North Plainfield testified as to the occurrence, which took place about the first of July. Johnson will be sentenced at the next meeting of court, which takes place Sept. 7th.

Held Their Annual Meeting Here.

The stock-holders of the Bach Manufacturing Company, which was organized in this city a year ago, held their annual meeting in Counsellor William A. Coddington's office, on West Front street, Tuesday afternoon. The following officers were selected:

President—Wm. A. Coddington.
Secretary—Albert Bach.
Treasurer—H. M. Bach.
Directors—Joseph Bach, Albert Bach, Wm. A. Coddington, J. M. Phillips, M. Regan, L. Heitzmann, W. Obel.

The Company started with a capital stock of $50,000 divided in 500 shares. The factory is at No. 30 Warren street, New York, where shoes only of a high grade are manufactured.

The Remains Removed.

The supposed remains of the late Michael Hoffman which were found in a lake in the rear of the residence of Mr. Holly on Park avenue on Saturday afternoon were removed from Terrill & Cole's undertaking rooms on Saturday morning, as the undertakers left for Passaic by wagon shortly after five o'clock.

The body is encased in an air-tight coffin. The box is lined with tin and was sealed by one of Mr. A. M. Griffen's employes. In a case when a body is in an advanced state of decomposition, the law requires that the coffin shall be air-tight.

Some persons are still in doubt, notwithstanding the verdict of the coroner's jury, as to the remains being those of Hoffmans.

The Avery-Gable Divorce Case.

Special Master in Chancery Charles A. Reed, to whom the Chancellor referred for trial the suit for divorce brought by Mr. Avery, whose wife ran away with John B. Gable last Spring, was yesterday occupied in examining witnesses in the case. Jackson S. Codington, Jr., lawyer for Mr. Avery, was produced before the court several important witnesses who testified to the acts charged against the guilty pair. Thomas Sparling, a New York detective who resides in Plainfield, gave very important evidence. The case will be continued in a few days.

Another Robbery.

Some thieves supposed to be tramps, effected an entrance into James Guttridge's store at Netherwood at an early hour this morning and stole three coats, six boxes of cigars, a number of pen-knives and other articles of more or less value. The perpetrators of the deed left no clue to their identity. The police have been notified. Robberies are becoming too numerous in this city and efforts should be made to capture the marauders.

City Court.

Policeman Lynch last night arrested John Carey and George Washington, (colored), on the charge of drunkenness and disorderly conduct. They spent the night in the station house and this morning they pleaded guilty to the charge, and City Judge Codington imposed a fine of $5 dollars in each case. They paid the fines.

—The regular rehearsals of the Grace church choir will be resumed on Saturday evening. Applications for membership can be made at either No. 37 or 36 East Fifth street.

—The Plainfield High school building has been undergoing a thorough renovating. Mr. Alonzo T. Ayres, the painter, has had men engaged for some time past repainting the exterior of the building and decorating the Assembly room. The building now presents a handsome appearance and is a credit to Mr. Ayres' ability as a first-class mechanic.

—Engine Company No. 2 will hold its regular monthly meeting this evening at eight o'clock.

—The Plainfield Cornet Band has been engaged to take part in the firemen's parade which is to take place at Elizabeth on Oct. 8th.

—The Albany street bridge at New Brunswick was made free on July 3, 1875. Before that toll was charged to those passing over it.

—The annual meeting of the Somerset County Sunday-school Convention will be held at Warren Mission Chapel, North Plainfield, next Tuesday.

—A number of Plainfielders have signified their intention of going to Elizabeth on Labor Day to witness the labor demonstration and parade.

—At noon to-day Policeman Giese arrested a drunken man who said his home was at Westfield. He will be given a hearing to-morrow morning.

—The Plainfield Reform Club will hold its regular mid-week meeting this evening at eight o'clock. The Rev. J. E. Stewart of Kansas will address the meeting.

—There were 14 applicants for teachers' certificates, at the Somerset county teachers' examination, last Saturday, and eight succeeded in passing the examination.

—There will be trotting on the track of the Gentlemen's Driving Park on Park avenue Saturday afternoon. Admission to the grounds is free and the public is invited.

—The City Common Council will hold its regular monthly meeting next Monday evening. The session will in all probability be called some time between eight o'clock and mid-night.

—"Purity or the Seventh Commandment" is the subject of the talk to be given to young men by S. A. Haines the famous commercial traveller at the Y. M. C. A. rooms Sunday at 4:15 p. m.

—The Rescues vs. New York Athletic Club next Saturday afternoon on the grounds of this city. The New York Athletics are said to be one of the best semi-professional base ball teams in New York City.

—A Jerseyman predicts that the coming Winter will be long and cold, because the nut crop is immense. He argues that nature never provides a big supply of shell food unless there's going to be a call for it.

—A number of boys amused themselves by teasing a drunken man on West Second street at noon to-day. Boys should not encourage such amusements besides annoying a man is unfortunate asto be under the influence of liquor.

—The grass stains so frequently found on children's garments will usually disappear if the spots are soaked in molasses for five minutes. If this treatment is ineffectual dip the stained portions in a solution of chloride of lime and wash out immediately.

—The Grocers say that if you accompany them on their annual excursion to Boynton Beach on Labor Day they will guarantee you a good time. There will be plenty of boating, fishing and other pastimes and a chowder and Rhode Island clam bake will be served. The price of tickets have been placed at fifty cents.

—The report of the State Labor Bureau on building and loan associations shows a total of 254 associations in New Jersey, representing a total investment of $56,000,000. The business done during last year there were erected in the State through the agency of the associations no less than 2,000 houses. There are 71,726 open accounts, the great bulk of which number represents individual shareholders.

—The Dover Era, in a recent issue, published a legislative notice, which reads as follows: "Notice is hereby given of an application to the next legislature for a law requiring the list of delinquent taxpayers to be posted in every saloon and bar room in the ward or township where such delinquent taxpayer resides, and the sale of any intoxicating liquor to such delinquent taxpayer, shall forfeit the license of every person so doing."

—The White Caps of this city played a game of base ball with the Metropolitans and defeated them by a score of 17 to 11 on yesterday afternoon. The White Caps had every thing their own way and but for errors would have shut the Mets out entirely. The features of the game were the fine pitching of Burk, who held the heavy hitters of the Mets down to six hits, and the fine umpiring of Burk, and the heavy batting of Wy*ckoff of the White Caps.*

—Our readers will remember that Corporation Counsel Marsh, now abroad, before his departure expressly advised "the combine" against its idiotic course in the Low matter forcessing the result. They, however, with a persistency, which in our judgment is extremely suspicious, plunged on heedlessly in their folly, adding up unnecessary expenses on the taxpayers. This is the same as they have been doing from the out-set. We are of the opinion that until they are locked up, or kicked out of the offices they have so often disgraced, they are liable to continue just such mischief.

ALL READ THE EVENING NEWS.

Washington is the city of national conventions. On the same day recently were in session there American associations for the promotion of science, bugs, chemicals and agriculture.

A minister thinks if there were more women preachers there would be more men in the congregations. Is that why church congregations are chiefly composed of women—because the preachers are always men?

The exquisite fact queen Victoria displayed in giving such a warm and generous welcome to the French fleet will go far to dispel any feeling that England is fonder of Germany than she is of France. Not even a Frenchman could find occasion for wounded vanity in the rousing reception the visitors from the republic received everywhere in England. Tact is even better than statesmanship.

Dr. Keeley declares that he can cure the worst drunkard that ever was with his bichloride of gold remedy. What is more, his declaration is strengthened by the testimony of ministers and doctors of divinity, who know of cases he has cured. But some of the most distinguished physicians in America, among them Dr. William A. Hammond, declare with emphasis that bichloride of gold is no good at all to cure alcoholism. This is strange enough to make one believe with the so-called metaphysical healers that there is nothing in anything at all, and that thought and mind are all there is, and the only cure that goes is mind cure.

The President in a Pompeiian Villa.

Among the fashionable cottages at Saratoga is one built on the pattern of one of the ancient villas uncovered in the ruins of Pompeii. The villa on its own ground is known as the House of Pansa. The name has been copied in the American imitation, and it, too, is called the House of Pansa. On his tour through several of the eastern states President Harrison stopped at Saratoga, and was handsomely entertained by some friends at this villa. Of the visit of the head of the present administration to the Pompeiian mansion the New York Sun remarks:

He had ten in the triclinium, to reach which he traversed the impluvium, the atrium and the peristylium, pausing a moment to gaze at the single standard fish that swam in the pellucid waters of the piscina. He peered into the cecus and penetrated even as far as the systus and the postscum.

The Cause of It.

Equaled in horror by few events in this country was the disaster attending the sudden collapse of a five story building in New York city, exactly at the noon luncheon hour, when the ground floor of it was full of people in a restaurant that occupied that part. It was in many ways one of the strangest accidents that ever occurred. If the walls of the structure were to fall at all, why did they fall just at the noon hour—the hour out of the twenty-four when the most people would be killed?

Without a moment's warning, without the sound of an explosion or a preliminary creaking or crashing of timber, the tremendous weight fell like a card house, and none lived who could have told how it happened. There have been crimination and recrimination enough as to the cause of this accident whereby over sixty persons were crushed and roasted to death. The saddest part of all was the evident desire of those who might be held responsible to shift the blame on somebody else. The fire insurance companies declared there would have been no fire or explosion; those interested in the strength and stability of the building, on the other hand, said there must have been an explosion of some kind, or the walls never would have fallen. There was evidently little regard for the real truth on the part of these individuals, if the truth cut their way.

The fact is certain that the building was enormously loaded, overloaded, it is admitted. Lithographic presses, with the heaviest machinery known in the printing trade, were on one floor, and all the floors above the ground were occupied with printing apparatus and machinery. For years this machinery had gone on, three, two, and pound, with a steady, regular motion. It is well known that when an army or long procession of men marches across a bridge, the order is given to break rank. The regular vibration caused in the structure by the tread of many feet in the same step would weaken it, perhaps cause it to tumble. In some way like this the fall of the Park place business house may be accounted for.

An interesting fact has pervaded since then the minds of those working among machinery placed in the upper stories of buildings. If one could collapse, why not any other? At any rate, the disaster will cause other home owners to look after the safety of their walls more narrowly. One remark of the inspector of houses is a source of satisfaction. He said that while the fallen building would not be considered sufficiently strong in its supports if erected at the present time, it amply met the requirements of 1873. This shows that things are not so bad as they used to be.

FOR WRIGHT AND TILDEN

That May Be the Pennsylvania Democratic Ticket.

DELEGATES MEET AT HARRISBURG.

HARRISBURG, Sept. 3.—The Pennsylvania Democratic state convention opened here today with a fair attendance. The situation seems unchanged, and it is believed that the ticket will be Robert E. Wright, of Allentown, for auditor general and A. L. Tilden, of Erie, for state treasurer. It is believed Gilfillan will be nominated by acclamation. The platform will doubtless be confined to matters affecting the state only.

Editor Barrett for Delegate.

The Lackawanna delegation is urging the selection of John E. Barrett, editor of the Scranton Truth, as one of the delegates-at-large to the constitutional convention. This is intended as an effort to defeat Quay's nomination by acclamation. The platform will doubtless be confined to matters affecting the state only.

Editor Barrett for Delegate.

The Lackawanna delegation is urging the selection of John E. Barrett, editor of the Scranton Truth, as one of the delegates-at-large to the constitutional convention. This is intended as an effort to defeat Quay's nomination by acclamation. The platform will doubtless be confined to matters affecting the state only.

Raymond Also a Candidate.

Everything is promising for a harmonious convention. Charles W. Raymond, of Middletown, is also a candidate for state treasurer and claims to have seventy-five votes pledged to him. He has established headquarters here and a band paraded the streets last night leading a company of uniformed Democrats from Middletown in his interest. Mr. McSparran, of Lancaster, is spoken of for auditor general, but his following is very light.

Skinner for Permanent Chairman.

The executive committee of the state central committee selected Willis Bland, of Reading, for temporary chairman and George W. Skinner, of Fulton, for permanent chairman. They also agreed to confine the platform to state issues mainly. A strong feature of the resolutions will be the condemnation of the Philadelphia crookedness in the city treasury and the alleged looseness of the administration of the affairs of the state treasurer and auditor general.

The Money Plank.

The platform will also reaffirm the declarations of 1884 and 1888 for tariff reform and declare for a sound and stable currency on a gold and silver basis, both standards to be equal. The last congress will be condemned, a constitutional convention advocated and the administration of Governor Pattison indorsed.

Prohibitionists at Albany.

ALBANY, Sept. 3.—The Prohibitionists held a largely attended mass meeting last evening. Francis E. Baldwin presided. Addresses were made by Alexander Gustavson, Mr. Valney B. Cushman, of Maine, George Scott, Professor A. A. Hopkins and Dr. H. V. Meade. The finance committee recommended that $500 be raised each month until the next campaign, and that each county make an especial endeavor to raise as much funds as possible. On motion the report was accepted.

The report of Treasurer Wardwell showed that during the past two years, by subscriptions and other means, $7,982.59 was received, of which $6,792.67 was used, leaving a balance of $489.90 on hand. The total amount of bills now standing against the party was $695.39. The state committee was chosen, one member being selected from each county.

Mr. Jones Remains Silent.

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—Lieutenant Governor Jones arrived in town just before noon and went to the Park Avenue hotel. The rumor that he was circulated being an independent candidate for governor this fall had preceded him, and there was a rush of politicians and newspaper men to the hotel. But the lieutenant governor was not to be interviewed. He would neither affirm or deny the report.

Governor Campbell's Eastern Trip.

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 3.—Governor Campbell left last evening for New York. From there he will go to some point on the Atlantic coast to rest for awhile. Mrs. Campbell accompanied him. Dr. Loring, his physician, said that the governor has malarial fever, and typical tendencies toward typhoid. Governor Campbell said he would be back in Ohio in a week.

Peck Supporters Ask Hill's Aid.

ALBANY, Sept. 3.—A committee from New York and Brooklyn, representing the labor element, called upon Governor Hill and asked his support of Labor Commissioner Peck for lieutenant governor. The governor told them that he had no direct influence in the matter, and could not announce himself for anybody.

Mr. Scott Bore the Journey Well.

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 3.—Ex-Congressman Scott arrived here at 3 o'clock. The party proceeded to a cottage on the cliffs overlooking Easton's beach and the ocean. The physician says the patient was not as fatigued by the journey as was anticipated, and that his condition is very encouraging.

A Reward for Statesville's Fiends.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3.—The Richmond and Danville Railroad company has offered a reward of $10,000 for the arrest and conviction of the person who opened the switch or misplaced the rail which caused the fearful loss of life near Statesville, N. C.

Orville M. Anderson Indicted.

CHESTER, Pa., Sept. 3.—Orville M. Anderson, who shot Isaac M. Baker, secretary to Colonel Robert Ingersoll, at Croton Landing on Aug. 1, has been indicted by the Westchester county grand jury for assault in the first degree.

Erie Men Again on Strike.

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 3.—The Lake Erie and Western strike has been renewed. Off the Lafayette division traffic again is at a standstill. The new schedule went into cause the new schedule was not satisfactory to them.

Suicide at Jersey City.

Long Branch Postoffice Robbed.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Sept. 3.—The Long Branch postoffice was entered by thieves during the noon hour and the safe rifled of eighteen registered packages and about 1,000 stamps.

NINE MEN WERE STRUCK.

A Lightning Bolt's Havoc in the Tents, Scattering the Soldiers in All Directions.

OMAHA, Sept. 3.—During a severe rain storm at Grand Island, where the State Grand Army and Sons of Veterans' reunion is being held, a lightning bolt struck the camp. Two lieutenants and four sergeants of cavalry, Troop K, were seated in the first sergeant's tent. The lightning struck the tent, scattering the splinters in all directions. Nine men were struck. The two lieutenants and four sergeants were found lying flat in the tent with their heads buried in the debris. The guards were found lying on the ground.

The injured are as follows: Sergeant Loben, of Milford, knocked senseless and severely shocked; First Sergeant Seymour, of Milford, terribly shocked and injured in the limbs; Second Lieutenant Vosberg, of Lincoln, injured in the arms and legs; Lloyd Ensign, of Milford, shocked in arms and body; James Carr, of Staplehurst, injured in legs and body; Hasley Bromwell, of Milford, injured in shoulder; George L. Gerr, of Milford, severely shocked; Frank Smith, of Milford, severely shocked. Sergeant Lubers is the most severely injured, but the doctors believe that all will recover. On the arms and legs of the injured there appear great knots produced by the electric fluid.

SCOFIELD'S DOUBLE CRIME.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Sept. 3.—News was received here late last night from Cold Spring, the pretty little Putnam county village among the highlands, in Phillipstown township, on the east bank of the Hudson, about a mile above West Point, of a shocking double tragedy, in which father and son were killed by another son as the result of a trivial quarrel. Frank Scofield is the name of the man who consigns his name to double obloquy by being at once parricide and fratricide.

Frank engaged in a dispute with his father and brother concerning their season's harvest of pickles. Hot words led to threats and then to blows.

Finding himself unable to cope with two adversaries, Frank shot and killed both his father and brother.

Only these meager details of the tragedy have yet been received from the horror stricken village. The Scofield homestead is about seven miles distant from Cold Spring.

A Royal Love Match.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 3.—The betrothal of the czarevitch to the Princess Marie of Greece will shortly be formally announced. It is a love match, the czarevitch adhering to his choice, despite the advocacy by the czar of his union to a Montenegrin princess. According to Russian canonical law, the marriage is within the prohibited degrees of kinship, but this obstacle will probably be overcome by the consent of the holy synod.

The Exposition at Pittsburg.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 3.—Promptly at 8 o'clock last evening the Exposition Society of Western Pennsylvania threw open the doors of its immense building for the third annual exhibition. The display will continue forty days and forty nights. Manager Johnston, who has opened twenty-two expositions, says that the preparations eclipse anything which he has ever known. Capps, with his famous band, is present.

Liquor Dealers Choose Officers.

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—The State Liquor Dealers' association elected H. W. Oliver, of Brooklyn, president; W. W. Barnard, of Rochester, was chosen first vice president; Daniel Holland, of this city, was elected second vice president; John Morrissey, of Syracuse, was chosen recording secretary; William Baetzhold, of Buffalo, was elected treasurer.

The Big Mortar Successfully Tested.

SANDY HOOK, N. J., Sept. 3.—The United States ordnance officials have tested the new 12-inch all steel mortar. A shell weighing 880 pounds was fired from the mortar with a charge of 105 pounds of powder. The result were eminently satisfactory to the officials. Ten of these 12-inch all steel mortars will be mounted here in a few weeks.

A Serious Wreck at New Haven.

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 3.—Engine No. 99, of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, drawing nine loaded cars, ran into an open switch at the Fair street crossing. The engine and bridge wall were wrecked and the engineer, E. H. Jones, had his leg so badly hurt it had to be amputated. He may die.

"Sister" Beatrice Sentenced.

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—"Sister" Beatrice May, or Mrs. Mary E. Oliver, the bogus labor agitator, was fined $50,000 suit for breach of promise against Senator Cameron, of Pennsylvania, and who was arrested in this city recently, was sentenced to the city prison for one month.

Struck by a Train.

PEEKSKILL, N. Y., Sept. 3.—A carriage containing four persons was struck by a train here last evening. Miss Travis, twenty years old, of Amowalk, was instantly killed, while her brother George had both legs so badly crushed that amputation was necessary.

Minister Smith Returns to Russia.

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—Charles Emory Smith, United States minister to Russia, who has been in this country on a few weeks' vacation, sailed for his post of duty yesterday on the steamship City of New York.

Fellows Succeeds Grimes.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Sept. 3.—John Q. Fellows has been appointed by the Onondaga board of supervisors to succeed Thomas M. Grimes as superintendent of the poor. Mr. Grimes resigned on account of a shortage in his accounts.

Horse Dealer Raney's Failure.

LISBON, O., Sept. 3.—Jacob Raney, a well known horse dealer of Meyersdown, has failed. Liens against his property aggregate $50,000. His other debts are estimated at from $50,000 to $100,000.

BUT HE GOT THE GRANT

Russell Harrison's Alleged Tilt with Collector Fassett.

IS THE PRESIDENT'S WIFE ANGRY?

A Report That She Thinks the Newly Appointed New York Collector Did Not Treat Her with the Respect Due to the First Lady of the Land.

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—Russell Harrison demonstrated to his own satisfaction, at least, that it was not a physical impossibility, as some declared, to transfer a lady in a dignified and graceful manner from the deck of an ocean steamer to the deck of a small revenue cutter alongside. When the Majestic, of the White Star line, was reported Russell was already on deck of the revenue steamer Grant, which Secretary Foster had placed at the disposal of the president's wife. The others on board the Grant were Mrs. Benjamin Harrison, Mrs. Dimmick and Mr. and Mrs. George W. Boyd. They were going down the bay to meet Mrs. McKee, the president's daughter, and Mrs. Russell Harrison on their return from Europe.

Mrs. McKee in a Sling.

When the Grant met the Majestic handkerchiefs and umbrellas were waved, and when the cutter drew nearer greetings were exchanged. It was an anxious moment for Russell. He had an ingenious plan for transferring the ladies from the Majestic to the Grant. He soon outlined his plan to the Majestic's officers. Two sailors nimbly climbed aloft and out to the end of the spar which projected over the deck of the Grant. Mr. Harrison had caused to be made a sort of a sling out of a legless armchair. The chair was slung between the ends in such a manner that a person could sit in it with ease and safety.

After passing a rope through the pulley at the end of the projecting spar, one end of the rope was tied to the "sling," and the affair hoisted to the Majestic's deck. Mrs. McKee was assisted into the chair by the two swarthy sailors, who handled their charge as they would a baby, and then tied her in with ropes across the front.

Then She Screamed.

An officer stood by and gave the command "Hoist" in a gruff manner of fact way. "Easy there," sang out the officer as the sling swung over the steep side of the steamer, and Mrs. McKee gave an involuntary little scream.

"Lower away there" was the next command, and the sailors allowed the rope to slip through their fingers gradually, and Mrs. McKee was landed on the Grant's deck.

Mrs. McKee was soon released, and an instant later she was clasped in the arms of her mother, the president's wife.

Up rose the sling again for its other precious burden. A few seconds saw Mrs. Russell Harrison safely landed on the Grant's deck and in the arms of her husband.

Is Mrs. Harrison Angry?

The party came direct to this city and later left for Cape May, where they arrived in safety. Collector Fassett's refusal to furnish the revenue cutter Grant to Russell Harrison has caused considerable talk. The World says that Mrs. Harrison, wife of the president, intimates that Collector Fassett has been discourteous and disrespectful to the first lady of the land.

It Might Have Been.

The World adds: "Russell Harrison still persists that he does not understand the incidents of action in refusing the use of the revenue cutter Grant to Mrs. Harrison after so pleasantly acquiescing when first called upon. But that little difference might have been settled if Collector Fassett had called upon the presidential party. Mrs. Harrison has been in the city nearly two days, but the man who occupies the highest local office in the gift of her husband has forgotten something. Mrs. Harrison has not."

Mr. Russell's Alleged Remarks.

The World says Russell Harrison remarked yesterday: "My mother considers that Mr. Fassett has not treated the president's wife with proper respect. She does not put it on her personal account, but as the wife of the president. Mr. Fassett not only refused the usual courtesy of the cutter Grant, but compelled it under the vessel by Secretary Foster's orders, but he, as collector of this port, has paid no attention to the presence of the president's wife. It would seem but common courtesy that he should call, especially as he has been entertained at the president's house. This is viewing the matter simply in an official light. The absence of so conspicuous an appointee of President Harrison is noticeable, especially after his peculiar action to Grand Army Grant."

Why He Refused the Grant.

The World says: "In defense of his refusal of the use of the revenue cutter Grant, Collector Fassett yesterday cited the treasury regulation of July 7, 1888. It provides that a revenue boat shall be used for 'no private purposes whatsoever.' The collector said that the only liberal interpretation of the regulation had been in allowing the president personally to use such a boat. He said that President Harrison was president wherever he is, but that Mrs. Harrison is not president, no matter where she is. He also claims that he offered Russell Harrison the choice of the Starin boat Arthur, a Pennsylvania tug, a Lehigh Valley boat or another one, but that Russell refused them all.

Russell Harrison was only urged for the revenue cutter Grant, just as he declared he would, but he also got from Collector Fassett Tuesday afternoon permission for his wife and Mrs. Dimmick to disembark from the Majestic. This was the proceeding which the collector had said it would be impossible to permit.

A BIG RACE AGAINST TIME.

Ninety-five Miles in Only Ninety Minutes.

RUSHING THE JAPANESE MAILS

Across a Continent and Two Great Oceans in Twenty Days Is the Record That Will Probably Be Established by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company.

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—From Yokohama to Queenstown in twenty-one days! This is a dizzy pace against old Father Time, but it is just what the European mail from Yokohama, Japan, proposes to do if the steamer City of New York, which sailed from this port yesterday with the aforesaid mail on board, makes anything like an ordinary fast trip.

It Was Great Hustling.

But this last named part of the business is only a trifle compared with the hustling which was done by the railway mail service of the United States postoffice and the Canadian Pacific and New York Central and Hudson River railroads.

The Canadian Pacific Railroad company now has three fast mail steamers running between Yokohama and Victoria.

They are the Empress of Japan, the Empress of India and the Empress of China. The Empress of Japan left Yokohama on Aug. 19 at a quarter to 9 a. m. with the European mail on board. She arrived in the Royal roads off Victoria on Aug. 29 at twenty-four minutes past 4 a. m., having crossed the Pacific—a distance something like 3,900 miles—in the remarkably fast time of a little less than nine days.

To Guide All Records.

As soon as this astonishingly quick passage became known the Canadian Pacific resolved to outdo all prior records in the transportation of the mail across the continent.

They decided that they would make an effort either to place the mail on the Hamburg-American steamer Columbia, which leaves here today, or, better still, to catch the City of New York, which is now plowing the ocean blue with the mail from Yokohama on board.

Eclipsed by Ten Days.

The success which has crowned their efforts up to the present time has already passed into history as the greatest achievement of the railway mail service. The officials of the Canadian Pacific say that if the schedule of twenty-one days is accomplished by the trip of the City of New York all former records between Yokohama and Europe will have been eclipsed by the enormous quantity of ten days.

The Railroad Trip.

The Canadian Pacific's special train, with the mail on board, left Vancouver at 1 p. m. on Aug. 20, and made the run to Brockville, just across the St. Lawrence, on the Canadian side, a distance of 2,893 miles, in seventy-seven hours and twenty minutes. This gave an average rate of speed, including all stoppages and delays, of 36.3 miles per hour. A special train was waiting across the St. Lawrence at Morristown, N. Y., to carry the mail whizzing through the Empire state. Assistant Superintendent V. J. Bradley, of the railway mail service, had gone to Morristown to superintend the run to this city.

Mr. Bradley left Morristown with the mail in a quarter to 10 o'clock Tuesday night. The train consisted of an engine baggage car and passenger coach. The run from Morristown to Utica, a distance of 125 miles, was made in 152 minutes, an average speed of 48¾ miles an hour.

Fastest Time in America.

The schedule time given for the run of ninety-five miles from Utica to Albany was 105 minutes, with instructions to cut this down if it could be done safely. The run was made in ninety minutes, which is the best time ever made in America for the same distance. Engineer Edward Chase was at the throttle, with Conductor Reynolds in charge of the train. Engineer William Kirk hitched his engine to the train at Albany and did some pretty good work over the Hudson river tracks.

He covered the distance of 144 miles in two hours flat—some forty or fifty miles per hour—with the consignment of three-cent-mail-matter reputable citizens whom we all know and believe all but the disreputable ones?

Is it that this same combine want to have a monopoly of everything else, into unknown strangers, without the slightest chance to citizens have never betrayed us, and for the last twenty-five years have filled positions of honor and trust among us to their own credit as well as our great city's

Will the people, when they study the issues of this great race against time.

Castle Garden Again Song's Temple.

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—Castle Garden's old historic walls, which thirty-five years ago rang with the sweet notes of Jenny Lind, last night echoed once more the melody of song. Thousands of persons crowded the edifice to enjoy the musical feast. Mayor Grant and other city officials made brief addresses. MAX MARETZEK, who led the orchestra in 1857, was the leader last night.

A Rumor About Union Pacific.

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—It is rumored in Wall street that there has been a breach between Gould's directors of the Union Pacific road and the creditors' committee, and that the scheme to extend the floating debt will fail through.

To Reduce Operatives' Wages.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Sept. 3.—The Cotton Manufacturers' association have voted to reduce the wages of operatives 10 per cent. This action was taken because of the continued depression in the cloth trade. A strike is probable.

An Order for Senecal's Arrest.

OTTAWA, Sept. 3.—The speaker of the house has issued an order for the arrest of Superintendent Senecal, of the printing bureau, who was charged with having accepted bribes. It is now estimated that Senecal received $80,000 in this way.

Belanger Was Murdered.

LOWELL, Mass., Sept. 3.—The police are satisfied that David Belanger, the dry goods merchant found dead in his store, was murdered. The head had been almost severed from the body, it is thought by a blow from an ax or butcher's cleaver.

She Used a Razor.

MANCHESTER, N. H., Sept. 3.—Mrs. Tiffany, wife of C. Tiffany, of South Manchester, committed suicide by cutting her throat with a razor. The cause of the dead is said to have been hereditary insanity.

Hal Pointer Defeated.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 3.—At the second day of the grand circuit trotting meeting of the Philadelphia Driving Park association the defeat of the great pacer Hal Pointer was the feature of the day's racing. He won two heats, but in the third showed signs of distress and Johnson took the heat. Hal Pointer came in bleeding at the nose. Johnson won the fourth heat easily and Hal Pointer was then withdrawn. Johnson took the next heat and won the race. The judges, however, declared off all pools. They did not intimate that there had been foul play, but said innocent betters had been placed at a disadvantage to the benefit of those who knew the great pacer's ailment. N. T. H won the 2:30 trotting class.

Bicycle Records Broken.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Sept. 3.—At Hampden park W. F. Murphy, of New York, beat three records while trying for the mile record on a solid tire safety. He made the quarter in 37 4-5 seconds, the half in 1m. 11⅘s., the three-quarter in 1m. 37 2-5s. and the mile in 2m. 21 3-5s. P. J. Berkel rode a pneumatic safety and made the quarter in 36 seconds, the half in 1m. 8 3-5s. the three-quarter in 1m. 40s. and the mile in 2m. 19 1-5s. The last three are American records.

Kingston Was Victor.

CHICAGO, Sept. 3.—Kingston defeated Verge d'Or and Marion C at Garfield park in straight heats over the St. Lawrence mile in the $5,000 purse by three lengths, while Marion C beat Verge d'Or a similar distance for the place. The time was 1:54.

Trotting at Elmira.

ELMIRA, N. Y., Sept. 3.—At the second day of the Interstate fair races Ironwood beat the 2:25 trotting purse, Prince Alert captured the 2-year-old event and Gales Prince the 2:33 class.

Hanlan Won't Row Gaudaur.

TORONTO, Sept. 3.—The Gaudaur-Hanlan boat race has been declared off, principally because Hanlan refuses to row Gaudaur earlier than was expected to the New West minster regatta.

Mitchell's Latest Proposal.

A BIG RACE AGAINST TIME.

Ninety-five Miles in Only Ninety Minutes.

RUSHING THE JAPANESE MAILS

Across a Continent and Two Great Oceans in Twenty Days Is the Record That Will Probably Be Established by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company.

New York, Sept. 3.—From Yokohama to Queenstown in twenty-one days! This is a dizzy race against old Father Time, but it is just what the European mail from Yokohama, Japan, proposes to do if the steamer City of New York, which sailed from this port yesterday with the aforesaid mail on board, makes anything like an ordinary fast trip.

It Was Great Hustling.

But this last named part of the business is only a trifle compared with the hustling which was done by the railway mail service of the United States postoffice and the Canadian Pacific and New York Central and Hudson River railroads.

The Canadian Pacific Railroad company now has three fast mail steamers running between Yokohama and Victoria.

They are the Empress of Japan, the Empress of India and the Empress of China. The Empress of Japan left Yokohama on Aug. 19 at a quarter to 9 a. m. with the European mail on board. She arrived in the Royal roads off Victoria on Aug. 30 at twenty-four minutes past 4 a. m., having crossed the Pacific—a distance something like 3,900 miles—in the remarkably fast time of a little less than nine days.

To Outdo All Records.

As soon as this astonishingly quick passage became known the Canadian Pacific resolved to outdo all prior records in the transportation of the mail across the continent.

They decided that they would make an effort either to place the mail on the Hamburg-American steamer Columbia, which leaves here today, or, better still, to catch the City of New York, which is now plowing the ocean blue with the mail from Yokohama on board.

Eclipsed by Ten Days.

The success which has crowned their efforts up to the present time has already passed into history as the greatest achievement of the railway mail service. The officials of the Canadian Pacific say that if the schedule of twenty-one days is accomplished by the trip of the City of New York all former records between Yokohama and Europe will have been eclipsed by the enormous quantity of ten days.

The Railroad Trip.

The Canadian Pacific's special train, with the mail on board, left Vancouver at 1 p. m. on Aug. 29, and made the run to Brockville, just across the St. Lawrence, on the Canadian side, a distance of 2,905 miles, in seventy-seven hours and twenty minutes. This gave an average rate of speed, including all stoppages and delays, of 36.3 miles per hour. A special train was waiting across the St. Lawrence at Morristown, N. Y., to carry the mail without a change to the New York state division. Superintendent V. J. Bradley, of the railway mail service, had gone to Morristown to superintend the run to this city.

Mr. Bradley left Morristown with the mail at a quarter to 10 o'clock Tuesday night. A fast train consisting of an engine, baggage car and passenger coach. The run from Morristown to Utica, a distance of 123 miles, was made in 132 minutes, an average speed of 56¾ miles an hour.

Fearful Time Is Made.

The schedule time given for the run of ninety-five miles from Utica to Albany was 105 minutes, with instructions to cut this down if it could be done safely. The run was made in ninety minutes, which is the best time ever made in America for the same distance. Engineer Edward Chase was at the throttle, with Conductor Reynolds in charge of the train. Engineer William Kirk hitched his engine to the train at Albany and did some pretty good work over the Hudson river tracks.

He covered the distance of 144 miles in [illegible]

WOMAN'S HOME

HAVE A MEDICINE CHEST.

But Be Sure and Keep It Out of the Way of the Children's Fingers.

Theoretically every one believes that the important medicines necessary for an emergency should be kept ready in every household, to be on hand when called for; and yet how few, comparatively, have a well stocked medicine chest with all the details in good order! We all know, however, that in cases of accident or sudden illness time is often of the utmost importance, and that a very simple remedy applied at the outset may often save a long illness. We therefore advise every one who has not a regular medicine chest—which, after all, is often not nearly so convenient as well arranged as a simple selection carefully put together by an experienced housemother—to get a small box with lock and key, keep it always for medicines and nothing else, and above all things, to put it out of the way of the children.

The best way is to let it stand on a high shelf where you can lay your hand on it in a moment. Do not have too many things in it, or they will confuse you. Put in it only what you are most likely to want—a roll of old linen, another of white calico, another of flannel, all clean and dry, although the older the better. The calico and flannel would better be in strips about six inches wide, and each roll should be fastened with a pin. A pair of scissors, which should never be taken out of the box to be used for any other purpose; a paper of pins, a roll of tape, and a little flannel needlebook with some large needles ready threaded should be added.

The simple and most necessary remedies are the following: Castor oil, syrup of squills, paregoric, turpentine, a sufficient quantity of each of these to make a strong emetic and a large bottle of linseed oil and lime water for burns or scalds. As a general rule, in all cases of poisoning it is safe to give immediately an emetic of a couple of teaspoonfuls of mustard in a tumbler of warm water, always bearing in mind that any delay may be fatal. This emphasizes the importance of having even these simple remedies at hand and intact.

A bottle of laudanum marked "Poison" in large letters, a pint bottle of pure brandy, and any other simple medicines that your experience will find valuable, may complete your list. There is a capital little book, published by a New York firm, which ought to be kept with every medicine chest. This gives directions how to answer every emergency in case of illness or accident. It would be a good plan to fasten this book to the chest with a long string, so that it could never by any chance be out of the way when wanted.

Too much stress cannot be laid upon the absolute necessity of keeping a medicine chest under lock and key, quite out of the way of a child's investigating little fingers. A sad incident occurred not long ago in a family where we should have least looked for such an appalling disaster. The nurse had her "afternoon out," and the mother, after a game of romps with her little three-year-old in her room, which made them both rather tired, lay down on the bed with the child and both fell fast asleep.

The entrance of her husband aroused her. "Where is the baby?" was her first exclamation, seeing that the little one had left her side. At the same moment a strong smell of chloroform struck terror to her soul, and, half distracted, she rushed instinctively to the closet. There on the floor lay the limp little body of her child—quite dead. A medicine chest with the bottles emptied on the floor showed how the little creature had been amusing herself, and near her nerveless hand lay a small vial that contained the deadly drug.—New York Tribune.

"Scamp" Dressmaking.

"I haven't a bit of patience with the rank and file of home dressmakers," exclaimed a practical, sensible woman.

"They have no method, no purpose, no rational idea except the half formed one of getting a dress together, in some sort of shape which they consider wearable. They either do not know or do not care how a garment should be finished, but merely sling it together and declare that their idea is to produce—they are a very sorry effect it is when produced. I examined one of these dresses the other day.

"The waist was a wretched fit, and to add to the ugliness of it, the outside was so much looser than the lining that it made a thousand little wrinkles all over the surface. There was about a smooch piece about it. The maker of it was in despair; she had tried to fit—indeed, had spent a whole day on it—and, do what she would, she declared that it wrinkled and puckered and drew and skewed, until she was almost distracted; I didn't like to tell her that she ought to sit on the lowest form in a sewing school and learn the first principles of her work. I couldn't understand how she ever made such a wretched job of it until she lugged me to one side for some assistance in fitting another dress, then it was perfectly clear to me.

"The other dress was begun on the same plan, and such a botch you never saw. The lining had been cut out of odds and ends, and was not the same way of the grain as the outside. The under arm pieces were not the same shape and one was very slightly bias, while the other was straight; one shoulder was over an inch longer than the other, and the darts and cross matches were of all form or comeliness. When I called her attention to these trifles she, innocently remarked that she hoped it would all come right when it was fitted.

"I couldn't hold in, but told her she reminded me of the woman who was trying to knit a stocking, who worked away industriously until the end of the circular web touched the floor, and, when asked what she was doing, replied that she "had been knitting away for days and it wouldn't shape." There is just about this same amount of sense in a great deal of the home dressmaking we find nowadays."—New York Ledger.

Mothers, Believe in Your Children.

"There now! stop that crying!" exclaimed a mother one day. "The minute I begin to say a word you begin to bawl. Let me tell you tears go for nothing with me. If you don't show any sorrow. If you were sorry you'd do differently. I know how it will be! You'll shed buckets of tears today and do the same careless things tomorrow. What's use you doing differently, then I'll believe you're sorry. So you may as well stop first as last."

And she was not an ignorant mother either. If that mother could only have looked into her little daughter's face for a moment, with the clear vision that she should have had, she would have seen the little creature gasp in terror at her words, as if each one had been an actual blow. No, I am wrong! had she had the vision she should have had, she would have seen that the tears meant sorrow for the past and resolutions for the future, and she would never have let fall the cruel words that were burning in the small child's heart like molten lead, and left a scar which never could be effaced. She would have believed in her child. Oh, mothers, believe in your children, if you would have them believe in themselves.

"Oh, mamma! mamma," wails the penitent son. "I dare say I don't seem to you to try, because I fail so often, but I do, I do. You don't know how hard I try."

The mother remembers with a pang her own youthful struggles and answers softly: "Indeed, dear, I do believe you try. There now! dry your eyes, and we'll start all over again afresh," and her work is half done. Together they will be able to begin again, but the fact that mother believes that he is trying will lead her son far upon the right road.—Home Magazine.

Aids in Teething.

A mother asks if it is a wise practice to allow children while teething to bite rings and other hard things. It is a popular belief that such substances hasten the appearance of teeth through the gums, especially if they are backward. Dentition is a natural process, and it very rarely indeed needs any assistance, and yet there is nothing particularly objectionable about these rings, and possibly in occasional cases they may tide over difficulties till they are used, and thin down somewhat the gum over an advancing tooth. It ought not be difficult to determine in any case whether or not they are serviceable. If a child manifests a disposition to bite hard substances, the rings, and preferably of rubber, may properly be given to satisfy this tendency.

This practice of furnishing children with these aids to teething is one of great antiquity, and according to the writings of Pliny it appears to have been prompted by certain superstitious beliefs among the Romans. They gave their little one pieces of coral to help them along while teething, and these were thought to serve a double purpose, being considered charms against witchcraft. Almost every race, barbarous as well as civilized, has had some peculiar methods of assisting in the cutting of teeth.

The Indians gave smooth stones to their children; and, according to an old writer, the ancients, among those remedies that were rational, not infrequently had recourse to such as had their origin in superstition or ignorance. "Amulets and charms were formerly in common use, and such remedies as the brains of a suckling pig, and the blood of a cock's comb, rubbed over the gums, were freely used by being applied to the part with the finger."—Boston Herald.

Ill Bred Children.

A childless woman, staying for a short time at a fashionable seaside resort, tells of an experience with the little folks there. "The morning after my arrival," she says, "I walked out on the beach, strongly attracted, as I always am, by the groups of playing children. The first I met were two little sisters, wonderfully pretty and attractive in appearance, dressed in gay sailor suits of some soft woolen material, with jaunty caps crowning their curls. They were building in the sand, and I stopped to watch them, commenting, after a moment, on their play. One did not look up. The other did, however, and scowled at me.

"'How's somebody talking to me,' she called shrilly to her nurse, 'make her go away.'

"Surprised and disappointed at such unlovely manners in such lovely children, I strolled on at once. My next venture was even worse. I tried a little boy, a beautiful brown eyed darling with long curls and the face of a cherub. I asked him what he was building in the sand, when he made an ugly grimace that quite disfigured his fair countenance and answered not a word. After that we left the children undisturbed, and I wondered to my friend if these were not some of the ill bred American children who cast discredit on the whole race of them to stranger eyes."

Undoubtedly these were, and it is just such examples which create a false impression in regard to the children of this country. For ten such instances one hundred quite the reverse could be cited, but the other sort of children are not as a rule conspicuous. They are therefore left unadmired, and I wondered to my friend if these were not some of the ill bred American children who cast discredit on the whole race of them to stranger eyes.—Harper's Bazar.

Manners of Children.

One of the serious mistakes made by mothers in training their children is in supposing that correct habits can be cultivated in careless surroundings. A ragged or worn carpet, so little valued by the mother that grease or ink spots can be left to "wear themselves out," rarely indeed needs any assistance, and yet there is nothing particularly objectionable about these rings, and possibly in occasional cases they may tide over difficulties till they are used, and thin down somewhat the gum over an advancing tooth. It ought not be difficult to determine in any case whether or not they are serviceable. If a child manifests a disposition to bite hard substances, the rings, and preferably of rubber, may properly be given to satisfy this tendency.

A Director of Children's Parties

A director of children's parties is one of the industries created by the need of the fashionable world. The young scions of the Four Hundred and their imitators are no longer content with games and dancing and a supper—like their elders, many of them have a good time. Sometimes they are bored to death. The director" attends to all this, addresses the invitations, provides the music, engages the caterer and discloses with him a suitable menu, comes early to the house on the day of the fete, arranges flowers and other decorations, puts away breakable bric-a-brac (for even the little children of the rich will romp), is on hand at the arrival of the small guests, and after the prestidigitator, Punch and Judy, tableaux, or whatever show is over, starts games and dancing, and in various ways keeps up the spirit of the affair.

More than all this, the director returns the next day to superintend the restoration to its normal condition of the house after such a visitation as a children's party. Of course the director is a woman, as several of them are finding a fair support in this pursuit.—Her Point of View in New York Times.

A Bedclothes Fastener.

A device more particularly designed to prevent children from becoming uncovered when sleeping in bed, at the same time stopping them from lying on their backs, and thus preventing nightmare and snoring, has been patented. A band is arranged to extend across and be attached at or near its ends and middle to the upper end of the under side of the top sheet or cover. The attachment is made by cords fastened to the band and secured by a whip grip around balls of rubber, cork or wood, incased by the sheet.

To each end of the main band are attached elastic extensions, to be secured by eyeholes on screw hooks on the bedstead, a branch band also extending to a similar fastening on the head of the bedstead, there being more than one branch band if more than two persons sleep in the same bed. Upon the under side of the transverse loopike body band are band slides on which slide loops, to which of each is attached a double shoulder strap, adapted to fit comfortably over the shoulders of a child or other person, and partly made up of elastic webbing.—New York Journal.

Women Who Preach.

The Rev. Ada C. Bowles is probably the most widely known in the east among women now active in the Universalist ministry. In the west the Rev. Florence Kollock, for twelve years pastor of a prosperous church in Chicago, had been uncommonly successful. In Sioux City, Ia., Mary A. Safford and Elinor E. Gordon have worked together and built up two or three strong Unitarian churches. The Rev. Mila F. Tupper, the Rev. Carrie J. Bartlett and the Rev. Ida C. Hultin, of Des Moines, are among the most conspicuous of western preachers.—Chicago Tribune.

Of amethysts, Mrs. Paran Stevens has probably the most valuable set of all women in New York. Her friend, Mrs. Fred Neilson, is the owner of a wonderful pair of earrings, one of any ground for a black pearl and the other a white pearl. Mrs. Neilson has, too, a rare and valuable collection of combination jewels, such as diamonds, sapphires and pearls set together.

When putting kettles or pots to soak, after having been used for the cooking of soups, stews or any greasy food, if a few drops of household ammonia is added to the water, and the vessels left to soak about five minutes, there will be no difficulty in cleaning them, for the ammonia does all the hard labor, and there will be no necessity for scraping.

Fifty living descendants are now numbered in Queen Victoria's family circle. This includes children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren, but does not comprise sons-in-law and daughters-in-law or grandsons-in-law. She has lost a son and a daughter and six grandchildren.

The Ambigu theater in Paris has been leased for $40,000 to a woman—Mme. Zulma Bouffar, a favorite burlesque actress. This is not the first time French theatres have had women directors. Sarah Bernhardt has ruled the Ambigu and Mme. Ugalde held the Bouffes.

If you have the time and the strength to rub the various articles of furniture you will find the following mixture an excellent one: Equal portions of of turpentine, boiled linseed oil and vinegar. Shake the bottle well before using and rub with a woolen cloth.

Plenty of boiling water should be used in cooking vegetables, for the greater the quantity of water the greater the heat. If only a little water is used the whole soon cools, the vegetables become tough and no length of time will render them tender.

FASHIONS

MATINEES AND TEA JACKETS.

New and Dainty Styles in Cambric, Lace, China Crepe, Etc., Described.

Delightfully fresh are the matinees in white muslin and cambric and trimmed with lace or embroidery. One seen was made with the new long jacket fronts of embroidery and edged with lace. The whole of the front was composed of Valenciennes insertion, put in diagonally, and the sleeves were also made of lace. Another very stylish one was made of French muslin, partly plain and partly embroidered. A frill of Maltese lace went around the bottom of the skirt, the jacket having long coat tails. This make had a small yoke made with narrow tucks, the yoke and the jacket were outlined with pale blue ribbon covered with muslin, which had a very good effect.

A NEW TEA JACKET.

Black tea jackets are being worn a good deal; one in black satin with long loose coat fronts, a jabot of pale mauve soft silk and lace and sleeves was decidedly effective. Very low looking ties, too, was another in black satin, which had a white crepe de Chine front and deep full collar.

In the accompanying cut is illustrated a charming tea jacket in yellow crepon, studded with irridescent beads. The full sleeves are in China crape. Figured lace arrangements trim the cuffs and stylish epaulettes. A silken girdle encircles the waist.

Elsie Bee notes the following in Jewelers' Circular:

Rings of repousse silver in which a diamond is sunk are intended for lace pieces of pale pink coral set between diamonds.

Pearls are decidedly on the fashionable coming to the hand. But to be elegant, topaz requires the accompaniment of fine diamonds.

WE ARE PROUD OF THEM

LET THEIR NAMES BE MATTERS OF RECORD.

Representative Plainfielders Who Nobly Come Forward to Protect the Taxpayers from Being Robbed of One Hundred Thousand Dollars.

[From the Combine organ Sept. 13th.]

DON'T PRACTICE WHAT THEY PREACH.

ONLY TWO OF THE FOURTEEN RICH MEN ARE PATRONS OF THE MONOPOLY THEY ARE BOOMING.

Even among the many misrepresentations in the appeal of the fourteen rich men of Plainfield to Judge Van Syckel seeking to perpetuate a monopoly in his office during the time of his term, the most prominent is

Your petitioners believe at least four-fifths of the taxpayers of said city desire that the said offer of the Plainfield Water Supply company should be accepted.

This is not so. Four-fifths of the taxpayers of this city are against making any contract with any water company without sealed bids, and more than four-fifths are for competition in water, gas and all life's necessities.

Take, for instance, the fourteen rich men themselves. Only two are customers of the Plainfield Water Supply Company. They are taxpayers, yet six-sevenths of them have thus far shown no disposition to "accept the offer of the Plainfield Water Supply company to them, should be accepted."

By the way, here are their names again as a matter of record:

Mason W. Tyler,
Howard Cox,
J. Evarts Tracy,
Charles J. Fisk,
H. George Babcock,
Flinn Fisk,
Ernest L. Waltz,
Eric S. Erickson,
John M. Whiton,
John Bushnell,
William E. Lane,
William Thompson,
Joseph M. Titsworth,
George H. Goddard.

We give the above in full as a sample of the reasons given by the combine organ why it thinks the combine should be permitted to rob Plainfield taxpayers of one hundred thousand dollars in cold cash, and foist on the city schemes which would eventually ruin it, as competent to neighboring cities have been ruined by just such schemes.

According to our cattle-brained cotemporary we should not because they are "rich," have these fourteen Plainfield citizens of the highest character and reputation represent, as they "believe, at least four-fifths of the tax-payers" in trying to defeat these schemes promising all our expense their nefarious schemes.

If the combine is so fearful of monopoly, how is it that some months ago it granted a ten years' monopoly of the right to erect electric light poles in our streets to the Plainfield Electric Light Co. to prevent the Edison Co. getting a foothold as a competitor? That is a matter of record.

How is it that the same combine want to give to a certain J. M. Low, not even a resident of this State, a monopoly of supplying Plainfield with a system of water-works and sewerage, that nobody in whom the people has any confidence knows anything about, except that it is intended to rob the tax-payers of one hundred thousand dollars at least?

How is it that this same combine want to pay this same Low and six unknowns, who may be the combine themselves for all we know to the contrary, over sixty-six per cent. more than the same service is offered to be done for by thoroughly reputable citizens whom we all know, and believe all but the disreputable trust?

How is it that this same combine want to give a monopoly of everything desired to unknown strangers, without giving the slightest chance to citizens who have never betrayed us, and for the past twenty-five years have filled positions of honor and trust among us to their own credit as well as our great benefit?

Talk about competition! Why that's the very thing this combine have been fighting against, on our reports of their doings for the past two years abundantly prove.

Honest competition—like investigation—is what they most fear.

The Plainfield Water Supply Company announced themselves ready only a few weeks ago to connect with houses for water supply, and because only two of the fourteen citizens above-mentioned have succeeded in getting attended to, therefore the fourteen are not fit to represent as we also believe they do, four-fifths of the taxpayers of Plainfield in an effort to prevent the said taxpayers from being robbed. How! What a mighty intellect the fellow must have who evolved such an idea! The wonder is that even two should get supplied so soon. But what has that to do with the matter anyhow?

By their action at the first and only opportunity afforded "six-sevenths of them" have shown every desire that every proper offer should be accepted for the good of the city. They have shown so much desire that they put their hands in their own pockets to defray the expense of preventing Plainfield taxpayers generally from being robbed. They are patriots deserving of highest honor and praise. Add the names of Mayor Gilbert who vetoed the scheme, and Corporation Counsel Hamilton who advised against it. Let all their names be published as a matter of record—a record to be proud of, especially when compared with such names as these:

SIDNEY G. SMITH,
DANIEL S. ROBERTS,
EUGENE D. MOFFETT,
LEONARD S. SPANGENBERG,
WALTER L. HEYFIELD,

GRASPING AT A STRAW.

Some More Combine Misrepresentations Exposed.

The organ of Low and the combine came out with a statement last evening concerning the writ of certiorari granted the other day, to let its masters down easily. The substance of the falsehood was that the application in effect had been continued until the 21st inst. and that in the meantime the men who are seeking to saddle the taxpayers with an outrageous contract could go on with their proceedings.

It isn't likely that any one pays much attention to the stuff; but we have gone to the trouble to investigate the matter as a specimen of the kind of information people get from that source.

The facts are, as we have learned from Mr. Lindabury, that Chancellor Runyon first opposed the granting of the writ, and failed; then he insisted that nothing but an order to show cause why a writ should not be issued, ought to be granted, and under protest he gave in two or three weeks, and said if that course was taken he would not object to the order containing a stay of proceedings in the mean time, but the judge rejected this suggestion, and stated that he would allow the writ, with its full effect as a stay of proceedings; but that if the chancellor or corporation counsel desired to be heard further upon the question whether the writ should operate as a stay of proceedings or not they might do so at any time on or after the twenty-first instant. The exact words of the Judge's order endorsed on the writ are these: "I allow this writ. Let it be sealed. The same to operate as a stay until September 21st instant, and thence until otherwise ordered. P. D. Van Syckel, Jus. Sup. Ct., September 3, 1891." Instead of the hearing being a mere superficial statement of the points involved, it was in fact an earnest discussion lasting for an hour.

(The State of New Jersey.)
NEW JERSEY S. S. } ney to the city of Plainfield, greeting:

We being willing for certain reasons to be certified, of a certain ordinance entitled "An ordinance to provide for the obtaining and furnishing of a supply of water to the city of Plainfield for the purpose of extinguishing fires, and other lawful uses and purposes," adopted on the twenty-seventh day of July last by the Common Council of the inhabitants of the city of Plainfield, and readopted by said Common Council on the twenty-first day of August last, notwithstanding the objections of the Mayor of said city thereto; and of a certain resolution passed by said Common Council on the said day of August last, approving a certain agreement and specifications which had been theretofore presented to said Common Council by one J. M. Low, directing the Mayor and City Clerk of said city to enter into contract with said J. M. Low for carrying out the said agreement; together with all matters and proceeding had and taken by the inhabitants of the city of Plainfield touching and concerning the said ordinance and resolution, by whatever name the said ordinance, resolution, or either of them, may be called therein:

We command you that the said ordinance and resolution, together with all matters and proceedings had and taken by the inhabitants of the city of Plainfield touching and concerning the said ordinance and resolution, the said ordinance and resolution may be called therein, to our Supreme Court at Judicature, at Trenton, on the first Tuesday of November next, you certify and send, together with this writ, that therein may be done what of right, and according to the laws and constitution of this state ought to be done.

WITNESS: Mercer Beasley, Esquire, Justice of our said Supreme Court, at Trenton, this second day of September, in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-one.

Base Ball Notes.

Manager Green of the Crescent ball team yesterday received word from the manager of the New York Athletic base ball club which was scheduled to play here Saturday afternoon, that the Club had disbanded and consequently he could not fulfill his agreement to play with the Crescents. Another club will be substituted.

Mr. Slater, one of the managers, telegraphs The News that he has succeeded in securing the Star Athletics of Newark to play against the Crescents to-morrow.

Lawn Tennis.—Notice to Contestants.

Owing to the number of entries received for Saturday's tournament of the Hillside Tennis Club, it is found necessary to start the games during the morning. Ladies' singles will commence at 10 o'clock. Contestants are requested to be on the grounds at that hour. The gentleman's singles will be started at three o'clock, and those having entered are requested to be at the grounds previous to that hour if possible.

—The new ruling of the Post Office Department in regard to the delivery of pension letters is of interest to a large number of residents in this vicinity. It is very explicit and directs that letters addressed to a pensioner must not be delivered to any person in whose care it may be addressed, and under no circumstances must the letters of pensioners, sent from the pension office, or from any United States pension agency, be delivered to any attorney, claim agent, broker or any other person. This new ruling will be avoided by the perpetration of fraud which has been frequent of late years in the pension department.

I have recommended Dr. David Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" to many in Shelton and Birmingham, and I have yet to find one who has not been benefited by it.—C. L. Seaver, Birmingham, Conn.—ADV.

VETERANS MEET AGAIN

THE THIRTIETH REGIMENT REUNION IN SOMERVILLE.

The Town Gay With Bunting.—A Great Clambake in the Woods.—About Four Hundred and Fifty Survivors.

The surviving veterans of the Thirtieth Regiment, New Jersey Volunteers, had their first re-union at Somerville yesterday. Bunting in profusion adorned the principal buildings, and from nearly every window floated the stars and stripes. About two hundred and fifty members of the regiment were accorded a royal reception by the citizens of Somerset county.

In the morning the veterans met at the Court House and formed a permanent organization by electing Lieut.-Col. Arthur S. TenEyck, president; Capt. James Bullmar, secretary, and Lieut. Oscar Cushing, treasurer.

The veterans went to Vegtes Woods, along the Raritan river, and a clambake was given them. People were present from all parts of Somerset, Hunterdon and Union counties to the number of several thousand, in spite of the storm.

Gov. Abbett was invited, but was unable to attend.

The Thirtieth Regiment was largely composed of Somerset men, five of the companies, namely, A, E, F, I, and K, being organized in the county. Companies A and K were organized in Hunterdon county, and Companies B, C and H in Union county. The field officers of the regiment were: Alexander E. Donaldson, Colonel; John J. Cladel, Lieutenant-Colonel; Arthur L. Ten Eyck, Lieutenant-Colonel; Walter Cammon, Major; John W. Mann, Adjutant, and John V. Voorhees, Quartermaster. The regiment was mustered in at Flemington. There were 39 officers and 973 non-commissioned officers and privates. They left the State on Sept. 30, 1862. There are 450 survivors.

The Executive Committee of the Fifteenth Regiment, New Jersey Volunteers, met at Somerville yesterday and decided to hold a re-union at Washington on Oct. 22d.

THE BAND CONCERT.

The First Regiment, Uniformed Rank Knights of Pythias, are making extensive arrangements for their annual parade which is to take place in this city Sept. 16th. The following line of march will be observed:

Headquarters will be at Crescent Rink on Peace street.

Regimental line will be formed at 2 p. m., on Broadway, the right resting on Seventh street.

The line of march will be Peace street to North avenue to Park avenue to Fourth street, Front street to Arlington avenue to Seventh street to Central avenue to LeGrand avenue, LeGrand avenue to Washington street, Washington street to Front street, Front street to Somerset street, Somerset street to Linden avenue to Somerset ball grounds.

Dress parade and review will take place immediately on arrival at the ball grounds, followed by the prize drills.

At the conclusion of the prize drills, the regiment will be marched to Crescent Rink and partake of a collation.

In the evening there will be a grand band concert on the Crescent League base ball grounds.

A concert by a military band is always a pleasing feature, but when it is given by such a celebrated band as Winkler's it is doubly so. The reputation of this band extends beyond the State of New Jersey it is well known in many other States and justly so. That the concert to be given on the evening of September 16th in the Crescent League ball grounds will be one of Winkler's best efforts goes without saying. The following is the programme in full:

PROGRAMME.

1. March, "Transition" ..... Voelker
2. Overture, "Peasant and Peasant" ..... Suppe
3. Potpourri, "A Night in Berlin" ..... Hartman
4. Selection, "Poor Jonathan," ..... Millocker
5. Cocoanut Dance, "La Africaine" ..... Gilder
6. The Dance of the Goblins ..... Becker Lorraine

DESCRIPTIVE.—Near twelve o'clock midnight, the night birds, owls, crickets, etc., are heard, the steeple clock strikes twelve, the goblins assemble at the old church yard, they began to dance until they are suddenly frightened away by the watchman's patrol, but after a while return and dance livelier than before, more particularly a young goblin; the sound of a passing steamboat on the river near by is heard; when the dance is in full swing, a second patrol scares them all away; the hurried music and weird efforts describes them scattering in all directions.

PART II.

7. Overture, "Bohemian Girl" ..... Balfe
8. Medley, "Ten Minutes With The Minstrels" ..... Bowron
9. Selection, "Reilly and the 400" ..... Braham
10. Walk, "La Barcarolle" ..... Waldteufel
11. The Darkies Dream ..... Lansing
12. A Policeman's Life ..... Reeves

SYNOPSIS.—Gathering at the station house, the patrol call, when merriment is heard in the distance, increasing in volume as the men approach. Each one marches off to his beat, and all marches away to the Lonely Patrol. Passing along over his beat he hears the Darkies Dream, singing in a happy home; he joins, muttering the tones of "A Policeman's Lot." The sounds of a Merry Dance is heard, followed by a Serenade. He gives a signal, which is answered. Inspired by the sound of the Serenade, Reilly, the Policeman's Lot is not a Happy One, Sounds of the Night. The dogs howl, and all is quiet. The latter perform a Cat Duett, which ends by the discharge of a pistol into the feline crowd, which scatters them at once. A Drunken Party make night hideous singing "We Won't Go Home Till Morning" so bright, but the policeman sounds the alarm. A fight ensues, which results in the Arrest of the Culprits. Duty over. The Grand Parade follows.

The County Ratables for 1891.

The County Board of Assessors met at the Court House on Tuesday, and organized by electing William Oppie chairman. The entire day was taken up in footing up the books and making an abstract of ratables. There is no marked change in the footings. The search for personal property, which was urged upon the assessors by the State Board, has not increased the valuation of this property. In Branchburg the valuation of personal property is considerably below that of last year. In Bridgewater it is lower, and also in Hillsborough, while Franklin remains the same. In Warren there is an increase of $100,000 in real estate. In North Plainfield there is an increase in real estate of 410,770 and in personal of $68,000. The debt of Bernards is reduced $44,000, and that of Branchburg is somewhat lowered. The entire county tax is $10,000 in excess of last year, and the State school tax is a trifle more. The total valuation of property in the county is $16,000 less than last year, and there is a slight increase in the total debt. The personal property is slightly below last year. The following is the abstract:

Mr. Pepper is the Superintendent of the Prudential Insurance company at Plainfield and was formerly under Supt. Robertson of this city. The latter gentleman will attend as one of the groomsmen. This occasion will be the second time that Mr. Pepper has assumed marital relations.—New Brunswick Home News.

Capt. J. Frank Hubbard, director of the Board of Chosen Freeholders, who was taken suddenly and seriously sick with congestive chills, on Wednesday, R. I. has left the sick list, and is to-day, in good spirits but showing signs of his recent sickness. He returned from Westerly on Friday last, "partly by train and partly by pluck," and was well nigh exhausted, but has since recuperated very quickly and is now able to attend to his public and private duties.—Elizabeth Journal.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

A $100,000 STEEL YACHT WRECKED.

The "Albatross" on Gull Island's Rocks—The Owner's Son Lost.

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 4. (Special)—The $100,000 steel yacht "Albatross," owned by J. Eggleson, was wrecked on Gull Island, near the Newfoundland coast, this morning.

A large party were on board. They were all safely got ashore in boats, with the exception of Dr. Eggleson, the only son of the vessel's owner.

A boat-load had just left the vessel, and young Mr. Eggleson was still on board. The vessel gave a violent lurch, and the young man, evidently thought it was going to founder and sprang into the sea intending to swim ashore. Nothing has been heard of him since. His agonized parents are at a near-by city, anxiously awaiting news of their lost son. He may have been picked up.

—The Crescents will play two games of ball Labor Day.

—Borough Council meeting this evening at eight o'clock.

—The Hotel Netherwood will close for the season next Tuesday.

—There will be a farewell meeting at Reform Hall to-morrow night.

—The excursion excursion will leave this city for Boynton Beach next Monday. The price of tickets has been placed at fifty cents.

—Mr. H. Newton Spencer, North Plainfield's popular tax-collector, is also a dealer in seeds of all kinds, and household.

—A horse belonging to Mr. Andrew Lutkins was prostrated by heat at the the corner of Madison avenue and Second street at noon to-day.

—It is estimated that the increased value of the crops of 1891 over those of 1890 will equal two-thirds of the interest-bearing debt of the United States.

—A new and interesting advertisement from the United Tea and Coffee Growers' Association offering goods at low prices, appears in another column to-day.

—Alert Hose Company of this city will take part in the firemen's parade in Elizabeth. They will bring their new hose wagon and hose carriage. The Chemicle Engine Company of Westfield has also decided to go.

—The parents of Wm. Wilson, and not Packer as reported, wish to contradict the statement of the Press of Tuesday, in which they say he was called a brute. They say he is more so than anyone else in the same condition as he was.

—A number of Plainfielders went to Bergen Point yesterday and witnessed the game of base ball between the New Jersey Athletic Club and the Washington Athletic Club of Washington, D. C. The New Jersey's won by a score of 4 to 0.

—It often happens that "chickens come home to roost," hence those who meddle with other people's business and try to make trouble, often get a dose of the same medicine they prescribe for others. The mills of the gods sometimes grind slow, but nevertheless exceedingly fine.

—It would be a benefit to this country if some one would enforce the law against allowing wild carrot to go to seed. It is fast spreading beyond control and if every one man in town endeavor to keep his premises clear of the weed, while his neighbor gives it free course to spread.

—Dr. Bell has written, and artists and draftsmen of The Electrical World have illustrated a series of articles on electricity begun in the issue of September 5th, 1891, especially designed for those who wish to experiment. It is the intention to make this series of papers in connection with the study of practical electricity as we know it to-day, and to give the student a working knowledge of its phenomena. The publication may be secured through newsdealers.

From Plainfield to Forty Minutes.

Bert Quick, an expert bicycler of this city, was recently offered ten dollars by a Plainfield gentleman if he could ride from that city to this in 45 minutes. On Saturday afternoon he undertook the task and accomplished the feat in forty minutes, thus winning the gold eagle.—New Brunswick Home News.

A Girl's Ideal.

Do young women form their ideas of love and marriage from real life or from novels? This is a question indirectly raised by Shirley Dare, in a discussion about the ill health of the average women. A doctor has said that women are liable to attacks of anæmia from disappointed hopes in matters of the affections. It was Socrates who is quoted as saying to a youth, "Whether you marry or do not marry, you will regret it."

So with women. Undoubtedly they get from novels, not from real life, most exaggerated ideas of the coming man who is to fill their lives. They either get him or do not get him. In the first case they find he is precisely like the fathers and brothers whom they know already, and they fall victims to disappointment accordingly. On the other hand, if they do not get him, they exalt him on a pedestal and pine for him because he is not, and fall ill of anæmia, according to the doctor Shirley Dare quotes.

There is little danger that there will ever be too much real affection in the world, but it is due to the happiness of the race to get all the foolishness possible out of the human mind. The sickly, sentimental novel ought to be strenuously discouraged in the hands of languid, day dreaming girls. If the average young woman is to be like this, where is the strength of the nation to come from? Girls ought to be forced to form their ideas of the other sex from the real man as they see him every day. They ought to be persuaded to cultivate their minds and take such physical exercise and interest themselves in some useful work. When they do this, they and the human race will be happier, healthier and handsomer. There are both sense and reason in the attempt to hinder girls from reading and brooding over novels full of false heroics and sloppy, sentimental lying.

A Four Day Ship.

Mr. C. D. Mosher, of New York, is the inventor of a new kind of engine which he believes will enable a steamer to cross the ocean, from Queenstown to Sandy Hook, in four days. He has already built an engine on his new plan for Norman L. Munro. The engine is of the upright, triple expansion, condensing type. It is aboard Mr. Munro's yacht, Norwood. This little craft has made such speed that another will be built on the same plan, large enough and strong enough to cross the ocean. The little ship, already planned out, will surely be able to average thirty-five miles an hour day in and day out, across the Atlantic, her projector declares. Twenty to twenty-five miles an hour is at present considered magnificent speed.

In the lower part of the Mosher boiler are three steam water drums. The idea in the construction has been to get as much heating surface and steam generation with as little weight as possible. In these respects the boiler already made will, it is claimed, distance all hers before constructed. Even a speed of forty miles an hour with this type of engine is a dream that hovers in the mind of its inventor. If the dream becomes reality passengers will be whirled across the Atlantic at the rate of a lightning express train, and there will be no more fun or rest in an ocean voyage, absolutely none.

It is unfortunate that the Chignecto ship railway from the Bay of Fundy to the Northumberland straits should be arrested in its progress toward completion for want of funds. If this railway is successful it will prove that other such lines can be constructed elsewhere, and will thus be the pioneer of still greater ship railways. The Chignecto company asks the British and United States governments to help it out of its embarrassment and together appropriate the $1,500,000 necessary to finish the great undertaking. There is no reason why the governments named should do this. But private citizens ought to take the matter in hand and furnish the money. Undoubtedly it would pay them hand somely as an investment after a short time, and there is money enough lying idle in the United States and Great Britain to afford the necessary amount in three days' time.

One result of the Park place disaster in New York city will be that labor organizations in the vicinity will take hold of the matter and push to the further extent the investigation of the accident which hurled so many of their number to death. Labor organizations can accomplish more than anybody else in such cases if they enter on the task in the right way. It is the right thing that they should investigate such accidents and hold to accountability those responsible for them. There is no help so good as self help.

The various big engines that are to exhibit their force and beauty at the Columbian fair will also furnish the power to run the machinery of the exposition. Thus they will at the same time be serving the country and showing themselves off.

THOU SHALT NOT STEAL

That Is the Democratic Platform, Mr. Wright Says.

HE WAS NOMINATED FOR AUDITOR.

The Other Candidate Placed Upon the Democratic State Ticket Was A. L. Tilden, of Erie County, for Treasurer. The Hardsley Matter Referred To.

HARRISBURG, Sept. 4.—The Democratic state convention has adjourned after nominating Robert E. Wright, of Lehigh county, for auditor general and A. L. Tilden, of Erie, state treasurer. H. McWilliams Biddle, of Reading, was temporary chairman. He was hopeful of success and his laudatory mention of Grover Cleveland and Governor Pattison called forth great applause. George W. Skinner, of Fulton county, was made permanent chairman. The platform, reported by the committee was unanimously adopted.

The Nominations.

Congressman Mutchler reported the platform and H. Jones Monaghan, of Chester, read it. The reference to the alleged delinquencies of the auditor general and state treasurer were generally applauded. Representative Ritter, of Lycoming, said he had the honor of nominating the next auditor general, Robert E. Wright, of Lehigh county, whose name was loudly applauded.

George Tille, of Lancaster, nominated James G. McSparren, who, he said, was not a tiller of the soil but endowed with great fertility of mind and was president of the Mount Gretna Farmers' encampment. Mr. Arbuckle, of Erie, named A. L. Tilden for state treasurer. J. N. Hewitt named Charles W. Raymond, of Dauphin.

The Vote.

The vote for auditor general was: Wright, 873; McSparren, 80.

Wright's nomination was made unanimous.

The vote for state treasurer was: Tilden, 904; Raymond, 53. The nomination of Tilden was made unanimous.

Mr. Wright's Speech.

In the course of his speech Mr. Wright said:

The city of Philadelphia robbed of a million dollars, or maybe a million more, the schools of half as much, the taxpayer robbed in his assessment and cheated in his exemptions, the state robbed of a large percentage of the small balance remaining. Through all the ramifications of the process of tax collections, from the assessor to the final lick-spittle, the heavy hand of reckless theft is felt as the rising of the tide of corruption sweeps up toward the doors of the capital.

Not isolated cases of single dishonest officials, not mere disconnected instances of theft, make up the record of Republican rule, but well planned, systematic, continuous, daily robbery, corrupting entire departments, embracing almost every official who touches the public funds. Worse than all, not content with robbing individual citizens and aggregated society, even the newspapers of this boss ridden party are compelled to pay tribute to organ plunder and become the vehicle for the transfer of the people's money from the public treasury to the pockets of the party leaders.

Reform in Pennsylvania.

We are confronted by the fact that our whole administration of government in Pennsylvania and her great cities has passed under the control of a corrupt political combination that permits none to aspire to public place, except as they may consent to become participants in these wrongs, or to permit them without objection.

There can be no reform in Pennsylvania until the machine that creates and maintains the system of organized robbery is torn up root and branch and destroyed.

"Thou Shalt Not Steal."

Therefore it has come to pass that your platform is a very simple one. It only assumes the old truths of the ten commandments.

The injunction, "Thou shalt not steal," is the fundamental one in that platform, the impending battle must be fought. We must permit no confusion of the issue when the honor of Pennsylvania is at stake. The discussion of the tariff duties ceased with us when the treasury of Philadelphia was looted. The silver question and the currency question are the compelling corruption rob bed your state capital and party recognize the fact that Pennsylvania should know now is that which was accomplished when the doors of the eastern penitentiary closed upon the disappearing form of Bardsley.

The Delegates at Large.

The following were reported as delegates at large and the convention ratified the action of the committee: Charles R. Buckalew, Columbia; Laurence F. Black, Berks; Samuel Gustine, Thompson; George M. Dallas, David W. Seller, of Philadelphia; George A. Jenks, Jefferson; H. W. Scott, Northampton; R. E. Monaghan, Chester; W. S. McLain, Luzerne, Frank M. Vandling, Lackawanna, John Latta, West Moreland; Thomas Crawford, Cumberland; William Weihe and Thomas Lazare, Allegheny. Samuel Griffith, Mercer; Gant Wehman, Lawrence; Daniel W. Zeigler, Bucks; R. Morgan Root, Montgomery.

The Platform.

We, the representatives of the Democracy of Pennsylvania, in convention assembled, renew our pledges of devotion to the principles of our party in the country at large, as declared in the platforms of the national conventions of 1884 and less, and approved in the elections of those years by a majority of the American people.

We are, as we have always been, in favor of honest and economical administration of public affairs; of limiting expenses and reducing taxation to the needs of the economical support of government; of a sound and stable currency, based on gold and silver, coined and circulated in such proportions as will keep them on a parity; of a reform and revision of the tariff; of liberal and just pension laws, and of all wise national legislation tending to increase the reward and lighten the burdens of labor.

Pennsylvania's Own Issue.

We realize and affirm that the state election of 1891 in Pennsylvania involves no issue of national politics. We appeal to honest and patriotic citizens, regardless of past party affiliations to unite in vindicating the honor of the commonwealth and redeeming the fiscal and auditing departments of its government from official abuses and corrupt practices.

The Legislature Arraigned.

We arraign and condemn the Republican legislature for having refused to enforce the constitution by appropriate legislation; for having failed to pass honest and equitable apportionment bills as required by the constitution; for having ignored the demands of labor for relief by law; for having denied the right soon, popular demand for such laws as would distribute the burdens of taxation equally upon all classes of property, and for having refused to reform long existing abuses in the management of corporations, as recommended by the Democratic executive of 1886.

We arraign and condemn the Republican legislature for the reckless waste of the surplus revenue and vicious legislation against which the Democratic party has interposed for the protection of the people.

The Philadelphia Affair.

We arraign and condemn the Republican party of Pennsylvania for its long series of state and municipal offices, by whose ing lack of duty, complicity in fraud and plunder of the state treasury of millions and a half dollars of the people's money has been stolen and squandered. We arraign and condemn the Republican auditor general for having permitted John Bardsley, the Republican treasurer of Philadelphia city and county, to embezzle more than a half million dollars of state tax collected by him, which he was permitted to retain for a long period after the same was due and payable.

We arraign and condemn the Republican auditor general for having permitted John Bardsley, the Republican treasurer of Philadelphia city and county, to embezzle more than $300,000 of state license moneys collected by him, which he was permitted to retain for a long period after the same was due and payable.

An Alleged Conspiracy.

We arraign and condemn the Republican auditor general for having conspired with John Bardsley, the Republican treasurer of Philadelphia city and county, to appoint and retain corrupt mercantile appraisers, who abused their offices for their own private pecuniary advantage, robbed the state of its just revenues and imposed upon the commonwealth hundreds of thousands of dollars of needless costs, and we demand the dismissal of the mercantile appraisers of Philadelphia.

We arraign and condemn the Republican auditor general for having conspired with John Bardsley, the Republican treasurer of Philadelphia city and county, to speculate in public advertising and for having received from the publishers of the same bribes to influence their official conduct in placing such advertisements.

We arraign and condemn the Republican auditor general for having failed to promptly collect the taxes and costs of the commonwealth against delinquent and defaulting public and private corporations.

The Treasurer Attacked.

We arraign and condemn the Republican state treasurer for wilfully and knowingly permitting John Bardsley to retain in his pa on over a million of dollars collected for and owing to the commonwealth of Pennsylvania, by reason of which detention a large portion of the money has been lost to the people. We arraign and condemn the Republican state treasurer with having conspired with John Bardsley, the Republican treasurer of Philadelphia, to secure to him the payment of $425,000 of public school funds, long in advance of the usual time, and when Bardsley was already known to the state treasurer to be a defaulter for over $500,000, which sum thus improvidently paid to Bardsley was by him embezzled to the loss of Philadelphia city and the shame and scandal of the state.

We arraign and condemn the Republican state treasurer and auditor general for having conspired to pay to John Bardsley, the Republican treasurer of Philadelphia city and county, on Dec. 30, 1890, $500,000 out of the state treasury, ostensibly on account of Philadelphia county's share of the personal property tax, but actually before that tax had been paid into the state treasury and when John Bardsley was already a defaulter and embezzler on account to the amount of $625,613.11.

Alleged Official Speculation.

We arraign and condemn the Republican party of Pennsylvania for having fostered, encouraged, protected and continued a reckless system of official speculation with public moneys, whereby state and city treasurers have enriched themselves, corrupted public morals and robbed the taxpayers. The practice of using public funds for private gain or political advantage is to be condemned and should be completely and thoroughly eradicated. We arraign and condemn the Republican state convention, recently assembled, for its condonation and defense of faithless Republican state officials guilty of these dereliction, some of whom sat in its councils, influenced its action and dictated and controlled its utterances.

They Will Investigate.

We pledge the candidates this day nominated to make such investigations and give such information to the law department of the commonwealth as will aid in bringing to punishment these guilty of malfeasance in office, to correct these abuses, to reform these practices and to punish these guilty of them, and we pledge our support to the state administration in all its efforts to accomplish these ends.

Senator Quay Denounced.

We denounce the corrupt and shameless domination of Senator Matthew S. Quay in the politics of the state, and arraign and condemn the Republican party for the servile acquiescence in the leadership of a man who has utterly failed to defend himself from grave charges against his official record and political record.

Governor Pattison Indorsed.

We heartily indorse the wise, statesmanlike and patriotic administration of Governor Pattison; we applaud and approve his fearless vetoes of partisan, vicious and ill considered legislation; his enforcement of the letter of salutary laws, his rigorous investigation and wholesome exposure of public abuses and determination to enforce the responsible punishment of offenders and secure public reform. We sympathize with him and congratulate him in his unyielding battle for all such legislation as will protect their interests and for such speedy amendment of the constitution as will secure to them a free and secret ballot.

We oppose the repeal of the mercantile taxes, and insist that they shall be more fairly and equably laid, honestly collected, and that the money arising from them shall be paid into the state treasury, and shall be faithfully and safely We favor the repeal of such provisions of law as require the advertisement of those taxes, and the incurring of cost of collection where they can be no recovery. We favor the abolition of the office of mercantile appraiser and the substitution of some certain, economical and expeditious method of assessing and collecting these taxes.

We approve all legislation looking to an honest registry of voters, to the end that every qualified voter may be secured the exercise of his franchise and that the lists may be purged of all names not rightly thereon.

The Australian Ballot System.

We believe that the right of free, honest and secret ballot is the preservative of all political rights. We approve the largest measure of ballot reform, and believe the whole advantage of the Australian ballot system should be secured to the people. We condemn the ballot bill enacted by the last general assembly was a step in the right direction, but it needs to be supplemented by measures to protect the secrecy of the ballot and to secure reform in registration. To this end and for these purposes only we favor the assembling of a constitutional convention.

Boiled the Child to Death.

PETERBORO, Ont., Sept. 4.—A two-year-old child here was attacked with fits, and the old fashioned remedy of putting the child into a pan of warm water was tried. The water was not sufficiently warm and so the pan was placed upon the stove. Finally the pan was removed, and when the child was taken out of it the skin peeled off its body in large pieces. The child died soon after. The authorities are investigating the case.

She Was 104 Years Old.

ATLANTIC HIGHLANDS, N. J., Sept. 4.—Mrs. Mary Butcher died here Sept. 3 aged 104 years and ten months. She was born near Port Monmouth, this state; had been married three times, but is survived by only one son, T. T. Rogers, now beyond the prime of life, who resides here.

Veterans at Gettysburg.

GETTYSBURG, Pa., Sept. 4.—About one hundred veterans and friends of the Third Pennsylvania heavy artillery and One Hundred and Eighty-eighth infantry, who have been viewing the battlefield, held a camp fire in the court house last evening.

An Indian Murderer to Be Shot.

CADDO, I. T., Sept. 4.—Tuesday, in the Choctaw district court, Dixon Fletcher, a full blooded Choctaw was convicted to be shot on Sept. 30 for killing another Choctaw last winter.

Mrs. Birchall's Brief Widowhood.

ST. CATHARINE'S, Ont., Sept. 4.—A lady in this city, whose relatives reside in England near those of the late murderer Birchall, has received a letter stating that Birchall's wife was quietly married within six weeks after her arrival from Canada.

THEY WERE ALL MASONS.

A Remarkable Story Crops Out at the Trial of a Mail Carrier.

MINNEAPOLIS, Sept. 4.—The trial of ex-Carrier C. Gardner, of the United States court for robbing letters, has taken a most sensational turn. Gardner was tried once before, acquitted and indicted on a new charge. F. F. Davis, Gardner's counsel, in his opening charged that Gardner had been persuaded to confess his guilt by Postal Inspector Gould, of Chicago, on the promise that Gould, as a fellow Mason, would see that he was acquitted. Gardner himself was then put on the stand and told the story more in detail.

Gould, he said, had made known to him the fact that both were Free Masons and urged him to confess on the promise that his pardon was assured. Gould, he said, went further and declared that had he known Gardner was a Mason before his arrest he (Gould) would have warned him. This testimony made a big sensation, as Davis himself is a Mason. In fact, the judge, the lawyers on both sides and most of the jury on the first trial were Masons. Inspector Guy T. Gould, of Chicago, then testified that when he told Gardner he was a Free Mason the latter asked him if he could not help him and Gould said he could not. He did not say that he would have warned Gardner before his arrest if he had known Gardner was a Mason.

STORY ABOUT RUSSELL HARRISON.

He Is Alleged to Have Been Possessed of a Treasury Secret.

NEW YORK, Sept. 4.—The Sun alleges that Russell Harrison recently attempted in vain to procure a loan from President Fitzgerald, of the Equitable Trust company, and a director in the Western National bank. The following talk is said to have occurred:

Mr. Harrison—Don't you know that the Western National bank is issuing silver certificates contrary to law?

General Fitzgerald—I am only a director in the bank and I cannot speak for the bank.

Mr. Harrison—Well, the bank would not be permitted to do it if attention were called to the fact.

The Sun adds: "Mr. Harrison did not obtain the loan. How he came to know that the Western National's silver certificate business was a matter which the comptroller of the currency had at that time under consideration, who can tell? Nobody else in New York knew of it but President Brayton Ives, of the Western National, and he did not prime young Mr. Harrison."

GOOD NEWS FOR THE FARMERS.

American Pork Can Enter Germany and the Corn Meal May Be Consigned.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4.—Secretary Rusk has just received official notice that the German government has raised the embargo on American pork. The agreement matters to the admission of pork into Germany was signed at Cape May Point about ten days ago, but at the request of the German government, the fact was withheld from the public press until official action could be taken by the home government. The agreement not only provides for the admission of our pork into Germany, but also affords to the United States the same schedule with reference to our farm products as that enjoyed by Russia.

Secretary Rusk is confident that he will soon be able to extend our market for corn by introducing it into Germany for use as an article of food in the place of rye, the crop of which in Germany in free exceedingly short. To this end he has instructed his corn agent, C. J. Murphy, now in Europe, to proceed at once to Berlin and lay the matter before the German government.

THE LOTTERY BROKEN UP.

Postoffice Authorities Have Twenty-five Cases Against Its President.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4.—John C. Maynard, chief postoffice inspector in charge of the New Orleans district, has returned to Washington from New Orleans, where he has completed the work in some twenty-five cases against the president of the Louisiana Lottery company for violation of the law which prohibits the sending of lottery matter through the mails.

The case against the president of the lottery company is complete and that the lottery company will hardly dispute the facts. He thinks the power of the company is broken and says the business is reduced to such a point that although it advertises a capital prize of $300,000, yet it does not now sell more than half as many tickets, so that it is impossible for the capital prize to be drawn.

The Penn Bank Litigation Ended.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 4.—In 1884 Colonel E. J. Unger and others filed a bill in equity against the directors of the Penn bank, to hold them liable for the loss sustained during the second and last openings of that bank. Judge Ewing sustains the finding of Judge Rice, in which the directors are found not liable but ordered to pay the costs, with exception of Severance and Hare, who are ordered to return the amount of deposits they withdrew after the doors were closed.

Albany's Chief is a Row.

ALBANY, Sept. 4.—Lawrence Fassett, the president of the Albany Baseball club, got into a controversy with a man on a train last night and was assaulted. Chief Willard, of the police force, with Fassett, he hit the man, knocking two teeth out. Then the fellow tore off the chief's neck-tie and collar and otherwise assaulted him. No arrests were made, but the topic is the talk of the town.

Against the Foreign Sportsmen.

PLEASANTVILLE, N. J., Sept. 4.—Since Tuesday, the opening day of the "mud hen" season, the meadown bareabouts have been crowded with sportsmen. The residents are up in arms this season against the out-of-town gunners, and declare they will prosecute all outsiders found invading the marshes without license.

Probable Murder at Trenton.

TRENTON, Sept. 4.—Last night a negro desperado named David Crusen attempted the life of Mary Butler. They had disagreed and Crusen wanted to get the woman to take a walk to settle the matter. On her refusal he drew a razor and cut her severely across the throat. She may die. Crusen escaped.

Shot to Death by a Mob.

ATLANTA, Sept. 4.—William Allen, alias Henry Jones, the negro who shot and fatally wounded C. Myers, marshal of Guyton, was taken from the custody of officers at Guyton by about seventy-five men and shot to death.

Parliament Will Continue.

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 4.—There appears to be no foundation whatever for the report that the government contemplates dissolving parliament. It is denied in official circles.

IT WAS A VERY EXPENSIVE TRIAL.

The Wonderful War Dog at Sandy Hook Only Barked Once, but It Cost Uncle Sam About $2,000 to Hear the Music and Note its Effects.

SANDY HOOK, N. J., Sept. 4.—It only took one shot yesterday to demonstrate how little resistance the deck of the most modern armed cruiser would offer to one of our big new land guns. The 12-inch breech loading, steel hooped, steel lined, cast iron mortar was officially tested at Sandy Hook to settle the question of its penetrating power. A steel shell weighing 639½ pounds was sent whizzing through a solid steel armor plate four inches thick. It didn't exactly bore a hole through the huge plate, as it was expected to do, but it carried away a portion of the plate instead, and just smashed the rest.

Four shots were to have been fired, but after the first one there was not enough of the plate left for the other three to have any fun with.

Getting Ready for the Test.

Arrangements had been making for the test for some time. The big steel plate, ten by five feet in size, had first to be wrought and the big shells turned. That took the Bethlehem Steel works some time to do. Then the plate had to be put in position at the Hook. Heavy timbers were sunk in the sand to hold it and cart loads of sand were piled behind it to make the target substantial.

The mortar was mounted on an Easton & Anderson carriage, which stood on a solid concrete foundation about 150 feet from the target.

A Wicked Looking War Dog.

The test was under the personal direction of Captain T. Heath, assisted by Lieutenant W. T. Gibson. A large party of us had inspected the wicked looking war dog and the formidable wall which was to receive the shots, preparations for firing were begun. Ten bull's eyes, or circles, had been chalked out on the steel target, and Lieutenant Heath drew a bead on the circles of white in the upper right-hand corner. The mortar was aimed at a depression of the degree.

Loading the Thunderer.

When the muzzle of the thunderer was trained satisfactorily the beautifully polished steel shell was hoisted with a lift and shoved into the breech. The shell was 3 feet long and and nearly 12 inches in diameter. General Fergusson put fifty-one pounds of Dupont's sphero-hexagonal powder in a canvas bag, which was then rammed in behind the big projectile and after a primer had been placed in the breech plug the latter was screwed in. A clothesline attached to the primer ran to the bombproof for use as a lanyard in discharging the piece. Everybody was then ordered to get under cover.

A Tremendous Explosion.

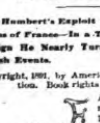
There was a terrible suspense of a second and then Lieutenant Gibson shouted "Fire." The sergeant gave the string a yank. There was a tremendous explosion, and instantly the air was filled with heavy smoke and flying debris. When the mortar was discharged a ball of smoke was hurled out of the muzzle, followed by another

IT WAS TO SAVE IRELAND

THE BOLD FRENCH INVASION DURING THE WAR OF '98.

Gen. Humbert's Exploit with a Thousand Sons of France—In a Two Weeks' Campaign He Nearly Turned the Tide of Irish Events.

[Copyright, 1891, by American Press Association. Book rights reserved.]



FAINTLY one after noon in August, 1798, three large warships suddenly rounded a promontory on the coast of County Mayo, Ireland, and cast anchor close to shore in the harbor of the town of Killala. British colors were flying at the bows of each vessel, and some fishermen busy with their nets on the beach looked upon the occurrence as being so fortunate and unexpected that they hastened to carry the news to the chief dignitaries of the region. It was during the rebellion of 1798, and not a few patriots, as well as loyalists, were ready to welcome the strong arm of the government to put an end to the bloodiness civil war, just then at its height. The excited fishermen ran straight to the castle of the Protestant bishop of Killala, Dr. Stock, and promptly on receipt of their news two sons of the bishop, accompanied by the port surveyor, hastened to the beach and put off in a fishing boat to greet the officers of the men-of-war.

In a few minutes the town was astir awaiting with mingled curiosity and anxiety the result of the visit of the volunteer envoys to what could well be supposed a contingent of England's majestic and invincible navy. Rumors that a new armament hostile to British interests in Ireland was steering for those same or neighboring coasts had put the minds of all classes into a fever of expectation, and the divided feelings of the hour were indicated by the chatter of the assemblage that stood on Steeple Hill, overlooking the bay, watching the issue of events. Foremost in the throng was the local British magistrate, Capt. William Kirkwood, who led a body of loyal yeomanry and a detachment of British regulars, accompanied by some officers of the garrison of Ballina, eight miles inland; the bishop and some of his clerical guests, while here and there were the leading men of the town and a sprinkling of young fellows of rebellious tendencies more or less openly avowed.

A time passed and no answering message was received, Capt. Kirkwood handed his spyglass to one after another of the by standers known to be experienced in naval matters, and asked them to scan the mysterious vessels. When an old salt, who had fought under the greatest English admirals of the time, declared confidently, "They are French, sir." Kirkwood turned to a suspected rebel, Neal Kerugan, who had just asked his opinion of the vessels, and with a meaning look said, "Ah, Neal, you know as well as I do."

The vessels were French in disguise. The civil envoys were promptly made prisoners when they jumped on the ship's deck, and boatloads of men in the blue coats of the new republic of France, with extra arms to equip the insurgent peasantry, were put on shore without a moment's delay. Bustle and confusion followed the excitement awakened in the town. Capt. Kirkwood distributed his small force with an eye to defense and awaited attack.

Under cover of twilight a body of stalwart grenadiers, led by sharpshooters and guarded by flankers, marched through the streets of the town from the enemy's lines, and Kirkwood's men, offering but a weak reply, broke and fled to the shelter of the castle walls. After a spirited fight the castle barriers were thrown down and the surviving defenders gave up the struggle. Instantly a tall and resolute man, wearing a general's epaulets, appeared amid the smoke of the courtyard and in command ing tones ordered the excited victors to ground arms. He spoke to his troops in French and in the same tongue inquired of some of the people of the castle, through an interpreter, for Bishop Stock. That private opportunity came forward and in good French answered in his own behalf.

"My word for it," said the leader of the invaders, "that neither your people nor yourself shall have cause to feel apprehension. We have come to your country not as conquerors, but as deliverers."

This, the first declaration on Irish soil of the purpose of the hostile army, came from the chief of the expedition himself—for such the speaker was—Jean Joseph Humbert, a general of France. Meanwhile, an agile French grenadier had climbed to the roof of the Episcopal palace and torn the time honored British flag from its staff, flinging to the breeze in its stead a banner of green bearing a harp and the motto, "Erin go Bragh." The situation was then no longer in doubt, and nightfall found an invading army in bivouac around Killala, gathering strength from eager bands of inhabitants, who hastened to offer support.

ERIN'S FLAG ON TOP.

But if Gen. Humbert and his valiant grenadiers, ambitious to flaunt the banner of liberty and equality under the very throne of the Georges while their brilliant countryman, Napoleon, carried it with more than patriot zeal in search of conquest in the English realms of the orient, had affected a surprise on the coast of Ireland within striking distance of the seat of power, the British lion was not dozing. The insurrection was to new things, but French sympathy and co-operation a surprise. Three times within two years the hearts of the insurgents had been kindled and their opponents depressed by the outfitting of formidable expeditions by the French directory to invade Ireland. Three times had Irish hopes been blasted, three times English tremors relieved by the interposition of fate, and when Humbert landed at Killala not less than 150,000 regulars and militia stood ready to throttle aspirations for freedom on the soil of Erin at the hand of the tyrant's drum. The headquarters of one English division was at Galway, fifty or sixty miles south of Killala, and on the day following Humbert's landing, the 23d of August, the commander, Gen. Hutchinson, set an army in motion northward. The next day, Aug. 24, the chief general in Ireland, Lord Cornwallis, put in motion another army on the east between the invader and Dublin.

Meanwhile Humbert did not sit down and enjoy his cheap success. His task was not alone difficult, it was bordering upon the impossible, not to say the Quixotic. He had brought in his three ships but 1,100 soldiers—the rest were to come from the insurgent ranks. Over 200 men were left at Killala as guards and garrison, and with about 800 French and 1,000 or more native auxiliaries Humbert took up the march toward Castlebar, the capital of Mayo, on Aug. 24, routing the garrison at Ballina on the way by an intrepid bayonet charge led by his favorite subordinate, Gen. Sarrazin. At Ballina further accessions of recruits swelled the ranks, although Humbert's stern discipline chilled the ardor of many a would be revolutionist. Plunder and reprisal were vigorously repressed, and the suave Frenchman conciliated both Catholic and Protestant by stern, impartial rulings in the disputes between adherents of the orange and the green. On the 26th the little army started for Castlebar, with the certain knowledge that a large body of English awaited it. After a severe march over mountain and bog, part of the way a countermarch to deceive the enemy, a British outpost was fired upon at dawn on the 27th and sent scampering back to Castlebar with the news.

On the eve of battle Gen. Hutchinson was succeeded by his superior, Gen. Lake, an imperious and hardheaded commander, and about daylight Lake stood ready with 7,000 men and eighteen cannon to sweep the sansculottes and their rebel allies, the "croppies," off the earth. So certain was Lake that such would be the upshot that he refused to make a plan of battle, and proposed to finish the business with a favorite body of his light horse known as "Fox Hunters." He was after a head sure thing has been put to proof, there was a list of might-have-beens to think over anent the battle of Castlebar. Lake chose his ground—a hill commanding an elevation over which Humbert must pass, and formed three lines, with artillery in the center, and with a cavalry reserve to wipe up the fragments at the close of the melee.

The British army was, in fact, so formidable that Humbert and his staff gave it up at the outset, and the daring leader decided to fight solely for honor's sake. Moreover, he would begin at once, which was a happy thought. The attack was led by the whole body of Irish insurgents, who quickly burst in the enemy's outposts, and driving their supports dashed for the British guns. At fifty yards the cannon opened, a swath was cut through the column of unsuspecting assailants, and to be brief, the "rebels" were out of the fight for the rest of it. Then up marched Sarrazin's grenadiers with a tread as firm as though the gaping cannon were but toy imitations. On they went with fixed bayonets, to be treated as their unfortunate allies had been, and like them to disappear. But not for good. A third attack was made with equal ill success.

THE MARCH TOWARD DUBLIN.

Seeing that the British 20 had follow up their fortunes Humbert took hope and ordered an assault along the whole front, spreading his men to cover the ground so that he had but one thin line, in all about 500 bayonets. The British were so astounded at the spectacle that they began firing as at game, every one for himself. At the opportune moment Sarrazin ordered a double quick and his men, by an impetuous rush and with a wild war cry, gained a cover in close ranges of the British lines and began a deadly fire on the artillery. Suddenly all gave way, the infantry fled, the artillery was deserted, the invincible British horse ignored the programme Lake had cut out for them and rode pellmell to the rear, naiming far more of their own people than they had met of the enemy in honest battle.

A bridge leading to Castlebar and the streets of the town were stubbornly defended by the British, but the fury of the French knew no bounds, and they swept the field, compelling Lake to flee for his life.

With difficulty Humbert prevented a massacre by his Irish allies in revenge for atrocities previously done by Lake and his followers. To conciliate the people, Humbert proclaimed a republic in the provinces of Connaught, wasting valuable time in organizing a government, and then headed for Dublin. On the route lay the fortified post of Granard and a vast army of insurgents, the two peoples rounded about and banded together to join him the moment Granard fell. But learning that Lord Cornwallis awaited him on the path with a large force, Humbert set out on Sept. 8 to make a detour through Sligo and Leitrim and avoid his opponents for the moment.

On the 8th of September he was brought to bay within a day's march of the goal by Lake's reorganized army, Cornwallis being at hand with another strong column. The French saw the hopelessness of their case, but Humbert again preferred honor to life and ordered an attack. At the moment of collision Gen. Sarrazin caused his division to ground arms and submit. Humbert, in a fit of anger at this treachery, commanded a double quick charge, and threw himself, sword in hand, into the midst of the British Dragoons. A terrible battle ensued, French and Irish yielding only with death. Humbert was overpowered and taken before Cornwallis. The gallant Frenchman was soon allowed to retire to France, and, after fighting in Napoleon's Austrian wars, he sank on April 3, 1823, under the negro rebellion. Of the death of the French commander there, Gen. Leclerc, Humbert made love to his widow, Napoleon's beautiful sister, Pauline, and for this presumption—he was of plebeian origin—the haughty emperor exiled him in Brittany. He subsequently escaped to America and was a civil settlement in Gen. Jackson's army. At the battle of New Orleans, Jan. 8, 1815, he helped defeat the very men who had destroyed his darling little band in 1798.

How to Captain a Ball Team.

A captain should be well posted in all the rules of the game and understand perfectly every point of play. He should be one of the best players in the team, since respect for his authority will increase if he is able to do what he expects of his players. He should have supreme control on the field and his players should obey him implicitly. He should study the strong and weak points of all the opposing players in batting, fielding and running, so as to take immediate advantage of any weak points in their play. It is his duty to have every player try for a "sacrifice hit" when necessary, and if he does not the player should be fined or disciplined in some way. The captain should be supported in his authority in all respects by the management of a club.

How to Test Diamonds.

Put the doubtful stone into a leaden or platinum cup with some powdered fluorspar and a little oil of vitriol. Warm the vessel over some lighted charcoal in a fireplace, or wherever there is a strong draft to carry away the noxious vapors that will arise. When these vapors cease rising let the whole cool and then stir the mixture with a glass rod to fish out the diamond. If you find it intact it is a genuine stone; if false it will be corroded. Paste diamonds will disappear altogether.

How to Clean Engravings.

Soak in a very weak, clear solution of chloride of lime until white, then soak in running water, afterward steeping for half an hour in water containing a little of hyposulphite of soda to neutralize any trace of adhering bleach. Dry between clean blotters under pressure.

How to Tell Whether a Fabric Is "All Wool."

Put a piece of the cloth into a solution of caustic soda in a glass vessel and boil it. The wool will dissolve. If cotton is a part of the structure it will remain undissolved. If a woolen and cotton fabric be dipped in bleaching liquor the former will turn yellow after awhile and the cotton will remain white. In a fabric composed of wool, silk and cotton the threads of the last burn freely and leave little charcoal, while those of the first two shrivel, leave a black charcoal and give a strong smell when burned.

How to Cure Stings of Insects.

When stung by a bee, wasp or mosquito immediately plunge the affected part into or bathe with salt and water. If this is not available make a paste of some clay and water and apply it to the sting. Bathing with laudanum, hartshorn or camphorated spirits is also useful. Should a bee or wasp be swallowed dissolve a teaspoonful of table salt in water and drink it. This will immediately kill the insect and prevent the sting inflaming your throat. Should a sting become very painful and inflamed the blood must be in a bad state; and it is well to take a strong purgative and refrain from animal food for a few days.

How to Blow Out a Candle.

When a candle is blown out a very disagreeable odor fills the room. This is very easily prevented. If you blow upward the wick will not smolder, the bad smell is avoided and when you want to ignite it again the wick will be found sufficiently long.

How to Prepare Bird Skeletons.

Perfect skeletons of birds and small animals may be obtained by placing them singly in a wooden box, just large enough to receive the animal fixed in the position desired. Perforate the box with numerous small holes and place it on an anthill. In an incredibly short time the ants will have performed the required operation. They will leave the bones beautifully polished and the joints and sinews untouched, as they feed only upon the flesh. In this way an excellent miniature museum of natural history can be formed at a very little cost.

How to Prevent Worms in Books.

There is a little insect called aglossa pinguinalis which deposits its larvæ in books in the autumn. These produce a fatte which does a great deal of mischief. Small wood boring beetles also cause a good deal of destruction among the covers and binding. The best preventive is the use of mineral salts in the binding. Where this is not done sprinkle the book shelves with powdered alum and pepper and rub the books once or twice a year with a piece of cloth that has been steeped in a solution of alum and dried. This will effectually prevent the ravages of the aglossa pinguinalis.

How to Make Vegetables Tender.

When peas, beans and similar products do not boil easily it is usually attributed to "the coldness of the season," "the rain" or some such impossible circumstance. The difficulty of making them soft arises from their having imbibed too much gypsum during their growth. To prevent or correct this throw some subcarbonate of soda into the pot with the vegetables. This will seize upon the lime in the gypsum and free the legumes from its influence.

How to Measure a Cistern.

A good rule is to square the diameter, and multiply that product by the decimal .7854, then this product by 1,728—number of cubic inches in a foot—and divide the product by the number of inches to a gallon (231), and this will give the capacity of the cistern in gallons to each foot in depth. Multiply by depth in feet to get the whole measure. If the diameter is not even feet, reduce to inches and omit multiplying by 1,728, or, if the cistern has a slope, average the diameter.

FASHIONS

Serge Costumes.

Serge has been a favorite material this season for traveling dresses as well as boating costumes. It has also been made up in delicate colors by ladies desiring serviceable and at the same time effective costumes to wear at the various summer resorts. In the illustrations here presented are two quite new styles in serge which can also be made in other materials.

SERVICEABLE AND EFFECTIVE COSTUMES.

Very effective is the costume fashioned with a long jacket. This is in cream colored serge. The novel effect in way of trimming the jacket cuffs and the panel of the skirt is produced with blue and gold braid. The remaining figure represents a gray serge costume ornamented with blue, gold and pink braid. The under bodice is of white silk dotted here and there with queer little designs in pink. The sleeves and full basque are made of the same material.

PLAINFIELD EVENING NEWS.

ESTABLISHED 1884. PLAINFIELD, N. J., "THE COLORADO OF THE EAST," SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 5, 1891. PRICE TWO CENTS.

BOROUGH COUNCIL MEETING.

Mr. Powell Elected to Serve for the Unexpired Term.

The Borough Council held its regular monthly meeting last evening. When Clerk Bentley called the roll Mayor Place and Councilmen Buckle, Needham and Sebring were present. Councilman Hegeman and Hummer were absent.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

A number of the residents of Rockview avenue petitioned for a crosswalk on that thoroughfare at the corner of Washington avenue. The petition was referred to the Committee on Streets with power.

The following bills were presented, read, referred to the proper committees and subsequently ordered paid:

John Coddington	$4.12
Edison Electric Light Co	356.00
Chas. Worth	4.50
Thos. Rutledge	40.00
W. Kellegher	9.35

A communication from the Controller of the State reminding Council that it was compulsory for them to submit to him on or before Oct. 1st, the financial condition of the borough and stating that in case they failed to do so they were liable to indictment and a fine of $100, was read and referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. Needham offered a resolution to the effect that Mr. T. Wilford Powell be elected as borough Councilman to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mr. N. B. Smalley. The resolution was adopted.

The ordinance dividing the borough into two election districts was adopted on its third reading.

Mr. Needham spoke of the advantages arising from the division and said the proposed division had been thoroughly discussed at a meeting of the committee and citizens. He concluded by saying that there was no political object in view.

A resolution authorizing the Committee on Fire, Water and Lamps, to borrow $800 for street lighting purposes, offered by Mr. Sebring, was read and adopted.

Mr. Buckle moved that when the Council should adjourn it would be to meet again next Friday evening. The motion prevailed.

Mr. Sebring stated that he understood that the money which had been earned by Warren Engine Company by pumping a tank full of water and which Council had voted to present to them, to be placed to the credit of the Firemen's Relief Fund, had been divided among several members of the Company and he moved that the Committee on Fire, Water and Lamps be instructed to investigate the matter. The motion prevailed.

The meeting then adjourned.

Song Service at Holy Cross Church.

Sunday the choir at the church of the Holy Cross will be in attendance for the first time since July. The choir coming to Merion's Point was a great success and all are anxious to go again next year. A course of entertainments will be given during the coming Winter. The first will be as soon as the addition to the Sunday-school building is finished. PERSONAL.

Mr. Howard Emerson of Central avenue is in the West.

Councilman Buckle has returned to his home in North Plainfield from a pleasant visit in South Jersey.

Mayor Alexander Gilbert of Plainfield is talked of for the Republican nomination for Congress in the new Eighth district. He has been cashier of the National Bank of New York for twenty-eight years.—Newark Journal.

Rev. C. B. Mitchell, pastor of the Methodist church, who has been travelling and lecturing in the "wild and woolly west," during the Summer, says he is so delighted to get back that he feels as if he could hug the town. He means, of course, figuratively. And the town is so glad to see his genial countenance that it, no doubt, feels as if it could hug him. This mutual hugging also means, of course, figuratively.

Engagements.

She is Between 20 and 30.

A Hightstown reporter, who attended the examination of the teachers at the Court House Saturday last, penned the following:

While in the room we were shown a curiosity that provoked a smile from the examiners and proved the fact that it is rather difficult to find out the exact age of a woman. It was in the shape of a blank, one of which had been handed to each applicant, and was to be filled out with the name, age and other particulars of the aspirant for a school. On this particular sheet a young woman had written her name in full, but she was not so free in answering the second question. She had neatly written in a pain-staking hand, "Between twenty and thirty." There was something so delightfully indefinite about this that one could not help admiring the applicant's naivete, which ever limit she may be nearer.

IS NOW A COUNTY ROAD

The session of the Union county Board of Freeholders was a brief one Thursday afternoon, but an important action was taken. It was the adoption of Newark avenue or the Boulevard as one of the county roads, to be repaved and maintained at the county's expense.

Director Hubbard, who was recently ill at Westerly, R. L., is recovering his usual health, and was able to be present and preside at the meeting.

The project of making Newark avenue a county road was suggested by Mayor Rankin in a message to the city Council some time ago, and a special committee to view the city's approaches was appointed to present the proposition to the county legislature.

The suggestion was urged until the Freeholders last month appointed a committee to examine the avenue and report on its feasibility.

This committee recommended the adoption of the avenue into the county road system, and the report was unanimously approved.

Formal resolutions offered by Freeholders Holl and Trahon were then adopted, and Newark avenue from North Broad street to the city line was officially declared a county road. It will be improved and paved similarly to the other improved roads in the county.

Bernard Shea, a contractor, has brought suit against the county for extra work on Morris turnpike, and on motion of Mr. Pierson a committee of three were appointed to take such action as will be necessary to defend the county's interest. The committee were also given power to adopt such other means of settlement as would protect the county.

There were some routine transactions and a large number of bills passed.

City Court Notes.

Ludlow Day was arrested last evening for drunkenness and disorderly conduct. This morning City Judge Codington fined him $5.

Theodore Dunlap was fined five dollars by City Judge Codington this morning. The charge against him was drunkenness and disorderly conduct.

A farmer from Stirling named Burnett was arrested by Policeman Giese Thursday. He pleaded guilty to being drunk and disorderly. City Judge Codington fined him five dollars.

Mrs. Clark, Mrs. Daisy's daughter, was also a prisoner in the city court yesterday morning. She was charged with an offense similar to that of her mother's. She will recuperate at Elizabeth for ten days.

Mrs. Daisy, a resident of West Fourth street, was arrested by Policeman Giese Thursday for drunkenness and disorderly conduct. Yesterday morning City Judge Codington sent her to the county jail for thirty days.

At noon yesterday Policeman Lynch arrested a colored young man named Ellsworth Cuff on complaint of ex-Policeman Robert Randolph. The complaint charged Cuff with using foul and indecent language toward Mr. Randolph's daughter, and also states that he choked her. When arraigned before City Judge Codington yesterday afternoon Cuff pleaded guilty to the charge, and his Honor imposed a fine of $4.

Mr. Tappan Will Sue the Minister

George Washington Tappan, the South Plainfield farmer, whose wife left him in July, taking with her all the moveable property on the farm, has retained Senator Robert Adrian as his lawyer, and instructed Chancellor Runyon to bring suit for damages against the Rev. George Vickery Comer, a Methodist minister at Antwell, N. J., for alienating his wife's affections. The papers in the suit will be served as soon as Presiding-Elder Brice reports to the Methodist Quarterly Conference next week what he learned from Comer himself when he examined him in relation to the affair.

Sunday School Convention.

The 33d Annual Convention of the Somerset county Sunday-school Association, numbering eighty-eight Sunday schools will be held in the Warren Mission chapel on Tuesday next as follows. Morning session 10.30, afternoon 2 o'clock, evening 7.45. The committee in charge would respectfully request all those who have provided supper for the dinner and supper to have same delivered at the chapel on Tuesday morning before nine o'clock as far as possible.

To Institute a New Lodge.

A German Lodge of the Knights of Pythias will be instituted in Masonic Hall at Somerville next Tuesday night. The charter list has over thirty names. The Lodge will be instituted by Grand Chancellor John Ulrich, of this city. The work will be done by a German team from Jersey City, under the command of Theodore Miller. An invitation has been extended to Lodge of the Castle, and it is expected a large number will be present.

Nearly a Runaway.

A farmer stopped to water his horses on Somerset street last evening. One of them a very restless animal, which has on several occasions ran away, began kicking. It then became entangled in the harness, and it was only by the prompt assistance of several by-standers that a runaway was averted.

ALMOST KILLED BY A RUNAWAY.

John W. Singer's Attempt to Stop a Horse Ends Disastrously.

An accident that may result fatally occurred at Westfield yesterday afternoon. Mr. John W. Singer, a butcher was watering his horse from a trough on North avenue, Westfield, when the animal became frightened at something. Its bridle caught on the pump and was torn off. The horse then started to run away. Mr. Singer, who was standing at its head, threw up his arms around the animal's neck and endeavored to stop it. It continued in its mad flight, however, Mr. Singer still clinging to its neck. After the horse had ran about a quarter of a mile Mr. Singer's feet became entangled in its fore legs and it dropped from the animal. In falling it fell on Mr. Singer and he is so badly injured internally that it is thought that he cannot recover. He suffers intense pain. Every time he is moved his screams can be heard blocks away. Dr. Kinch is attending him.

Mr. Singer is a young man who but recently started in business and all who know him speak of him in the highest terms.

BIG PEACH CROP.

THREE MILLIONS OF BASKETS IN HUNTERDON COUNTY.

The Fruit may Spoil.—Sunshine is Needed to Perfect it., Most of the Peaches Thus Far are Full of Water and do not Keep Long After They are Plucked.—A Magnificent Crop, But Warmth and Dryness are Indispensable.

The latest reports from Hunterdon county are to the effect that there are 3,000,000 baskets of peaches on the trees of that county almost ready for the market. All that the growers ask for is a short spell of warm, dry weather and an unbroken flood of sunshine for a while and they will overwhelm the market with the largest, roisest, juiciest fruit that ever grew out of doors. But they need that sunshine badly. The Delaware crop is almost gone, after a day or two only a few stray basketful will find their way northward from the State beyond the Delaware.

Now is Hunterdon's season.

There has not been in ten years such a crop upon the trees. The fruit hangs as thick on the branches as hops on a Maryland hopvine. Most of the growers complain that their trees are overloaded.

But Hunterdon's crop is in danger.

It rained a little more than last week and it is keeping it up. It is the wrong time of the year for that sort of business in Hunterdon county. There is in round figures three-quarters of a million dollars at stake upon the behavior of the weather. The peaches now are full of water. That which ripens is soggy in the hand and dull in color to the eye. Worse than its appearance, however, is its condition as judged by the buyer. Wet fruit rots quickly and is unfit for long shipments. But if the sun will come out for forty-eight hours and send the mists and dampness whirling back into the agricultural regions of Pennsylvania, where they need them, and will keep that sort of a thing up for the week or two following, Hunterdon county will be willing to go around in overshoes and waterproofs and all the rest of the year.

Three million baskets of peaches is a pretty large quantity, when you come to think of it, for one comparatively small county to raise. Out of that lot possibly 2,500,000 baskets will be sent to market, the weather permitting. Two million five hundred thousand baskets divided among the grown people of New York city would give nearly two baskets to each person. There would be enough if distributed in the whole Empire State, to supply each family with two and a half baskets. If New Jersey ate that eighth each man, woman and child would have to consume two baskets.

They raise peaches in Hunterdon when they raise them.

Last year there was no crop at all and the year previous the same condition of affairs existed. If the crop should be ruined this year by the rain it would mean a whole lot of financial disaster to the farmers who have given up their acres to the trees.

"All the Comforts of Home."

We are indebted to Mr. Wm. Gillette for many excellent phases of life humorously and ingeniously depicted on the mimic stage. His "Private Secretary," "Professor" and other comedies are those that introduce many odd characters new and most acceptable which were so thoroughly appreciated as to be encored among the grown people of this latest and most successful creations is entitled "All the Comforts of Home." The title would scarcely suggest anything of humorous character, but the artistic nature that is applied is delicately manipulated in sweet and wholesome humor. The plot embodies many odd characters in very funny situations and laughable pases. The movement of events is rapid and natural, one funny situation following another, thus falling in panoramic order through the entire evening. The company was selected by Manager Charles Frohman with the view of physique and ability to faithfully depict the characters of the versatile author. This domestic comedy is one of the brightest and equally as popular as any of Mr. Gillette's exquisite works.—Ex.

The above play will be presented at Music Hall next Tuesday evening.

State Notes

Sunday morning, on Market street, Newark, N. J., in a store window, the curiously hunter saw a mouse catching flies for his breakfast. The mouse would stand on his hind legs, look around, and if a fly was within a short distance the fly was the mouse's game. Its movements were so quick that the observer could not tell whether the mouse caught the fly in its mouth or between its paws, but when the mouse again crouched on the floor and ate the fly from between its paws, the little black, bead-like eyes fairly sparkling with delight. It caught and ate several while being watched, and did not appear to be disturbed at being watched. It was a plump, fat specimen of a mouse, that appeared to have derived its living from every dendently had secured its breakfast in the same manner before. Does natural history tell of mice catching flies?—Ex.

The Crescents win from the Westfields

The plot thickens. The contest between the West Ends, Crescents, Crescents and Westfields for the championship of New Jersey is growing more interesting. The Crescents were expected to walk over to the Westfields last Saturday but they disappointed everybody by giving the latter a good drubbing. Everything now leads to the conclusion that the contest will be between the West Ends and Crescents at the finish. Westfields come here on Saturday and an exciting game is looked for. The members of the Athletic Association feel confident that the West Ends can beat the Westfields on that occasion but they have their misgivings.

The game on Saturday was won by hard playing on the part of the Crescents and by batching their hits. In the first inning Lutberry's single and Keller's two bagger earned them a run. Apart from that time on the Crescents were never headed. In the third inning Tierney and Keller singled, and McBride pushed the ball out of the lot, thus earning all three runs. Then in the fifth, Keller and Lutberry got first on balls, when with Hammil on third McBride stole home from third on a throw from the catcher and Lutberry on second. In the next inning three men hit the ball safely with two outs, Cutting took Hammil out of the box. In the second and third innings the Westfield's had a fine chance to score but brilliant fielding prevented it. The errors on both sides were few and far between, only four being made.—Somerville Cationist-Gazette.

THE HOUSEHOLD

ALL READ THE EVENING NEWS.

In this year of plenty we shall probably not hear so much anarchistic and blatherskite howling in America. People cannot talk with their mouths full.

The Cosmopolitan Magazine this month comes out as a woman's number. Nearly all the contributions are by women, and yet it was necessary to call on men to illustrate the stories the women wrote. The name of only one woman artist, Kate Greatorex, appears among the picture makers.

There appears to be one gloomy fact that must be faced in the natural gas regions. The supply is giving out from the wells. In Indianapolis the supply was formerly brought from a point only seventy miles from the city. Now it is piped forty miles. The pressure has become lighter from the wells at other fields. But why cannot some inventor step in and make fuel gas from the coal which still will be plentiful for a century to come? This can be done and must be done, sooner or later. Now is the inventor's great opportunity. Let him get in his work and all the despairing soft coal burning cities of the west will become as clean as Boston.

Old Age Insurance Societies.

The governments of France, Germany and Great Britain are studying schemes contemplating the laying aside of sums which will enable workingmen to have a pension after they are too old to labor. The subject is one worthy the consideration of all people who have old ages.

It is not necessary, however, for the money to be under government control, as the German emperor desires it to be. Persons of every trade might mutually insure themselves. A small sum, so small that it would not be missed, could be put away every year, the person beginning when first starting in a trade, business or profession in youth.

There need be no army of officers to feed out of the assessments and no costly buildings to maintain. Managed on the plan of the building and loan associations that have proved such a benefit to working people, these mutual insurance societies would provide a fund for the old age of all their members. Teachers in some of the large cities have started such mutual insurance societies. Other trades and professions can do the same. Where the funds accumulated by the moderate yearly assessments will be provide modest incomes to maintain in comfort all who are retired at a given age and all who are temporarily disabled by illness.

Great Ocean Thoroughfares.

Lieutenant Ridgely Hunt, of the navy, has performed a good service by writing for Scribner's Magazine a brief description of the main steamship lines of travel in the world. These main lines are four, as follows:

1. The route across the Atlantic, through the Mediterranean sea, Suez canal and Red sea to India, China, Australia and east for Africa.

2. The route by the Pacific ocean to Japan, China and Australia.

3. The route to the Atlantic ocean down the east coast of South America and around Cape Horn to western America and Australasia.

4. The route down the Atlantic and the west coast of Africa, around the Cape of Good Hope to east Africa, Australasia and the east. The number of steamers traversing these grand routes and those tributary to them is estimated to be more than 15,000. In order to emphasize the importance of ocean navigation the appended table of the number of steam vessels their tonnage and the value of the merchandise they carry, is given for the five great nations of the globe:

	Number of vessels.	Gross tons.	Value of vessels.	Value of trade carried in vessels.
G. Brit'n & Ir'l'd	8,239	8,258,864	$320,000,000	$3,476,500,000
Germany	1,595	1,078,371	63,500,000	1,284,000,000
France	488	800,800	48,500,000	1,471,000,000
U. S.	1,187	1,387,000	127,000,000	1,883,383,000
Italy	232	309,625	22,000,000	413,000,000
Russia	526	106,155	12,500,000	60,000,000

The American reader will not be proud of the figure the United States cuts in the shipping table. Yet Lieutenant Hunt reminds us of the time, no longer ago than 1845, when American merchant vessels headed those of the world for speed, comfort and enterprise. An American merchant sailing vessel once came to Boston from Hong Kong in ninety days and during one day made a run of 375 miles, which would pass tolerably even for a steamer run.

The traveler can now take $5,000 and a year's time and go around the world, visiting all the main points of interest usually seen by tourists. Lieutenant Hunt counts that a traveler's expenses will be as much again as his passage money. In 200 days a tourist from New York can go to Plymouth, England, thence by steamship through the Suez canal to India, China, San Francisco, around South America and Cape Horn and back to New York, the journey costing $4,000. The trip around Cape Horn from San Francisco to New York occupies 100 days, and the cost will be, to have everything in comfort, $2,000. Passage tickets cost $1,000, and the distance is 16,350 miles. The longest ocean voyage in the world, however, is that from England around Africa and the Cape of Good Hope to Australia and Wellington, New Zealand. Coming home the traveler takes the opposite direction and turns eastward around Cape Horn, thence back to England. The ticket for this long journey costs $650. The round trip occupies eighty-one days, and the distance traversed is 25,150 miles.

ELKINS FOR SECRETARY.

A Report That He Will Soon Succeed Proctor.

WILL FASSETT RUN FOR GOVERNOR?

A New York Republican Paper Alleges That He May Yet Enter the Empire State Fight, but the Ex-Senator Says He Is Not a Candidate.

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—A Washington special to the New York Press says: "It is reported here on what is considered good authority that Secretary of War Proctor has sent his resignation to President Harrison, to take effect on Sept. 30. The same authority says that Stephen B. Elkins, of New York and West Virginia, will assume the duties of secretary of the war department on Oct. 1 by the appointment of the president.

STEPHEN B. ELKINS.

Fassett for Governor.

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—The Press says: "When Warner Miller was about to depart for Europe he was asked as to his choice for governor. His reply was: 'Lloyd Fassett would make an excellent and successful candidate.' John W. Vrooman and ex-Congressman Burleigh have repeatedly urged that Fassett be placed at the head of the Republican state ticket. It is not at all improbable that the ex-Republican leader of the state senate may yet determine to allow his name to go before the convention. If he does, his supporters say that he will be nominated by acclamation."

The placing of Mr. Fassett at the head of the state ticket was a proposition to which Republican leaders in this city were yesterday giving very serious consideration.

When Collector Fassett was informed of the movement in his behalf he evinced no surprise. "You can say for me," he said, "that I am not looking for any senatorship at the term. I have no candidate. Whomsoever the convention may name I shall heartily support."

Ex-Senator Thomas C. Platt was shown a clipping stating that Mr. White was practically out of the race for governor. He smiled and remarked:

"I do not regard Mr. White out of the race by any means. He is a candidate for governor and will receive support in the convention from the delegates pledged to him, I presume. Who will be nominated I cannot say. No one will be able to tell, in my opinion, until we reach Rochester."

There Was Almost a Fight.

SHERMAN, N. Y., Sept. 5.—At the Democratic caucus held here personal encounter between two prominent Hill and Cleveland Democrats was narrowly averted. The spiritless contest resulted in a victory for the Hill element. The dissension prevailed at a caucus in Chautauqua, and the Hill delegates were elected.

Ex-Senator Platt a Delegate.

ELMIRA, N. Y., Sept. 5.—The Republican county convention of Tioga county was held in this city. Hon. G. Tracy, of Waverley, was nominated for assembly, and Thomas C. Platt, Howard J. Mead, Spencius Hoyt, A. I. Decker, George Truman and C. E. Brooks were chosen delegates to the state convention.

They Want Flower.

UTICA, N. Y., Sept. 5.—At the Democratic convention in the Second Oneida district John D. McMahon, James L. Denisey and Charles P. Scoville were elected delegates to the state convention. The administration of Governor Hill was lauded and R. P. Flower was indorsed for the governorship.

Daniels Not a Candidate.

BUFFALO, Sept. 5.—Judge Daniels stated that he was not a candidate for Gubernatorial honors. He did not wish his name to be used in the convention. Failing his renomination and re-election to the judgeship he at present holds he would prefer to continue the practice of his profession.

General Alger Talks.

CHICAGO, Sept. 5.—General Alger says that he has never stated that he would or would not be a candidate for president in 1892. He knows nothing of Mr. Blaine's attitude, he says.

Spicer for the Assembly.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., Sept. 5.—Edward Spicer, a farmer of Brownsville, was nominated for assembly by the Second district Republican convention at Watertown.

A Son Accuses His Mother.

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—John Winter, an inmate of the Home for the Destitute Blind in this city, has brought an action in the supreme court to recover from Thomas Finnican, a prominent politician of Queens county, the sum of $25,000 for the alienation of his wife's affections. Winter has procured a divorce. A ten-year-old son of Finnican makes affidavit to the improper actions of his mother. Finnican denies all the charges.

Captain James Franklin Dead.

GALLATIN, Tenn., Sept. 5.—Captain James Franklin, aged forty-eight, owner of the famous Franklin and Armfield plantation of Queens county, the sum of $25,000 for the alienation of his wife's affections. Slaver has procured a divorce. A ten-year-old son of Finnican makes affidavit to the improper actions of his mother. Finnican denies all the charges.

Captain James Franklin Dead.

GALLATIN, Tenn., Sept. 5.—Captain James Franklin, aged forty-eight, owner of the famous Franklin and Armfield plantation and slave depot in this city Sept. 4. Captain Franklin was well known as a race judge throughout the country, and gained distinction as captain in the Seventh Confederate regiment of Tennessee during the late war.

A Serious Explosion at Paterson.

PATERSON, N. J., Sept. 5.—An explosion occurred in the locksmith shop of John Breen which totally wrecked the building. A fire followed the explosion and completely destroyed Breen's residence adjoining. Several buildings in the vicinity were badly damaged by the fire. Breen's loss is $6,000.

Killed by a Premature Blast.

SHENANDOAH, Pa., Sept. 5.—John Robinson was instantly killed in the William Penn colliery by a premature blast. At the Elsie Gowan colliery Michael Flanagan and William Davis were fatally burned by an explosion of gas.

Twenty Mules Cremated.

SHENANDOAH, Pa., Sept. 5.—The large mule stables of the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron company at the West Shenandoah colliery were burned, together with twenty mules. Loss, $6,000.

MINISTER EGAN TALKS.

He Indignantly Denies That He Was a Balmaceda Partisan.

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—The Herald's Chilian correspondent cables that he has had a long talk with United States Minister Patrick Egan. He talked freely and fully and appeared to feel keenly the fact that his officials acts had been criticised and his motives impugned. "You may state," he said, "that I am more than willing to have all of my actions thoroughly investigated and to have all of my dispatches to the state department made public.

"I emphatically deny that since coming here I have shown any partisanship for President Balmaceda. I was accredited to his government and by retaining his esteem I have been enabled to effect the escape and save the lives of many prominent leaders of the opposition, who were hourly in danger of their lives."

"How about the alleged nitrate schemes?"

"I have never been asked, nor have I in any way profited by a connection with any nitrate scheme. Nor do I expect, nor have I expected, to so profit by any such scheme. My sole interest money to a railroad contractor. The contractor failed and my son lost his money.

"I knew absolutely nothing of the Itata until I was informed by the Chilian officials that she had been seized."

Minister Egan displayed a copy of the letter which he had sent to Admiral Mc-Cann in which the latter was quoted by the admiral to the junta as giving the minister's opinion that Balmaceda's government could not be overthrown. It was upon this which led the junta to refuse Mr. Egan's good offices in bringing about peace. The copy of the letter reads:

"I learn that the government has 30,000 soldiers and 10,000 police well armed and equipped. From your information and other sources I am led to believe that the insurgents have not over 6 thousand men, wanting in arms, etc. My opinion is that this government cannot be overthrown. I am therefore ready and anxious to do all I can to bring about peace upon the contending parties and to save unnecessary bloodshed in this country."

The correspondent says he has interviewed members of the junta and leaders of the opposition as well as Balmaceda ex-officials. One and all agree that Mr. Egan has done much to save the credit of the United States. A mob visited the United States legation on the night of Aug. 20 and demanded that Minister Godoy be given up to them. Mr. Egan went out and told them that Senor Godoy was under the protection of the flag of the United States, and that the first man who attempted to enter the door of the legation building would be shot. His calm bearing and determined tone awed the mob, and they left cheering for the flag.

William McKenzie and Senor Ybanez, ex-Chilian minister to the United States, both Balmaceda's supporters, deny positively that Mr. Egan had any connection whatever with any nitrate scheme. They say that he used all his influence with Balmaceda to bring about peace. Both McKenzie and Ybanez charge that Colonel North, the English nitrate king, was the cause of the revolution.

The Herald's Washington correspondent claims that President Harrison, after a consultation with Secretary Tracy, Assistant Secretaries of State Wharton and Moore, has cabled Minister Egan to at once recognize the Congressional government.

WORLD'S FAIR NEWS.

CHICAGO, Sept. 5.—The report of the auditing committee was read favoring the reduction of $3,000 per year in the salaries of the director general's clerical staff and the abolition of the salaries of President Palmer and Vice President McKenzie. It was recommended that the two meetings for next year be on the second Wednesday in July and the first Monday in October. The reductions were made in order to avoid the $23,000 deficit threatened and bring the expenses within the original appropriation of $50,000 for the fiscal year. The report was referred to the committee on judiciary and bylaws. The judiciary committee's report was on the original loan of $5,000,000 was adopted with but three dissenting votes—Chairman McKenzie, of Kentucky; L. M. White, of New Mexico, and R. M. Hundley, of New Mexico. The commission adjourned sine die today.

A CRISIS NEAR IN HAYTI.

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—The Norwegian steamer Alert, from Port au Prince and Cape Hayti, both of which ports she left on Aug. 27, reports that a climax in Hayti's disturbed affairs will undoubtedly be reached very soon. So strong is the belief that a revolution will soon break out in Hayti that many of the foreign residents have moved out of Port au Prince or are sending their families away. President Hippolyte's family has left Port au Prince for Cape Hayti.

Hippolyte is said to have lost confidence in the strength of his followers, and is preparing to follow his family to Cape Hayti at the first news of the approach of the insurgents.

Shot an Outlaw in the Back.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Sept. 5.—Harmon Murray, the notorious negro outlaw, who has for a long time terrorized a large section of country, has been killed by Billy Early, another negro. Murray compelled Early to go with him to "kill some crackers." On the way through the swamp Early shot Murray in the back. Early will get $1,500 for the deed. Murray had killed seven men during the past few months.

The Coachman Accused.

SING SING, N. Y., Sept. 5.—Miss Nora Hassett, sixteen years old, daughter of William Hassett, superintendent of C. T. Titus' place at Scarborough, has had Mr. Titus' coachman arrested for attempting to assault her on Tuesday evening, but was prevented by the timely arrival of her uncle. The prisoner was held for examination and was placed under $1,000 bail.

A Heartless Infanticide at Wilmington.

WILMINGTON, Del., Sept. 5.—Kate Mooney, aged nineteen years, and her sister Josepine, aged thirteen years, have been arrested for the murder of the former's child, Kate, who is unmarried, gave birth to the child on March 28 last. On the same day she persuaded her sister to take the baby babe and throw it into the Brandywine near here.

Its First Heat of Steel.

NORRISTOWN, Pa., Sept. 5.—The Norristown Steel company has made its first heat of steel. The operation was successful. The open hearth process is used in the two furnaces thus far erected. The company gives employment to about 100 men.

PATTISON ON THE STAND.

Pennsylvania's Governor Before the Legislative Committee.

MANY BANK CASHIERS TESTIFY.

They All Deny That State Money Was Solicited by Their Institutions and That Any Interest Was Paid for the Temporary Custody of the Funds.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 5.—The state treasury investigating committee appointed by the senate and house of representatives met today at the Continental hotel. Governor Pattison was the first witness called, and on being sworn was asked by Chairman Smith if he had any information to give. The governor said:

Governor Pattison Testifies.

"I was president of the Chestnut Street National bank. I resigned in 1891. There was a deposit of $100,000 of the state there. My son invested money to a railroad contractor. The contractor failed and my son lost his money.

"I knew absolutely nothing of the Itata until I was informed by the Chilian officials that she had been seized."

Minister Egan displayed a copy of the letter which he had sent to Admiral McCann in which the latter was quoted by the admiral to the junta as giving the minister's opinion that Balmaceda's government could not be overthrown. PEARY MUST BE RESCUED.

He May Never Return Alive, His Former Companions Say.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 5.—The members of the Peary Greenland expedition that traveled with Lieutenant Peary a part of the way into the frozen north have just returned to this city. They were sent out by the Academy of Natural Sciences to investigate the geology and biology of western Greenland. The members of the party are Professors Sharp and Holt, zoologists; Professor Heilprin, geologist; Dr. W. E. Hughes, ornithologist; Dr. W. Hart, botanist; Mr. Menzel, colorist; Dr. Robert N. Keely, surgeon, and Frazer Ashburst. They report that they were very successful, but all agree that Peary's trip is a most hazardous one and believe that if he and his party ever return it will have to be through the medium of a relief expedition.

LIEUTENANT PEARY.

SEARLES MAY SETTLE.

A Report That He Will Compromise with Young Hopkins.

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—It is said by intimate friends of Timothy Hopkins that everything points to the quiet distribution of Mark Hopkins' millions without recourse to the courts. When Timothy Hopkins reached New York he was full of fight. For years he had been acknowledged heir to $30,000,000, but unexpectedly he found himself deprived of it. On the other hand, Edward F. Searles, who married the widow Hopkins, is not a fighter.

When Timothy Hopkins arrived here he found his attorneys discussing a proposed settlement with the attorneys for Mr. Searles. The unanimous brought out the fact that there was a disposition on the part of Mr. Searles to make an amicable settlement with Mr. Hopkins and the minor considered that they would be content to accept a reasonable share of the fortune.

The above information was given by a close friend of Mr. Hopkins. He says that Mr. Hopkins will get at least $5,000,000, but he is not certain that the disinherited son would be satisfied with even that amount.

Pennsylvania Veterans Elect Officers.

GETTYSBURG, Pa., Sept. 5.—At the reunion of the Eighteenth Pennsylvania Infantry and the Third heavy artillery, the following officers were chosen for the regimental association: President, Colonel S. A. Given, Philadelphia; vice president, Charles Schlecht, Philadelphia; secretary, H. T. Cresson; treasurer, Joseph Mc Glathery, Philadelphia.

To Unveil Grady's Monument.

ATLANTA, Sept. 5.—The unveiling of the Grady monument will occur Oct. 21. Among those who have accepted invitations to be present are Governors Hill, of New York; Abbett, of New Jersey; Pattison, of Pennsylvania; Senator Vest, of Missouri; General Pat. Collins, of Boston; Senator Wolcott, of Colorado, and others.

I have used Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy for constipation and acknowledge it is worthy of all that can be said of it for disorders of that kind.—Nellie A. McQuade, 250 Main street, Amsterdam, N. Y.—ADV.

"AMBITIOUS PIGMIES

Roaring on their hind legs emitting oceans of chilarous sadness," is what a French critic calls some "Parnassian Aliens" that habitually empale their ignorance. Many such have denied that scrofulous and specific blood poisons were curable, when that Doctor Blood Cure has a history of 300 years in print, and two years in this country, as an infallible remedy.

HORROR AT A HANGING

DRAGGED SHRIEKING TO HIS DOOM.

Bleeding Profusely, but Hurried to the Scaffold to Perish as the Law Directs. A Clergyman Charged with Giving Murderer Bulling the Revolver Used.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Sept. 5.—The history of the gallows tells no more hideous story than that of the execution of wife murderer Louis Bulling, who attempted suicide by shooting himself with a revolver he believed to have been given him by a clergyman. Sheriff Barry had set the hour for the execution at 10 a.m. When he went to the cell at 6 o'clock to prepare the doomed man for the execution he pleaded for time.

Bulling pleaded so piteously for a stay of a few hours that the sheriff gave him until 2 o'clock. When 2 o'clock arrived Bulling renewed his supplication and falling on his knees pleaded for one hour more. The sheriff granted his request and removing the guard from the cell door left the doomed man with his spiritual adviser, Rev. August Lavake.

Two Shots Rang Out.

The silence of the jail was broken only by the voice of the priest when suddenly two shots rang out. The sheriff ran to the cell and found Bulling prostrate upon the floor weltering in his own blood which flowed from a wound in his breast.

He had shot himself twice. A hasty examination of Bulling's body showed that one of the bullets had entered the left breast, and glancing from a rib had passed around his body and come out of his back. The other bullet had only inflicted a slight flesh wound in his left side. He had not lost consciousness, and when the sheriff ordered four deputies to carry him to the scaffold he cursed them in a horrible manner.

Dragged Wounded to the Scaffold.

The deputies dragged the struggling man to the yard and lifted him upon the gallows. He refused to stand, and they placed him upon a chair. As he sat there he presented a revolting spectacle. His hands and face were covered with blood which also stained his shirt, and blood was streaming through his shoes that had run from the wounds in his breast. He cursed at the deputies, screamed for mercy and shrieked wildly. The sheriff gave him a large glass of brandy and he swallowed it at one gulp. Finally he was told to get up and stand upon the drop. He refused, and four deputies held him up while the rope was being adjusted.

The Clergyman Arrested.

The black cap was placed over his head and yelling, screaming and blaspheming to the last, he opened the trap exactly at 2:31 o'clock. His neck was broken by the fall and he died almost instantly. The Rev. Lavake, who is believed to have provided him the murderer with the revolver, was immediately arrested and is now confined in jail. He declines to be interviewed. Bulling's cell was searched last night and no weapon was found. The only persons admitted to the cell were a newspaper man and the deputies besides the Rev Lavake.

NOT A TREASURY SECRET.

What Controller Lacey Says About That Russell Harrison Story.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5.—Controller Lacey said that he did not care to say anything about the publication in regard to the Western National bank, of New York, issuing certificates of silver bullion in the vaults of the Mercantile Trust company, of New York, other than to remark that the matter was not new, as these certificates were daily quoted on the Stock exchange, and it was therefore a matter of public notoriety.

He had been investigating the validity of the issue of the certificates. In regard to the connection of Mr. Russell B. Harrison's name with the matter he knew nothing.

General Wild is Dead.

BOSTON, Sept. 5.—The death of Brigadier General Edward Augustus Wild, late of Brookline, Mass., is reported from Medellin, Colombia, South America. General Wild was a graduate of Harvard and Jefferson Medical college, Pennsylvania. He was an officer in the Turkish army in the Crimean war and was presented with a medal at his close by the Turkish government. He served through the rebellion rising from the rank of captain to brigadier general. He was sixty-six years old.

Farmers Should Thank Hatch.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5.—Secretary Rusk has received from Hon. W. A. Hatch, of Missouri, informing him of the removal of the prohibition of American pork by Germany, says the thanks of the farmers of this country are due to Mr. Hatch because of his advocacy of the meat inspection bill, without which the removal of the prohibition could not have been obtained.

BLIND HORSES.

Entertaining Facts and Theories About Their Singular Perceptive Powers.

The way in which blind horses can go about without getting into more difficulties than they ordinarily do is very remarkable. They rarely if ever hit their heads against a fence or stone wall. They will slide off when they come near one. A writer in a London journal says: "It appears from careful observation I have made that it is neither shade nor shelter which warns them of the danger. On an absolutely sunless and windless day their behavior is the same. Their olfactory nerves doubtless become very sensitive, for when driving them they will poke their heads downward in search of water fifty yards before they come to a stream crossing the roadway. It cannot be an abnormally developed sense of hearing which leads them to do this, for they will act alike though the water be a stagnant pool.

"Men who have been blind for any great length of time develop somewhat similar instincts to blind horses. Some one says that none of the five senses has anything to do with this singular perceptive power, but that the impressions are made on the skin of the face and by it transmitted to the brain, and this I recognized sense he calls 'facial perception.' But possibly this perceptive power may have its origin in such conditions as prevail in somnambulism or in the hypnotic state. Are all such phenomena in-man and horse as I have mentioned to be accounted for by the two words 'facial perception,' if they mean anything? I cannot, speaking of blind horses, why should they cast their coats as winter comes on and grow long coats at the approach of summer, and reverse the order which is the invariable rule in the case of horses possessed of perfect vision?"

A Good Country for Mothers-in-law.

A Paris correspondent tells of a fact not generally known on this side of the water, namely, that in France a man on entering into the holy bonds of matrimony renders himself legally responsible not only for the support of his wife, but for that of her parents, in case they should become destitute, and the same obligation is incurred by the wife in regard to the father and mother of her husband. When, however, this enactment was inscribed in the code, the practice of divorce did not form part of French law, and this fact has given rise recently to a couple of very curious suits. A husband who was divorced some time ago was much surprised to receive a summons from his ex-mother-in-law to pay the usual installment of the alimony which he had allowed her during his married life. Of course the young man argued that as the law had rid him of his wife, equity would scarcely force him to support his mother-in-law. The Paris court, however, informed the defiant that, equity or no equity, the code was unmistakable, and that he would have to pay the money. He demurred, naturally, and with a forlorn decision, and appealed to the court of cassation, which invalidated the finding of the lower tribunal.

Royal Emblems.

The ostrich feather first assumed by the Black Prince of England was the chosen device of his son, Richard II, for his flag and personal garments. The ostrich feather and the white swan were the cognizance of the Yorkists, and it is frequently figured on copes of the period. The broom and was the symbol of the Plantagenets, and it is found chiefly in conjunction with the white hart and the sun's rays darting upward from behind a cloud. The white hart, with a Royal crown on its neck, from which falls a chain, occurs frequently in embroidery of the date of Richard II—the emblem, indeed, was national at the time. The hart collared and lodged beneath green trees in a park is Richard's own emblem, so also the greyhound collared and courant. This was the hound's own dog Math, and a touching history is attached to it. It was the fashion to array dogs in ornamental collars embroidered with gold, and the King's favorite greyhound's collar served not to caress him by placing his two fore feet on his shoulders. On the day that Richard was dethroned, the dog left his master and leaped to the Duke of Lancaster's shoulders, caressing him as he formerly used to caress the king.

Georgian Men and Women.

The natives of Georgia, a country in Asia, situated on the south side of the Caucasian range, and now included in the Russian government Tiflis, belong to the Caucasian race and have been as much celebrated as the Circassians for the athletic frames of the men and the beauty of the women. These qualities have created in bygone times a large demand for the men to serve in the army, and for the women to become inmates of the harems of the Turks.

The Georgian nobles long derived their chief revenue from this traffic, valuing their serfs only for the money which they could obtain for them in the Turkish markets. Under the Russian sovereignty, which was established in 1800, the traffic has ceased, and the distinction which divided the whole population into the classes of nobles and serfs, nearly equivalent to those of masters and slaves, though still subsisting, has been greatly modified. The Georgians belong to the Greek church, and the Bible was translated into their native language as early as the beginning of the Fifth century.

The Rose of Hildesheim.

The famous rosebush of Hildesheim is said to be fully 900 years old. The little town where it is found lies on the river Innerste in Germany, and once belonged to the Hanseatic league. The bush, or rather tree, grows on the wall of the chapel of St. Anne. It is asserted by some that the slip was planted by Louis le Debonnaire, son of Charlemagne, who died in 840, but more creditable tradition assigns its origin to the year 800. It died to the ground during the last years of the last century, and its present height of thirty feet represents 110 years of growth from a root 800 years old. The Hildesheim rosebush is called the oldest and most famous in the European world.

On Robinson Crusoe's Island.

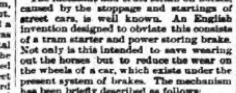
Robinson Crusoe's island, Juan Fernandez, is now tenanted by a former Austrian officer, of whom the Detroit Free Press gives the following account: "Baron Von Rodth, after being forced by the terrible wounds he received at the battle of Sadowa in 1866 to leave the army, determined to devote his fortune to a life of adventure. For the past fifteen years he has been living on the island with a small colony of natives and of European deserters from civilization, and only communicating with the world once a year, when he sends his sailing yacht to Valparaiso for provisions and supplies."

Science Progress.

A HUMANE APPLIANCE.

A Tram Starter and Power Storing Brake for Economizing Horse Labor.

The famous and cruel strain on horses, caused by the stoppage and startings of street cars, is well known. An English invention designed to obviate this consists of a tram starter and power storing brake. Not only is this intended to save wearing out the horses but to reduce the wear on the wheels of a car, which exists under the present system of brake. The mechanism has been briefly described as follows:



STARTING WITH THE TRAM STARTER.

The combined starter and brake which is fixed to the front axle contains two strong spiral springs and in the operation of stopping the car these are wound up. When released the stored up force of the springs sets the car in motion for a distance of thirty yards on the level. The machine serves both as a brake and a starter, and the power is utilized by a simple turn of a handle. As the ordinary brake gear is dispensed with, the net additional weight of the new machine is claimed to be inconsiderable when compared with the relief afforded to the horses by the car starting absolutely of its own accord.

The energy of motion of a tram car during the act of stopping is stored, and there by made available to propel the car forward or back ward a considerable distance, instead of being expended in friction, as is the case with

TENNIS TOURNAMENT.

THE HILLSIDE AVENUE CLUB'S FIRST VENTURE A SUCCESS.

A Gay and Brilliant Assemblage of Spectators. — Crack Plainfield Players Compete.—The Games so Hard-Contested as to Exceed the Allotted Time.—The Winners yet Unknown.—To be Decided Tuesday.

WHEN the Hillside avenue Tennis Club starts anything, success generally follows the undertaking. The ladies of the club play a very interesting part in all the clubs doings, which is a very clear explanation of its success.

Every Saturday afternoon, a tea is given at which several well-known ladies receive the numerous guests. Different housecses receive each Saturday. Last Saturday afternoon the tea was given by Mrs. S. Seabury Gulon, assisted by Mrs. Ginns, Miss Laurence, Miss Burt and Miss Bain, and as there was the extra attraction of a Tennis Tournament, weather permitting, many guests were expected—and arrived.

The weather of Friday and Saturday threatened to spoil the grounds for tennis. Saturday afternoon, however, the games, in spite of the muggy atmosphere, were commenced.

Many crack players of Plainfield, not members of the club, besides the numerous expert members, were announced to compete for the handsome prizes offered. It is perhaps needless to say they played their best, both on Saturday and Monday for which the brilliant concourse present gave them hearty applause.

Many of the bright-eyed young ladies, gaily and handsomely attired, who watched the agile and scientific players on the courts, were themselves expert tennis players, and their applause was therefore, doubly gratifying, because not given unless earned. The plays however, were such that applause was almost continuous.

The attendance Saturday was large, but the bright sunlight of Monday saw, when the games commenced, at about nine o'clock, both sides of the court banked with spectators. Among those present on Monday and many of whom were also noticed on Saturday were Miss Bowers, Mrs. Louis Howard, the Misses Bass, Miss Opdyke, Miss Howard, Miss Stewart, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Simonson, Mr. Daniel Gigna, Miss Hart, the Misses Martine, Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Ivins, the Misses Hunter, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Huntington, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Timpson, Miss Wering, the Misses Miller, the Misses Boss, Mr. and Mrs. W. Palmer Smith, Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Shepard, Miss Erskine, Mr. and Mrs. Rowland Cox, Miss Carlies, Miss Bain, Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Paton, Mr. D. O. Tiffany, Mr. F. O. Cokefair, Mr. Saltonstall and many others.

The result of Saturday's games, and the players are annexed:

A. Cox beat J. R. Bilts 6-0—6-4.
H. West beat E. S. Simpson 6-0—6-0.
E. A. Beebe beat C. E. Schneely, by default.
G. P. Mellick beat C. A. Marvin 7-5—6-1.

H. West beat H. W. Stover 6-0—6-1.
H. Huntington beat S. A. Cruikshank by default.
H. Beebe beat S. West 6-3—6-4.
G. H. Squires beat J. West 7-5—6-8.
J. H. P. Wharton beat G. P. Mellick 6-4 —unfinished.
A. Cox beat R. A. Beebe 6-4—1-3 unfinished.
J. H. P. Wharton beat G. W. Morrison by default.

CRASHING A BALL.

When the Tournament was undertaken it was the intention of the Club to have the finals and the awarding of prizes on Monday afternoon.

The ladies singles were to have been played Monday morning.

So close were the plays, however, that the ladies singles were postponed until next Saturday morning — finals in the afternoon, and the gentlemen's singles were left undecided. Play was continued until darkness stopped it. The contestants had narrowed down as may be seen from the following score of Monday's games.

SINGLES.

Wharton won from Mellick.—8-3—6-4.
Cox won from R. A. Beebe.—6-4—6-4.
H. W. Beebe won from Murray.—6-2—6-0.
Squires won from Huntington.
Cox won from Wharton.—6-4—7-5.
H. West won from H. W. Beebe.—6-4—2-6—6-2.
H. West won from Squires.—8-6—6-2.

FINAL ROUND.

Cox won from H. West.—6-3—7-9.
Unfinished on account of darkness; to be concluded Tuesday.

DOUBLE.

Walz and H. W. Beebe won from Huntington and Simmons—6-3—6-3.
Squires and Murray won from Wharton and Schneely—6-3—6-0.
Cox and West won from Mellick and Wharton.—6-1—6-1.
R. A. Beebe and S. West won from Haly and H. W. Beebe—6-0—6-2.
Jacobus and Huntington won from Cox and H. West—4-6—6-4—8-6.
Jacobus and Huntington and Dilts and Rowland each won a set.—7-5—6-4. Unfinished on account of darkness; to be played off Tuesday.

Much of the success of the tournament was due to the committee Messrs. Howard Beebe, Charles E. Schneely, Ernest A. Walz, Jr., James P. Murray and Mr. G. P. Mellick.

FOUND DEAD IN HER BED.

The Nurse Girl Turned on the Gas and Went to Sleep.

Angie Harris, a colored girl, employed by D. Kerribeery of Sanford avenue, committed suicide Sunday night by turning the gas on in her room. Her employer noticed the odor through the house when he arose yesterday morning and soon found that it came from the girl's room, on the third floor.

The door, which was locked, was burst open. The girl lay dead on the bed. The windows had been closed tight. The girl never had used the gas before. She had always taken an oil lamp when she retired.

Mr. Terriberey knows no reason for the deed. He thinks she might have been homesick. She came from Langdonbury, Pa., where her parents live. She came to Plainfield last month with Mr. Terriberey's family when they moved from New York. She had been very despondent for several days. Morgue-Keeper Casey took charge of the remains. County Physician Wescott viewed the remains and gave a permit for burial.

When Mr. Casey visited the room he found an oil lamp still burning. He is in doubt as to whether or not the woman committed suicide or met her death by accidental asphyxiation. The girl was but sixteen years of age although she looked to be about twenty-five. If friends do not claim the remains to-morrow Mr. Casey will bury them in the city plot. Her mother resides in Virginia and Mr. Casey notified her by telegraph.

PERSONAL.

Arthur, the infant son of Mr. Joseph O. Stanis of West Second street died yesterday.

Mr. Joseph C. Martin has returned to his home in North Plainfield from a week's stay at Rosendale, N. Y.

Mr. Lewis C. Beakman has returned to his home on East Third street from a pleasant visit at Rosendale, N. Y.

Miss Gertrude Hyer and Miss Minnie Tappen of Brooklyn, are visiting Miss Lulu Mills of Grandview avenue, North Plainfield.

Miss Ella Titsworth, of Rochester, N. Y., returned home to-day after a pleasant visit to her cousin Miss Florence Titsworth of Dunellen.

A number of relatives gathered at the residence of Mr. Titsworth of Madison avenue, last evening. An enjoyable time was had in dancing and games.

Mrs. James M. Bingham of East Orange, N. J., and Miss S. Kennedy of New Orleans were the guest of Mr. and and Mrs. Fulper and Mr. M. Bingham of this city yesterday.

Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh and wife returned yesterday from Europe where they have been for a month. They were greatly benefitted by the trip and were cordially welcomed home by friends.

Mr. M. M. Thorn of Plainfield, went to Santa Barbara, Cal., a year or so ago for his health. In a letter to THE NEWS, received to-day, he writes: "I am very much out of health, and confined to the house most of the time. It is very doubtful if I ever recover from this disease, bronchitis, it has become so chronic. I had expected to return to Plainfield this summer, but as I am now could not stand the journey. I have watched the proceedings of the Council very closely and some queer work done by the Democratic branch. It is hopeful that a change of members of Council at the next election may in a measure correct matters, yet the present "combine" has done some things that cannot be remedied.

Attempted Robberies.

Mr. George Watson of Crescent avenue notified the police that someone had a house Sunday evening at about eleven o'clock. He called night watchman Phillip Giese, but before the officer arrived the fellow had disappeared.

As one of Mr. Henry Liefke's employes was going to bed Saturday night he met a strange man on the stairway. As soon as the fellow saw him he jumped out of a second story window and made his escape.

SUCCEEDS AS USUAL.

MRS. BRUNN AND HER CHILD FOUND BY CHIEF CAREY.

The Washington Park People Employ Him to Find Her After Six Weeks' Fruitless Search by Others —The Recovery Does Mr. Carey Great Credit.

Mrs. Ellen Brunn has been married sixteen years, and has been a faithful wife, and the mother of ten or eleven children, her husband being Peter Brunn. All but six of the children are dead. The family reside on Wilson avenue, North Plainfield. June 16th Mrs. Brunn had her husband arrested for beating her, and then hearing that he had secured a warrant for her arrest on the charge of disorderly conduct she, indignant at such an outrage, disappeared, taking a nine-year-old daughter with her, and leaving five children with her husband.

Mr. Brunn has been very much thought of among the residents of Washington Park, as an industrious and skillful gardener. He has passed as a model woman, and the scandalous stories that have been told about the wife have been but too readily believed. The children are remarkably fine looking, and nice mannered, and the Washington Park people took great interest in them also.

The mother—though "tied down" trying to nurse her large family of babies on scanty means—has always managed to keep them neat and attractive in appearance.

So much interest was felt in them that Rev. Mr. Embury—kind-hearted man that he is—bought the family a lot, and the King's Daughters built on it the cozy house the family now occupy.

When Mrs. Brunn disappeared with her daughter there was general anxiety for them among the Park people. They endeavored to help the husband find the missing ones. The children at home grieved daily and nightly for them; but, after a fruitless search of six weeks, the Park people sought the assistance August 1st of Chief Carey. He was starting on his vacation, and so told Rev Mr. Embury, of North Plainfield, who with true Christian solicitude, had sought him, and also told him that he was not at present actively engaged in that line of business.

Mr. Embury wanted to know where they could get a trustworthy man, and was referred to Inspector Byrnes of Pinkerton, it having been ascertained that Mrs. Brunn had bought a ticket for New York, and it being therefore supposed that she was located there.

Mr. Carey remained away on his vacation two weeks. When he returned Mr. Embury, in behalf of the Park, told him they had searched everywhere they could think of without success, and again urged him to take hold of the case, assuring him that he and those he represented—Mr. McCutchen and others—were willing to pay him liberally for his trouble.

Mr. Carey reluctantly consented to do the best he could, more out of sympathy than for the money in the case. Then he went to work for a clue, and worked deliberately for four days.

He inserted an advertisement in THE NEWS, and other papers, asking for information, and meanwhile returned to Hunterdon country to finish his vacation. He came back to Plainfield Saturday night, and found a letter in answer to the advertisements, which gave him a clue.

On this clue he went to Hyde Park, Ulster Co., and found a trace of the woman and child. She had resumed her maiden name of Ellen Collins, and had left Hyde Park some two weeks before Mr. Carey's arrival, and had left no trace behind her. Mr. Carey spent the entire day among the villagers in a weary search for a clue that he might know in what direction to continue his search. Towards evening he found some one who remembered hearing the woman say she was going to Poughkeepsie. Mr. Carey went to the latter place next morning, and traced a Mrs. Collins and child from Poughkeepsie by rail to Highland across the Hudson. There he found them at a physician's. But although (what is most singular) this woman's name was Collins, her Christian name however being Mary, not Ellen, she was not the woman he sought. This would be disheartening to most people, but we all know Chief Carey. He had run down that clue, started back, made another short search in Poughkeepsie and Hyde Park and got back to New York the same night. Next day he searched in New York and, what is most remarkable, succeeded in three hours' time in getting another clue of the woman and child which proved to be correct. He located Mrs. Brunn three days from the station at Huntington, L. I. It was nine o'clock in the night when he found her. She was with her daughter at the home of a Mrs. Perine. She was indisposed to return, but next day he again called and succeeded in persuading her, and they returned Friday afternoon.

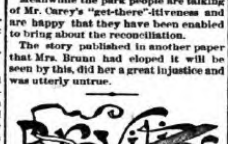
Rev. Mr. Embury had the woman and child provided with board at the Park Hotel. Saturday morning her husband came down to Plainfield and had her arrested on a charge of disorderly conduct.

Mr. Carey had taken pains to inquire about Mrs. Brunn's conduct at the places she had been in while away, and had found her spoken of in the very highest terms. When she was arrested, she sent word to him. He was thoroughly aroused, indignant at the wrongs done the woman, went before Justice Crossley, and stated the facts and had her promptly discharged.

Then her husband for the first time seemed to realize that he had greatly wronged his wife, and after Mr. Carey had lectured him as he deserved, urged her to go home with him. She reluctantly consented. Sunday they were out arm-in-arm, apparently as devoted as husband and wife ought to be.

Meanwhile the park people are talking of Mr. Carey's "get-there"-itiveness and are happy that they have been enabled to bring about the reconciliation.

The story published in another paper that Mrs. Brunn had eloped it will be seen by this, did her a great injustice and was utterly untrue.



—The Borough Council will hold an adjourned meeting this evening at eight o'clock.

—"All the Comforts of Home" is to be presented at Music Hall this evening at eight o'clock.

—Doane & VanArsdale say they have the finest stock of footwear at the lowest price, in the city.

—The public schools of this city were re-opened this morning after the usual Summer vacation. There were no special opening exercises.

—About sixty members of the Hamilton Wheelmen of Hoboken passed through this city yesterday on a return trip from Philadelphia.

—John Miller of West Front street, while playing ball at Boynton Beach yesterday afternoon was struck in the face by a foul tip and painfully injured.

—The Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of the Warren Mission chapel will hold a meeting in the parlors of the chapel this evening at eight o'clock.

—It required fifteen cars to convey the excursionists that accompanied the Grocers' Association to Boynton Beach yesterday. All report having had an enjoyable time.

—The case of Joseph B. Miller vs. the editor and publishers of the Press, which was set down for trial before Justice Nash this morning, was postponed for one week at the request of the plaintiff.

—The Plainfield Gesang and Turning Society entertained its friends at a picnic in its hall on Somerset street yesterday afternoon and evening. A large number of persons attended and everybody apparently enjoyed themselves.

—The Young Lindens of North Plainfield defeated the Bullfrog City nine this morning on the grounds on Somerset street, by a score of 23 to 15. The batters for the Young Lindens was C. Cokhar and G. Bolsterli, for Bullfrog City, T. Keller and W. Garthwait.

—Last night was the regular meeting night of the city Common Council, but by advice of the Corporation Counsel no meeting was held. The Council organized and adjourned immediately. All the members were present with the exception of Councilman Johnston.

—This evening Summit Division Sons of Temperance will celebrate its fourth anniversary at their hall, and extensive arrangements are being made for the event. The various divisions of Union county have been invited to participate. Among the speakers will be G. W. P. Pyatt, of Dunellen. Lincoln Division of Elizabeth has accepted an invitation, and will be well represented, coming in a large stage.

—The carpenters and painters worked all day yesterday that Music Hall might be in presentable shape for the performance of "All the Comforts of Home" to-night. The result is a fine auditorium and stage. The boxes are by no means completed but will be by the end of the week. If the appearance of the house diagram is any criterion, Plainfield's theatre will hold a large audience to-night. The company is well-balanced and carefully selected, the play one of the brightest of last season's successes in New York.

—The Times is about to run from a weekly to a daily. There is room for two good newspapers in Plainfield. The combine organ has disgusted enough people to support the new venture, especially as it will absorb its weekly subscribers. Plainfield is not large enough yet to support a subsidized Press with a large P, and the organ which preferred to serve the combine to voice public monies and tried to ruin the city by involving it in ruinous contracts with persons of unknown responsibility must soon learn that there is no room for it here, and that in a little while, despite all its empty boasts it will be with the man who fell out of the balloon—not in it.

City Court Notes.

A man named Conway was fined five dollars yesterday morning by City Judge Codington. The charge against him was for drunkenness and disorderly conduct.

William McNamara was a prisoner before City Judge Codington yesterday morning charged with drunkenness. A three dollar fine was imposed.

Ellen Sweeney was fined ten dollars by City Judge Codington yesterday morning. The charge against her was for drunkenness and disorderly conduct.

Miles Sweeney imbibed too freely Sunday and was arrested. Yesterday City Judge Codington fined him $10.

BASE BALL.

THE CRESCENTS WIN TWO GAMES AND LOSE ONE.

They Defeated the Star-Athletics of Newark Twice but were Beaten by the Crescents of Brooklyn. —Interesting Contest.

The Star-Athletics of Newark were the opponents of the Crescents in games of base ball Saturday afternoon and Monday morning. The Crescents succeeded in defeating them in both games. Saturday by a score of 10 to 1, and yesterday morning by a score of 5 to 3. Both games were of an interesting nature. In Saturday's game up to the seventh inning the score stood 3 to 0 in favor of the Crescents. Hammill, the Crescent's pitcher, pitched very good, and succeeded in striking out nine men.

The features of the game were Keeler's running fly catch in the first inning and Hammill's fine work in the box. In the second inning when men were on second and third bases and only one man out Hammill succeeded in striking out the two next batsmen. The crowd went wild with enthusiasm. The seventh inning was the Star-Athletics' inning. The Crescents seemed to "get onto" Hetzel's pitching and batted the ball all over the field. In that inning the home team succeeded in making seven runs.

Yesterday morning's game was a closely contested one and, as stated, was won by the Crescents by a score of 5 to 3. The conduct of Farrell, the captain of the West Ends, who played with the Star-Athletics, was not approved by a number of persons present. Tierney pitched excellently for the Crescents, and succeeding in striking out thirteen men.

The contest yesterday afternoon between the Crescents of this city and the Crescents of Brooklyn was one of the best games of ball that it has ever been the pleasure of the Plainfield people to witness. Charley Hammill pitched for the Crescents and George Cadmus, a former Plainfield pitcher, for the opposing team. He pitched superbly and succeeded in defeating Plainfield's crack team by a score of one to nothing. Neither club scored until the sixth inning. Then by an error the visitors succeeded in scoring a run.

In the same inning while Hammell, the Crescents pitcher, was at the bat, he was struck on the head by a pitched ball. The ball was pitched so fast that after it struck him it rebounded to the pitcher's box. He was unable to play any longer, and Tierney was put in the box and Grady, a West End player, finished the game in the field. There was a number of brilliant plays on both sides.

An interesting game of base ball took place yesterday afternoon at Seward between employes of Griffen's and Laire's Hardware Store. The following was the score by innings:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
Laire's	0	0	1	5	4	5	3	0	4	—22
Griffen's	1	0	0	1	0	0	0	1	0	—3

A. Ayers was the umpire. The winner to get a box of cigars. Miller the catcher for Laire's nine was "knocked out of the box" in the eighth inning, Cox taking his place.

The Westfield Athletic Club's base ball team visited Somerville Saturday afternoon and played a game of base ball with the West Ends of that place. During the progress of the game when the score stood 9 to 2 in favor of the West Ends a dispute arose over the decision of the umpire and as the Westfielders thought they were being cheated the manager withdrew his team from the field. After waiting the required length of time the umpire declared a victory for the West Ends by a score of 9 to 0.

New Jersey Publishers Meet.

The New Jersey State Publishers met in adjourned session yesterday afternoon at the Cosmopolitan Hotel, corner of Chambers street and West Broadway, New York. Editor T. W. Morrison of the Paterson Sycamore News, who is the president of the union, presided.

The union has for its object the protection of the interests of New Jersey publishers of newspapers, and a series of resolutions having this end in view, which were introduced at the August meeting held at Avon-by-the-sea, were discussed and acted upon. The resolutions called for the appointement of a committee of seven to carry out their provisions.

The president appointed as such committee ex-Senator Carpenter of the New Brunswick Daily Times, Editor A. D. V. Honeyman of the Trenton Daily Times, Major Pangborn of the Jersey City Journal, Editor Stanton of the Sussex County Register, Editor Ketchum of the Belvidere Apollo, Editor Hartwell of the Hopewell Herald, and Major Yard of the Monmouth Democrat.

The meeting continued in session two hours and adjourned subject to the call of the chair.

Tall Buildings.

It was Chicago that solved the problem of want of space that so disturbs at present the great cities. Chicago boldly began building up in the air, arguing that if there was not space enough upon the ground there was "all outdoors" up toward the sky. The tallest of her structures at the time of its completion, and the tallest building on the continent as well, was her magnificent Auditorium, 240 feet high, containing seventeen stories. Immediately the older and more conservative cities began to throw vast edifices into the upper air too.

The country must also thank Chicago for the solution of two other problems. One of these was the question of a solid foundation for such vast structures. Pile driving was first tried, with varied success. Chicago, by reason of its swampy soil, was one of the worst spots in the world upon which to make a solid foundation. But the thing was at length successfully accomplished by making an immense iron cage to fit into the cellar exactly and cover all its surface. This was made a smooth, flat foundation, upon all parts of which the superstructure would press equally. This iron plate structure has been compared to a snowshoe, which holds up the weight of a man and enables him to travel firmly over a soft, spongy surface. Upon the iron snowshoe, so to speak, and its security any building, however weighty. It is securely braced with steel posts and girders.

The other improvement inaugurated by Chicago builders was the steel house frame. A great framework, a maze of steel columns, crossbeams and braces, rises like a stupendous skeleton high into the air. The steel framework is filled in with brick or stone. In case of a monster office now projected in New York, the filling in will be of lightweight terra cotta. The wall which formerly constituted the strength of a house does not count in this direction at all. The strength is in the steel skeleton.

Elaborating the Chicago idea, it is now proposed to erect in New York city a building 830 feet high, the tallest house in the world. It will also be the largest business building in the world. It will be twenty stories high to the tower, which will rise above the roof six stories more. It is said that the Lick telescope is so powerful that objects on the moon that are fifty feet high can be detected. If there are people in the moon, contrary to the usual supposition, and they have good telescopes, they will be able readily to see these tall houses in the United States of America.

Telltale Finger Tips.

In The Nineteenth Century Professor Francis Galton describes with considerable minuteness the system of identification by finger tips, which he has wrought out with scientific carefulness. He tells us that every one of us bears on his body a visible token of identity that can never be destroyed, never be mistaken and never counterfeited. This token is found in the minute lines of ridges found in the palms of the hands and the soles of the feet. These wavy ridges never vary in the same hand in the course of a lifetime. They remain the same from birth till the body decays.

Imprints taken of the finger tips of Sir W. J. Herschel in 1860, and again in 1888, show this to be the case. Professor Galton, however, has fortified his position by measurements of many thousand specimens. He looks confidently forward to the time when criminals will be identified in this manner, deserters discovered and lost heirs recovered and returned to their homes; perhaps even ——way husbands and wives tracked to their hiding places. He has invented a pocket instrument for painting finger tips in the way he suggests.

Professor Galton compares the ramifications of the fine ridges on the finger tips to the pattern of a piece of lace. The lace may be cut, worn threadbare, washed and shrunken small or pulled out wide and long, but the pattern remains the same. It is remarkable, too, that the finger tips of no two individuals are ever precisely alike.

The death of Sir John Macdonald may change greatly the relations of the United States and Canada as far as trade and reciprocity are concerned. The new administration professes its willingness to negotiate for reciprocity in all articles not imported from England in large quantities. Besides, therefore, the "natural products," on which Premier Macdonald based a reciprocity agreement, the new schedule which has been submitted to the British minister at Washington includes all dressed meats and live stock as well as many manufactured articles, among them carriages, earthen and chinaware, shoes of all kinds and paper and paper manufactures. With this list in their hands the Canadian agents who come to the October conference at Washington will hope to move the obdurate heart of the present administration.

Boston hopes Mrs. James K. Polk will be happy in heaven, of course, but it cannot quite forgive her for forgetting that she had ever been in that city.

THE STRANGE PAIR ONE

A Freak Who Carries His Brother With Him.

LALLOO BAIKAREE'S ODD BURDEN

The Human Wonder or Wonders That Astonished Physicians at New York and All Over the World—They Had the Smallpox Together.

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—From Hindostan the country of queer things—the country according to Kipling, of "the man who was"—came yesterday to New York "The Man Who Is, Or Are." His or their name is Lalloo Ramprasad Bhikaree. His or their forefathers and foremothers have been for generations the subjects of the king of Oudh. He or they is or are bright and intelligent enough, apparently, to set up an Indian mutiny among the native troops of the queen, but he or they can not tell you whether he or they is or are, for he or they is a man and a half, or three-quarters of twins as they choose to call it.

To Carry His Little Brother.

Take Lalloo in the singular, to save a waste of nouns and verbs, and as he stood in room 28 of the Metropolitan hotel yesterday afternoon he was a clever but unfortunate Hindoo boy who was doomed all his life to carry his little brother around with him. Lalloo seemed to like it, but it was a uncomfortable way of carrying a little brother. It seemed as if his little brother had plunged his head through Lalloo's breast bone and hung by him with his legs and arms sticking a number of ways.

He Held Him Proudly.

Lalloo proudly held up the little ancsted twin (ancsted from development is the nearest approach to plain English that the doctors of three continents have come to in the case) and answered all the questions that a score of medical men and other visitors could put to him about himself and his little brother.

They were born in Oovon Oudh, about twenty years ago. Their mother has borne four children, all of whom but Lalloo's half twin were healthy and well developed.

When Lalloo was born his little half brother had his arms around his neck. He has not let go of him since. He has not grown as fast as Lalloo, but Lalloo can swing them up and put them almost there.

They Had Smallpox Together.

Four doctors pulled Lalloo's half brother's legs and arms about and asked questions about him. They found a distinct pulse in one of the arms, but this is almost the only semblance of individuality that the little half brother possesses.

He and Lalloo had smallpox together once, but Lalloo's other little brother he has not shared to any great extent, and the little legs and arms do not move by the little half brother's volition. When Lalloo is cold he is cold, however, and when Lalloo perspires he perspires, and the prick of a pin near the point of origin of the little half brother in Lalloo's breast bone is felt by Lalloo.

The little half brother has, too, what the doctors call a foetal heart, into which Lalloo's heart sends the blood, but it does not beat with intelligent sympathy to Lalloo's joys and sorrows, for the further attachment of a brain is necessary for this, and a brain Lalloo's little half brother does not possess.

Could Be Separated.

All the doctors who saw Lalloo and his little half brother yesterday said that they could be separated safely. They named a New York surgeon, in fact, who could do it. This, it was said is where American abdominal surgery stands, and if Lalloo and his little half brother have been through England, Scotland and Germany, as well as Hindostan, and all the foreign doctors have decided to leave them together.

Life Savers Before the President.

CAPE MAY, N. J., Sept. 8.—Early last evening the president and his entire household witnessed the regular weekly drill of the Cape May Point Life Saving station. Captain Eldridge explained all the details, from resuscitating apparently drowned persons to launching the surfboat in a rough sea. It is stated the shore capital will be closed next week as far as official business is concerned.

Editor McKeon Retires.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 8.—Mr. William V. McKeon, for nearly thirty years managing editor of The Public Ledger, has retired. L. Clarke Davis succeeds him. Mr. McKeon will continue on the staff of the paper, however, and will write occasional editorials. The announcement is made that Mr. George W. Childs will himself hereafter be editor-in-chief.

Treasurer Kraft's Shortage.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 8.—Gottlieb Kraft, treasurer of Sharpsburg, Allegheny county, this county, confessed judgment today to W. F. Foster, borough solicitor, for $6,000. The extent of Kraft's indebtedness is not known, but admits a deficiency in his borough accounts of from $10,000 to $13,000. He is under bonds to the borough in the sum of $20,000.

Dewey on Trades' Unions.

LONDON, Sept. 8.—In an interview here Chauncey M. Depew said: "New York Central recognizes the right of workingmen to organize trades unions for the protection of their own members, but we do object to any outsider not engaged in the same business as ours to come to workingmen who are satisfied and order them out on strike."

Farmers at Albany.

ALBANY, Sept. 8.—A convention of the State Farmers' league was held at the Globe hotel last evening to outline a plan of action on political questions affecting agriculture. Resolutions favoring the running canvass for the election of state and local officers. About fifty leagues were represented.

Murdered Man in a Marsh.

CAMDEN, N. J., Sept. 8.—The body of an unknown man was found in the marsh along Newton creek in South Camden. There was a long cut on the head and the skull was fractured. There was nothing by which the body could be identified.

Thirteen were Drowned.

LONDON, Sept. 8.—The English bark Fiji, running from Hamburg to Melbourne, Australia, has been wrecked at Warnambool and thirteen of the crew drowned.

Effect of the Tariff Law Abroad.

LONDON, Sept. 8.—English manufacturers admit that the new American tariff law hurts them. The metal and tin plate trades are principally affected.

HILL'S LABOR VIEWS.

What New York State's Governor Said to Mr. Gladstone.

BUFFALO, Sept. 8.—In the course of a long speech on labor topics at Germania park yesterday afternoon Governor Hill said:

It is, perhaps, especially felicitous that my official visit here, which will be my last one as chief executive of the state, should be as the guest of the workingmen and upon an occasion devoted to the celebration of a holiday in the interest which cannot well be ignored, and in some of its different phases it is always before me. Its agitation has existed for years and it is evident that it is a question which cannot be effectually disposed of until it has been wisely solved, and its solution presents one of the important problems of the hour.

There is an irrepressible conflict always in progress between the ones demanding the greatest exactions from labor and those insisting upon the least. Recreation, of course, is the "chief end of man," but the necessity for the arduous toil which characterized former days does not now exist. Conditions are rapidly changing and the ingenuity of mankind in new appliances and inventions of every kind operate largely to diminish the amount of manual labor required in many of the pursuits. We have a right to avail ourselves of all the modern improvements to relieve us from unnecessary drudgery. All occupations have to a greater or less extent felt the influence of the reduction in the hours of labor.

Business hours in most every pursuit are every where much restricted. Public offices are closed by law to be closed earlier than formerly. The early closing movement for our stores and shops has proved a decided success. Mechanics and laborers generally formerly worked fourteen hours a day; then the hours were reduced to twelve, then to ten, and now the demand for a still greater reduction is heard on every hand.

The regulation by statutes of the hours of labor is a matter not free from practical difficulties, and while laws may facilitate the accomplishments of right results, sometimes they are more specially produced by an appeal to reason rather than law, to agitation rather than to legislation.

What a number of hours shall constitute a day's work is a question which it is not an easy task to ascertain or determine. It is difficult to establish a general rule applicable alike to all occupations and all localities. But every workingman should be afforded a reasonable opportunity to become acquainted with his family, some time for reading, some for shop talk, some for amusement and some for recreation. Every honest and industrious working man ought to be able to earn a decent and respectable living. He ought also to be afforded an opportunity to make more than a mere living—to lay up something for a rainy day, something for sickness, old age or misfortune. He has a right to expect more than a mere existence from labor.

I do not believe in "paternal" government, or that it is one of the duties of the government to provide work for its citizens, but society owes a duty to itself to afford every possible facility to working people in their efforts to improve their condition, to readily and cheerfully yield to their every just demand and to encourage in every reasonable way every thing that tends to add to the dignity of labor.

LORD ROTHSCHILD TALKS.

The Hirsch Fund Will Not Assist Jews to America.

LONDON, Sept. 8.—The mass meeting of Jews in New York to protest against the alleged misuse of Baron Hirsch's millions to flood America with cheap workmen has created a sensation here and help capital to oppress labor has created a sensation in England.

In order to determine the exact situation a reporter called on Lord Rothschild. He found the foremost living Jew in his great banking house with several important financiers dancing attendance. His strong, manly face lit up and his eyes flashed when the reporter mentioned the subject of his visit.

He said slowly and earnestly, pronouncing every word with great distinctness "None of Baron Hirsch's money has been used to send people to America, and none will be used for that purpose. There is no intention to send people to America that way. Of course, if immigrants go to America with their own money we cannot help it.

"Last week twenty or thirty immigrants came here from Russia, but they paid their own way. We are not responsible for their movements. That is all I have to say."

This is unquestionably the most important statement made since the beginning of the Baron Hirsch movement, as Lord Rothschild is regarded all over the world as the head of his race.

BLEW HIMSELF UP WITH A BOMB.

F. L. Carol Adopts This Method of Suicide in a San Francisco Hotel.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 8.—F. L. Carol registered at the Prescott House as F. De Young, of Fresno. Shortly after—and an explosion which shook the buildings in the neighborhood attracted attention to his room.

It was found he had committed suicide by exploding a dynamite bomb. His remains were scattered all over the room and one of his arms was found in the street. The windows and plastering were broken and the furniture damaged.

Deceased had been working on a fruit farm near Fresno. He told a number of persons here that he intended to take his life, as he wanted to create a sensation for the newspapers, but in a note to the coroner, which he left, giving his age as forty-one years and birthplace as Holland, he says he committed suicide because life was not worth living.

A Russian Spy Arrested.

LONDON, Sept. 8.—General Ailbshanoff, a distinguished Russian commander and diplomat, has been arrested at Cabul, the capital of Afghanistan, charged with being a spy in Russian service. General Ailbshanoff was captured while disguised as a Moslem devotee. He is considered by the British authorities to be one of the most daring and dangerous men in the service of the czar.

"Big Ed" Hennessy's Escape.

CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—"Big Ed" Hennessy the notorious desperado, recently convicted for various robberies committed in Ohio and Missouri, escaped from the police by cleverly walking out of the "pen" at the armory police court. Dozens of Central station detectives are scouring the city for the fugitive.

A Newark Lawyer Drowned.

LAKE GEORGE, N. Y., Sept. 8.—Walter Simpson, twenty-three years old, of Newark, N. J., was drowned in Lake George, near Sagamore. He was taken with cramps while in bathing.

The Pensacola Ordered to Hawaii.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—The Pensacola, at San Francisco, has been ordered to sail without delay to Honolulu to look after the United States important interests in the Hawaiian Islands.

JUDGE LOWELL'S STORY.

What He Says About the Western Union Case.

PRESIDENT GREEN INTERVIEWED.

He Says That if Judge Lowell's Report Has Been Filed, as Reported, the Western Union will Fight It With Every Weapon in Its Grasp.

BOSTON, Sept. 8.—Ex-Judge John Lowell, who is said to be mixed up in the Western Union Telegraph Company's proposed battle for supremacy with the Bell Telephone company, has been interviewed concerning the case. "The first telephone case brought before me," said Judge Lowell, "was begun to test the validity of the Bell patents. Reis claimed priority of invention. I decided in favor of the Bell patents, and my opinion has been unanimously concurred in by all the judges before whom the same questions have been argued."

He Did Not Know Them.

"Did any of your business relatives hold stock in the Bell Telephone company at that time?" asked the reporter.

"I have since been informed that they did," replied the judge, "but at that time I did not know it."

"Another telephone case was heard by me," continued the judge reflectively, "and even at this later date I did not have any knowledge that the stock was in the possession of my relatives. Theoretically, perhaps I should have had such knowledge, as I was one of the executors of my father's estate, but practically and as a matter of fact I knew nothing about it, for my brother, the other executor, did all the business."

"Did you have knowledge at the time you acted as master against the Bell Telephone for an accounting that your relatives owned a block of the stock of the telephone company?" asked the reporter.

He Thought the Facts Known.

"I was coming to that. I was appointed as master to hear the parties and report the facts with such part of the testimony as either party should request and my findings in my opinion of law arising. Judge Hoar and William G. Russell for the Bell company and General Swayne, of New York, and George S. Hale for the Western Union agreed upon my appointment as master. Judge Nelson really had nothing to do in the matter but sign my appointment. Prior to this I believe nothing had been published in the newspapers about my relatives holding stock, and when I accepted this appointment I thought it might naturally excite alarm that stock—and I don't know that I did—I thought that the facts were known to both parties concerned, and that knowing these facts both the Western Union and the Bell company were desirous that I should act as master.

Not at All Peculiar.

"My report is already filed. From the circuit court it may go to the new court of appeals and from there to the supreme court of the United States. I believe the cases are all decided, and that only questions of law remain to be settled."

"Does it not seem to you somewhat peculiar that the Bell Telephone people should seek a loan from your father upon their stock as collateral when any proceedings against the validity of their patents would naturally come on before the United States circuit judge?" said the reporter.

"Oh, not in the slightest particular," replied Judge Lowell. "I see no reason why the loan should not have been negotiated with him as well as with any one else, for even had it then been known, which it wasn't, that the suits might get into court, there were other judges before whom such suits might have been tried.

No Fear for His Reputation.

"Man and boy," said Judge Lowell in conclusion, "I have lived among the people of Boston for nearly seventy years and I have no fears that this latest tale will in any way affect my reputation, certainly not among those who know me."

What President Green Says.

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—Norvin Green, president of the Western Union Telegraph company, was asked for a statement in regard to the published report that the company would move to set aside an adverse report of Master in Chancery John Lowell in the suit against the Bell Telephone company for certain moneys claimed to be due the telegraph company. Dr. Green said that so far as he knew no such report had been made by ex-Judge Lowell, but, if it were, shortly after—and an explosion which shook the buildings in the neighborhood attracted attention to his would be filed, it would be fought by the Western Union with every weapon at its command. Beyond this he would say nothing.

The Report Has Not Been Filed.

The World says: "While Dr. Norvin Green may not have seen the report of exJudge Lowell, Master in Chancery in the suit of the Western Union against the American Bell Telephone company, there is no doubt that it has been filed with the clerk of the United States circuit court for the District of Massachusetts. The World has a copy of the finding, which covers fourteen closely typewritten pages. Before Judge Lowell is up now is the claims of the plaintiff, after setting forth the contract on which the suit was brought. Judge Lowell then discusses the defendant's testimony, and closes with this sentence: 'The conclusion is that the plaintiffs are not entitled to the account asked for.'"

The Recognition of Chili.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—The department of state has replied to Minister Egan on Sept. 4 that if a government acceptable to the people had been formed by the Congressional party he should recognize it. The department has received a telegram from Mr. Egan stating that a provisional government had been established on the 5th inst., with Jorge Montt as president, and was universally accepted by the people, and that he (Mr. Egan) was in very cordial communication with it.

Minneapolis Says "No, Thank You."

MINNEAPOLIS, Sept. 8.—The Minneapolis board of trade committee on union of the twin cities has reported that public opinion in Minneapolis is overwhelmingly opposed to union, and that the people cannot waste any time or energy in efforts to unite the twin cities. The report was unanimously adopted.

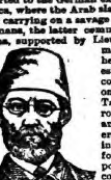
Postal Clerks in Secret Session.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 8.—The National Association of Postal Clerks convened in this city with fifty delegates. The meetings are secret. The object of the association is to secure a classification of wages similar to that of the letter carriers.

EMIN PASHA IN PERIL.

One of His Lieutenants Killed by Savage Slave Traders.

LONDON, Sept. 8.—A serious disaster is reported to the German expedition in Central Africa, where the Arab slave traders have been carrying on a savage fight with the Germans, the latter commanded by Emin Pasha, supported by Lieutenants Stuhlmann and Langheld. At the latest previous accounts Emin was on his way to Lake Tanganyika, en route for Ujiji, and the slavers were attacking him and his forces at every opportunity. Advices from Zanzibar state that in a skirmish at Lake Tanganyika the natives, probably slave traders, have killed Lieutenant Stuhlmann as a result. Further particulars as to the safety of the German force are anxiously awaited.



EMIN PASHA.

HASTINGS' BIG SHORTAGE.

Allegheny City's Market Clerk Has a Shortage of Over $32,000.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 8.—The report of the Allegheny City sub-auditing committee of councils, which is investigating the various boards of department of Allegheny City, reported last night that Market Clerk David Hastings is $32,647 short in his accounts. The investigation goes back as far as 1875. It appears Hastings failed to collect rental from many stallkeepers in the market, in some cases for years.

The stub receipts have been burned with the fire and its not known yet whether Hastings collected and appropriated any of the money to his own use or not. After the other heads of departments of the city governments are audited the sub-committee will turn its reports over to councils to take action on them.

A Pension Fraud Unearthed.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 8.—Charles E. Carlile, Mamie Cole, alias Williams, George Phillips, Dr. George Green, Rev. Noah Jackson and Mrs. E. Miller were held in $1,200 bail each on a charge of conspiracy to defraud the national government. It is alleged that Mamie Cole, a mulatto, aged twenty-two, was married to a seventy-three-year-old colored pensioner named John J. L. Cole while the latter was lying unconscious upon his deathbed, and that the other prisoners conspired with her to obtain the continuance of Cole's pension after his decease.

Carried Up by the Legs.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Sept. 8.—At Charlotte George W. Lewis, an assistant to Professor Nella, the aeronaut, was caught by the legs by the rope which was attached to a balloon in which Professor Nella was about to make an ascension. He was carried into the air over 2,000 feet and when the balloon dropped to the surface of the lake he, together with the professor, was rescued by the life saving crew.

To Prosecute the Appraisers.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 8.—After a long consultation with City Treasurer Wright, District Attorney Graham advised that criminal proceedings be entered against the mercantile appraisers. Auditor General McCamant has suspended from office all the members of the board of mercantile appraisers. City Treasurer Wright concurred in the suspension, but said the order should be one of dismissal.

Mr. Wanamaker Indignant.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—Postmaster General Wanamaker indignantly denies the report circulated by an ill-informed clerk that the Delicate suits would get into court, a success. He says they are successful beyond his most sanguine expectations. The increased revenue in those offices where the free delivery experiment is on trial almost pays for the increased expenditure.

American Pork Was Slandered.

BRUSSELS, Sept. 8.—The Independence Belge twits the German Conservatives upon the defeat of the proposition for the rescinding of the prohibition upon American pork. It says that the Conservative organs almost daily dilated upon the danger lurking in the use of American pork, and that the decree proves that the allegations false.

New Jersey Veterans at Gettysburg.

GETTYSBURG, Pa., Sept. 8.—Two hundred and fifty members and friends of Lincoln post, No. 11, G. A. R., of Newark, N. J., are here. The party includes Department Commander J. S. Milliken, Assistant Adjutant General F. W. Sullivan and Colonel Benard, of the Fifth New Jersey militia. The party will remain three days.

Union Pacific's New President.

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—It is definitely stated that there is no chance of Mr. Samuel Spencer succeeding Mr. Sidney Dillon in the presidency of the Union Pacific. Well informed people hold that the choice will fall upon Mr. E. T. Jeffrey who would be acceptable to both Mr. Gould and Mr. Morgan.

Judge Sawyer Very Ill.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 8.—Lorenzo Sawyer, United States circuit judge, is dangerously ill at his home here with a severe attack of bronchitis.

I have used Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy for constipation and acknowledge it is worthy of all that can be said of it for disorders of that kind.—Nellie A. McQuade, 250 Main street, Amsterdam, N. Y.—ADV.

THE POLITICAL WORLD.

New York Republicans May Still Nominate Fassett.

THE DELEGATES TALKING IT OVER.

It Now Looks as Though New York City's Collector and Philip Beecher, of Buffalo, May Be Nominated for Governor and Lieutenant Governor.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Sept. 8.—Several hundred delegates are already here to attend the New York State Republican convention, which opens here tomorrow, and the lobbies of the different hotels are beginning to assume a businesslike appearance. The remainder of the delegates are expected to arrive in the morning. From present indications the convention will be of short duration. Mr. Platt is still talking White and does not conceal that Fassett is "in it" at all, but every other man in the hotels said there was no doubt about Fassett's nomination.

Fassett for Governor.

The platform, it is stated, will contain a hard money clause, favor reciprocity, indorse the administration and there will be no high license.

Following is the ticket as predicted by The Morning Herald:

For Governor—J. Sloat Fassett.

For Lieutenant Governor—Philip Becker, of Buffalo.

For Secretary of State—John W. Vrooman.

For Attorney General—William A. Sutherland.

For Controller—Senator Einstein.

For State Engineer and Surveyor—William V. Ressalaer, of Seneca county; or Varplanck J. Colvin, of Albany; or O. H. P. Cornell, of New York, in the order named.

For Treasurer—Ira M. Hedges, of Rockland.

Becker or Wadsworth.

It is rumored that Philip Becker has already been offered the lieutenant governorship nomination, and that in case he should refuse it will be offered to J. Wadsworth, and in the event of his declining it will be tendered to Edward A. McAlpin.

Major McKinley Talks.

CHESTERVILLE, O., Sept. 8.—A representative of the United Press rode from Canton to Cressline with Major McKinley. "The Farmers' Alliance, or People's party," said Major McKinley in reply to a question, "will not, I think, be much of a factor in the campaign. It is simply a revival of the Greenback party with an equally fallacious doctrine incorporated in its platform, and the farmers of Ohio are too clearheaded to support any such chimerical propositions. Therefore I assume that the fight will be nearly on old party lines. In that case, Ohio being a Republican state, I can see no reason to doubt the result. This is aside from the dissensions in the ranks of the opposition in Hamilton county, which might materially be counted to swell the Republican majority."

Interested in Campbell's Health.

Major McKinley was anxious to hear of the condition of his opponent, Governor Campbell. "I am anxious to beat him, of course," said he with a smile, "but I would be glad to hear that he has entirely recovered, as there is not much glory in whipping a sick man." Beyond what he calls "campaign talk," Mr. McKinley says he is in excellent health and is standing the strain of the canvas very well.

Democratic Governors to Meet.

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 8.—Chairman Neal of the Democratic state committee, is arranging for a meeting of Democratic governors here for next week. He says that he expects here on that occasion Governors Francis, of Missouri; Stone, of Mississippi; Winans, of Michigan; Russell, of Massachusetts; Jackson, of Maryland; Nichols, of Louisiana; Brown of Kentucky; Fleming, of Florida; Reynolds, of Delaware; Eagle, of Arkansas; Jones, of Alabama; Abbett, of New Jersey; Fowler, of North Carolina; Pattison, of Pennsylvania; Buchanan, of Tennessee; Hogg, of Texas; McKinney, of Rhode Island, and Wilson, of Virginia; Peck, of Wisconsin; Boies, of Iowa; Boyd, of Nebraska, and Hill, of New York.

Senator Hawley Denies It.

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 8.—Senator Joseph R. Hawley has been stopping for some time at the Hotel Pembroke, at Woodmont. He denies the report that he has been offered the position of secretary of war. He said: "The secretaryship has not been offered to me by President Harrison or by anybody else. I have had no consultation with anybody, and my friends have never conferred with me about the matter. I have had no offer of the position and I expect none."

Garland Is Out of Politics.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—Ex-Attorney General Garland has written a letter to his son, Sanders Garland, calling attention to a paragraph mentioning him as a candidate for the vacant interstate commerce commissionership and stating that there is no foundation for it. The ex-attorney general says he would not accept the office if tendered to him. He has permanently retired from public life.

New Jersey Republicans to Meet.

TRENTON, N. J., Sept. 8.—The executive committee of the Republican League of Republican clubs decided to hold a state convention of the league on Oct. 15 at Trenton. A call will be issued in a few days.

SHOT THROUGH THE HEART.

Bertha Iron's Change of Mind Cost Two Lives.

BLOOMINGTON, Ills., Sept. 8.—Dr. C. R. Ballard, member of a prominent family at Saybrook, shot and killed Miss Bertha Iron and then killed himself. He had been engaged to the lady and on Saturday took out a license to marry her. She changed her mind Sunday and refused to marry him.

In the morning he made a final appeal, and being refused shot her through the heart. He then shot himself three times in the breast and once in the head, and died in a few moments. He was thirty years old. Miss Iron's widowed mother is nearly dead with grief.

Russian Jews by Way of Canada.

TORONTO, Sept. 8.—Forty families of destitute Jews, who had been expelled from Russia, arrived in this city by train from Montreal and were taken care of by Industrial Hebrews of this place. They were then sent on to Buffalo and various points in the United States.

A Virtual Challenge to Nelson.

INDEPENDENCE, Ia., Sept. 8.—C. W. Williams has issued an offer to any horse with a record of 2:12 or better to meet Allerton at the October races, offering a purse of $2,000 if Allerton is defeated and allowing the horse $2,500 for expenses, with no entrance fees. An answer has been received from Hanks, who is stating that Nancy Hanks will not meet Allerton, it being too late in the season. "Would $200,000 buy Allerton?" was then put to Williams by A. G. Boss, of Salt Lake City. "No, sir," was the prompt and decisive reply. It is said Mr. Boss was negotiating for Mr. Marcus Daly, of Montana.

CLEANLINESS REIGNS.

Scrubbing a Frenzy in Holland—Sunday the Only Day on Which No Housecleaning Is Done—Dutch Housemaids the Personification of Tidiness.

In Holland, where cleanliness has found its highest example, the people seem to be both godly and good; terms not always synonymous. Whether it is really the influence of their piety and sobriety that causes the excessive cleanliness of these honest Hollanders, or only the juxtaposition of so much clear water, is not easy to decide. The temptation to "scrub" is certainly great in a country where streams of fresh water cross every dooryard, define every street, traverse every field and border every country road.

With beguiling murmurs these waterways seem to beckon to the women to come and dip from their cool depths, wash their linen in the ripples, scour pots, pans and brooms on their brinks, and carry pellful after pailful away with which to flood their dwellings inside and drench them outside —for houses in Holland are not content with being internally clean, but must have external baths also. Many and many a time the writer has seen the very stones in the street washed, and even scoured with the same care that is given to the spotless floors of houses.

This frenzy of cleanliness extends from the humblest peasant's cottage in the country to the most splendid mansion in town; but in the town mansion the scrubbing and rubbing and beating are carried on by maids, and in the humbler cottage it is done by the housewife herself. Let no man who hates the chaos of housecleaning go to Holland to live, for the splash of the scrubbing brush and the whish of the dustcloth never cease from the beginning till the end of the year.

No day of the week is free from these sounds of cleaning except Sunday, and to make amends for that one day of idleness the brush and broom are wielded with unusual fury on Saturday and with redoubled force again on Monday.

EVERYTHING SPOTLESS AND SHINING.

Woe to lurking specks of dust in out-of-the-way corners! They are brought to the surface by small bellows, which are blown into every crevice of door and wall and woodwork; carpets, rugs and mats are taken to the open air and beaten over a sort of wooden frame which is peculiar to Holland; floors are scrubbed and sanded; every nail head, every knob of brass, every bit of copper or pewter or tin is polished into brilliancy by energetic fingers; beds are beaten and aired and purified, and curtains are taken down in summer time and almost tear them into pieces, and then the good wife, with absolutely nothing else left to cleanse, spends the remainder of the day in holding up a winning finger to the intruder who might bring in a speck of dust or spot of mud.

The inhabitants of the villages are too well trained to be thus careless; the smallest child is taught to leave its wooden pattens at the threshold before entering one of these clean little domiciles, and a passer-by can usually judge of the number of inhabitants inside by counting the wooden shoes at the doorsill.

Driving past a little house one morning where it was necessary to pay toll, a neat young girl heard the noise of our wheels and ran to the door, her feet clad only in the thick black woosen stockings which the people wear indoors. She paused an instant at the threshold to slip on her waiting pattens before coming into the road to take the money, slipped them off again while running indoors for change, put them on again in coming to the carriage, took them off again in going into the house to find out the time of day, and once more went through the same quick process of putting on and taking off in returning.

Not all the haste necessary in this rapid running to and fro could make this Dutch girl forget for one moment to remove her pattens before that altar of cleanliness—her tiny dwelling.

PRETTY DUTCH GIRLS.

Many of the houses are poor and bare of furniture, but not one is to the smallest, darkest, narrowest lane but boasts its snowy floors and shining panes and gleaming tins, and not one housewife, however poor, but can show you such an array of brooms, brushes, mops, soaps, sands, polishing powder and various paraphernalia for cleaning as will make you stare.

But it is, after all, to the pretty Holland housemaids that one turns with most pleasure. Nowhere in the world can maids be trim, so trim, so entirely spotless, be found. From north to south they are clad in blue and white prints, the cleanest, stiffest, most smoothly ironed frocks imaginable, and so are the large, snowy aprons that cover them, and the thin, white muslin caps that quite envelope the hair, the thick ruche of which forms a most becoming white halo to faces that are often pretty, always rosy and fresh. The figures of these girls are usually sturdy, with broad backs and well defined thighs, over which the blue and white print skirts fall not ungracefully. Beneath are seen the feet, clad in black hose and pattens of white, unpainted wood.

But the most puzzling, and at the same time the most admirable thing about these maids was that, see them when we would, in the early morning while windows and door fronts with floods of water or scouring steps and floors with bushels of sand, or later in the day vigorously beating carpets and rugs or shaking feather beds, or even emptying cans of ashes, they seemed never to get a drop of water, or spot of sand, or speck of dust upon their primitive freshness of their dress. Holland has taught us that soiled gingham aprons, red arms and wet feet are not necessary accompaniments to "scrubbing day."

And then the nerve with which these girls labor! What enthusiasm, what rivalry, what enthusiasm! They seem to scrub for pure love of it, and with a wonderful interest in this humble work which is usually considered so demeaning.—New York Recorder.

Here's a Good Plan.

There is one bright girl here in New York who is earning a comfortable living in a somewhat novel way. She is a typewriter. Every morning she goes to the offices of ten business men, takes the letters received in the last twenty four hours, on the envelopes of which are typed instructions as to the manner of answering them, and in the afternoon brings back typewritten answers to them all.

She receives ten dollars a week from each man, and reserves two afternoons a week for herself. Whether she has two letters a day to answer or twenty the amount received is the same. For about half of the quantity of work that the average young woman in an office is called upon to do she receives three or four times as much salary, and all through a little extra exercise of brains.—New York World.

OUR HIRED GIRL.

Our hired girl, she's "Lisbeth Anne
An she can cook best things to eat!
She let puts dough in our pie pan,
An says annuther an's good and sweet.
An nen she sakts it all on top.
With cinnamon; an nen she'll stop,
An stoop an blink, let as slow,
In the cook stove so's 'twon't slop
An git all spilled; nen bakys it—so
It is custard pie, first thing you know!
An nen she'll say:
"Clear out o' my way!
They's time for work and time for play.
Take your dough an run, child, run,
Er I can't git no cookin done!"

When our hired girl 'tends like she's mad,
An says I can go to walk the chalk
When she's around, er wished they had!
I play out on our porch an talk
To th' Raggedy Man 'at mows our lawn.
An he says, "Whew!" an nen leans on
His old crooked scythe, an blinks his eyes
An sniffs all 'round an says, "I swan!
Ef my old nose don't tell me lies,
It 'pears like I smell custard pies!"
An nen he'll say:
"Clear out o' the way!
They's time to work an time for play,
Take your dough an run, child, run,
Er I can't git no cookin done."

—James Whitcomb Riley.

HERE'S A CONVENIENT KITCHEN.

Hints About the Walls and Floors and the Use of Whitewash.

Although few women are permitted to plan their own kitchens, or even to furnish them according to their own ideas of convenience, it is pleasant to read what another deems best for this workroom. One of the most essential of the kitchen is that it shall be well ventilated and large enough for its purposes. Too large a kitchen is a mistake, as it makes extra steps, which can be avoided when the room is more compact.

Unfortunately, in houses built by persons of wealth, the proper arrangement of the kitchen is sometimes neglected, though this is not often true of recently built houses. In one of the most palatial mansions in New York there is a kitchen ceiled and floored with tile, so that the floor and walls can be washed down with a hose and their perfect cleanliness insured. Unfortunately no special attention is generally made in the kitchen of ventilation, so that it often interferes with the draft of the range.

The next essential after perfect ventilation is thorough, clean walls, to which the odors of cooking cannot cling. There is nothing better than a whitewashed wall for the kitchen. Whitewash is itself a purifier. Where should be a wainscoting about four feet high of hard wood and a hard wood floor in every kitchen. The pretty hard pine that comes from places nearer by than Georgia, and is, therefore, less expensive, is within the reach of the purse of almost every housebuilder. It needs only oil to bring out the beauty of its veinings.

A border of 6-inch blue tiles, two tiles deep, should be around the sink where water is splashed almost continually, and wood is liable to rot, or at least become discolored. If stationary tubs are to be a part of the outfit of the kitchen, remember that those with white enameled linings cost little more than ordinary ones and last much longer. A white enameled sink is always wholesome looking, because it can be kept clean easily.

The most essential furniture of the kitchen is the stove. This should be of the best manufacture, and there are so many first class manufacturers of stoves that it would truly be a difficult matter to fail to find one if one were in search of a good stove. The same general principle in drafts is adopted by all first class stove manufacturers. There are so many essential articles for the kitchen that one is in danger of falling across at least half a dozen which pretend to do the work of more ordinary things and only partially take their place.

The wringer and a few other inventions are genuine boons to the housekeeper. A large kitchen table and, if possible, a small stone or marble table, should be in every kitchen. The wooden table should have two or three drawers in place of one, as they are more convenient.

A kitchen dresser, with shelves above and drawers beneath, is always a convenient piece of furniture. A kitchen should have, if possible, a broad window sill, and also a broad window seats, so that a kitchen garden of herbs can be accommodated in one of them.

Kitchens should be well supplied with wire screens at the doors and windows to keep out flies in summer. It is also a good plan to have springs that shut the doors automatically, whenever any one passes through them, attached to those doors which lead to the main living portions of the house, so that the odors of cooking are not allowed to penetrate into the house. After all, each person and family can judge best what is needed in the kitchen.—Chicago Herald.

What a Woman Can Do.

So great is the influence of a sweet minded woman on those around her that it is not to be overestimated. It is to her that friends come in seasons of sorrow and sickness for help and comfort. One sooth ing touch of her gentle hands will soothe orders in the feverish child; a few words let fall from her lips in the ear of a sorrow stricken sister do much to raise the load of grief that is bowing its victim down to the dust in anguish. The husband comes home worn out with the pressure of business and feeling irritable with the world in general, but gladly hushes the noisy sitting room and sees the blaze of fire and meets his wife's smiling face he succumbs in a moment to the soothing influences which will be the balm of Gilead to his wounded spirits that are wearied with the stern realities of life.

The busy schoolboy flies into a rage from the taunts of his companions to find solace in his mother's smile; the little one, full of grief with her large trouble, finds a haven of rest on the mother's breast; and one might go on with instance after instance of the influence that a sweet mind ed woman has in the social life with which she is connected. Beauty is an insignificant power when compared with hers.—Churchman.

Successful Men's Wives.

Did you ever see the wife of a successful man? I am tempted to ask, when some one points out to me the shining light of these two friends of mine. Is it that the men are brutal, ill tempered or exceptionally irritable; rather the reverse is true of them; they are reliable enough. Yet their unconquerable self absorption has made them anything but boon companions. The bubble they follow is ever dancing before their eyes; they are ever in pursuit in all its all, and life apart from that has lost its charm. Their wives share in the triumph, of course, and why should they complain? They do not. Like the Dutchman's wife upon her death bed, they are resigned because they have to be. It is only between the lines of their patient faces that one may read the wish for the heart of heart for the old days to come back when things were otherwise.—Scribner's.

Origin of the Princess Gown.

A basque nowadays is quite the worst enemy a woman has. If you have a basque in your possession the best thing you can do with it is to bury it, for it is entirely hoodcoed out of existence by the prettier and more favored princess gown. The princess gown has a history, a wild, weird and wonderful history, edging on to the romantic. It is said that in years gone by, when knights fought to the death for their ladies, when falcons carried love notes from sweetheart to maid and posey was in the air, a number of court ladies and gentlemen were stopping in an outlying French village on a journey, a relic, maybe, of the Emperor Louis XVI, some miles ahead. Having been delayed by accident and finding it impossible to proceed, the gentlemen had slim, or to the legend runs, willowy, like untrammeled grass weed growing in the meadows. He fell deeply in love with her. He married her. He took her to his palace. He would have her dress no differently from the day he met her, when she wore a straight clinging gown devoid of trimming, in the days ever since. Though the texture of her gowns were more elegant the style of her dress never changed. She became famous for her beauty of dress and form, and in the court of France the gown she wore was copied far and wide. It was called the princess dress, and has gone by that, appellation ever since.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Shearing the Royal Locks.

In some eastern countries children's hair is not cut until they are ten or twelve years of age, the girls then being considered marriageable. Up to that time it is coiled on the top of the head and adorned with fresh flowers. When the great day for cutting comes there is a grand ceremony and much feasting.

One who was present at a royal hair cutting tells us that the darling of the harem was robed in long, flowing garments of silk and lace, confined at the waist by a golden girdle. Her long hair, coiled for the last time, was fastened with diamond pins which gleamed and glittered among fresh white flowers and green leaves like pearly drops of morning dew.

There, in the presence of the ladies, her father and an officiating priest, supported by her maidens, some 300 in number, she knelt under a canopy of flowers and leaves while prayers were chanted.

Then the beautiful tresses being unbound, her royal father, dipping his fingers in rose water and drawing them carelessly over her head, clipped off about an eighth of an inch of hair and threw it into a golden basin, depositing at the same time on a great salver, placed ready to receive them, presents of jewels and gold.

The priest took the next piece, her mother the next, and so on, each guest serving in turn until the little lady was shorn.

All gave costly gifts intended for her marriage dower, princes, ministers of state and dignitaries of all sorts, who waited in the outer courts, sending in theirs by the attendants. The day ended in feasting and a display of fireworks.—Irish Times.

A Plea for Wooden Dishes.

Not infrequently we find ourselves at 8 o'clock in the evening wornout and feeling more like creeping into a quiet corner or enjoying a sent out of doors than fixing the debris from our 7 o'clock dinner; and how hard to resist the voice of the masculine tempter, urging us to "throw them until morning," when we know that tomorrow is already full to overflowing. We know of one young housekeeper who, in the earliest days of her married life, desiring to spend the day in rest and enjoyment of her husband's society, laid aside every dish used during Sunday, and Monday morning often found her with a load of tears at the unsympathetic state of the mountain of dirty china and glassware confronting her.

But one sister says we must have the adornment of silver and glassware. Well, then, let us have it. Rubbing once a week will suffice to keep silver presentable and a pan of hot water and soap will do for the glassware; but greasy plates and platters, dishes that have contained flour thickened sauces and sticky jellies, these three are the things that try our souls, and although silver and glass with wooden plates may seem incongruous, for such uses let us have them.

Won't some of our charitably disposed society for literary leaders make wooden dishes, or anything that may be used for fire kindlings, fashionable, that we lesser lights may follow on? It has long been customary to procure wooden pie plates from the baker for picnic purposes; why not make life one perpetual picnic?—Cor. Brooklyn Eagle.

Swiss Schoolgirls.

A writer in The Atlantic has this to say of Swiss schoolgirls: French and music being the chief ends of each girl's sojourn, there was no grind of college preparation. Nobody was studying for an examination. This prevented a certain strenuousness of tone and tensity of excitement which are apt to exist with us in the more earnest schools. On the other hand there was in the girls themselves none of that intellectual interest which we find among bright American girls who are pursuing classical studies together. They had among them selves no such eagerness of conversation; they did not appear to discuss the problems of life or to feel personally answerable for their conduct, and so compared with a set either of clever or of fashionable girls they seemed very young for their years, though in some instances very bright, and in an interesting way.

If the school had not the stamp of a college preparatory, neither had it the character of our fashionable institutions for young ladies. Careful attention was paid to instruction in manners and little niceties of social usage. The necessity for a woman of being womanly was frankly dwelt upon and taken for granted as a basis of action; but a trivial or petty view of things was strongly discouraged, and the whole tone of the household was that of rare simplicity and unworldliness.

How to Send Flowers by Mail.

Cut flowers are constantly sent through the mails, but seldom in such a fashion as to preserve their bloom and freshness. To effect this pack in a light wooden box, not using cardboard, line the box with wadding or cotton batting, laying over this a sheet of tissue paper; then lay the flowers, not on top of each other, but in rows side by side, the blossoms of each row on the stems of their neighbors; pack closely, otherwise the flowers will be displaced and injured in the journey. Before packing they should stand in water for several hours in order to absorb moisture enough to keep them from withering. It is not well to sprinkle them too heavily after they are in the box, for without air this is likely to produce mildew.—Hartford Courant.

Preserving Flowers and Ferns.

Take very fine sand, wash it perfectly clean and when dry sift it through a fine sieve into pots. When the sand is deep enough to hold the flowers in an upright position, take some more sifted sand and carefully cover them. A spoon is a good thing to take for this as it fills in every chink and cranny without breaking or bending the leaves. When the pan is filled solidly, leave the flowers in it for several days. It is a good plan to warm the sand in the oven before using it, as the flowers will then dry more thoroughly. In packing ferns or grass, care must be taken not to break the leaves, as they are now dry and brittle. Pansies preserved in this way will keep their shape and brilliancy of color all winter, according to the New York Tribune, and many other flowers can be equally successfully treated—anything, in fact, where the full pressure of the sand comes on both sides of the leaf, otherwise they will shrivel. To fill in flowers with cuplike shapes it is better to lay them on the sand and with a small spoon fill in and around each flower. Ferns when preserved in this way have a more natural look than when pressed, and the maidenhair fern looks almost as well as when it is freshly gathered.

Queen chains made of two inch links or fine gold connected by coral, pearls or onyx seem to imitate the long chains that are now worn in Paris.

A bracelet of blue enamel has the shape of a plain band bordered by a straight row of tiny diamonds. The fastening is a button in a gold bound barcnole.

Fob chains and chatelaines imitate the woven wire souvenir chains that come from Venice. These consist of squares of platinum and gold alternating.

Handsome Parasols.

Parasols used at fashionable summer resorts are things of beauty. Some are strewn with flowers, and nearly all trimmed with frills of gauze. The handles in many instances are of Dresden china or mother-of-pearl. One very elaborate parasol composed of white chiffon and lace is showered over with imitation diamonds. Another made of the same materials is adorned with two huge gold and white butterflies. A third has lilies of the valley strewn over it. A pretty parasol of light blue chiffon is decorated with festooned flounces and tiny bunches of forgetmenots. The newest on tourses have gold borders. A rather smart one of pink silk is bordered with spider's web lace.

BOROUGH COUNCIL.

THE REGULAR SEPTEMBER MEETING HELD LAST NIGHT.

The Plainfield Water Supply Company Granted a Franchise to Supply the Borough with Water for Fire Purposes.—Gov's Proposition Not Even Considered.

The borough Council met in adjourned session last evening. Mayor Place and Councilman Buckle, Hegeman, Hummer, Needham, Powell and Sebring responded to roll call.

Mr. Buckle from the Committee on Fire, Water and Lamps reported that Foreman Fairchild of Warren Engine Company had informed him that the money which had been earned by Warren Engine Company and which it was reported had been appropriated by several members of the Company was all right and would be placed in the proper funds.

Mr. Hegeman from the Special Committee appointed to consider the advisability of granting a franchise to the Plainfield Water Supply Company reported as follows:

GENTLEMEN:—Your Special Committee appointed to receive a communication from the Plainfield Water Supply Company, and to take such action thereon as the circumstances call for, beg to report as follows:

We met a committee of the Directors of the Plainfield Water Supply Company, consisting of Messrs. Bergen, Kean, Sanford Fope, on Friday evening, August 21st. At that meeting the subject of introducing water into the Borough for public and private use was very thoroughly discussed. The committee for the Plainfield Water Supply Company was requested to put their proposition for supplying water to the Borough for fire purposes, in writing. This request was complied with and the proposition is submitted with this report.

We would further state that your committee has carefully considered the question of the right of the Plainfield Water Supply Company to lay its pipes within the Borough limits and we find that by an Act of the Legislature of the State of New Jersey entitled, "An Act to supply the town of Plainfield, Union county, and towns adjoining, with water for public and private use," Approved April 2, 1869, and a supplement thereto, 1889 page 1318, it was provided, by Section 6 of said Act, as follows: "That the said Water Supply Company are hereby authorized and empowered to take water from any lake, pond, stream or spring within the county of Union, or adjoining counties, except the Rahway river and its branches; * * * and to store and convey such water by means of aqueducts, pipes, mains, reservoirs, and other suitable works and appliances, through the lands, streets and roads of the town or village of Plainfield and adjoining townships; also to take and hold any land or other property, and to exercise any power not inconsistent with the laws of this State, for carrying into full effect the purposes of this Act."

We further report that we have examined into the financial condition with a view of determining our ability to pay for hydrants for fire purposes, and as a result we find that a contract with the Mayor and Council that they enter into an agreement with the Plainfield Water Supply Company for said company to shall agree to furnish the Borough with water for fire purposes at the rate of $13 per hydrant per annum, the Borough to take four hydrants to the mile for the first year, with the liberty to add to that number, at the same rate, in the next succeeding two years as many more hydrants per year as may be found necessary and proper, considering the means available for defraying the consequent expense.

Your committee, in offering the above recommendation, deem it unnecessary to comment upon the almost total absence of any available water supply with which our Fire Department now has to contend; nor upon the fact, which seems patent to all, that every consideration of the security of the property and lives of our citizens makes it an imperative duty to provide, at the earliest possible moment, for such supply of water for fire purposes which the means at our command will permit. The Plainfield Water Supply Company is now an established fact, and can have their mains in operation through our streets within the next six weeks, and while there is talk of some other company which may at some indefinite future be able to furnish us with water, such a possibility will hardly justify us in neglecting the opportunity now offered, and your committee feels that the responsibility upon us is too great to be trifled with.

B. A. HEGEMAN, Jr.
L. A. HUMMER.

Mr. Buckle offered a resolution to the effect that the report be received and that the Mayor and Clerk be instructed to enter into contract with the Water Supply Company for four hydrants per mile for fire purposes.

Mr. Sebring said he thought it unnecessary to railroad the matter through and not give even Committee on Fire, Water and Lamps a chance. Continuing he said: "It is unjust to bring the matter up and then rush it through to-night without even considering it. Three-fourths of the citizens will protest against such action. There is a local company that will endeavor to establish a plant here and should be given a chance to be heard."

Mr. Hegeman—"Council does not wish to railroad the matter through without discussion. Mr. Sebring holds a petition from another company and if they do not report on it, we are not in a position to delay action in this matter one moment. The Water Supply Company with their force of men can give us water for fire purposes in a short time. Their men are now lying idle waiting for us to take action to-night. I would like to see the proposition discussed. I do not think it proper for the gentlemen to say we are trying to railroad the matter through. It is false. We do not try to railroad anything through this Council. Delay in the matter is very dangerous. We at present have no water to use in case of fire, and now we have a chance to secure hydrants, and we expect to pay for them with money derived from licenses."

Mr. Buckle—"Mr. Sebring is the last man in Council I should think who would make such a statement. We did not think he was trying to railroad the electric light contract through a short time ago. The gentlemen who composed the Water Supply Company are residents of this vicinity and I have more confidence in them than in strangers."

Mr. Sebring—"My position is just this—not to enter into contract at present. A number of taxpayers have asked me if Council would entertain a proposition from a local company who would locate a plant in the borough and sell it to borough if the company wished to buy it? I think it wise to allow the citizens to decide whether or not they want water-works."

Mr. Buckle—"Why haven't they submitted a proposition to Council. I think water works is just as necessary as electric lights. We have no personal interest in the matter. We are working for the best interest of the borough."

Mr. Needham—"There has been considerable talk about this matter already. We need water for fire purposes. We are in danger of a conflagration. We should have fire hydrants. This company is doing good work in Plainfield and I see no reason why we should try and prevent them from coming into the borough."

Mr. Hegeman stated that the company would lay pipes only in the thickly populated portions of the borough, about seven miles in all and there is to be four hydrants to the mile. We must provide some means of fire protection. They agree to pump right into the mains in case of fire. We have nothing to do with the individual supply.

Mr. Sebring—"If we accept this proposition, do we make a contract for one or ten years?"

Mr. Hegeman—"For ten years."

Mr. Sebring—"Have we a right to enter into a contract for ten years? If the borough saw fit to erect a water works of its own would it be right to have a ten years' contract hanging over our heads?" Mr. Sebring then moved that he contract be one year instead of ten.

Mayor Place declared the motion out of order.

Mr. Hummer—"I am satisfied that the committee looked into the matter thoroughly. When we get hydrants we will be in a better position to protect ourselves against fire. The Water Supply Company can come into the borough if they want to. We cannot prevent them, and a new company could not offer us any better advantages."

Mr. Sebring—"We should not rush the matter through. I think we should hold another meeting."

Mr. Buckle—"Mr. Sebring almost casts personal reflections. He seems to be under the impression that we want to railroad this matter through. Everybody I meet seems to be favorably impressed with the proposition. I don't know who he meets."

Mr. Hegeman: "There have been many references to our admirable Electric Light Company. We are here to represent the people honestly. We think we are able to cope with the water question. Our fellow-member is doing all he can to retard our progress. Has the work which was ordered done on the five wells been completed?"

Mr. Sebring—"No. The Committee have not decided which method to use in cleaning them. They can be put in proper shape in a short time."

Mr. Hegeman: "Will the clerk please refer to the minutes and tell me when the work was ordered done."

Clerk: "August 14th."

Mr. Hegeman: "I don't know who Mr. Sebring's constituents are. Let us have what little fire protection we have got. We want to get down to a little common sense. If our constituents have no faith in us they can take steps to have us removed. I see four additional lights here I never saw before. I have sickness at home and I want to get through here as soon as possible."

A vote was then taken and Mr. Buckle's resolution was adopted by 5 to 1. Mr. Sebring voting in the negative.

Mayor Place appointed Mr. Powell, the newly-elected member, on the Committee on Fire, Water and Lamps; Laws, Ordinances and Elections, and Licenses and Marshals. He is chairman of the Laws, Ordinances and Elections Committee.

The Council then went into executive sessions and appointed the following election officers:

REPUBLICANS—First District—John A. Goodwin and Elmer GaNun; Second District—Chas. F. Brown and C. W. Tallman.

DEMOCRATS—First District.—Benjamin Gavin and A. E. Kenney. Second District—Abraham Lane and David B. Linbarger. Adjourned.

H. WEST THE VICTOR.

He Wins the Singles at Tennis—The Doubles to be Decided Thursday.

The final in the singles of the Hillside Avenue Tennis Club Tournament between H. West and A. Cox was played off yesterday.

After the most brilliant plays on both sides H. West finally won.

The score was 2—6; 9—7; 6—2; 3—6, 9—7.

There was a difference of but one game in five sets.

There was a large attendance. The spectators were very enthusiastic.

The finals in doubles will be played off Thursday.

Killed An Opossum.

At about one o'clock yesterday morning Policeman Frederickson killed an opossum on West Front street near Jacobus's. Shortly afterwards a wagon loaded with hay en route for Newark passed. Unknown to the driver Mr. Frederickson threw the animal on top of the load of hay. The driver did not discover the animal until he arrived at his destination and then he was puzzled to know where it came from.

ST. JOHN LOST HIS HEAD.

MR. HUNTINGTON DISMISSED HIM AND RE SKIPPED TOWN.

He Had Done Nothing Wrong, Beyond Speculating, But His Sudden Resignation from the Church and the Y. M. C. A., at Plainfield Aroused Suspicion.—Simply Gone West.

[From the New York World.]

Edward St. John has been one of the best-known and most highly respected residents of North Plainfield. He has lived there for twenty years—ever since he reached manhood. His wife and his niece and heir of the late William McCutchen, and the couple with their children reside in Washington Park among the aristocrats of the Jersey suburb.

He is, or rather was, a deacon in the First Presbyterian Church and the Treasurer of the Young Men's Christian Association.

Mr. St. John's business was in New York. Up to the time that Fisk & Hatch, the bankers, went under he was employed there in a confidential capacity. After the failure Mr. Fisk gave St. John a very complimentary letter of introduction to C. P. Huntington. The latter was pleased with St. John's looks and gave him a responsible position in the Northern Pacific Railroad Company's office in the Equitable Building, New York.

There came rumors to Plainfield a week ago that Mr. St. John had lost his position and all his money through speculation in Wall street. Then he resigned his offices in the church and in the Y. M. C. A. and disappeared from view. A Plainfield newspaper printed a story to the effect that a prominent resident of Washington Park" was a defaulter and had absconded.

It is also known that the Y. M. C. A. were collecting a fund for a new $30,000 building, but the friends of Mr. St. John would not allow it to be said here that he was dishonest. The building fund is still intact and in the possession of Mr. H. Otis Newman, the treasurer. It has been decided to fill the vacancy caused by Mr. St. John's resignation.

A World reporter went to Plainfield yesterday and learned from a prominent resident of the intimate way with which Johns that Mr. St. John is in serious trouble, and that he is temporarily absent from Plainfield.

"But there has been nothing dishonest or criminal in his conduct," he said, "and his own course may at any time he wants to without fear of molestation. He has injured no one but himself and his family and he has the sympathy of his friends. He began speculating about a year ago. It was the first time he had done anything of the kind, and he used nobody's money but his own. The Y. M. C. A. building fund was in the hands of the Building Committee, of which he was a member. He could not have used it if he had wished to.

"When the crash came in Mr. St. John's financial affairs he lost his head. He was asked to resign his position by Mr. Huntington, not because he had been dishonest but because it is a rule with Mr. Huntington that his confidential clerks or agents must not speculate. Having resigned his business position, Mr. St. John came home and insisted on resigning his social position, even to his membership in his church. That is altogether unnecessary. The Y. M. C. A. in accepting his resignation as Treasurer passed some resolutions highly complimentary to him.

"The way Mr. St. John came to leave town so suddenly was this: He learned of a position in Denver, Col., which he could fill. To secure it necessitated his presence in that city at the earliest possible moment. He and his wife have exchanged letters since his arrival there, but I don't know whether or not he has been given the employment he sought. If he has, the chances are that he had to away so abruptly, as it created suspicion and the unpleasant talk among those who did not know him."

The Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. in Plainfield corroborated all that had been told the reporter.

Mr. St. John, so far as can be learned, has no creditors in Plainfield. He always paid his bills monthly. He is supposed to have lost about $10,000. He still owns his Plainfield property, although it is said to be mortgaged.

TO CONTEST HER HUSBAND'S WILL.

Mr VanZandt, of Plainfield, Claims She Was Unjustly Treated.

The will of the late Thaddeus Avery VanZandt, who died in this city Aug. 8th and was buried in Trinity churchyard, is to be contested by the widow.

The exact value of the estate is not known, but it includes property at Ocean Grove and considerable property in this city, and is placed at the sum of $250,000. During his lifetime Mr. VanZandt had a life interest in valuable property in Brooklyn, but this reverted at his death to Mrs. Henry Duplon, of Woodland avenue, who was a daughter by his first wife.

About a year ago Mr. VanZandt deeded his Ocean Grove property to his second wife and made a will bequeathing his entire estate to her. Her subsequent action towards himself and children, it is said, caused him to make a new will about a month before his death, in which only one-third of the estate is left to her, the balance to the children. The guardianship of the children is left to Miss Lou VanZandt, the eldest daughter by the second wife. Mrs. VanZandt has been living apart from the family for for some time at Ocean Grove. She protests that her husband was not of sound mind when the will was made and that undue influence was used by the daughters. She therefore claims the entire estate and the guardianship of the children. Six children are living.

Why Can't This Be Attended To?

Many new and well-made houses are now being built on Harrison street, from Watson avenue, south to Plainfield, which, together with those built during the past two years, have greatly improved that portion of the borough, but the people complain about the very poor roads they have, which are so bad as to be impassable for teams. There are gullies three and four feet deep in the middle of the road way, and running the entire length of the street, making it so dangerous that merchants won't run their wagons there, and in winter the residents thereabouts have great difficulty getting coal. Still they pay their share of the borough taxes. This matter should be attended to by the authorities.

Sunday School Convention.

The thirty-second annual convention of the Somerset County Sunday-school Association was held in the Warren Mission chapel yesterday. The session began in the morning at 10:45 o'clock and continued both afternoon and evening, and was one of the most successful ever held by the association. One hundred and fifty delegates were present. Every township but one in Somerset county being represented. Mayor Place of the borough delivered the address of welcome. The address of the president, the Rev. Wm. Trumbower, is very highly spoken of. The Rev. Dr. Yerkes of this city also delivered a very interesting address. He took for his subject 'The Word of God." One of the pleasant features of the meeting was the question box. The address of the Rev. Addison Clark is spoken highly of. The following gentlemen took part:

Mayor Charles Place, Rev. Wm. M. Trumbower, Rev. S. W. Clark, Rev. Addison Parker, Rev. Dr. Yerkes, Rev. F. A. Mason, Rev. J. P. Searle and others.

PERSONAL.

Miss Julia Johnson of Newark, formerly of this city, started to-day for Orangeburg, South Carolina, where she expects to remain the Winter.

Edith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Glaentzer of New street, while playing on Boynton Avenue this afternoon fell and fractured her collar-bone.

Nelson M. Colthar has a jar of peaches that were canned 24 years ago, and they are still in prime condition. The peaches were purchased by him from Mr. Israel Coddington, father of Lawyer Wm. A. Coddington of this city. The peaches were preserved with others, and now that Mr. Coddington and Mrs. Colthar have both passed away, Mr. Colthar values them highly as a keepsake. The Chronicle was almost afraid to handle the jar, but, being promised, should the can be oped, a taste of the juice contained therein, which by this time is rare peach brandy.—Bound Brook Chronicle.

A Casino Hop Last Night.

An informal hop was given at the Casino last evening, and was well attended by the usual class of young people who manage to make these affairs so pleasant. The music for the occasion was under the direction of Prof. Conde. Mr. George Rogers presided at the piano. Refreshments were served, and the affair concluded at midnight. Among those present were Miss Hart, Miss Streull, Miss Stewart, Miss Corlies, Miss Yates, Miss Murphy, Miss Taylor, Miss Ward, Miss Warman, and Messrs. Gilbert, Stewart, Yates, Raymond, Moore, Murphy, Munger and Cooley.

JERSEY HAS GOOD CROPS.

Prices Are Called "Low," but the Farmers Have Plenty to Sell.

The observers and crop correspondents of the New Jersey State Weather Service report for the week during Friday, Sept. 4, 1891, that the temperature and rainfall have been about the average, and that the sunshine has been abnormally deficient, cloudy and foggy weather generally prevailing.

These conditions have been very unfavorable to peaches, tomatoes and melons, causing the two former to crack badly, as well as retarding ripening, and the latter to decay somewhat.

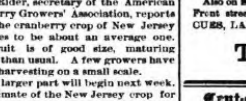
The excessive rains of the previous weeks, together with the prevailing moist and cloudy conditions of the present week, having greatly hindered the digging of potatoes. Fall ploughing and the seeding of wheat and rye.

Corn and grapes continue in a most promising condition, and with a little more favorable weather the corn crop will be one of the best known in years. Grapes have ripened so rapidly that they will be ready to cut for market the coming week.

A. J. Rider, secretary of the American Cranberry Growers' Association, reports that "the cranberry crop of New Jersey promises to be about an average one. The fruit is of good size, maturing earlier than usual. A few growers have begun harvesting on a small scale.

"The larger part will begin next week. My estimate of the New Jersey crop for 1891, as reported in August report of the American Cranberry Growers' Association, is 218,000 bushels."

The general outlook, on the whole, is certainly a bright one for the farmers of New Jersey, and although the yield of all crops is so abundant that prices rule low, yet the total sum realized will be a remunerative one.



The regular business meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be held in the rooms Thursday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

—A regular meeting of the Plainfield Bicycle Club will be held on Monday, Sept. 14th, at eight o'clock p. m. in Club House.

—It was reported on the streets this morning that a driver in the employ of a local firm was swamped with $36 of his employer's money.

—The thirteenth annual re-union of the Fourteenth Regiment, New Jersey Volunteers, will be held at Perth Amboy on Thursday, September 17th.

—One of the delivery wagons belonging to Mr. Frank Linke's bottling establishment, was upset near Fanwood last evening and Mr. Charles Godown the driver was painfully injured about the head.

—Mr. McGrath, the Irish comedian and clog dancer, was presented with a handsome silver cane by his friends in this city last Saturday evening. Mr. McGrath is said to be one of the best comedians in the business.

—The homestead of the late George Townley at 21 Grandview avenue will be sold at public auction to-morrow at ten o'clock a. m. The sale will take place at the Crescent Hotel.

—"All the Comforts of Home" were shown at Music Hall last evening, although the new managers were unable to complete in time the alterations intended to improve the theatre and make it more attractive in appearance. Enough was done to give an idea of the effect of the alterations, and the comments were generally favorable. The play last night is a well-known comedy, and it was well presented by an excellent company who succeeded in keeping the audience laughing almost continuously from beginning to end.

—Mr. A. M. Seguine, the liveryman, through his counsel, Mr. William A. Coddington, this morning served a writ of execution on Mr. Joseph M. Miller, the proprietor of the Elsmere, for a debt of $160. At noon Mr. Miller settled the claim, and he is now conducting his business as usual. Mr. Miller says it was unjust to force him to pay the claim in full, as it was contracted while he was in partnership with his brothers and he thought they should be compelled to pay one-half. He states further that the matter will not in anyway interfere with his business.

—There should be a general waking up all over the borough in regard to the maintenance of plain and truthful fingerposts. The present law does not seem to meet the requirements, and something should be done this Fall to remedy the existing evils. The State can well be proud of the maps its roads are being bettered every year, and it should be an easy matter to evolve some intelligent system of pointing the way and giving the true distance to the traveler. There is good reason why the Centre Costa, Cal., system of numbering should not be adopted in a state so compact as New Jersey.

It's so easy to make it, there's really no excuse for not using Knapp's Root Beer Extract. A glass of delicious Root Beer in five minutes. Adv.

AN ORDINANCE

Dividing the Borough of North Plainfield into two Election Districts.

Whereas, The Borough of North Plainfield, as manifested at the last borough election held therein, contains more than one hundred voters; now, therefore,

SECTION 1. The Borough of North Plainfield is hereby divided into two election districts, to be known and designated as the First Election District of the Borough of North Plainfield, and the Second Election District of the Borough of North Plainfield.

SECTION 2. The First Election District shall comprise and include all that portion of the territory contained in that portion of the borough, situate on the north side of an imaginary line beginning at the centre of stony Brook to the centre of Rockview avenue, thence along the centre of Rockview avenue to the centre of Mercer avenue, thence along the centre of Grove street to the centre of Somerset street, thence along the centre of Somerset street to the centre of Madison avenue, thence along the centre of Madison avenue to the centre of Warren street, thence along the centre of Warren street to the centre of Richmond street, thence along the centre of Richmond street to the centre of Green Brook and thence to the centre of Green Brook and stony Brook.

SECTION 3. The Second Election District shall include all the territory and inhabitants of the borough not included in the First Election District, and the polling place of the latter district shall be on the northerly side of the Somerset street bridge.

SECTION 4. This ordinance shall take effect on the fifth day of September, A. D., 1891.

CLEVELAND AND JONES.

New York's Lieutenant Governor Issues a Warning.

IT CONCERNS THE FIGHT OF 1892.

And It Also Has to Do with the Aspirations of Mr. Roswell P. Flower and Edward F. Jones for the Governorship of the Empire State.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Sept. 9.—The Hus bandman contains the following open letter:

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Sept. 8.

Hon. Grover Cleveland New York:

DEAR SIR—Excuse my addressing you through the press, but as the subject would seem to me in which the public is greatly interested I deem it proper to do so.

It is understood that you are a candidate for the presidential nomination in 1892. This renders it not only proper but incumbent upon you to take all honorable means to protect your interests, and prevent your friends from complicating you in alliances which may result to their benefit, but to your injury. Your political interest in our state campaign and are freely using your name in their support of Mr. Flower and his views.

His views as a presidential candidate rest in your strength with the masses the wage workers, the toilers and producers. They are a large majority of the people of this country, and they are not in sympathy with the class of people who are the supporters of Governor Flower. The movement "along the line" manifesting itself in alliances, leagues, various combinations and organizations as well as the free expression of the people in "daily talk," is a protest against the aggressive power of wealth, now accompanying its purpose by the free use in debauching the political morals of the people. Yours truly,

EDWARD F. JONES.

Will Mr. Jones Run?

ALBANY, Sept. 9.—Lieutenant Governor Jones was closeted with a number of representatives of farmers' organizations in this city Monday night and a long conference was held. It is impossible to learn definitely what was discussed, but the general opinion is that Mr. Jones is quietly paving the way to an independent nomination, whatever may have said to the contrary.

Secretary Proctor Accepts.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 8.

DEAR SIR—I take this, my first opportunity to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 20th ult. in which you state your purpose to appoint me the successor of the Hon. George F. Edmunds in the United States senate upon his retirement on Nov. 1 next. In informing you of my intention to accept the same, I desire to express my high appreciation of the great honor which you do me by the tender of this the most important appointment which the chief executive of a state can be called upon to make. It is also gratifying to be assured by you that, besides the warmth of your own judgment, you believe this selection meets the wishes of a large majority of the people of Vermont. The confidence which they have therefore shown in me has encouraged me in every position in the public service to which I have been called. Without their confidence I should not care to be even senator from Vermont in the senate of the United States, a position which has been unique by reason of the ability and influence of the representatives of our state in that body.

Among them there have been none more distinguished than he who, after a service of a quarter of a century, has felt obliged in justice to himself and family to relinquish his great trust. To succeed him is a responsibility which I shall assume with due weight, but the people of Vermont are always reasonable in their expectations. They have a right to expect, however, that I will endeavor to perform it with faithfully and earnestly perform every duty which may become incumbent on me, and this I promise to do. Yours very truly,

REDFIELD PROCTOR.

Delaware's State Alliance.

HARRINGTON, Del., Sept. 9.—The organization of the State Farmers' Alliance was completed at Harrington by the election of the following officers: W. W. Morris, president; W. E. Killen, vice president; J. P. Kelly, secretary; Alexander Fluton, state lecturer; Hon. J. F. Poole, chaplain. The delegates declare that the Alliance is not a political body. This is the sixth state alliance that has been formed.

A resolution was adopted indorsing the Alliance platform adopted at Ocala, and also accepting and indorsing the demands made in that platform.

Allison Applauds Blaine.

CHEROKEE, Ia., Sept. 9.—Senator W. B Allison opened the Republican campaign in this city. The McKinley bill, he said, though not perfect, was the best tariff law ever enacted by congress, and was proving to be a most beneficial law for the people.

The reciprocity feature has already opened the markets of three countries to us, and it had effected an entrance into France and Germany and Great Britain. For this feature of the bill we were entitled to honor that wise statesman, James G Blaine. The mention of Blaine's name received loud and continuous applause.

It May Be Clarkson.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—There is a renewal here of the talk of Colonel Clarkson for the vacant department. Precisely upon what it is founded is not clear, but the politicians assert that he is a factor in the calculation about a successor to Mr. Proctor.

A Hurricane's Havoc at Halifax.

HALIFAX, N. S., Sept. 9.—Further damage by the hurricane is reported. The Halifax half of the Intercolonial railway bridge across Halifax harbor was blown down and is now floating in the harbor. It was a mile in length and cost $100,000. The West India steamer Alpha broke from her dock and badly damaged the schooner Carrie E. The schooner Annie simpson was driven against the schooner J. W. Crossley, with $3,000 worth of live stock aboard, was sunk at her wharf, and the schooners Salvador and Fannie were stranded on the Dartmouth side of the harbor.

Colonel Sinn Sued by a Count.

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—Count Eugen Lo gotheth, a member of one of the most distinguished families of Hungary, has brought suit for $5,000 damages against Colonel Sinn, promoter of the Brooklyn theater. The count states that on April 8 he was forcibly ejected from the lobby of the theater, where he was standing, waiting for a friend who was purchasing tickets. He resisted the expulsion and was arrested and confined in a cell at a police station until the next morning, when the Austrian consul general, Mr. Politchek,

Hon. W. L. Scott Failing.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 9.—A special dispatch to the Times from Washington says: Ex-Congressman William L. Scott is in a very critical condition. There is no doubt that Mr. Scott is failing rapidly.

VICTORY FOR THE MINERS.

A Resolution Against the Sublease Convict System Adopted at Nashville.

NASHVILLE, Sept. 9.—During the present session of the legislature the right of the lessees of the state prison to sublet convicts has been discussed. A committee was appointed to wait upon Attorney General Pickle and secure his opinion. The report of the committee, accompanied by the opinion, was submitted to the house. The substance of the opinion is this:

In the act authorizing the lease there is no direct nor indirect allusion to the giving to the lessees of the power to sublet. If such power exists it exists as an unlimited power, which would probably not be a safe admission. It is safe, however, to infer, in the absence of such expressed authority, that the legislature did not intend to confer such power. The opinion is that the lessees, without express authority of the general assembly, may not sublet the convicts.

Mr. Johnson at once introduced a resolution instructing the state board of prison inspectors to consider all convicts now sublet to be returned to the main prison or to prisons owned by the lessees themselves. The resolution was discussed at length. Mr. Hall said that the trouble at Briceville was a result not of the lease system, but of the sublease system. He hoped the resolution would be adopted.

It was developed that the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad company had sublet its convicts. Mr. Ledgerwood spoke against the resolution, saying that he did not know, and the house did not know, that a prisoner in Tennessee had been sublet.

The resolution was adopted by a vote of 66 to 21. The resolution will now go to the senate.

IN ONLY TWENTY DAYS.

A Great Mail Record from Yokohama to England.

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—A cablegram from Queenstown announces the arrival there of the steamship City of New York at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon. She was 6 days, twenty-two hours and fifty minutes crossing the Atlantic, equaling the fastest passage ever made from New York to Queenstown.

The City of New York had on board the famous record beating Japanese mail that the Empress of India, the Canadian Pacific Railroad company and the New York Central Railroad company brought from Yokohama to this city in fourteen days. The letters contained in these mail bags were in this city ten days before the usual time for the arrival of the Japanese mail.

MONTREAL, Sept. 9.—At the National Electrical convention General Hornby, secretary of the electrical division of the Chicago World's fair, said he had been delegated to explain to the convention the tentative plans of the proposed exhibit. He said electricity would play an important part in the exposition. A separate building would be devoted to electrical exhibits, and all the power required for the exhibition could be provided by electricity. The president appointed the following World's fair committee: Messrs. Sonney, of Chicago; Coleman, of St. Louis; Park, of New Orleans; Rice, of Washington, and Prese, of New York.

Seligman on the Hirsch Fund.

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—Jesse Seligman, one of the trustees of the Baron Hirsch fund, said today: "Not one dollar of the Baron Hirsch fund has been used to pauperize labor or to bring over penniless emigrants. It is largely used to educate the children and to forward deserving Hebrews to various parts of the country. We have aided no paupers to come to this country. The money is used here for the assistance of those who have already arrived."

Mme. Astic to Marry.

DENVER, Sept. 9.—The notorious Mme. Astic, now in the hands of the law because her lover, W. A. Anthony, in order to get rid of her vile behavior, gave her to the officer a clew that led to her arrest, is about to close that gentleman's mouth by having a matrimonial ceremony performed between them. In this state a husband cannot testify against his wife. There is evidence enough apart from that of Anthony to convict her.

Rich Suture of Clothing.

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—Seven trunks containing valuable cloaks, silk, satin and lace dresses, gloves, etc., valued at $15,000, have been seized on the steamers Elder and La Touraine. They belonged to Mrs. E. Mulvaney, of New York; Mrs. Astic and Mme. Mulvaney, of Louisville, Ky., and Mrs. Boyd, a dressmaker in Minneapolis. The garments seized were marked with the names of the customers for whom they were imported.

The Mystery of a Hollow Tree.

NORWELL, Mass., Sept. 9.—Two ladies saw a man emerge from the inside of a hemlock tree in the woods near Edwin Jacob's house. The man fled when he was spied them. An investigation showed that the tree was hollow and was large enough for three persons to live in. A large amount of stolen goods, etc., was found in the place. The man had long hair. The woods have been searched, but no trace of him could be found.

To Depose Mad King Otto.

LONDON, Sept. 9.—A Munich dispatch says that Prince Leopold Regent Luitpold have had a conference on the subject of the deposition of the insane King Otto and the assumption by Luitpold of the crown of Bavaria. The advices state that the friendly reception of the kaiser in Bavaria has not made a pleasant impression. The French have until now regarded Bavaria as an unwilling member of the German empire.

Contract Labor Importers Arrested.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—The treasury department is informed of the arrest in Chicago by Inspectors Stiles and Fleming of A. P. T. Eider and H. L. Barber, comprising the Elder Publishing company, of that city. They were engaged in the wholesale importation of laborers from Canada. The arrests are regarded as very important.

Escaped from Sing Sing.

SING SING, N. Y., Sept. 9.—Louis Deluca, aged thirty-five years, an Italian life man in Sing Sing prison, escaped from that institution yesterday. He was locked up with his fellow prisoners and stowed himself away. He was not missed until 10 o'clock.

Ex-Senator Platt's Wife Ill.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Sept. 9.—Ex-Senator Thomas C. Platt, who is here to attend the Republican state convention, has received a cablegram informing him of the serious illness of his wife in Ostend, Belgium.

TO LEAD REPUBLICANS.

Delegates Battling Over the Ticket at Rochester.

J. SLOAT FASSETT FOR GOVERNOR.

The Indications Seem to Be That He Will Head the New York State Forces. Philip Becker, of Buffalo, Wants First Place or None at All.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Sept. 9.—The Republican state convention is being held in this city today. James M. Varnum, of New York, is the choice of the Republican leaders for permanent chairman. Both ex-Mayor Philip Becker, of Buffalo, and General Wadsworth have declined to withdraw from the contest for the governorship and take the second place on the ticket and the nomination for lieutenant governor will probably go to Albert Einstein.

The action of General Wadsworth was the first check to the Fassett boom, because Fassett has been carrying everything before him with such confidence that his friends had discussed the possibility of nominating him by acclamation. However they are not greatly discouraged by this, and they endeavored to keep up the Fassett enthusiasm in spite of the combination with Wadsworth. Before the arrival of the Becker delegation from Buffalo State Senator Laughlin, Mr. Becker's right hand man, finally settled the question of Mr. Fassett's nomination by acclamation. He said that the talk of Becker as a candidate for lieutenant governor was without authority; that Mr. Becker was in the contest for governor and would remain.

J. SLOAT FASSETT.

Mr. Platt Says "Fassett."

The United Press correspondent says that Mr. Platt said this morning: "There is now little doubt of Mr. Fassett's nomination. It seems to be conceded. Mr. Wadsworth won't take the lieutenant governorship. Mr. Becker can have it if he wants it. It is not settled that Mr. Einstein will be controller. John W. Vrooman can have the secretaryship of state if he wants it. William A. Sutherland will probably be attorney general and General Hedges will probably be nominated for treasurer. I don't know what the platform will do about the high license question. No one can tell yet. The administration will, of course, be heartily indorsed. Blaine and reciprocity will receive commendation. I don't know that the electrocution question will come up in the convention."

Gibbs Wants Fassett, Too.

Ex-Senator Gibbs said today that he was for Fassett. "The party is united," he added, "and determined to win. I think Mr. Platt's only object is to secure the nomination of a ticket that will succeed at the polls. With a man like Fassett at the head of the ticket there will be no chance for suspicion that the candidate will be misled for the legislature. Fassett is a good man and can be elected."

Will Mr. White Withdraw?

It is said that Senator Platt has been expected to receive a message from D. White containing his withdrawal from the race for governor. The letter had not reached Mr. Platt up to an early hour this morning. Mr. Fassett's adherents prophesy his nomination by acclamation. Supporters of Philip Becker are doing their utmost to concentrate the field against the young Elmiran, and at least make a big demonstration on the first ballot. Mr. Fassett's admirers say nothing but an earthquake can prevent his triumph.

The Probable Ticket.

Those who claim to know say that this is the ticket most likely to be nominated today:

For Governor—J. Sloat Fassett, of Chemung; for Lieutenant Governor—George B. Sloan, of Oswego; for Secretary of State—John W. Vrooman, of Herkimer Controller — Edward Einstein, of New York; Attorney General — William A. Sutherland, of Monroe; State Treasurer—Ira M. Hedges, of Rockland; State Engineer and Surveyor—Verplank Colvin, of Albany.

Sloan Was Unwilling.

Senator Sloan reached here last night, and after conferring with ex-Senator Platt, Senators Hiscock and Hendricks, ex-Congressman Burleigh, John W. Vrooman, Richard Marsh and Collector Fassett said he was unwilling to run for lieutenant governor, but would abide by the decision of the delegates. It is believed that he will accept the nomination.

Hiscock for Fassett.

Senator Frank Hiscock said this morning that Mr. Fassett would probably be nominated for governor. The place will probably go to one of the defeated candidates for governor. At 1 a. m. Mr. Sloan said positively to a reporter that he had declined the nomination for lieutenant governor. When this became known to the Platt people they offered the nomination to Becker. At the same time the Warner Miller people suggested Vrooman But the Erie county people who are very angry about the Fassett combination declined to compromise, and Mr. Vrooman, it is understood, will not be persuaded This leaves the lieutenant governorship in doubt.

The Becker people are here in force, however, and will make a strong fight for their man.

THE MAYOR IS SORRY NOW.

Newcastle's Executive Got Into a Fight and Will Fine Himself.

NEWCASTLE, Pa., Sept. 9.—Mayor John B. Brown engaged in a street fight Monday and knocked down J. E. Leslie, editor of The Sunday Graphic, for having published certain articles reflecting on the Rev. Mr. Sqneir, of whose church Mayor Brown is a leading member. Interest in the affair is heightened by the issue of the following card, by Mayor Brown:

TO THE CITIZENS OF NEWCASTLE—Realizing the disgrace brought upon myself and the city by my conduct in the assault made by me on E. E. Leslie on Monday, I wish in this public manner to confess that I committed a sin against God, a crime against the laws of the commonwealth and city ordinances, and a wrong against Mr. Leslie which even the publication of the articles complained of does not have appeared in The Graphic during the past ten months will not justify, and especially in one holding the responsible position of chief executive of the city and an office bearer in a Christian church. I have earnestly asked God's forgiveness and in contrite humility and humble ask the forgiveness of the citizens of Newcastle. I have authorized the chief of police to see that I pay the penalty for violation of my ordinances and I fully expect and readily concede Mr. Leslie's right to proceed against me under the ordinances of the city. In the meantime I again ask his forgiveness, notwithstanding the oft repeated and in my judgment unealled for provocation. Secretly and in the depths of my own heart that in the heat of passion and on the spur of the moment I made such a grave error. Yours, respectfully, JOHN B. BROWN.

A GERMAN COUNT'S CRIME.

He Kills His Wife and Then Takes His Own Life.

TOPEKA, Kas., Sept. 9.—Gustav Berger, a German, and his wife, Johanna, quarreled at breakfast over money matters. Berger finally seized his revolver and shot her in the head, instantly killing her. He then turned the pistol upon himself and blew out his brains.

Berger was a German count and forty-six years of age. His wife was twenty-six and remarkably pretty. Berger had frequently exhibited letters to his friends which proved him to be a count. He was expecting a large inheritance. He was a man of violent temper.

The Shenandoah Church War.

SHENANDOAH, Pa., Sept. 9.—The warring factions of the Greek Catholic church here have combined and resolved to oust Rev. Andruk oviono, the parish priest. The latter has been appointed by the Archbishop of Lemberg, Galicia, but refuses to surrender until he is paid $1,900 which he claims he invested in the church property. He has sealed a corpse in the church and armed with Winchester rifles, and declares he will hold the church, come what may.

Five Firemen Burned.

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—The immense five story storage warehouse of R. C. Layton, at 65 and 67 South street, was gutted by fire. Five firemen were burned, two of them seriously. At least fifty business houses had goods on storage in the building, and among the losers are druggists' chemicals, drugs, jute, teas, spices, shellac and a variety of general merchandise. The loss is estimated by R. C. Layton at $250,000.

A Woman's Triple Crime.

VAUGHAN, Miss., Sept. 9.—Mary Coleman, residing on the Lamb plantation, arose early in the morning and killed with her husband's brains with a gun. She then picked up her two-year-old son, took him to a creek near by and drowned the boy and herself. The woman is supposed to have been insane.

A Bright Girl's Suicide.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—A disappointed office seeker—a bright and well educated young woman at that—committed suicide here last evening. She was Mary M. Sims, who was known as Mrs. Nannie Sims Brown, at 1,403 New York avenue. Miss Sims was twenty years old. She used a razor.

Was Porter Murdered?

SUDBURY, Mass., Sept. 9.—The mysterious death yesterday of Charles W. Porter will be investigated. Porter was brought to the Marlboro police station dead by a companion, who says that Porter had been violently ill. The deceased leaves a widow and three children.

Redmen at Cleveland.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 9.—The forty-fifth annual council of the Improved Order of Redmen is in session here. Great chiefs and other representatives to the number of 125 are present. The sessions are expected to continue until Friday.

In Honor of the Czar.

PARIS, Sept. 9.—A general rehearsal of "Lohengrin" was held last night. It will probably be produced on Friday in honor of the czar.

AN EIGHT HOUR WORKDAY

Favored by the Newcastle Trades Union Congress.

EQUAL PAY FOR WOMEN LABORERS.

The Delegates Will Not Toast the Royal Family, but Will Drink to the Health of "The Queen and the Country"—The Strike and Its Uses.

NEWCASTLE, Sept. 9.—The proceedings of the Trades Union congress now in session here, and representing the interests of over 1,500,000 skilled and unskilled workmen of Great Britain, are attracting widespread attention. In some quarters the congress is termed "The Workmen's Parliament," and the movement is looked upon as likely to lead to important political results. Princess Beatrice, Lady Dilke, wife of Sir Charles Dilke, Mr. Thomas Potter (Radical reformer), M. P. for Rochdale; Sir John Gorst, M. P. for Chatham and parliamentary secretary of the India office, and other members of parliament were present at the opening of the congress.

Ben Tillett's Scheme.

During the course of the session "Ben" Tillett, the Labor leader, will bring forward a resolution favoring the creation of a state board of arbitration, with the view of preventing strikes and settling labor disputes between the workmen and their employers.

The Eight Hour Question.

In all directions a keen canvass for votes is being made on the question of an eight hour workday and as to whether eight hours, if adopted as the limit of a day's work, shall be made a legal day's work and compulsory, or whether it shall be left to local trade option. The Miners' Federation is supposed to favor a compulsory eight hour law, and the National Miners' union is understood to be opposed to it.

An International Short Day.

A resolution in favor of an international eight hour law was carried by a vote of 82 to 163 amid great cheering.

The resolution declares that the British government should endeavor to bring about such a law in conjunction with all foreign governments, and demands that an international conference be convoked for the purpose.

Equal Pay for Women.

The president of the congress, Mr. Thomas Burt, M. P., in his opening address congratulated the congress upon being the largest body of representatives of trades unions so to meet in any part of the world. He also said that he was glad to see that women's unions were so largely represented at the congress, as the women needed more organizing than the men.

He expressed the opinion that wherever women did the same work in quantity and quality as men they ought to ask the same pay as the men, and the latter ought to support them in their demands. [Loud applause.]

The Strike as a Boomerang.

Continuing, Mr. Burt predicted that as the trades unions grew stronger, strikes would diminish in number and in importance. A strike, he said, was always an ugly weapon with which to enforce claims. A strike, in fact, he declared, was "like a boomerang, which, if not skillfully thrown, comes back and wounds the thrower!" Still, Mr. Burt admitted, strikes were necessary when the blindness and deafness of Mammon obliged workmen to stop the wheels."

Referring to arbitration as a means of settling disputes between employer and employe Mr. Burt said: "Where arbitration affords a chance of arriving at a settlement it is criminal to strike." [Applause.]

It Would Lead to Disaster.

Touching upon the subject of state legislation in regard to workmen, their manner of employment and their hours of labor, Mr. Burt believed that self help was the best solution for existing social problems and declared that, in his opinion, advocacy of the suggestion that the state should be the protancer and employer of labor would lead to disaster if applied. He reminded the delegates that an important problem for workmen now to do is over some means which would bring about a better distribution of wealth, and so raise themselves in humanity, material well being and the nobility of character.

The Queen and the Country.

The committee of arrangements had a serious dispute and some warm exchanges of views over the toasts which are to be proposed at the banquet.

Some of the most loyal of the committee proposed that the time honored toast, "The Queen and the Royal Family," should be drunk. To this proposition there was considerable opposition. Some of the committeemen were not in favor of drinking to the royal family, though they raised no objection to the queen.

Upon reflection, however, the committee agreed that "The Queen and the Country" should be the loyal toast.

The Government Accused.

The parliamentary committee's report, which has just been issued, sets forth that it is to be regretted that the government has given a considerable balance of power to capital in the appointment of the royal labor commission.

The report holds that, in so giving the balance in favor of capital, the government is willfully biasing the inquiry now in progress upon the side of the employers of labor.

Nine Persons Poisoned.

BELLEVILLE, Kas., Sept. 9.—Nine people of this place are at the point of death as the result of having partaken of poison in the food served at dinner at the home of George Gregg. Mr. Gregg and his family are highly respected in the community and it is probable the poisoning was accidental. There are those, however, who believe it was deliberately planned with criminal intent.

The National Commission Adjourns.

CHICAGO, Sept. 9.—At the session of the national commission of the World's fair President Palmer appointed permanent commissioners on legislation who are to go before congress and make arrangements for the $5,000,000 loan, and such other matters as may be suggested in connection with the World's fair. The commission then adjourned until the first Wednesday in next April.

To Investigate Rev. Bausman.

ROCKSPRING, Pa., Sept. 8.—At the meeting of Allegheny Presbytery, held at Leetsdale, Pa., a committee was appointed to investigate the Rev. Mr. Bausman's loyalty to the doctrines of the Presbyterian church. The Rev. Bausman is an earnest supporter of "The Dr. Briggs Doctrine."

Bicyclists at Hartford.

HARTFORD, Sept. 9.—The bicycle races drew a crowd of about 7,000 people to Charter Oak park Tuesday afternoon.

The half mile safety, National League of American Wheelmen championship, was won by A. A. Zimmerman, of New York Athletic club, in 1m. 32 1-5s., making the best quarter in 30½ seconds, breaking the world's record of 30 4-5 seconds. Berlo, of Boston, came in second, with W. F. Murphy third. The two mile, safety, 5m. 49s. class, was won by Fred. C. Barnes, of Springfield. Time, 5m. 32 1-5s. The one mile open ordinary was won by Zimmerman. Time, 2m. 41 1-5s. The one mile tandem safety race was won by Banker and Brinker, of Buffalo, in 2m. 49 2-5s. The one mile ordinary handicap was won by H. A. Githens, of Chicago, in 2m. 39 1-5s.

The one mile safety handicap was very interesting from the fact that the best riders in the country were engaged. The final heat was won by G. M. Worden, of the Manhattan club, in 2m. 37 3-5s. He had a forty yards start. Windle was second.

In the quarter mile safety race Berlo broke the world's record in competition, making the quarter in 30 4-5 s. Zimmerman equaled the same time in the last heat of the same race. The world's record for a running quarter mile was lowered by Zimmerman in the last quarter of the half mile safety race from 30 4-5 to 29 4-5.

Members' Fast Mile.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 9.—At the annual fall meeting of the Cleveland Driving association Moubars, the sensational 3-year-old Kentucky colt, had an easy task to win the 3-year-old stake. He trotted a fine mile and the show of speed that he made, 2:22½, induced the association to offer a special purse on the spot if he would trot to beat Sunol's 5-year-old record. It was not deemed advisable to accept. Ferndale, a yearling by Semicolon, trotted a quarter in 36 seconds, a 2:24 gait.

Victorious Yachts at Marblehead.

MARBLEHEAD, Mass., Sept. 9.—In the yacht race for 30 square meter sloops and sewing the Volunteer was not seriously, but the Genone probably gets first on allowances, winning the first prize of $400 in the schedule. Beatrix wins the $500 cup in the 46-foot sloop class and Owsens wins the second prize, $250.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF.

At New York Myndert Starin was arrested for contempt of court, and upon his promise to pay Koster & Bial's wine bill was paroled in the custody of his lawyer.

Socialist Aigner broke Daniel O'Connor's arm during a fight at Guttenburg, N. J., and shot and seriously injured Constable Kern and a citizen named John Gerstrom when they tried to arrest him.

Terrorific winds carried shells at Fort Hamilton, N. Y., the three charges blowing holes of from thirteen to fifteen feet in the earth.

It has been decided by the United States government to abandon the case against the steamer Ilata, which carried arms to Chili during the recent troubles.

Judge Lorenzo Sawyer died suddenly of bronchitis in San Francisco, Cal. Judge Sawyer was born in Jefferson county, N. Y., in 1820. In 1863 he was elected justice of the supreme court in California, and in the last two years he was chief justice.

The hearing on the will of Mrs. Hopkins-Searles was postponed. There is talk of a compromise. It is claimed that Mrs. Searles was a spiritualist and that Searles became a medium and acquired mental ascendancy over Mrs. Searles.

Arrested for Embezzlement.

BIRMINGHAM, Sept. 9.—W. H. Davidson, the leader of what represents the Greenback Labor party in Alabama, was arrested by Postoffice Inspector Pier, charged with embezzlement. Davidson lives at Haleyville, where he is postmaster, and on account of embezzling $623 of the postoffice funds.

Room Will Have a Surplus.

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—A special from Washington to The Mail and Express says Pension Commissioner Raum states that instead of asking congress for a deficiency in pension appropriations he will report a surplus of something like $6,000,000.

Rev. Gans Dead.

CHICAGO, Sept. 9.—The Rev. Harvey D. Gans, D. D., secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Aid for Colleges and Academies, died suddenly last evening at his home on Belden avenue, Chicago, from paralysis of the heart.

Italy Ready for War.

ROME, Sept. 9.—Italy has urgently ordered 30,000 rifles from the factory at Terni, and has instructed Ricotti, former minister of war, to immediately inspect the Alpine forts.

She Took the White Veil.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 9.—Mamie Dillon, of Denver, has entered into the order of the Carmelite nuns, taking the white veil. She will be known as Sister Xavier of Our Lady of Perpetual Health.

The Weather.

Messrs. Carney Bros. have been repairing my lawn mowers for a number of years past. When returned they cut as good as when new.
WM. MADDEN, head gardener for J. T. Clawson

Messrs. Carney Bros. have sharpened and repaired one lawn mower for me, and it gives satisfaction.
WM. MCCANN,
Head gardener for Mrs. T. Johnson.

My experience has shown that Messrs. Carney Bros. have no superiors in sharpening and repairing lawn mowers.
COMMODORE CONRAD,
Head gardener for ex-Mayor Cooley.

There is no need to send your mower to any factory while Carney Bros. do the repairing. They understand the mower.
HENRY HOSS, Landscape gardener.

Messrs. Carney Bros. have for several years repaired and sharpened my mowers always to my entire satisfaction.
THOMAS CLARK, Landscape gardener

They made as good a job of our mower as any one could wish. PATRICK KEELEY, Head gardener for Mr. Lawrence Myers.

The above are but a few of the pleasant words we get for our efforts to please our friends with the sharpening and repairing of our saws, and it shall be our endeavor to send each and every mower home as near right and perfect as we can. Believing we can supply the most particular owner of a lawn, or for sharpening and repairing saws, we remain their obedient servants,

THE FIRST MASSACHUSETTS VOLUNTEERS IN SKIRMISH AND BATTLE.

Is Rushed to Arms When Sumter Was Assailed and Put in Three Years of Solid Work with the Army of the Potomac.

[Copyright, 1891, by American Press Association. Book rights reserved.]

HIST in name and first in station would fit as a motto to a number of Union regiments that have a place among the Fighting Three Hundred. The First Maine Heavy artillery leads them all in the highest numerical loss sustained in one charge, and the First Minnesota in the highest percentage of loss in one engagement. The First Maine cavalry is at the head of the list of Fighting Troopers, with the First Michigan, First New York Dragoons, First Vermont and First New Jersey holding, respectively, the second, fifth, sixth and seventh places. Of the twenty-one states represented in the "300," eleven show at least one organization standing first in the state in the order of formation, and of the eleven, four have two Firsts, and one, Michigan, has three; that is, the First Infantry, First Sharpshooters and First cavalry. The First Massachusetts did not make a single brilliant stroke during its three years of service, but won its honors by average work, the kind that tells in the end. "A long pull and a strong pull, and a pull altogether" makes an army irresistible first and last.

The regiment was promptly organized for three months on Lincoln's first call, and although it was retained in Boston for local protection while other militia companies hurried to the front in April, 1861, it was the first three years' regiment that left Massachusetts for the seat of war, and probably the first three years' regiment of United States volunteers in the service. The nucleus of the regiment was the First militia, belonging in and around Boston. The synonyms by which the separate companies that composed it were designated when they assembled in the regimental barracks smack of the times when high sounding names were supposed to render warriors invincible. Boston contributed the Independent Boston Fusiliers, the North End True Blues, the National Guards and the Schouler Guards; Roxbury, the City Guards and Chadwick's Light Infantry; East Boston, the Union Guards; South Boston, the Pulaski Guards, and Chelsea, the Chelsea Volunteers. One company only, A, faced the terrors of war without hoisting a "fetich." It fared but little worse in the fight, however, than some of the others, and, in fact, if the formidable names had any virtue at all, they were equally effective. The losses in killed in the several companies averaged 9 per cent. The lowest was 7 per cent. and the highest 13.

Company A	18 killed out of	195
Company B	21 killed out of	199
Company C	13 killed out of	147
Company E	19 killed out of	144
Company G	14 killed out of	169
Company O	14 killed out of	166
Company H	19 killed out of	186
Company I	13 killed out of	157
Company K	16 killed out of	157
Total	141	1,585

This is a fair record all around, and it was made in good, steady fighting, with no disasters to swell the list to particular companies. The baptism of blood came in an action seldom heard of at this date—Blackburn's Ford, Va., July 18, 1861. The regiment lost 13 killed outright and 1 mortally wounded. Of these 12 fell on the skirmish line out of two companies, G and H, 6 killed in each. Blackburn's Ford was an accidental collision on the banks of Bull Run three days before the battle of Bull Run. While the Union army was marching to meet the Confederates in their camps on Manassas plains, a small force was sent ahead on the direct road to mislead the enemy while the main body made a detour to strike the flank. The First Massachusetts belonged to the brigade in advance and was pushed up to the eastern bank of the creek, when the Confederates had outposts with strong reserves on the western bank.

The first man killed was Lieut. W. B. Smith, of Company G, and the manner of his death illustrates the way the fight was carried on at that stage. The Massachusetts men were clothed in their militia gray, and at a distance were not distinguishable from the enemy. There were other Union regiments in the same plight, notably the Eighth New York. Now, in sham battles at school, and on the training ground, if the sides get mixed up it is all right for a man to inquire of another whose hand is against him which party he is with before the pounding begins, and doubtless the soldiers on both sides at Bull Run supposed the same way would be taken in war to get out of a dilemma, and that the cry "Shiney on your own side," or words to that effect, would ensure fair play. Lieut. Smith was skirmishing ahead with his men, when he ran upon some fellows in gray, and in spirit of fairness offered a word before the blow:

"Who are you?" he called out.

"Who are you?" was the reply.

"Massachusetts men," said he.

It was a one sided interview, and the southerners having the best of it followed it up with a volley of bullets. Smith fell dead.

The unfortunate circumstance of color nearly caused a disaster in the First a little later on. The regiment remained under a galling fire a couple of hours, the enemy lying well concealed from Union view. Supports were ordered to the front and a Michigan regiment rushed into the position of the First Massachusetts, and seeing the men in gray leveled their muskets to open fire. An officer of the First promptly ran toward the newcomers and said, "Who are you?"

"We are Michigan men."

"Well, we are Massachusetts men; don't fire."

The mistaking friend for foe and vice versa occurs on nearly every battlefield and among well trained troops, but probably the confusion of identity never again went to the extreme that it did with the novices at Bull Run.

The next encounter of the regiment was at Williamsburg, on the Peninsula, May 5, 1862. It was then in Gen. Hooker's division of the Third Army corps, and helped not a little to make the sanguine reputation of "Fighting Joe" on that field. The First was again at the fore front on skirmish duty, and for five hours, in a pelting rain, the men peppered away at the Confederate gunners, defending four cannon in one redoubt. The ranks of the regiment were well spread out, but it lost 13 killed.

The next affair of the regiment cost it 14 killed. This was Oak Grove, in front of Richmond, June 25, 1862, and is another one which we know but little of to this date, although it was the beginning of the "Seven Days" battles. Gen. McClellan ordered a daylight attack on the Confederate advanced outposts, covering an elevation which he wanted for his batteries. The First led off in its own brigade and was again employed as skirmishers. The affair was a spirited one, consisting of assaults and counterassaults, and cost the regiment 9 killed outright, 5 mortally wounded and 30 wounded and recovered.

At Glendale, Va., June 30, the sixth of the Seven Days, the regiment fought with its brigade, and was brought in, near the close of the action, to stem the Confederate advance. A division of the Fifth corps (McCall's) had advanced upon the enemy too boldly and lost the game, and Hooker's troops were ordered in to its support. Some confusion in the different organizations resulted, and the First mistook some Confederate regiments for Federals, and advanced within fatal range of their muskets before the error was noticed. The killed and wounded numbered 89. The killed and mortally wounded numbered 34, among them Maj. Charles P. Chandler.

The action at Glendale closed the first year of service of the regiment. Its losses thus far were about 300 killed and wounded. The killed and died of wounds numbered 66, yet it had not been in a single battle of great magnitude. At Malvern Hill, July 1, 1862, it was but slightly engaged and lost only 1 man killed.

The second year of fighting began with Second Bull Run. The regiment remained in Hooker's division and was among the troops of McClellan's army that hastened to the front from Alexandria to succor Gen. Pope's command on the old battle ground at Manassas. On the 30th of August the brigade to which it belonged was ordered to charge up a slope into a wood that screened the enemy from view. The advance was gallantly done, and after passing the wood without firing a shot they found the enemy behind a railway embankment that served as a breastwork.

This line was carried by a short, sharp fight with the bayonets and clubbed guns were freely used. A second line met the same fate, but a third lay beyond, and dashing upon this the brigade forged far ahead and was nearly overpowered. The fight lasted but a few minutes, and the First had 15 killed and fatally hurt. It was the desperate charge of the regiment in a great battle, and the reputation made on the skirmish line and in casual encounters was gallantly sustained.

Hooker's division did not take part in the battles in Maryland that followed Second Bull Run. At Fredericksburg, in December, the first had three men killed. At Chancellorsville, the night of May 2, and on Sunday, May 3, 1863, the regiment got into close action with Stonewall Jackson's troops, and with some show of reason claims to have caused the death of that redoubtable Confederate. Hooker's old division was at the time commanded by Gen. Hiram G. Berry. On the evening of the 2d, after Jackson's men had broken through the Eleventh corps line, they were brought up with a round turn at the Third corps position. Berry's division lay directly in their path and the First regiment lay behind a hastily constructed breastwork on the plank road which intersected both the Union and Confederate lines. Jackson was out on that road ahead of his pickets when he received his death wound. It was dark and identity was uncertain, but a party of horsemen riding from the Confederate lines approached the works of the regiment and was fired upon, when it quickly received its own. Under circumstances like these Jackson was wounded, and the hour and the place given by Confederates who were there agree with the statements of the Massachusetts men.

On the Sunday morning following Jackson's men, under new leadership, attacked the Third corps desperately. Gen. Berry's division lost heavily, and the general was killed in the brave attempt to hold back the enemy and gain time for concentration of the Union forces to meet the crisis. The First lost 15 killed and mortally wounded, 40 wounded and recovered and 40 missing. The missing at Chancellorsville, as a rule, were killed.

Gettysburg was the last great fight of the regiment, although it was engaged at the Wilderness and Spottsylvania, May, 1864. At Gettysburg it was again on the skirmish line, and lay along the Emmittsburg road on the right flank of Sickles' Third corps during the famous attack by Longstreet, July 2. It was in Humphreys' division, where the fighting was prolonged and severe, and lost 99 in killed and wounded. Its total loss was 37. The total killed and wounded in regiment during three years of service was 474.

A SPIDER'S INGENUITY

How One Spider Repaired Its Damaged Web During a Wind Storm.

Here is a very interesting letter by an observant friend of nature written for the benefit of the youthful readers of St. Nicholas:

When the wind is blowing fresh, the spiders' beautiful webs are likely to be broken at any moment, and without a web the spider can have nothing to eat. To prevent such an accident requires no consistent attention, and like the captain of a ship the brave little animal takes up its position in the centre of its silken home and remains there until the "blow" is over. Here the spider is in full control. The middle of the web is the central station to which all news relating to its glistening domain is sent. Every vibration, even at the most distant point, is instantly telegraphed to headquarters, and if the news be of vital importance, the spider leaves for the scene of danger at once. There it may find that a strand has broken loose which, unless instantly repaired, will completely ruin the web.

But sometimes the accident is of such a nature that to repair the damage calls for considerable ingenuity. For instance, the lower part of the web is often fastened to a weed. When the wind begins to blow the weed gently bows its head, and the danger to the web becomes very great; another bow more lowly than before and the strands snap, leaving the web flapping like a sail in a wind. The spider hurries down, but everything is in confusion; the broken strands are flying in all directions. To fasten them to the weed again is out of the question, and yet something must be done, and done at once. Well, this is the way one little fellow met the difficulty. He quickly lowered itself to the ground and procured a small chip of wood around which it fastened a thread. Then hauling this to the lower part of the web with a strong silken cable.

The effect was wonderful. It kept the web firm, and yet "gave" enough to yield to the wind. Accidentally it was knocked off, but the spider recovered it and hung it as before. The web suffered no further injury although the wind blew very hard.

Some spiders use a very small stone instead of a chip of wood, and even fasten this weight to a web which is five or six feet from the ground.

Suggestions About Swimming

The following suggestions to boys and girls are from an instructor in the art of swimming: Never bathe alone if you can avoid it. If you get the cramp, do not fight the water aimlessly. Try to throw yourself on your back to float, kicking out vigorously, as cramp may often be checked in this fashion, and call for assistance. If you go to the aid of any one attacked by cramp, keep clear of them and do not let them clutch you. Assist them either by towing them by the hair or by pushing them in front of you, if possible.

Be careful not to swim out to sea with out remembering that you will have as far to swim back. Girls should never bathe in a dress of material which, when wet, will cling round the limbs! Dry yourself thoroughly after bathing, dress quickly and take a short, brisk walk to restore perfect circulation. When you get home, bathe the face and hands in soft water to prevent chapping.

Those who cannot swim should remember that in floating it is essential to throw the head well back, to fill the chest full of air and to have the legs and feet close together and under complete control. Extending the arms straight out on a level with the shoulders, palms up, is a good plan also. To teach swimming or floating, a spot where the water shelves gradually should be chosen, and the friend assisting should extend a long, wide deep beside the learner with a hand placed firmly beneath the pupil's spine to afford rather moral than actually physical support. When the art of floating has been acquired, you can easily learn to swim with a little instruction from a friend who can swim, remembering to drop the head and strike well up, and to take long, even—not irregular or flurried—strokes.

A Swing Song.

UP AND DOWN, TO AND FRO.

We swing, swing, swing,
Up in the air and down—
Oh! what pleasure this doth bring,
In country or in town!
Under the leafy trees,
Where gentle breezes blow,
'Tis there we swing at ease,
Indeed we do, we do.
Backward and forward go,
And when schoolwork is o'er,
And books are laid aside,
And the red sun once more
Behind the hills doth shine,
We swing, swing, swing,
Up in the air and down—
Oh! what pleasure this doth bring,
In country or in town!

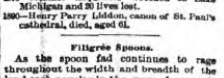
Filigree Spoons.

As the spoon fad continues to rage throughout the width and breadth of the land each novelty in the way of souvenir spoons finds a welcome from the vast army of shoppers after something unique in this direction.



MEXICAN FILIGREE SPOONS.

Numbered with the latest arrivals are the Mexican filigree spoons, a decided contrast to other styles. The delicate filigree work of the modern Mexican jeweler is composed of fine gold and silver wires, wrought in designs generally copied from nature and representing flowers, birds, butterflies, etc. The unliqueness of the designs, the rich colors and the artistic metals preserved in the work, and withal the intrinsic value of the articles made of this material render them highly attractive and well adapted for presentation as souvenirs to meet the demand for souvenirs in way of spoons. Many designs and styles of filigree handle spoons have been produced, two of which are shown in the cut here reproduced from The Jewelers' Circular. In some cases these spoons are rendered local by an application of the name of the town over the filigree.

PLAINFIELD EVENING NEWS.

ESTABLISHED 1884. PLAINFIELD, N. J., "THE COLORADO OF THE EAST," THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 10, 1891. PRICE TWO CENTS.

SOCIAL & PERSONAL

Mr. A. P. Downer of Fanwood is spending a week in Boston, Mass.

Captain of Police George W. Grant is slowly recovering from his recent illness.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. H. Shotwell of Duer street, North Plainfield, are spending a week at Ocean Grove.

Miss Estella VanMiddlesworth of Elmwood place is spending a few weeks with relatives in Jersey City.

Duncan Morgan and A. G. Slevin have spent a pleasant vacation at New Suffolk, L. I., returning home Tuesday.

Miss Mair, a teacher of the Warren Mission Sunday-school, is entertaining her class at her home this afternoon.

Miss A. W. Slevin of Franklin place has just returned from Narragansett Pier, where she has been spending the Summer.

Mrs. Tomes, the Misses and Master Percy Tomes of Brooklyn, N. Y., are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Phillips of Madison avenue.

The engagement of Councilman Ernest E. Ackerman of West Seventh street to Miss Mora L. Weber of Cumberland, Md., is announced.

Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Bigelow have returned to their Rockview avenue home from a stay of several weeks at West Hampton, L. I.

Mr. Thomas Walsh and Miss Maria Maloney, both of this city, are to be married this St. Mary's church next Tuesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

On Saturday morning Miss Anna F. Crossman and Mr. George W. Fawcett will be married at the Church of Our Saviour, Netherwood. The pastor, the Rev. R. P. Simpson, will perform the ceremony.

The play of that athletic pastor, the Rev. Asa R. Dilts, at the Hillside avenue Tennis Club's Tournament Saturday and Monday was like his sermons—right to the point. Mr. Dilts, however, had played but about three sets during the Summer and was therefore hardly in "champion form."

Mr. Harry Baldwin, an expert horseman of New Brunswick started one morning last week on his pet brown mare to make a few calls. He visited friends in Dunellen, Woodbridge, Rahway, Elizabeth, Plainfield and was back home, both horse and rider in good condition at seven o'clock in the evening.

Cards are out announcing the approaching marriage of Mr. Joseph C. Allen, the West Front street merchant, to Miss Edith A. Redcliffe of New Haven, Conn., the ceremony will be performed at that place September 23d. After a short wedding tour the happy couple will make Plainfield their home.

The recent convention of the Somerset County Sunday-School Association which was so successfully held in the Warren Mission church Tuesday was exceptionally enjoyable. To that most energetic of workers, Mr. M. Marvin Dunham, and the committee, the success of the convention is largely due. They looked out for the visitors in a substantial manner, and judging by their remarks the visitors appreciated it.

Miss S. Lena Squiers of Harmony street, North Plainfield, and Mr. Charles D. Wheeler of Manning avenue were united in marriage Tuesday evening by the Rev. Cornelius Schenck, the pastor of the Trinity Reformed church. The ceremony was performed at the residence of the bride's parents. Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler went on a wedding tour to Mystic, Conn., upon their return they will make North Plainfield their home.

That popular official, Major Alexander Gilbert, is a great wheelman. He may frequently be seen pedalling along the county road. Like many other riders, however, he does not enjoy riding with a number of young athletes, who ride, not simply for the ride, but to cover ground, and to cover it quick. Our Mayor, very sensibly, doesn't see where the fun comes in. The other day he went for a ride. On the same day Mr. John D. Titsworth, a genial friend, residing on Madison avenue, also went "a-wheeling." Mr. Titsworth, who, like the Mayor, prefers to ride at a rate of speed which allows for enjoyment of the surrounding scenery, was going quietly along when a voice hailed him from a grassy patch of beautiful golden-rod. Mr. Titsworth dismounted and joined the owner of the voice, Mr. Gilbert, and they proceeded to deplete that patch of its yellow-flowered crops without delay. When they started for home, a small boy could describe their appearance by the remark "Hey! flowers, where y' goin' with th' man?"

The Remains Interred.

The body of Angie Harris, the sixteen-year-old colored girl, who was found dead from asphyxiation at the residence of Mr. D. Terriberry on Sanford avenue, on Monday morning, was buried in the city plot by Morgue-Keeper Casey this afternoon. Mr. Casey communicated with Director of relations in Virginia, but as they failed to appear and claim the remains he buried them as above stated.

Notice! Bicycle Riders.

The start for the road race next Saturday will be from Front and Richmond streets instead of Crescent as Scott's Press works as originally intended.

THE GREAT PYTHIAN DAY.

The Annual Parade of the First Regiment, Uniformed Rank, K. of P.

The annual parade of the First Regiment, Uniformed Rank, Knights of Pythias, will take place in this city on Wednesday.

This event is always looked forward to with great interest by the Knights and their friends, but this year, owing to the Subordinate Lodges being invited to participate, more than ordinary interest is manifested. There is no doubt but that this will be the largest Pythian gathering ever held in this State.

Unity and Perseverance Lodges of Plainfield, Good Will Lodge of Scotch Plains and Crescent Division of Plainfield have each appointed a committee to make preparations for this event. This committee has been in close consultation with Grand Chancellor John Ulrich, and as a result an elaborate programme has been laid out that will be sure to please not only the Knights, but every citizen of Plainfield and vicinity.

Following is the list of committees:

From Crescent Division, No. 13—M. Turton, J. C. Blimm, J. C. Van Dyke, Sir Knight Captain F. Flannery.

The committee has organized by electing the following officers:

Chairman—L. R. Blackford.

Recording Secretary—T. C. Smith.

Corresponding Secretary—J. C. Van Dyke.

Treasurer—J. C. Blimm.

Invitations have been sent to every Lodge in the State. For the Uniform Rank every officer of the Regiment, as well as the Division officers, are trying to get everything in shape. The Colonel is visiting the Divisions and urging them to get a full turnout. The Divisions themselves are recruiting a great many and there is no doubt but that this parade will be one of the best in the history of the Rank in New Jersey.

Colonel—George H. Rhodes, Elizabeth.

Lieutenant-Colonel—George H. Polhemus, Plainfield.

Major—George H. Kidder, Jersey City.

Surgeon—John F. Hagar, Newark.

Assistant Surgeon—Isaac Barber, Phillipsburg.

Adjutant—Frederick H. Davis, Elizabeth.

Quartermaster—John C. VanDyke, Plainfield.

Sergeant-Major—Aaron W. Ables, Newark.

Commissary-Sergeant—Louis E. Marcot, Elizabeth.

Quartermaster-Sergeant—Garret H. Stillwell, Red Bank.

Color-Sergeant—M. F. Cary, Newark.

Hospital-Steward — Lewis Douglass, Newark.

A COSTLY NAP.

Mr. Linke's Driver Wakes up to Find Himself, the Horse and Wagon in a Pit.

Yesterday NEWS gave an account of an accident which had befallen one of Mr. Frank Linke's delivery wagons Tuesday evening. The accident was more serious than at first reported. The true version of the affair is as follows: Mr. Linke's driver, Charles Godown, was returning from Fitzgerald's Hotel with a wagon load of empty beer bottles in boxes. On the way home the driver fell asleep. In South Plainfield there is a deep excavation near the roadside. Into this the unguided animals walked and horse, wagon, driver and all were overturned.

The wagon was badly wrecked and a large number of bottles were broken. One of the animals was seriously injured. The driver escaped with a few slight bruises. It required the efforts of twenty Italians to get the wagon and horses out of the pit and it was half-past two o'clock yesterday morning before they arrived in this city.

Mr. Linke estimates his loss at $150 at least.

Reunions of Veterans.

The following reunions of veteran volunteers are announced in our exchanges:

The Thirteenth, at Bloomfield, Essex county, Sept. 16.

The Twenty-second, at Closter, Bergen county, date not announced.

The Seventy, at Paterson, Passaic county, Sept. 17.

The Ninth, at Flemington, Hunterdon county, Sept. 17.

On Thursday the Executive Committee of the Fifteenth N. J. V. met at Cawley's reception room, Somerville. It was decided that the annual reunion will be held at Washington, N. J., on Oct. 22. The people of that town will collect the veterans by their arrival, they will be escorted to Chris. Staats' hotel. The regiment will bear their own expenses.

Lodge Instituted.

A German Lodge of the Knights of Pythias was instituted in Masonic Hall, Somerville, last night, with about 30 charter members. Grand Chancellor John Ulrich of Plainfield, together with many from Phillipsburg and surrounding towns, were present. They numbered about 175 in all. The following are the officers installed:

P. C.—J. G. Kenner.

C. C.—E. M. Bincher.

V. C.—Henry Plank.

P.—Richard Steiner.

M. of E.—Jacob Hipp.

M. of F.—Samuel Ritter.

M. of R. and S.—Herman Buecke.

M. at A.—Herman Dudeck.

I. G.—Henry Hahn.

O. G.—John Stenger.

I have recommended Dr. David Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" to many in Sheldon and Birmingham, and I have yet to find one who has not been benefited by it.—C. L. Sawyer, Birmingham, Conn.—ADV.

COURT VACATION OVER.

JUSTICE'S OFFICIALS RESUMING THEIR DUTIES.

Prosecutor Marsh's Illness Necessitates a Postponement of Criminal Cases.

Since the first Wednesday in August there had been no sessions of the county court until yesterday, except that Judge Rice and Associates Dyer and Wiley were in attendance Tuesday while Sheriff Hicks drew the October panel of petit jurors.

Yesterday morning the regular weekly sittings of the Court of Special Sessions was resumed. There were in attendance most of the court officials. Judge McCormick has not yet arrived from his European trip, but sailed on Saturday last, and is expected home this week.

Judge Rice presided in the re-opening of the Special Sessions. He heard a number of motions in the Orphans' Court, and attended to other civil matters.

In the criminal branch there were bills of indictments to have come up, but Judge Rice received a message from Prosecutor Marsh stating that his illness still prevents his attendance, and it was decided to allow the criminal cases to stand over for another week.

The session of court to-day was held in the room of the Board of Freeholders. The court room is still closed and the repairs not yet finished.

The room has been handsomely wainscoted, new floor laid, seats scraped, and the wall and ceiling are now being newly frescoed. The scaffolding now fills the room, and the effect of the new colorings could not be observed, except that the room has a lighter and more cheerful appearance. The windows have been changed, new sashes put in and different-colored panes of glass, with stained glass at the top. Inside the bar inclosure a new carpet will be laid and some new furniture will add to the attraction.

It is probable the room will be ready next week, certainly for the opening of the October term.

TALK OF THE TOWN

—The City Common Council will probably hold a special meeting next Monday evening.

—The Summer absentees are returning and next week will find nearly all of them at home.

—The North Plainfield public school re-open next Tuesday after the usual Summer vacation.

—The Plainfield Reform Club will hold its regular mid-week meeting this evening at eight o'clock.

—The Crescents will visit Somerville Saturday and play the fifth game of the base ball series with the West Ends of that place.

—The Crescents play here next Saturday, and it will be for blood. We will surely win. A large crowd should be present to cheer the boys on to victory.—Somerville Messenger.

—The members of the Knights of Pythias request the residents of this city to decorate their residences on the occasion of their parade which is to take place in this city September 16th.

—It is stated that Postmaster Gen. Wanamaker has requested the Postmaster of each county seat in the United States to make a personal visit to and a detailed report as to the condition of each post office in his county.

—The New Jersey Cyclers Association, the governing body of a number of the wheeling clubs of the State are to have a race meet the first part of October on the New Jersey Jockey club track. Among the various races, will be a fifteen mile team race. The exact date of the race has not yet been decided upon.

—Last Monday ended the last of the Summer months, and soon the "sere and yellow leaf" will begin to make its appearance. We learn from an old-time observer of events that when eels begin to run down stream—as they are now doing—it may be accepted as pretty good evidence that the Summer is about done and that nipping frosts and chilling blasts are to be expected at short notice.

—Somerset county boasts of a good woman on Labor Day celebrating her 105d birthday. She is Mrs. Sarah F. VanDorstrand of East Millstone. She says she never wore corsets, and seems to think that in a degree she has prolonged her her life by refusing to put on these "sacklike" as she calls them. Her argument may be good, but just as likely as not some good old lady of 104 will be found who has worn corsets, and then the dress reform moral will be lost. It often happens that way.

—The Executive Committee of the State Republican League has called for a convention of Republican clubs at Trenton on October 15th. Such a meeting is advisable and politic. The State of New Jersey can be redeemed, if the Republicans of New Jersey wake up sufficiently to appreciate the situation and act vigorously, unitedly and with the single determination to succeed. New Jersey has, within a few years, cast a majority of votes for Republican candidates. If that vote is properly directed it can be made to overturn the gigantic partisan ring that runs Trenton from the political sink-hole of Hudson. A convention of the kind referred to is one means of arousing and encouraging the Republicans of the State. It is good for the First Ward, but it will needs be followed by others no less vigorous.—Elizabeth Journal.

Gen. Drake Will Give a Reception.

Major-Gen. Carnochan, of Indiana, Commander-in-Chief of the Uniformed Rank, Knights of Pythias, and who is going to review the grand parade of the First Regiment of New Jersey Knights next Wednesday in this city, will go to Elizabeth on Tuesday evening. He will be the guests that night of General J. Madison Drake, Commander of the Veteran Zouaves who will tender the old veteran and Col. George H. Rhodes, Commander of the First Regiment, and their staffs a reception at his home on Jefferson avenue.

Broke a Rod.

Yesterday afternoon about five o'clock, as an East bound freight train on the Central railroad was nearing Reid street, Elizabeth, the engineer in attempting to reverse his engine in order to stop the train, did it so suddenly that the driving rod was bent so as to make it impossible for him to start up again. It was nearly nine o'clock before the rod could be repaired, and during all that time Reid, Spring and Oak streets were kept blocked.

It Will be a Handsome Street.

The macadamizing of Grandview avenue has almost reached completion. Even in its present incomplete state the improvement is marked. It will be one of the finest streets in the borough.

CRUSHED TO DEATH.

A Teamster Falls Under His Wagon and is Killed.

SAYREVILLE, N. J. Sept. 10th. (Special.)—Daniel Seiover, of this place, aged fifty-three, a teamster, employed by Thayres and Fisher, this morning while driving a wagon heavily loaded, fell from the seat under the wheels. His head was crushed in, killing him instantly. He leaves a wife and two sons. His sons are engaged in business at Amboy.

Boys' Club Notes.

The average attendance for last week was sixty-five per evening. Largest in any evening being seventy, and smallest sixty-three. Number of visitors was fourteen.

Next Saturday the Club team will play the Unions of Grant avenue and on the 19th the Young Cuban Giants.

Last Saturday the Boys' Club played a very exciting game of ball with the Chathams of North Plainfield, 16 taking ten innings to decide the game. The playing of both teams was fine. Coverly of the Chathams displayed skill with bat by making a three base hit and a home run. Heffern of the Boys' Club made the winning run for the team coming in on an error of the man at third base. Following is the score:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10
Boys' Club...	0	0	0	1	2	0	0	0	1	1	1—11
Chathams...	0	0	1	6	0	0	0	2	0	1	0—10

Base hits, Boys' Club 8; Chatham 11; errors, Boys' Club 16; Chatham 15; home runs, and three base hits, Coverly.

The entertainments to be given this Winter will be held on Monday evenings instead of Saturdays as heretofore. We hope to see our friends present as well as all the boys. W. H. MINER, Supt.

Old Superstitions.

Cut your nails on Monday, cut them for news;
Cut them on Tuesday, a pair of new shoes;
Cut them on Wednesday, cut them for health:
Cut them on Thursday, cut them for wealth;
Cut them on Friday, cut them for woe;
Cut them on Saturday, a journey you'll go;
Cut them on Sunday, you'll cut them for evil:
For all the next week you'll be ruled by the devil.

Marry Monday for wealth,
Marry Tuesday for health,
Marry Wednesday, the best day of all;
Marry Thursday for crosses,
Marry Friday for losses,
Marry Saturday, no luck at all.

Sneeze on a Monday, you sneeze for danger;
Sneeze on a Tuesday, you'll kiss a stranger;
Sneeze on a Wednesday, you sneeze for a letter;
Sneeze on a Thursday, for something better;
Sneeze on a Friday, you sneeze2for sorrow;
Sneeze on a Saturday, your sweetheart you'll see before the week's out.
Sneeze on a Sunday, your safety seek—
The devil will have you the whole of the week. —Chicago News.

The Boy Found Dead at Long Branch Identified.

NEWS readers will remember the account published a short time ago of the finding of a body of a young man at Long Branch, on the sand. The position of the body when found was peculiar. It was in a sitting posture, under the stern of a boat. A thin rope was around the boy's neck. Mystery surrounded the affair. Suicide, or murder, were hinted at. The young man's identity remained unknown until yesterday when Jennie and Hannah Wills of Newark identified him as their brother George. About a month ago he left a baker shop in New York city where he was employed, saying he was going to Long Branch. The description of the boy found here, came here and identified the clothing and photograph found with the body as that of their brother.

A Big Day on Packer Island.

Rev. A. L. Brice, D. D., presiding elder of the Elizabeth district of the Newark conference, is arranging for an immense gathering of young people to be held on Packer Island on September 16th. Representatives from all of the young people's societies will be present and participate in the exercises. Dr. Brice is trying to get one of the Bishops of the Methodist church to be present and deliver one of the addresses. A good brass band will be present and enliven the occasion with stirring music. Delegates from this city will attend.

Never Happen Again in Our Lives.

The following is going the rounds of our exchanges:

The month of February, 1895, was in one respect the most remarkable month in the world's history. January had two full moons and so had March, but February none.

This had not occurred since the creation of the world, and, according to some astronomers, the same thing will not occur again for 2,500,000 years.

AN ORDINANCE

Dividing the Borough of North Plainfield into the Election Districts.

Whereas, The Borough of North Plainfield, as constituted at the last borough election held therein, contains more than six hundred voters; now, therefore,

SECTION 1. The Second Election District shall include all the territory and inhabitants thereof contained in that portion of the borough, situate on the northerly side of an imaginary line beginning at the centre of stony Brook where the same crosses Grove street; thence up the centre of Stony Brook to the centre of Prince's bridge; thence easterly along the centre of Rockview avenue to the centre of Mercer avenue; thence along the centre of Mercer avenue to the centre of Grove street; thence along the centre of Grove street to the centre of Somerset street; thence along the centre of Somerset street to the centre of Emily street; thence along the centre of Emily street to the centre of Somerset street; thence along the centre of Somerset street to the centre of Race street; thence along the centre of Race street to the centre of Richmond street; thence along the centre of Richmond street to the centre of Warren street; thence along the centre of Warren street to the centre of Manning avenue; thence along the centre of Manning avenue to the centre of Richmond street; thence along the centre of Richmond street to the centre of Green Brook and there to end.

SECTION 2. The Second Election District shall include all the territory and inhabitants thereof contained in that portion of the borough, situate on the southeasterly side of the imaginary line aforesaid.

SECTION 3. This ordinance shall take effect on the Eighteenth day of September, A. D., 1891.

Sept. 5, 1891. CHARLES PLACE, Mayor.

Attest—HENRY H. BROKAW,
9 8 7 Borough Clerk.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Matthew Marshall says the stock gambling market is dominated completely by sentiment; that real values have little or nothing to do with it. Nothing happens, nothing comes to light that was not known a month before, yet all at once the stampede begins, "and men are tumbling over one another to buy things which, until it began, they would not look at."

Queen Victoria, in appointing the commission to our World's fair, graciously remarks that it is her royal desire that the agriculture, industry and arts of her domains the world over should have full and suitable representation at Chicago. Further, in the desire to promote the success of the exhibition, she requests the commission to find out the best way in which articles for the fair may be procured, forwarded and displayed.

Professor John Rae, of the British Royal society, is following with scientific interest the rainmaking experiments in America. He says there is no doubt the experiments will be successful. As illustration, he points to the fact that in the moist climate of western Europe, where rain falls easily, there are heavy storms after cannonading. Heavy rains followed the five days' artillery competition in Scotland. The same effect was produced by the vast amount of gunpowder exploded on the occasion of the recent visit of the French fleet to England. In the vicinity of the firing the English and Irish crops were ruined by the great downpour that followed the royal and naval salutes.

Chili.

Discouraging it is indeed to the progress of free government that even the republic of Chili could not refrain from fighting and revolution. The Chilians have been called for years the Yankees of South America, and it was believed they were so engrossed in the development of their vast material resources as to have too much sense to engage in the little tempestuous teapot revolutions that periodically convulse the Spanish republics. But this was a mistake. Chili is no better than the rest of them. A war in which great cruelties were perpetrated, millions of debt piled up, agriculture and commerce ruined, the people's minds upset and harassed to an extent from which they will not recover in years—all for what? Merely that some individuals might gratify their private ambition and get a change of rulers. It was charged that Balmaceda's officials were corrupt. Probably they were. There are corrupt officials in most governments. But it is not necessary to go to war to get rid of them. There are peaceable methods of turning rascals out of office, as we in the United States demonstrate every year.

Newspaper Morals.

Lately an American journal came out with an announcement that by special favor of Divine Providence, or possibly some other power, a London paper and the journal in question had been able to secure the exclusive right to publish a sweet and juicy scandal. The impression was, therefore, that no other paper in the Union had been able to lay before its readers the sensation.

But the reader looked through one paper after another of the same date, and one after another had the same exclusive story. Now, this may be journalistic enterprise, but to the common mind it savors fearfully of lying. At least the common mind cannot draw the nice distinctions in the minds of enterprising journalistic publishers, and will be liable to put us in what this same newspaper or any other newspaper says. This is one bad feature of swerving from the line of strict truth in journalism. The public mind already classes newspapers as liars and publications not to be depended on for facts. It is rank injustice, for there are still hundreds of newspapers that aim absolutely to tell the truth. They are deceived sometimes, but there is not their fault if they have taken proper precaution to verify their statements.

The standing of newspapers as truth tellers ought to be the highest, and it ought to be the pride of every journal to report the world's doings exactly as they occur. There are big stories enough and sensations enough for the reporter who keeps strictly in the line of the actual, without his stepping over that line. The temptation tugging, as now, a good story, whether it is true or not, is one that ought to be resisted absolutely. Every time a journal prints a lie it weakens its own influence. Not only that, but it throws its moral power, so far as it has any, on the side of lying and weakens the honor and honesty of community.

There is a subtler evil that is worse than all—the evil done to the writer and publisher of a lie. Every time a man deceives another he places a veil between himself and the outside world. If the world cannot see through that veil except dimly, just as dimly can the man himself see through it. In proportion as we shut out others from the real truth in ourselves, in just that proportion we shut out ourselves from seeing the real truth in others. Hence it is that nobody is so easily hoodwinked as the person who habitually tries to hoodwink others.

OF INTEREST TO MINERS.

Statistics of the Coal Regions for the Year 1890.

HARRISBURG, Sept. 10.—The statement giving the condition last year of the anthracite and bituminous regions has been completed. In the anthracite district the number of tons of coal produced was 40,090,355; number of miners' laborers employed, 78,626; other employes, 16,780; inside the mines, 21,861; outside employes, 37,808; total employes, 109,166; number of fatal accidents, 379; number of non-fatal accidents, 1,007; number of wives made widows, 185; number of orphans left, 602.

The report for the bituminous region is as follows: Number of tons of coal produced, 40,090,521; number of miners employed, 44,310; number of miners' laborers employed, 2,735; other employes inside the mines, 6,938; outside employes, 62,797; number of fatal accidents, 146; number of non-fatal accidents, 381; number of wives made widows, 99; number of orphans left, 211.

THE LATEST HAIRDRESSING.

Styles That Are Finding Favor—A Graceful Coiffure Described.

Various modifications of the Greek soiffure seem well liked at present, this being a very pleasant way of wearing the hair. The back hair is worn, perhaps, a trifle lower than in the beginning of the summer. Many coiffures show a parting across the top of the head back to the knot, where this is tolerably high; the hair on each side is then arranged in waved bandeaux. Plain bandeaux in front are used by elderly ladies. A wavy bandeaux and a basket plait at the back look well when a small tasteful cap is to be worn.

A novelty in Catogan coiffures consists of the addition of a curled coil twisted in the neck. The natural hair is waved all around in small waves, then fastened at the crown of the head, divided and arranged in loops; then the curled coil Catogan is added at the back.

DEATH OF JULES P. GREVY.

PARIS, Sept. 10.—M. Francois Jules P. Grevy, ex-president of the French republic, died Sept. 9. M. Grevy had for four days been suffering from a severe attack of congestion of the lungs, which was the immediate cause of his death. M. Grevy was at Mont-sous-Vaudrey, in the department of Jura, at the time of his death.

M. Francois Paul Jules Grevy was born at Mont-sous-Vaudrey, on Aug. 15, 1813. He was educated in the colleges of Arc,

M. GREVY.

Poligny and Besancon, and then took up law as a profession in Paris, where, having been admitted to the bar, he soon assumed a prominent place in the political world of the country as a pleader in behalf of republican principles. In 1848 he was appointed commissary in the provisory government of the Republic. In this position he exhibited great prudence, firmness and moderation, and as a reward was subsequently elected a member of the constituent assembly and appointed one of the commitee of justice.

In politics he contrived to hold an independent position. He showed himself very hostile to the coup d'etat by which the constitution of the government of Emperor Louis Napoleon, the general policy of the Elysee and the royalist combination. He resisted vigorously the revision of the constitution and protested vehemently against the law of the 31st of May, which was a blow at universal suffrage. After the coup d'etat he went from public life he came up again as a candidate of the Democratic opposition and was elected by an immense majority over the candidate of the government. It was the first time that the administration had been beaten so completely in the country. The following year he was again elected.

Upon the fall of the empire he did not accept office under the new government, but in 1871, on issuing a proclamation to the compatriots, he was chosen by reelection of the assembly, to which position he was re-elected several times. In consequence of a dispute over one of his rulings, he resigned the presidency in 1873, although supported by a tremendous majority of the members, persisted in his refusal to resume office. In 1876 he was sent as a deputee to the Doe electors, in which he warned them against royalist intrigues. He was then elected president of the chamber of deputies, and became very popular as such.

After the death of Thiers he was generally recognized as the natural successor of MacMahon in the office of presidency, to which he was elected in January, 1879. He was so successful and so satisfactory to the country at large that his re-election was certain before the end of his term. In 1887 he was forced to resign owing to advance of old age, which began to tell on him.

President Christy's Defense.

CHICAGO, Sept. 10.—Henry A. Christy, president of the Hutchinson and Southern railroad, who is said to be wanted in Kansas for libel, returned to his office here. He denies the allegation of the Kansas people who charge him with embezzlement and ask him as president of the company to account for $250,000. He pronounces the affair a blackmailing scheme, and says advances toward a settlement upon the payment of $5,000 have several times been made.

FASSETT FOR GOVERNOR

Republicans Nominated Him on the First Ballot.

JOHN W. VROOMAN IN SECOND PLACE

The Other Nominations Were O'Connor for Secretary, Hedges for Treasurer, Sutherland for Attorney General and Colvin for State Engineer and Surveyor.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Sept. 10.—The state Republican convention adjourned last evening at 7:57 after an exciting session J. Sloat Fassett, collector of the port of New York city, was nominated for governor on the first ballot. His nomination was afterward made unanimous. The full state ticket nominated was as follows

Governor—J. Sloat Fassett, Chemung county.

Lieutenant Governor—John W. Vrooman, Herkimer county.

Secretary of State—Ex-Senator E. F. O'Connor, Kings county.

Controller—Arthur C. Wade, Chautauqua county.

Treasurer—Ira M. Hedges, Rockland county.

Attorney General—William A. Sutherland, Monroe county.

State Engineer and Surveyor—Verplanck Colvin, Albany county.

When General Knapp called the convention to order in the big Washington rink his reference to James G. Blaine and J. Sloat Fassett evoked tremendous applause. W. W. Goodrich, of Kings county, the temporary chairman, was escorted to the platform and in a long speech eulogized the Republican party and arraigned Governor Hill, whom he termed the "first and latest efflorescence of Democracy." Mr. Goodrich's references to Harrison, Blaine and Reed were heartily applauded. General J. M. Varnum, the permanent chairman, was then seated He said that "no pent up Utica contracts our powers, but the whole boundless hemisphere is ours. We might be taken as the motto, the future war cry, the slogan of the Republican party in this country.

The Republican principle was "America for the Americans," not in any narrow or restricted sense, but for the naturalized citizen as well as the native born, for the Mexican or South American as well as the citizen of our own republic.

Chairman Varnum said the Republican party was the party of progress, the only party which has had the courage to support and enforce its convictions despite public clamor and of temporary unpopularity. He vigorously defended the McKinley bill, calling the law it was not in full operation at the time of the last election and that it was not surprising, in view of the bitter attacks made upon the bill and the misrepresentations as to its provisions that the election of last autumn went against the Republican party. Continuing Mr. Varnum said:

But nearly a year has gone by and we, as Republicans of the state of New York, confidently appeal to our fellow citizens the record of the past year, and ask once more their suffrage in favor of the party of intelligence and progress. We claim that this is the first tariff legislation establishing a distinctively agricultural schedule; that the statistics of our foreign trade during the ten months of the enactment of the law, ending until July 31, 1891, show that there was an increase of over $50,000,000 in our foreign trade over the corresponding period of the preceding year; that the imports of merchandise free from duty increased nearly thirty millions; that the imports of merchandise which pay duties have increased over 22 per cent. in the total value of the articles, but the per capita revenue from duties has been reduced from $2.62 to $2.39.

That the increase of our exports to foreign countries has been over $30,000,000 more than during the same months of the preceding year. It thus appears that the McKinley bill, without impeding any active industry or injuring any American farmer or workman, has resulted in greater and larger trade than ever before. Exports have been largely increased, while the imports have largely decreased, but only in those articles which we can produce at home and which we believe should be protected.

Mr. White Withdraws.

A letter was then read from Andrew D. White, who withdrew his name in favor of Fassett. He said: "I would be glad to see all the elements opposed to the misrule now weighing upon the state of New York." The following votes were then nominated for governor by eulogists: Fassett, 1; Sloat Fassett, General Stewart L. Woodford, Philip Becker, General James R. Carr and General James W. Wadsworth. The vote before the changes were made which gave Fassett a unanimous nomination was: Fassett, 514; Woodford, 83; Wadsworth, 86; Becker, 53; Carr 86; White, 3.

Mr. Fassett's nomination was then made unanimous. In a long speech he accepted the nomination and closed often in the acceptance meant his immediate withdrawal from the office of collector of the port of New York. It is said that Mr. Fassett sent his resignation to Washington last last night.

The platform adopted follows:

They adhere to the principles on which the national victory was won in 1888 by the decisive electoral vote of the state, and they approve the legislation of the Fifty-first congress in the embodiment of these principles. They commend the wise, patriotic and able policy of the administration of President Harrison, who has brought himself near to the hearts of the people by his ability and fidelity in the enforcement of the laws and the performance of his duties and also by the admirable presentation of American principles which he made in his address to the people.

The administration commands the confidence and respect of the American people by its intelligent, efficient and sagacious conduct of the public business in all the departments, especially by the ability and energy displayed by the distinguished citizens of this state in build ing up the navy, in response to the assurances of defense; by the thorough and successful management of the vast transactions of the treasury under appropriations exceeding by far the largest ever made by any of the predecessors of the present administration; by the wise and patriotic course of the secretary of state, which has raised the American name to the highest position ever attained among the nations of the globe.

The Tariff and Reciprocity.

The revenue legislation of the Fifty-first congress, both in the tariff and the administrative act, is a just and proper application of the policy of protection to American labor and the control of home markets for the industry of our own people, and the results of this legislation are increasing daily in the establishment of new factories, in steadier employment to wage earners, in larger prices for the products of the soil, and in the assurance of industrial independence for our country in the face of the temporary distress now existing in Europe and South America.

By more adjusted taxation of reciprocity the administration is opening the markets of the western world to our surplus farm products and manufactures, by admitting free of duty such articles as we do not and cannot produce in adequate quantity and securing in exchange for them such articles from other states as it is profitable for farms and factories to export. The joint operation of such reciprocity and of the protective system and the resulting activity in American industry are carrying trade prosperity to the farms and workshops of the country.

The act of July 14, 1890, provides for the purchase of the silver product of American mines, and the coining of the same into money protected by a reserve of 100 cents' worth of silver for every dollar issued, and issued this policy of maintaining gold and silver at a parity, the treasury rates paid for silver to be kept at par with gold. The votes of New York are emphatic against any depreciation of the currency and demands with President Harrison that every dollar issued by the government, whether paper or coin, shall be as good as every other dollar.

Pensions for the Soldier.

The Republican party, not forgetting the critical days when the needs of the republic were supplied by the blood and treasure, while mindful of the dictates of economy and avoiding reaction invited by excess of appropriations, favors the fulfillment of the pledges given to the soldiers of the Union that the nation which they saved would not fail in just treatment of surviving veterans and of the widows and orphans of those who sacrificed their lives that the nation might live. We approve the speedy construction of the Nicaragua canal under American charter by American enterprise and with American capital as essential to national defense and to the interests of interstate commerce and the trade of the continent.

The Cause of Labor.

We recognize the dignity of labor and the necessity of proper legislation to protect its interests. We deprecate any attempt to lessen the fruits of toil or to place honest workmen in competition with paupers and convicts, domestic or foreign.

We declare the provisions of the act known as the Fassett law, and we condemn the evasion of the provisions of that act by the present state administration. The rigid enforcement of the Alien labor contract law is commended. We indorse the laws enacted by the late Republican congress to protect our people against the influx of the vicious, pauper and criminal classes of foreign nations, and we emphatically approve the rigid enforcement of those laws.

We reassert the expressed determination of the Republican party to maintain the right of franchise to its fullest extent, and to give all citizens the amplest protection to which they are entitled under the constitution.

We favor such legislation as will prevent all illegal combinations and unjust exactions by aggregated capital and corporate powers. We insists upon the suppression of all trusts, combinations and schemes designed artificially to increase the price of the necessaries of life. The cruelties and persecutions practiced upon the Jews in Russia are repugnant to the sense of justice of this people and the intervention of our government by all proper means to secure to the oppressed of all foreign nations equal rights under their laws is commended.

Governor Hill Arraigned.

We reaffirm the Republican party's favor to genuine reform in the civil service and commend the national administration for giving effect thereto under existing law. And the frequent and persistent abuse in the state civil service by the Democratic administration are held up to condemnation.

Appeal is taken to the people of this state to redeem its government from discredit brought upon it by Democratic state administration, the result of a personal despotism in the executive office, which has tolerated and fostered corruption and debauchery in the state departments, prostituted the canals, state prisons and public institutions, and all avenues to legislation to the satisfaction of unscrupulous and selfish executive. Thanks are given faithful Republican legislators who have combatted these combinations so far as was in their power, and ordered them inoperative. Issue has been joined by Republican legislation and the Democratic governor on the limitation and construction of the liquor traffic, and we reiterate our declaration for constitutional and statutory legislation for giving local option by counties, towns and cities, and restriction by taxation in such local limits of the traffic in intoxicating liquors.

There is this year no state tax for general purposes, and a consequent reduction of the tax levy which fixes the lowest rate of state tax in thirty-six years, is the result of wise and far seeing Republican legislation under which a steadily direct taxation has been lessened more than $30,000,000, directly benefiting real estate and personal property nearly thirty millions, establishing the state and principal credit at the highest level. This work of equalizing and reducing the burden of taxation should be continued to completion on the same lines.

The Canal Investigation.

The refusal of the Democratic assembly to allow investigation of the state canals and the large expenditures annually made thereon was confirmation of the robbery and misfeasance in Democratic perversion of the public property to base partisan uses. The effort of the Republican members of the late legislature to enforce economy on the public works, thwarted by Democratic opposition, is heartily commended. The denial by a Democratic speaker of the legislature of the right of petition, in the instance of the memorial of clergymen of all denominations, and many other citizens, was flagrant and inexcusable violation of the rights of the people, and has our reprobation.

The Ballot Law.

We favor the amendment of the ballot law by the substitution for the unofficial "pasteballot of the "official ballot," upon which the names of candidates shall be compactly grouped, rendering the voters duly easy and intelligent action, and thus destroying opportunities for fraud, bribery and corruption and largely reducing the expense of elections. We approve the principle that the government of citizens is previously a matter of business administration, and the enactment of laws to secure the fair and honest result of the genuine home rule, the enactment of a law it requires a general and uniform system of municipal accounting, and the adoption of an amendment to the constitution requiring the passage of a separate bill for each object of appropriation. The passage of the direct tax refunding bill by a Republican congress and its approval by the Republican president, by which the state will receive $3,233,000, which would have been distributed to the several counties as their just due but for Democratic opposition in the legislature.

The World's Fair.

We denounce the unpatriotic effort of David Hill, through the last Democratic assembly to place this state in an unfriendly attitude toward the World's Columbian exposition to be held in Chicago in 1893, that we recognize the necessity for an exhibition by the state in keeping with its commercial and industrial supremacy, in which, as in all other states, we favor action by the next legislature providing for a proper exhibit for the state. It is a fundamental principle of Republican government to regulate taxation and to restrench the expenditures of public money wherever it can be done; therefore, to the Republican legislature following the next legislature is requested to adopt an amendment to section 13 of article 6 of the constitution of this state so as to relieve the counties from the provision made for the payment of the salary of any public officer after the expiration of his term of office.

BARON HIRSCH'S SCHEME

Homes for Hebrews in Canada and Argentine.

THE EIGHT HOUR DAY ONCE MORE.

Another Edict Adopted by the Trades Union Congress by Which a Two-thirds Vote of Union Men Is Needed to Lengthen a Labor Day's Duration.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—Dr. Herman Adler, chief rabbi of Great Britain, has announced Baron Hirsch's intention concerning the Russian Jews in the following note:

OFFICE OF THE CHIEF RABBI.

I had a long interview with Baron Hirsch some little time ago. His desire is to settle the poor exiled Jews of Russia in agricultural colonies in Argentine and Canada.

Yours faithfully,

H. ADLER.

Will the Jews Dig?

This is a most important statement, made by the highest authority in the world. To those familiar with the failure of the past efforts of Russia to induce the Jews to take up agricultural land, Baron Hirsch's plan—which I now authoritatively announce—will be interesting. The question is, if a Jew will not dig in Russia will he dig in Argentine or Canada?

The Labor Congress.

NEWCASTLE, Sept. 10.—At the trades union congress, by a vote of 242 to 156, a motion to the effect that a bill reducing or fixing the hours of labor ought to be of a permissive or optional character was carried after considerable discussion. This amendment in substance permits that the eight hour law when passed shall not be enforced without the consent of two-thirds of the original members of the trade concerned.

Several of the delegates protested against the acceptance of the amendment on the ground that by so doing the delegates would stultify the resolution passed in regard to a compulsory eight hour law.

It Would Increase Their Popularity.

"Ben" Tillett, speaking against the amendment, urged that the vast majority of workmen were not able to fight out an issue for themselves, and that the introduction of permissive principles would greatly increase their difficulty in getting a reduction of their hours of labor.

Delegate Coyne, on behalf of the Miners' federation, representing 150,000 miners, said that he approved of the permissive principle in reference to the proposed eight hour law, and advocated the adoption of the amendment.

Mawdsley Was Nearly Mobbed.

Delegate Mawdsley, an operative cotton spinner, a prominent trade union leader and a member of the royal labor commission, supported the permissive amendment. During his speech he scoffingly alluded to the "drivers'" language used by some of the delegates in their rhetoric efforts and expressed the opinion that such flowers of speech would not "delve labor questions, though," he added, they might "gain the applause of ignorant mobs."

A tremendous uproar followed the utterance of these words, and so loud was it seemed likely that the speaker would be subjected to personal violence. Amid the uproar the cry of "Withdraw!" was to be distinguished. Surprised at the storm of tumult, and to such an extent did the indignation of the delegates manifest itself that Delegate Mawdsley was finally compelled to withdraw his injudicious remark and to apologize for having uttered it.

A Blow at the Permissive Feature.

Mr. Hardie, of the Ayrshire Miners' organization, moved an amendment declaring that the eight hour law shall be enforced in all trades and occupations except where a majority of the organized members in any trade or occupation protest by a ballot vote against the proposal.

The amendment was carried—285 to 183 amid prolonged cheers, and becoming a substantive resolution by the withdrawal of the other amendments it was adopted by a vote of 341 to 73. A scene of great enthusiasm followed. This concluded the discussion on the eight hour question, with the exception of a special resolution in the case of miners.

TO ARREST THE APPRAISERS.

Warrants Out for the Accused Men at Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 10.—District Attorney Graham, after a consultation with Thomas W. Barlow, his assistant, and Joseph P. McCullen, counsel for City Treasurer Wright, with reference to the mercantile appraisers matter, concluded that sufficient evidence had been discovered to make out a case against the withdrawal of the appraisers. He therefore requested Mr. Wright to make out an affidavit upon which to issue warrants for their arrest, which he did, and Magistrate Pole issued upon issued warrants for the arrest of the five appraisers, Patton, Houseman, Hunter, Crawford and Dilks.

The district attorney requested the magistrate to fix the bail at $2,500 each when they should be arrested for a hearing on Monday morning at 11 o'clock.

How the State Gets Off.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—A special to The Evening Post from Washington says: It is learned that the abandonment of the case against the State is the result of an agreement between this government and the new Chilian government, whereby the latter is to reimburse the United States for the expense incurred in the chase of the Itata.

MATCH MAKING SPOOKS.

Did They Tell Mrs. Hopkins to Wed Searles?

A SPIRIT MESSAGE ON A SLATE.

Searles Blushed When He Read the Sentimental Instructions, but the Widow Insisted Upon Knowing What They Were—Young Hopkins Wants Half.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—It has been frequently stated, since Timothy Hopkins first determined to contest his foster-mother's will, that he would claim undue influence, and offer to prove the unsound mental condition of Mrs. Hopkins-Searles at the time she disinherited him. Family gossips have unfolded the plan of campaign. It appears that the influence which the obscure paperhanger is said to have exerted was similar to that of the high spook priestess, Ann O'Delia Diss Debar, when she led Lawyer Luther R. Marsh a pretty lively dance.

It is generally understood that Mr. Searles is an apostle of spiritualism. When he went to San Francisco it is said he found the old lady deeply engrossed in the mysteries of spiritualism. At her house were the two sons of Dr. Crook, who in jest amused Mrs. Hopkins by pretending to converse with the invisible inhabitants of spookland. These conferences began to take on a serious aspect, for Mrs. Hopkins became a devout believer, so when Mr. Searles proclaimed himself an apostle of the faith he was invited to join their evening circle in the drawing room.

How Tim Got the House.

Spirit rappings and slate writing were produced by the paperhanger, and the old lady became enraptured when he summoned the spirits of her departed friends and transmitted messages from them to her. One of the Crook boys tells this story:

"The gift of a house to Timothy Hopkins came about in a peculiar way. Mrs. Hopkins-Searles and myself were seated at the seance table one night when suddenly she asked the spirit of my father if she should deed the Menlo park residence to her son Timothy at once or wait until it was owned by the state.

"Searles heard the question, and quick as a flash I saw that he wanted a negative answer.

Huntington a Believer, Too.

"Answers always come by the table tipping, and I determined it should be in favor of Tim. It then became a question of muscle between Searles and myself, but I was too much for him, and in spite of his efforts to hold the table down I tipped it. As soon as this answer was given Searles proposed to close the seance for the evening. From that time on I watched Searles in his efforts to influence Mrs. Hopkins, and when he had carried his point he found an excuse for sending me away. C. P. Huntington knew all about this, and I believe he, too, was a believer in spiritualism at one time."

Spirits Told Her to Marry.

An old friend of the Hopkins family says it has been generally known for several years that Mrs. Hopkins-Searles was a firm believer in spiritualism and in Mr. Searle's power to communicate with the dead. "I have frequently heard," said this gentleman, "that it was through spiritualistic communication that Mrs. Hopkins married Mr. Searles, and that the same influence is said to have caused the adopted son to be disinherited.

"As the story goes, there was spirit writing and rapping in Mrs. Hopkins's drawing room one night. Mr. Searles was the medium. When the slate was opened he was the first to read the message. It was an injunction from spiritland that Mr. Searles should marry Mrs. Hopkins. Of course Mr. Searles was greatly embarrassed and he started to rub out the writing, but Mrs. Hopkins snatched the slate and quickly scanned the message.

"It was not long after that Mr. Searles, in the presence of several friends, put his arm affectionately around Mrs. Hopkins and kissed her, while she in return announced him as her affianced husband."

What Timothy Will Claim.

Timothy Hopkins has furnished himself with affidavits concerning his foster mother's spiritualistic tendencies, and he will endeavor to convince the Massachusetts courts that Mr. Searles obtained absolute control over the old lady by fraudulent spirit manifestations. It will also be contended that Searles used the same influence to keep him out of his rightful inheritance. Timothy Hopkins will also try to prove that during her last illness Mrs. Hopkins-Searles was isolated from her friends and relations, and that Mr. Searles stood guard over her day and night until she died.

This spiritualistic phase of her life, and the fact that she was brought under its control by Mr. Searles, is the basis of the charge of undue influence. It will also be urged that, as Mrs. Hopkins became easily converted in her old age, it should be proof positive she was of unsound mind.

He Wanted Half the Estate.

Timothy Hopkins and Searles have had a conference looking to a settlement. They did not, however, come to terms, for Mr. Hopkins demanded an equal share of the estate, and would listen to no other proposition.

He left Mr. Searles and joined Joseph H. Choate as the latter's counsel house in Stockbridge, Mass., where he will remain until the case is called in the probate court at Salem on Sept. 22.

Hopkins also refused to take $1,200,000 from Mr. Searles and stop a contest.

It is said that Mr. Hopkins has signed an agreement to pay his attorneys one-fourth of the amount of the estate awarded him. As the lowest value of the estate is $30,000,000 and Mr. Hopkins expects to get one-half of it, Messrs. Choate, Endicott, Wilson, Reid & Bailey will have $2,500,000 to divide if they win.

THE SQUADRON'S CRUISE OVER.

The Famous Fleet of War Vessels to Be Disbanded.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—The squadron of evolution, or the white squadron, which has attracted so much attention throughout this country and Europe, is to be disbanded Secretary Tracy has issued orders to the chiefs of bureaus in the navy department directing them to make the necessary arrangements for preparing for service the two vessels of the squadron—the Yorktown and the Petrel. The Petrel one of the smaller vessels of the navy, will go to China via the Mediterranean sea and the Suez canal. Her small size makes her especially fitted for the China station, enabling her to cruise in many of the rivers for a considerable distance inland.

The Yorktown, a gunboat, will be assigned to the Pacific. It is probable she will be stationed at San Francisco, ready for any necessary service on the west coasts of this country, Central America and south America. The other vessels of Admiral Walker's command will probably be assigned to foreign stations. No change in commands is contemplated.

Willie Windle Beaten.

HARTFORD, Sept. 10.—In the bicycle race here Wednesday afternoon Fred Hermans, of Hartford, made a new world record of a quarter mile in thirty-one seconds for solid tires. Windle was beaten by Berle in the two mile safety, but on Berlo's foul Hoyland Smith got the race.

The Davis Will Jury Discharged.

BUTTE, Mon., Sept. 10.—The jury in the Davis will case again reported in court its inability to agree on a verdict and was discharged. It is believed it stood seven to five in favor of the contestants. The trial has cost thus far $130,000.

Blaine 5529, Harrison 16.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Sept. 10.—A reporter who interviewed the Republican delegates as to their presidential choice found that 5529 were for Blaine, 16 for Harrison, 6 for Alger and 107 non-committal. 2629

Depew Coming Home.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—The Teutonic sailed from Liverpool yesterday, carrying Dr. Chauncey M. Depew, Messrs. W. H. and C. Vanderbilt, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Roosevelt and General Wales.

Red Men Choose Officers.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 10.—At the annual session of the grand tribe of the United States, Independent Order of Red Men, officers were elected as follows: Obergrose chief Powhatan, William Rommel, of Philadelphia; untergross chief, Jacob Gebhardt, of Chicago; bilgross chief, Conrad Hahn, of Baltimore; secretary, S. W. Goodman, of Philadelphia; treasurer Henry Schaumberg, of Baltimore. The next session will be held in Trenton in September, 1892.

They Believe War Is Near.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—The opening of a rigorous British policy at Constantinople has strengthened, both on the continent and in England, the feeling that war is near. Sir William Vernon is acting under direct and positive orders from Lord Salisbury in taking his present attitude of menace toward the porte, and a British fleet of more formidable size than any that Russia can bring into the Dardanelles is prepared to sustain his demands.

Editor Bundy's Death.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—The news of the death of Major Jonas M. Bundy, the well known editor of The Mail and Express, was telegraphed to this city yesterday morning by Mr. Whitelaw Reid, United States minister at Paris. Apoplexy superinduced by acute Bright's disease was the cause of his death.

Three Killed, Two Injured.

OYSTER BAY, L. I., Sept. 10.—James Donaldson, Townsend Dickinson and Michael Mahoney were killed and Alfred Jones and E. H. Swan were injured yesterday by the explosion of the engine of a passenger train on the Long Island railroad at the station at Oyster Bay.

Six Men Reported Lost.

CHICAGO, Sept. 10.—A telegram received here states that the schooner Persia has foundered on Lake Ontario. Her crew of six men are supposed to have gone to the bottom with the ill fated vessel. The Persia was a Canadian boat.

To Ask Damages of England.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—The Morgan Line Steamship company announces that a demand will be made upon the British government for indemnity for the cargo stolen from the stranded steamer El Dorado by the Bahama wreckers.

They Must Leave the Strip.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—Secretary Noble has promulgated an order in which he refused to grant the request of herders in the Cherokee nation for further extension of time to remove their cattle from the Cherokee strip.

They Watched the Chilian Orniser.

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 10.—The Presidente Pinto, Chilian cruiser, was in the road stead yesterday and was kept under watch in order to prevent her from shipping arms and men. The Pinto has sailed for Helsingfors.

The Weather.

Generally fair and warmer.

OLD TIME FASHIONS.

Amazing Things Our Grandmas Used to Wear, as Found in Old Journals.

It is with a curious sensation that one opens the dusty, worm-eaten file of an old English newspaper and reads the quaint pages which our grandfathers and our great-grandfathers read 100 years ago.

Do you not see there the lady of the household, sitting in prim gown and a constrained attitude upon her own high hacknet, uncomfortable chair, stealing a moment from her housewifely duties to read of the prevailing fashion? Her eyes glisten as she learns that a "lady of high quality" is about to array herself in a manner set forth in this paragraph:

"The headdress, composed of salmon colored crape gauze, with a bandeau of satin ribbon tied on the right side near the front in a small knot. Upon the bandeau is disposed a string of small beads, and one salmon colored and two ostrich feathers placed on the head, and three diamond pins between the bandeau and the feathers. The hair frizzed lightly, thrown into ringlets and turned up behind in a plain chignon. Robe white striped tiffany, trimmed down the neck and down the front with a narrow silk fringe. Short sleeves, trimmed at the elbow with the same fringe; small tiffany handkerchief put within the robe and drawn together at the front with a diamond slide. Lawn petticoat trimmed with a narrow flounce. Pearl necklace and earrings; a small medallion suspended by a string of small pearls. Silk shoes of salmon color."

The good burgess' wife is as deeply interested in this piece of information as her descendants are in the fashion journals of today. She pauses on to read that "the turban cap still remains with variegated plumes of ostrich feathers," and she profits by the announcement that "the undress small bonnets, with green satin ribbon cut to imitate grass, are universally worn."

It is obvious that she quite understands how a green satin ribbon may be cut to imitate grass, and you do not believe that she will convey the hint to her milliner when the time comes round for her next bonnet to be ordered.

Still reading on, she sees that "the clocks to the silk stockings are invariably of the same color as the ribband to the headdress;" and also that "boot shoes" are yet worn, but are likely to be ousted from popular favor by "a kind of sandal shoe, laced with a ribband."

She is laughing now at the statement that "the semblance of sore throats is not so much the rage as formerly, and is now satisfied from the fagnals we see." Ostrich feathers at this period were worn very high; they were, in fact, carried to the height of absurdity. The worthy dame is well aware of this. Perhaps she bears her own imitative share in the fashion; therefore, do you wonder that she is growing indignant with the satirical newspaper man who is so impertinent as to inform the vulgar that a room is especially set apart at all elegant assemblies wherein ladies may adjust their feathers, because they cannot be worn in a carriage with a roof?

The villain declares that leaders of the fashion have headdresses four feet high, "but at least, sir! Even if ye be, you shall right han he to say that "a well dressed lady who angles with dexterity can give a friend a tap upon the shoulder across the room without inconvenishing the dancers." Madam is annoyed with this impertinens fellow; but you may be sure she takes the paper regularly, in spite of all, and that she will promptly avail herself of the hint that "ladies now in the little greatcoast style perambulate the streets in a beavkin body of blue flannel and silken skirt of brown color."—London Queen.

Young Ladies and Realism.

The young woman of today should not be deceived into the notion of a preferable realistic development because the novelist of today gets her to sit to him as his model. This may be no certain indication that she is either good art or good nature. Indeed, she may be quite drifting away from the ideal which a woman ought to aim at if we are to have a society that is not always tending into a realistic vulgarity and commonplace. It is perfectly true that a woman is her own excuse for being, and in a way she is doing enough for the world by simply being a woman. It is difficult to rouse her to any sense of her duty as a standard of aspiration.

And it is difficult to explain exactly what it is that she is to do. If she asks if she is expected to be a model woman, the reply must be that the world does not much hanker after what is called the "model woman." It seems to be more a matter of tendency than anything else. She is neglecting toward realism or rising toward idealism? Is she content to be the woman that some of the novelists, and some of the interviewers also, say she is, or would she prefer to approach that ideal which all the world loves? It is a question of standards.

It is natural that in these days, when the approved gospel is that it is better to be dead than not to be real, society should try to approach nature by the way of the materialistically ignoble, and even go such a pace of realism as literature finds it difficult to keep up with, but it is doubtful if the young woman will get around to any desirable goal of duty by this route. We may not be able to explain why servile imitation of nature degrades art and degrades woman, but both deteriorate without an ideal so high that there is no earthly model for it.

Not at all, at least not a Roman copy of one, but it would be better to marry a woman who would rather be like a Greek statue than like some of these Greek figures, which are lying about on green banks in our spring exhibitions.—Charles Dudley Warner in Harper's Magazine.

Neighbors and Neighborliness.

Many persons indulge in sentimental twaddle about neighborly duty. It is one of the ways by which selfish and indolent people appeal to the sympathies of the more thrifty and liberal minded, and commit their own duties to others. They have slept through their own folly. The good neighbor, in every country parlance, is the one who at any time is ready to abandon his own household, or at least let them shift for the time for themselves, in order to recuperate his neighbor's fortune.

Poop Mrs. Smith has allowed her baby to eat green apples, therefore thrifty Mrs. Brown, who has repeatedly warned her of the danger, is called up to attend to the infant's colic. Mrs. Smith would not and would not be of the slightest use to Mrs. Brown in any emergency. She will pathetically explain to you that "she never could do anything in anybody else's house. She would like to, but she can't." Mrs. Brown would be considered a bad neighbor if she did not do her best to help in such an emergency. It matters not which her own children contract sickness from the absence of her motherly care. She is one who can help in other people's houses, and it is her neighborly duty to go.

Because two persons purchase adjoining breadcrumbs, is no reason why they should have any social claim on each other. There is a strongly established idea in the country to the contrary, but it is a fallacy, and in that causes generous, busy women a great deal of needless annoyance and often positive work. It is an easy matter for a selfish woman to obtain from another, through some such pretext, valuable services. A weak woman may become so dependent on the kindly services of her neighbor that she fails to learn the most important lesson of life—self dependence.—New York Tribune.

Every day of her life she goes through the dreary, monotonous round. At an early hour, every morning through the box she builds the fire, prepares the inevitable black coffee and fried pork (perhaps hot biscuits), and before she can clear away the breakfast dishes she has to start the cows and calves bleating, the milk cow stamping, both impatient to have the morning's business done with. Then comes the dreary routine of the forenoon's work, the baking of bread, the washing and the like, until the meridian sun warns her that the everlasting midday meal is due and must be ready at once.

To round up the duties and responsibilities of the day her labors are carried far into the night, and often, very often, they continue long after those of the male portion of the family have ended. She has long since ceased to think about her personal appearance. A brother's or husband would almost surprise her. Once she grieved that her little girls were so barely clad; now she scarcely thinks of it. To look fashionable would be a grave hour every day to read never enters her head, and the bare suggestion that on every Sunday she should "dress up" and devote herself, during the rest of the day, to social intercourse would cause a stare of incredulity.

For be it understood that Sunday for the farmer's wife is a sort of clearance day to adjust the odds and ends of the previous week's cares and labors, to be in readiness for the renewed labors of the coming week.—John W. Bookwalter in Forum.

How to Boil a Ham.

M. Morel, the chef of the Marlborough hotel, is reported as stating that the secret of Sam Ward's method of baking a ham was to wrap it in a large sheaf of timothy grass. Either M. Morel has been wrongly reported, or Sam Ward has bamboozled him—as he did many other people. If anybody advises you to try to bake a ham in that way, tell him to go to grass. In boiling a ham or baking it—a bed of sweet hay—not grass—should be put at the bottom of the pot, and the steaming effect will be somewhat similar to that of the seaweed at Thicole Island clambakes.

But Sam Ward, in spite of his reputation, knew nothing about cooking. He used to think that a ham was improved by being boiled in brandy. You might as well adopt Sydney Smith's receipt of scratching the dome of St. Paul's to make the finest sand glasses. The attempt to get any flavor of brandy through the thick hide of a ham by boiling it.

Any desired flavor must be applied after the ham is cooked and skinned. Then the fat will suck in flavors like a sponge. Sam Ward was raised in California at a time when dining was an unknown art there, and all that is pretended to know about gastronomy was picked up from cook books or attributed to him by cronies who were still more ignorant than himself.—Stephen Fiske in Texas Siftings.

Woman and Her Dress.

I have small sympathy with any woman who manifests a total indifference to her own dress, and for the sake of being considered "brainy" and "eccentric" allows herself to appear in public in slovenly and unbecoming dress. It is a duty every woman owes the Lord who made her and the beautiful world she lives in to make the most of herself, both physically, mentally and otherwise. If God had not loved beauty he would not have sown it so broadcast and lavished it so bounteously upon sunset skies, tulip beds and autumn leaves. But there are other aims in life besides the purpose to be beautiful and well dressed.

The woman who thinks of nothing else is stupid and tiresome. And if one is too poor to gratify the liking for pretty clothes it is infinitely more to one's credit that one goes unbecomingly gowned and shabby as to food, wear, etc., than if one ran into debt to keep up appearances or defrauded another to make her gains. Do not judge others by your own standard. It is an unsafe thing to do in a world where every face is colored by a circumstance, like the water in the jar behind the lighted apothecary window.—Chicago Herald.

An Opening for Girls at House.

Why is it that some of the women in small villages and towns who are anxiously inquiring for some way of earning their living, do not fit themselves for cutting and making children's clothes? In many places it is almost impossible for a busy mother to find any one who can come into her house and cut out and fit the little gowns and sacks for the girls of the family without her assistance. Especially difficult is it to find any one who can make a pair of trousers for the small boy of the house, giving them the finished look found in those purchased. Of course many but these little garments ready made, but many a thrifty mother has learned that trousers made out of the cloth discarded by the head of the household will outwear two or three cheap pairs purchased new, and look well to the last, because made of better material than is usually put into boys' garments, unless of the most expensive kind.

If one preferred to do this work in her own home, we are sure a good business could be built up by devoting one's time and attention wholly to children's garments.—Housewife.

A Writing Pad.

To make a most useful writing contrivance, fasten together a few pieces of stiff skirt facing, each fourteen and a half inches long and eleven inches wide, by sewing them both to one strip of inch wide muslin, so that the two leaves will be joined at the side edges by over half an inch space of muslin, like the binding of a book. Cover the outside of the case with brown enamel cloth, by taking long stitches from side to side, as in covering school books; then baste the silk over the inside of the case and turn in all the edges and corners neatly. Sew in the end of a thin piece of brown silk cord at the top opposite side of the cover, making the cord lie in a flat loop across the middle of the inside of the case.

Use the sewing machine to stitch the silk and the enamel cloth together along the four edges. Make a large pocket, with three small ones on the outside, as a receptacle for paper and envelopes, and two packet be of stiff dress facing, covered with brown silk; blindstitch the pocket securely on one side of the case, and sew on a loop of brown ribbon at a convenient place. Cut several sheets of good blotting paper, a little smaller than the case, and slide them between the silk cord and the case; then bind the leaves over the cord through the center, and the cord will hold them in place.—Lewiston Journal.

Advice on Airing Houses.

Too many houses are built up at the back for want of space. There are no through drafts. Front and back open, and a current set going—that's the air. As it is, with the air stagnating, curtains drawn, blinds down, carpets on floors, doors closed and one bit of a window just open, where are the lungs that can breathe in so many cubic inches destitute of oxygen? Now, in the morning open your street door for an hour, and set something stirring. Instead some current into these stagnant air layers that close each other up, and can neither move up nor down, nor in nor out. Women faint, children droop, babies die, and all for the want of a little fresh air just passing through the house. Look to it, and open your house door the first thing in the morning, and if you can get a current going, do it.—Exchange.

Water as a Pick-Me-Up.

Did you ever try water as a pick-me-up after a day's outing or shopping, when you know you are tired, hot and frowsy, and that when some one comes home to dinner for whose praise you care he will find you looking your homeliest? Pour ice cold water over your wrists, bathe them in it until you begin to feel cool, and then stop or you may get a chill by lowering the temperature of the body too much. Wring a cloth out of boiling hot water and lie down for five minutes, or as if you can get it, with the cloth spread over your burning face and tired eyes. You will be surprised to see how the tired lines will fade out, and how brightly the dull eyes will shine.—New York Sun.

Look Out for the Garbage Pails.

Never neglect to see that the garbage pails and all vessels for refuse are kept scrupulously clean. It takes only a few moments to throw in a solution of lye or of sal soda and water as soon as they are emptied. Scrub them around with a little whisk, touching every portion of the vessel with this disinfecting solution. Rinse them with water and set them where the hot sun will dry and purify them. There is no more certain source on which the health of all foul diseases may feed than uncleansed garbage pails, and yet it is not an uncommon practice for otherwise neat housekeepers to neglect to keep them clean. —Exchange.

Banana Juice for Chronic Bronchitis.

The juice of bananas is recommended as one of the best remedies in chronic bronchitis with insufficient expectoration and marked dyspnœa. Steam alright or ten times a day during the first days is usually prescribed, and later the dose can be diminished. The syrup is prepared as follows: Cut the fruit in slices and place them in a jar, sprinkle with sugar and cover the jar, which is then scraped to be baked and placed in cold water, and the latter is heated to the boiling point. The jar is then removed, allowed to cool, and the juice is poured into little bottles.—New York Telegram.

Odd or Even.

Suppose a person takes an even number of coins or counters, or anything else in one hand, and an odd number in the other, there is a simple method by which to tell in which hand the even number is.

Ask him to multiply the number in his right hand by an odd number, and the number in his left hand by an even; then let him add the two products together and tell you if the total sum be odd or even. If it be seen the even number is in the right hand, and if it be odd the even number is in the left hand.—St. Paul Pioneer-Press.

A Simple Dessert.

A simple dessert, which is a variation of cake and preserves, is made by taking a thick slice of sponge cake—that baked the day before is all the better—and cutting it in round pieces with the aid of a large sized biscuit cutter. Slightly hollow out the center and put in a large teaspoonful of preserved strawberries or cherries, or pineapple. Arrange these cake mounds on a platter and serve with whipped or plain cream, though a whipped cream gives the dish a much prettier appearance.—New York Times.

Closets should be aired the same as bedrooms, and the coming architect, if a woman, will see to it that closets in which clothes are hung are provided with a window, be it ever so small, going out to the yard. The window will be protected so that in nearly all weathers it may remain open and supply the closet with fresh air and light.

To keep the bright, green color of summer cabbage and some other vegetables, boil fast in plenty of water in which has been dissolved a piece of washing soda the size of two peas; cover until the water boils and take off the lid. If the steam is shut in the cabbage will be yellow and unsightly.

To such persons as use salt sifters it is recommended to mix cornstarch with the salt in the proportion of one teaspoonful of the former to five of the latter. This will prevent packing in damp weather, as the starch absorbs the moisture and retains it away from the salt.

A use for oyster shells is to clean the brick of the stove. Lay a number of them on top of the hot coals, and when the fire burns down it will be found that all the clinkers have scaled off the bricks.

It is sometimes surprising to note how early children learn to consider right and wrong. Undue restraint and overmuch urging never help them in this respect, however.

Equal parts of ammonia and turpentine will take paint out of clothing, even if it be hard and dry. Saturate the spot as often as necessary and wash out in soapsuds.

This is an age of details, of finicisms, some people say, and it would seem so when a woman gravely announces that to do her hair over another way reats her.

In washing blinds and dark paint always add several teaspoonfuls of ammonia to the water, and when dry rub the paint with kerosene oil.

FASHIONS.

Dress for Small Boys.

Fineness of material, artistic harmony of coloring and exquisite workmanship mark the costumes prepared for little boys, especially those intended (as are the two shown in the cut) for weddings and evening wear.

These boys' suits are both rather dashing. The smaller one is of velvet, ornamented with a sash of soft silk and steel buckle at the knee. The other is made picturesque with lace ruffles at the neck and wrists. Page's antlks are much worn by little boys at weddings. One of these is of gray velveteen, with a scant sash around the waist of pink Indian silk; the breeches are tight, showing neat stockings, and a cap completes the costume. A cream serge made up with a cream silk shirt, which appears beneath a loose coat, the sleeves open, the an oval slashing on the outside of the arm, and held together by bows, represents another attractive design. A large white felt hat is worn with this.

A useful boy's suit, which could be made in camlet or serge, velveteen, cotton or silk, consists of a cream shirt and breeches, trimmed with feather stitching. The open jackets and shirts are so popular with their turndown collars that even the girls are wearing them, and the boys have many velveteen suits with silk shirts confined at the waist with leather belts.

—Griff Williams, the banjoist and comedian, who, it is said, made such a big hit at the Elkwood, and Miss Leona Lewis, one of the serio-comic singers, were married Wednesday afternoon.

—In order to complete the Government contracts, it has been found necessary for the foundrymen and others at the Pond Machine Tool Works, to work evenings until 9:30 o'clock. This new order went into effect the first of the week.

—There is a family in North Plainfield who have their eggs for table use shipped on by express from Vergentes, Vt. It would seem to a casual observer that the "hen-fruit" must be of extraordinary richness, or else the consignee has a "Frank" with the express company.

—Mr. J. B. Miller was yesterday served with a distress warrant for non-payment of rent amounting to $235. Mr. Miller says he does not owe the amount, as there is a dispute between him and his former landlord over a bill for some alterations for which he (Mr. Miller) paid.

City Court.

Policeman Kiely last night arrested Thomas Sullivan a resident of South Plainfield on the charge of drunkenness, disorderly conduct and indecent exposure. The morning when arraigned in court he pleaded guilty to the charge and City Judge Codington sentenced him to the county jail for fifty days.

Referee—Dr. H. H. Cooley.

The successful riders will be presented with their medals Saturday evening at the Bicycle Club House.

CARNIVAL OF SPORTS.

To be Given by the Manhattan Athletic Club.

A programme has been received by THE NEWS with a request to publish the same. It is from the Manhattan Athletic Club of New York, and as Plainfield has many athletes who may be interested we publish an account of this "Carnival of sports."

It is to be held at "The Manhattan Field 155th street and Eighth avenue, New York, on Saturday, Sept 19th. S. J. Cornell, Madison avenue and 45th street is captain and chairman and will give particulars. There will be: General Athletics, cycling, tennis, base ball, Le-Crosse, football, shooting, race of Naptha launches, senior eight-oared shell-race, swimming and canoe race.

THE HILLSIDE TENNIS TOURNAMENT.

The Gentlemen's Prizes Awarded.

Finals in gentlemen's doubles were played on Thursday afternoon and resulted as follows:

Huntington and Jacobus beat Dilts and Hunt final set 6-3.

R. Beebe and S. West beat Huntington and Jacobus 6-0—6-3—6-2.

A large number of people witnessed the games. At the conclusion, the winners of the singles, Mr. Harry West, and the winners of the doubles, Messrs. R. A. Beebe and Sherwood West were presented with the prizes for each events which were very handsome racquests.

The tournament will be completed on Saturday when the ladies' singles will be played. Games to commence at 10 a. m. and the finals in the afternoon.

Upset in the Mud.

Two young ladies from this city, and their escorts, were seated in a surrey driving home from a pleasure trip to Boynton Beach on Monday evening, when the entire party were treated to the novelty of a mud-bath. One of the wheels on the vehicle struck a deep rut in the roadway, and the result was that all of the occupants were thrown out in a promiscuous heap in the mud. Fortunately no one was injured. Only passing mention is made of the accident, at the request of one of the leaders, who is afraid her "Pa" might hear of it, and put an end to her carriage riding.

An Entire Success.

The forty-ton planer bed which was cast at the Pond Machine Tool Works, a week or more ago, has been taken from the mould and pleased upon two flat cars in the yard adjoining the works. The planer bed which is the largest casting ever made in this State, if not in the United States, was a complete success, and reflects great credit upon Foreman, Andrew McCardle of the foundry, and his corps of able assistants who conducted the pouring, which occupied less than two-and-one-half minutes. The planer is being built for a Pittsburgh firm.

Bowling Green.

The individual contest for the Dunellen Bowling Green Club badge will begin on the Club grounds next Saturday afternoon. The club has been presented by Mr. John Adams with a large, beautiful and costly silver cup, which will be held for contest with any regularly organized bowling green club in the United States. Acceptances of the challenge must be sent in before Oct. 1st. The cup presented by Mr. Adams is one that reflects with credit upon the taste and liberality of that gentleman and the high standing of the club.

A Catamount Shot.

Labor Day Mr. H. Newton Spencer, the popular collector of North Plainfield, in company with Mr. Albert Bunyon, went gunning on the mountains. During the day Mr. Spencer shot an animal nearly twice as large as a cat which an old hunter said was a catamount. The animal has since been buried.

I have recommended Dr. David Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" to many in Shelton and Birmingham, and I have yet to find one who has not been benefited by it.—C. L. Sawyer, Birmingham, Conn.—ADV.

A RUNAWAY ACCIDENT.

The Driver Thrown Out and Wagon Badly Wrecked.

An exciting runaway accident occurred on East Front street at about half-past nine o'clock this morning. Mr. Thomas Hyland, a milkman, was driving along that thoroughfare when a young man employed in the Dime Savings Bank was engaged washing windows of that institution with a hose. The noise of the water frightened the animal and it started to run away. Mr. Hyland endeavored to control it, but the measure was useless. The wagon was overturned and Mr. Hyland was thrown out. The frightened horse then broke loose from the wagon and started on a run down the street. When near Boehm's dry goods store it was caught. Mr. Hyland escaped with a few slight bruises. The wagon was badly wrecked, the harness was broken and the milk bottles and cases were scattered around the street. A number of the bottles were broken. The accident caused a large crowd to congregate.

DELICATE EATERS.

The Estables Twenty-Three Fat Men Consumed.

Plainfield has several citizens who are "fat, fair and forty," but it is doubtful if any twenty-three of them, if there are that many together could do what the Fat Men's Club of New York State did at their recent meeting.

Here is what they eat—and they didn't feel like eating real hearty either: Twenty-five bushels of clams, 100 chickens, 10 bushels of oysters, 500 ears of corn, a barrel of white potatoes, half a barrell of sweet potatoes, 40 watermelons, a barrel of onions, and tripe and other things in proportion.

None of the "fat men" weighed less than 300 pounds. The Crescent League are holding a clam bake to-day at Echo Lake near Westfield. They will emulate the "fat men" perhaps.

STATE NEWS

BRET HARTE'S PEN COULD TELL IT.

A tragic and pathetic incident, reminiscent of Bret Harte and witness to the faithfulness of some of his best stories, occurred in Utah last week. The lifeless body of a young man, finely dressed, with a bullet hole in his forehead and a rope around his neck, was found leaning against a tree in Calder's Park, a pleasure ground near Salt Lake city. On the body was this note: "To the Coroner or Whom it May Concern: I kill myself because I am dead broke and am tired of living. My name is Mud, and this is a proper ending of an unfortunate life. I have no friends and am a stranger in the city. Please put me away in the nearest burying place to where you find my body and accept thanks, for that is all I have to give. The man's story was probably worth telling, and he could doubtless have told it in a way that would have made it worth listening to.

DEATH WAS CLOSE TO THEM.

The passengers on the Rahway train bound east on the Pennsylvania Railroad late on Tuesday night were greatly frightened as they passed the Waverly switch by a terrific jar apparently caused by something striking against the bottom of the forward car. As the train rolled on smoothly their fears were dispelled. When the train arrived at Jersey City, however, there was a greatly excited crowd of examiners. As they went pounding the wheels and peering under the cars, they found a rail twenty-two feet long tightly wedged in a truck of the forward car. The rail was a widened part of a switch. Inquiry at Waverly develoved the fact that a portion of the switch at that point was missing. Thomas Bedell, the engineer, says the train was running fifty miles an hour at the time it passed the switch.

AN EXCEPTIONALLY CLEVER SWINDLE.

The officers of the Edison Electric Company are looking for a clever forger who is buying clothes at their expense. A week ago this young man presented an order from the Edison Company on a Newark clothier for $25 worth of clothes. The order stated that if the man who presented it didn't buy clothes to that amount the balance should be sent to the Edison Company and on no account be given to the bearer of the order. This looked so genuine that the young man's order was accepted, and he purchased $24 worth of clothes and departed. A messenger was sent to the office of the Edison Company with the $1. The officers of the company said that they had given no such order, and an examination of it showed that the young man who wanted clothes has been clever enough to change in several ways the officer's name that he signed to the order, so that exactly he didn't forge the name, and the $24 he got makes his offence just $1 this side of felony.

108 YEARS OLD.

The celebration of the birthday of Mrs. Sarah Van Nostrand was a social event of no little importance to the people of Millstone on Monday, she having completed her one hundred and third year on this earth in very fair health and spirits. She was called on and congratulated by her children, grand children, great grand children, and great great grand children. Besides nearly all of these a great many of the old lady's friends and neighbors also called to pay their respects and to congratulate her upon the auspicious event.

Sarah Van Nostrand is indeed a wonderful instance of longevity. Born in the village of Millstone, Sept. 6, 1788, she has lived there all her long, and quiet life, doing that which her hands found to do in the love of the Lord, and with kindness and charity towards all people. Considering her great age she is a wonderfully preserved woman, having the use of all her faculties with the exception that she has, within the past two or three years, been slightly hard of hearing. For all those who called upon her she had a grasp of the hand, a kindly smile and a pleasant greeting. She is able to move about the house and wait upon herself. She seems to fully enjoy life, and spends most of her waking hours seated in her easy rocker at a front window looking out upon passing people and events, and is able to name every neighbor and team that passes by. If a stranger or a strange horse or team passes she will know it at once. Her face, which is almost without a wrinkle, does not by any means indicate her years, and a stranger would not consider her to be more than 70 years old.

Young Christians Meet.

The Union County Christian Endeavor Union held a meeting in the Trinity Reformed church in this city last evening. The meeting was held for the purpose of hearing the reports of the delegates who attended the convention at Minneapolis. The reports were of an interesting nature and were eagerly listened to by all present. At the conclusion of the meeting an elaborate collation was serve in the Sunday-school room of the church, after which the members of the of the various Unions left for their respective homes.

SOCIAL & PERSONAL

Miss Georgie Cornell has returned to this city, after a season spent in Vermont.

Mr. Charles Carty and Miss Mary Lyons of this city were married in St. Mary's Church yesterday.

Miss S. Kennedy of New Orleans has been visiting near friends on North avenue, during the present week.

The family of Mr. Henry E. Bowen of Belvidere avenue, are expected home from Woodstock, Conn., this month.

Mr. Bethune D. Dunham of Piscataway has been chosen a member of the Middlesex County Grand Jury for present term of court.

Mr. Charles E. Boss, the principal of the North Plainfield public school, has returned from his usual Summer vacation.

Mr. John R. Clark, formerly of Westfield, but now of Canenovia, N. Y., is visiting his daughter, Mrs. H. H. Connett, of West Fourth street.

Miss Nellie Chappell has returned to her home in Kingston, N. Y., from a pleasant visit to her aunt, Mrs. H. H. Connett of West Fourth street.

Messrs. Augustus Trust, A. P. Wheeler, A. I. Smalley and Wm. Pierson of North Plainfield, have gone for a two weeks' partridge shoot in upper New York State.

Miss Lizzie Butter of Brooklyn, N. Y., for some time past a patient at Dr. Cooley's Sanitarium in North Plainfield, died at that institution on Wednesday. Consumption is said to have been the cause of death. Relatives of the dead woman had the body removed to Brooklyn, on Wednesday evening.

Mr. Rudolph Titsworth has returned to his home on West Seventh street yesterday from Westerly, R. I. He was accompanied by his son George M. Titsworth who went to Westerly several weeks ago to attend the convention of the Seventh-Day Baptists and during his stay there he was quite ill with rheumatism. He is now almost convalescent.

Mr. and Mrs. George Voehl of West Front street are anticipation a pleasure trip to Lake Ontario, where they go to visit Mr. C. F. Stillwell, a brother-in-law of Mrs. Voehl, who is general superintendent of the Edison Electric Light Company in Ontario. Mr. Frank Fraser, formerly of this city, also enjoys a responsive position with the Edison Company there.

It becomes our sad duty to record the death of Arthur O., the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Horace M. Sherwin of Orchard place. The little fellow breathed his last this morning. Mr. and Mrs. Sherwin have the sympathy of a large circle of friends and acquaintances in the hour of their bereavement. The funeral will take place from his late residence to-morrow afternoon at half-past two o'clock.

Mr. Herve W. Georgi of Jamestown N. Y., will conduct the Friday evening meeting of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of Park Avenue Baptist Church. Mr. Georgi in connection with his companian, "Rob." Jones, have been doing noble work for Christ in Jamestown and vicinity, and he is now on his way to Brown's University where he expects to complete his preparations for evangelistic work.

EXACT LEGAL STATUS OF A ROOSTER

Is Chanticleer an Animal, and If Not, What Is He?

In a recent number of the Philadelphia Medical News is a remarkably legal decision made in Hudson county, in a health board prosecution. The decision is one that involves not only the peace and sleep of millions of people, but also compromises the dignity of the American rooster by depriving him of an inalienable right as well, by dragging him into the New Jersey Appelate Court.

"The complaint was in reference to certain noisy crowing roosters, alleged to be a detriment to the health of a neighborhood by reason of the production of insomnia, a ground of complaint," says the News, "common to the experience of nearly all boards of health.

After listening to the counsel on each side the Court decided against the Board of Health on the ground that "a rooster is not an animal in a legal sense." The New Jersey State Board of Health will appeal the case.

"A rooster is not an animal in a legal sense?" Has the Wouter von Twiller breed degenerated and transmigrated into the Judge of Hudson county? Is a rooster a vegetable in a legal sense, or is he a minerel? In various boarding-houses people have met and been conquered by roosters that had all the characteristics of carnivorous omnivora, not exactly trilobites, but try-to-bites. The Judge did not say that the rooster is not an animal; he left a loop-hole by saying that a rooster is not an animal "in a legal sense." Turning to the standard reading to Bouvier's Law Dictionary, an animal is "any animate being which is not human, endowed with voluntary motion." A rooster is an animate being; it is not human; it is strongly endowed with voluntary motion. Perhaps the Judge meant to say that a rooster is not an animal in a New Jersey legal sense, but he didn't say that. Not only is a rooster an animal in a legal sense, but there are plenty decisions that would have warranted the Hudson county Judge in deciding for the plaintiff.

A PAINFUL FINGER.

The Nail May Have to be Cut Out.

As reported in the News some four weeks ago Mr. John Ammon, while engaged working at his trade as a carpenter, nearly sawed the top of his right thumb off with a circular saw, the teeth of which penetrated the nail. Mr. Ammon did not pay much attention to the accident at the time, but a few days afterward it became so painful that he found it necessary to call on a physician. He went to Dr. Hedges and has been under his care ever since. An abcess has formed under the nail and the doctor thinks that it will be necessary to cut the nail out before the finger will heal. He will know to-morrow. If he finds it necessary the operation will be a very painful one.

Claims His Wife Deserted Him.

A colored man named Freeman, who lives near the Terrill Road, claims that his wife deserted him a few days ago, taking two children with her. A man when telling his story to some bystanders at the depot, recently, seemed to be heartbroken over his misfortune, and stated that he intended to ferret out his wife's whereabouts.

Fooled by a Practical Joker.

One of the Park avenue barber shops was suddenly closed on Tuesday afternoon, when the only clerk in charge was told by a practical joker, who chanced to pass, that the barber's employer wanted to see him immediately at a saloon on Front street. The knight of the razor hastened to the place, and there learned that he was the victim of a joke.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Our Cities Viewed Socially.

Mrs. M. E. W. Sherwood has been looking into fashionable society as differentiated in the cities of New York, Philadelphia, Chicago and Washington. In Lippincott's Magazine she gives her impressions, after an absence of some time from her native land has enabled her to view matters impartially.

Of course, New York is the self appointed leader of whatever is called society in America. "You know," says the New York woman to her sister who lives in St. Louis, "we consider every place outside of Nee Yawk a mere country village." The rest of the country will be thankful if Chicago shall become a bigger town than the seaport, if for no other reason than to cut the comb of New York conceit.

Mrs. Sherwood reviews New York society and thanks her stars that it is in the first place—decent. There are no Tranby Croft stories or other scandals such as disgrace the fair fame of the British fashionable set. The Vanderbilts and Astors are respectable, moral people, and in most respects an example to their fellow countrymen. But New York society—say it in a whisper—is tedious. There are glare, glitter and jingle, and a great wave of splendor and luxury, but intellectual brightness and flavor are wanting.

William Penn and Dr. Franklin laid the foundation of society in Philadelphia, and upon that base it rests to this day. Philadelphia life is elegant, beautiful and artistic, but quiet, intensely quiet. People there rather pride themselves on not making much of a show of their wealth. There is a sort of a Quakerlike sparkle to it all that the writer finds charming. The women speak with a soft, slightly southern accent, and look as though a turmoil of science and high and noble thought.

Then we come to Chicago. Mrs. Sherwood finds society here strangely fascinating. There is enormous wealth, yet the people do not seem to be money worshipers to the extent they are in New York, and the tendy, that unwholesome wretch, is conspicuously absent.

Chicago has a society entirely its own. It is as fresh as a rose. It has four elements of success—great wealth, wonderfully large, beautiful homes, a very stimulating climate and a set of educated and refined women, each of whom is an individual. No one Chicago woman is the same as another Chicago woman. Why should she be? They have all come from different states and cities, and they have not yet become a community. They are all travelers, they return laden with the spoils of every country, they know a great deal, they have the good taste to dress well and they are in the youth and health and prosperity. There is little or no gossip and no detraction in Chicago society.

It is only when telling us about Chicago that Mrs. Sherwood becomes really waked up and enthusiastic. She finds that city full of gentlewomen who are gifted, sparkling talkers, of energetic and interesting men, of beautiful girls and handsome manly boys. She also believes there is more solid enjoyment to the social square inch in Chicago than in any other city in the Union except Washington.

There her real partiality crops out. Chicago would fill her eye completely, from a social point of view, if her heart had not already been captured by the charms of Washington. This lively literary lady finds what thousands and thousands of intelligent people have already found before her—that there is a social charm about the capital city that is shared by no other place in the world, of either Europe or America. Every year wealthy Americans retiring from business are more and more discovering this same fact, and erecting beautiful homes in the city of George Washington himself planned out for the exercise of the future. "One may well be proud to have a foreigner introduced into society in Washington," writes M. E. W. S. Further:

Washington is now the most desirable place of residence in the whole continent of America, from its fine parks and its broad streets, its beautiful houses, ample apartment houses, abundant markets and convenient access, with the certainty of society the year round. Even in midsummer, with its neighborhood of wooded heights, it is said to be not disagreeable. In spring it is the fairest flush on the cheek of Proserpine. No spot, excepting the Riviera, is more beautiful. A drive to the Soldiers' home in May is a darling dream of joeund summer.

The three stately squares, each of which contains a hero, with a purpetual benediction on them, that widow of the Capitol which, like an architect's dream, crowns the hill and finishes one's perspective, all this and more that always made Washington a pleasant, and since pamperingly has come in, now makes it the spot of all others which a rich American should be found in his old age. It may be he will have "a stately pleasure house decree."

Mr. Bancroft set the fashion in making it a retreat for that literary age, and had a theory that "as one grew older one should go south." It was a wise one. A couple of years ago, when the supporta gave way and it was precipitated on a number of men who were at work below, Henry Smith was killed and six Italian so fatally injured. Several others were seriously hurt.

Verdict of the Park Place Disaster Jury.

NO LIGHT SHED ON THE HORROR.

A Lecture on the Inefficacy of the Present Building Laws the Only Fruit of Days of Investigation by the Coroner's Twelve Good Men and True.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—Sixty-three lives crushed out in an overloaded death trap of a building, and no one to blame. That is practically the verdict of the coroner's jury in the Park place disaster! The jury held a dozen sessions, listened to a great volume of testimony from some who escaped from the doomed structure and from practical builders, deliberated for six hours after the evidence was all in and then brought in a verdict as unintelligible as unsatisfactory. This ridiculous outcome of the official investigation into the cause of death of over fifty persons is the more remarkable because Coroner Hanly boasted that his jury was composed of men of more than ordinary intellectual equipment, many of whom are experts in building matters.

No Fault of an Explosion.

There was absolutely no positive statement made to the jurors that the collapse of the building was due to an explosion, but there was, on the other hand, overwhelming evidence that the floors were overweighted. In spite of this fact this much lauded jury last night brought in this disappointing and useless verdict:

The Findings of the Jury.

We find that Sarah Ann Heagney, Frederick Trippe, John Hillis and others met their death on July 28, 1891, by reason of the falling of the building known as 62, 70, 72 and 74 Park place, in the city of New York.

We find that while the timbers and walls of said building were of fairly good material and construction, that the iron columns were not as strong as they should have been, and the partitions called for or as they should have been to support safely the weight of the buildings and occupants for which they were constructed. We find that the fall of said building resulted from the breaking of one or more of said iron columns in or near the middle of the ground floor. We further find that the fracture of said column or columns was due to some sudden shock applied to the exterior of said column or columns and not primarily due to its or their apparent inherent weakness.

The Cause Out of Reach.

After a most careful weighing of the evidence presented to us we are unable to determine whether this was caused by the explosion of the vapor of benzine employed in manner and quantity contrary to law in said building or some other shock. We therefore, after the death of all the principal eye witnesses, is not ascertainable.

The jury respectfully recommends to his honor, the coroner, that he ask his excellency, the governor of the state, at the next meeting of the legislature, to call attention to the urgent need of legislation, not only authorizing but enabling the fire department and the department of buildings in this city to inspect periodically all buildings used for printing, manufacturing, storage or similar purposes, not only to insure against overloading, but as to the maintenance or employment of explosive and dangerously inflammable substances in any building where other labor is employed or many inhabitants reside, and to employ all needed inspectors for said purposes.

Useful and Convenient Aprons.

Aprons are now to be seen in many different materials, including white lawns, plain and embroidered checks, pompadour prints, embroidered zephyrs or muslins. A very dressy apron for afternoon wear has a gathered bib and a Swiss belt, below which is loosely tied a girdle of the same mesterie to match the principal color in the print—sateen or zephyr, which is employed. Artists and ladies occupied in painting that all the dress finds a pair of aprons which converts a plain apron virtually into a dress, a useful addition.

TWO NEW APRONS.

Two useful and becoming aprons are here represented. One is in soft muslin with embroidered edge, tucks at the bottom and belt. The other is made of lawn with a large pocket at the side, the upper portion is formed of two separate braces, with a plaited frill gathered into a wide pointed band, which encircles the waist. The pointed bands of these aprons add greatly to the style and fit of the garments.

Dr. Justin's Tests Successful.

UTICA, N. Y., Sept. 11.—At Perryville rather a test of the goats projected by and thrown from the ordinary rifled gun. The tests were a great success. A shell containing fourteen pounds of nitro-glycerine exploded nearly five tons of rock against which it was fired. Dr. Justin is confident that there will be no further accidents.

Crushed by a Falling Car.

LEBANON, Pa., Sept. 11.—As the Cornwall ore banks a car loaded with ore was being run across a trestle over a ravine when the supports gave way and it was precipitated on a number of men who were at work below. Henry Smith was killed and six Italians fatally injured. Several others were seriously hurt.

Will Hendricks Succeed Fassett?

STRACUSE, N. Y., Sept. 11.—Friends of Senator Francis Hendricks, who has been mentioned as the probable successor of J. Sloat Fassett as collector of the port of New York, said today that the senator would not accept the place.

He Fled Owing $23,000.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—Lewis Stein, manufacturer of garters and elastic supporters at 373 Canal street, under the style of Lewis Stein & Co., has disposed of his business and fled to Montreal, leaving debts reported at over $25,000.

Grubb Meets the President.

CAPE MAY POINT, N. J., Sept. 11.—General E. Burd Grubb and Captain J. W. Wharton called at the shore capitol in the morning and had a conference with the president.

DOUBLE SUICIDE AT NIAGARA FALLS.

Two People, Thought to Be Lovers, End Their Troubles in the Cataract.

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., Sept. 11.—At 1:30 p. m. a young man deliberately committed suicide here by wading out into the rapids and going over the falls. He was alone and appeared to be well aware what he was doing. He spoke of the falls to some one near him, remarking that a man would be dashed to pieces if he went over them. He was in a moment later floating in the current a few feet above the brink of the falls.

The horrified crowd called to him to save himself, but he coolly replied: "I am going over the falls." That was the last seen of him. He left no clew to his identity.

Hardly had this story been circulated when another tragedy was enacted. It was the suicide of a young woman who leaped into the swift current above the falls from Prospect park. She was good looking, quite stout, attired in black and about thirty years old. She was observed sitting a short distance from the falls reading a letter. Then she inclined to the stone as the point, hastily climbed over the iron railing on the wall, gathered up her skirts and took the awful plunge.

The water at this point, while swift, is not deep, and she was being slowly carried toward the edge of the falls when an employe of the Cataract House, of Philadelphia, sprang out into the water and attempted to grasp the woman. But the current was too strong and the rescuer barely escaped with his life. The woman made no attempt to save herself, and quickly disappeared over the brink to death. A cheap black parasol was all the clew she left to her identity. The supposition is that these two unfortunates, whoever they were, had arranged to die and that they had come here together, although they may not have been in company.

It was later ascertained that the name of the man who committed suicide was Albert Helmlich, of New York.

HAS SHE MET CRONIN'S FATE?

Strange Disappearance of a Wealthy Woman at Chicago.

CHICAGO, Sept. 11.—Miss Vera Ava, a wealthy Englishwoman who came to Chicago recently to raise the standard of living in the slums, is reported to the police as missing. She had been stopping at the residence of the Rev. Dr. Bolton. Miss Ava and Miss Bolton were in the Catholic church on West Twelfth street. Miss Ava entered the building and Mrs. Bolton waited for her in the carriage. Miss Ava told her companion that she intended having a few minutes' talk with the priest.

Mrs. Bolton finally became alarmed when Miss Ava did not return. She remembered that the missionary had spoken of receiving letters in which her life was threatened, and at once notified the police. Detectives were sent from the priest at the church that Miss Ava had called, and after fifteen minutes' conversation had gone away. All attempts to gain any clew to her whereabouts after that time have thus far been fruitless.

Miss Ava is said to be very wealthy, and has left home in her private car. Her delight in her work in the slums and her indulging her hobby for "slumming." Her friends say that her crusade against wrong has made her many enemies, who have threatened her life in return to serve her as Dr. Cronin was treated.

THE WORK OF A TRAIN WRECKER.

"The Man from Peru" Under Arrest by Easton Detectives.

PHILLIPSBURG, N. J., Sept. 11.—At Kennedy's station, on the Lehigh Valley road, near Phillipsburg, a quantity of dynamite was placed on the track and a freight train blown to pieces. The engine was thrown off the track, but no one was hurt. There is no clew to the perpetrators of the deed.

When five miles east of Easton the engineer was startled by a terrific explosion on the track, and both he and the fireman were hurled from the cab. Upon investigation it was found that a dynamite torpedo had been placed on the track, while further along two similar torpedoes were found. Had the passenger train following the freight not been delayed it would have probably struck all three torpedoes before it could have been stopped.

A man, supposed to be Louis D. Barrand, of New York, and who left the Easton detectives believe that he is Oscar Remel, the notorious "Man from Peru," who has a long record of crimes of the train wrecking order.

Many Recruits for Yale.

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 11.—Although the fall term at Yale does not begin until Sept. 24, there are already many students here—mostly freshmen—who are obliged to make up their conditions. The class of '95 will be by far the largest in Yale's history, as it numbers nearly 300 more than any previous class.

They Filled a Lighted Lamp.

MONONGAHELA CITY, Pa., Sept. 11.—The two daughters of John Estelle were filling a lighted lamp when the oil exploded, setting the young girls on fire and burning a wide pointed band, which encircles the waist. The pointed bands of these aprons add greatly to the style and fit of the garments.

Dr. Justin's Tests Successful.

UTICA, N. Y., Sept. 11.—At Perryville rather a test of the goats projected by and thrown from the ordinary rifled gun. The tests were a great success. A shell containing fourteen pounds of nitro-glycerine exploded nearly five tons of rock against which it was fired. Dr. Justin is confident that there will be no further accidents.

MILLIONS FOR CHARITY.

Full Details of Baron Hirsch's Bountiful Plan.

BRITISH POLITICIANS INTERESTED.

They Consider the Trades Union Congress at Newcastle an Important Event. Russian Troops Reported Fighting in Afghanistan.

LONDON, Sept. 11.—The articles of association which will formally launch Baron Hirsch's munificent scheme of benefaction to the poor and oppressed of his race were published today. It takes the form of a limited liability company, called "The Jewish Colonization association," registered, the office of which will be in London. Its nominal capital is £2,000,000, in 20,000 shares of £100 each. Of these, Baron Maurice de Hirsch subscribes to 19,999. Seven Hebrew gentlemen are named in the articles as owning one share each: Lord Rothschild, Sir Julian Goldsmid, Ernest John Cassel, F. D. Mocatta and Benjamin Louis Cohen, all of London, and Salomon Reinach and S. H. Goldschmidt, of Paris. This leaves three shares unallotted, and doubtless these will be offered to representatives of the United States and Germany.

Objects of the Association.

The objects of the association are to assist the immigration of Jews from countries in Europe and Asia, where they are subjected to special taxes and disabilities, to other parts of the world, and establish colonies in North and South America for agricultural and other useful purposes. The association takes to itself full rights to carry on trade, commerce and all industrial operations which may facilitate the objects of the company; to purchase property, negotiate securities, etc.

Not Subject to Dividend.

The whole property of the company and the income arising from it are consecrated solely to the work in view. None of it can ever be taken, directly or indirectly, as a dividend or bonus.

Not more than half the capital is to be applied to acquiring property, buying lands, erecting buildings, etc. The rest is to be applied to expenses of transport and otherwise to colonization purposes.

The Governing Body.

The governing body will be a council of administration consisting of from three to six men, who need not necessarily be members of the company and who will be elected for five years. These will have no salaries, but will have their actual expenses. This council will appoint directors, three or less in number, who will get salaries and be required to have no interest whatever in any business and devote their whole time to the work of the company.

De Freycinet Talks Peace.

PARIS, Sept. 11.—The banquet given at Vaudeuvre by M. de Freycinet, minister of war, to the French generals who are taking part in the army maneuvers, was apparently selected as the occasion for the French government, through M. de Freycinet, to give utterance to its views upon the peace prospects of Europe. M. de Freycinet made special reference to the pacific tendencies of France. The leading ideas of the toast were, he said, to throw new light on and to give exercise in the duties of a commander in chief. The results showed that the supreme command had worked satisfactorily.

The Labor Congress.

NEWCASTLE, Sept. 11.—Advices from London state that the working men's congress at Newcastle is being closely watched by British politicians, who appear to be awakening to the fact that the deliberations of these delegates, representing a million and a half of workmen, may have a powerful influence upon the politics of the future. The congress has fixed the age of children allowed to work in factories at thirteen.

Scandals in Canada.

OTTAWA, Sept. 11.—The senate committee on railways has reported that the charges of corrupt use of $175,000 of the subsidy granted by the province of Quebec to the Baie des Chaleurs Railway company have been proved, and that among those profiting by the misuse of funds were Premier Mercier, Hon. C. A. Pelletier, Hon. Charles Langelier, Hon. F. Langelier, J. I. Tarte and Ernest Pacaud.

The Governor General Pleased.

MONTREAL, Sept. 11.—At the session of the National Electrical association, Governor General Lord Stanley was escorted through the exhibition building and expressed himself as greatly surprised and delighted with its magnitude and novelty. Captain A. R. Gifford, Quebec, argued that the health and morality of our cities would be greatly benefited by the use of electrical street cars.

Harmony in Maryland Again.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 11.—The war among the Republicans in this state has been settled at a conference of prominent Republicans, at which Charles T. Westcott, of Kent, withdrew from the chairmanship of the state central committee. This entirely satisfied Colonel Van Nort, and he will remain on the ticket for governor. Harmony again prevails.

Only Forty Fat Men Left.

NORWALK, Conn., Sept. 11.—The twenty-fifth annual reunion and clambake of the Fat Men's association was held at Bellin's point yesterday. Of the once famous association but forty members remain and Thomas Gorman, of Bridgeport, is the last president and Patrick Murphy secretary and treasurer.

Bridgeport's Welcome to the Squadron.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Sept. 11.—The white squadron was visited by thousands of people here yesterday. In the afternoon Rear Admiral Walker and his officers visited various places in the vicinity. A collation was served at the George Hotel, Black Rock. In the evening there was a search light display off Seaside park.

ELMIRA HAILS FASSETT.

A Warm Welcome Home to the Young Nominee.

DEEDS NOT MEN ARE THE ISSUES.

New York Democrats Talking of Ex-Secretary Whitney; Don Lamont or Roswell P. Flower to Oppose the ex-Collector—Mayor Grant a Delegate.

ELMIRA, N. Y., Sept. 11.—After enthusiastic receptions at Canandaigua, Penn Yan, Watkins, Havana and Horseheads, Hon. J. Sloat Fassett, Republican nominee for governor of New York state, was welcomed home by his fellow citizens of Elmira last evening in princely style. When Horseheads was reached a delegation from Elmira boarded the train accompanied by a brass band. The six remaining miles to Elmira were made lively with patriotic airs and songs. "We'll Put Sloat Fassett in the Gubernatorial Chair" was popular with the travelers and was often repeated.

Arriving at Elmira the scene was of great magnificence. Colored lights, Roman candles, skyrockets, chasers and bombs were exploded continuously, while the band played and the multitude, which had gathered to license the youngest man who has ever been honored with the gubernatorial nomination of the state of New York, shouted cheer after cheer for Fassett, for Sloat Fassett and for J. Sloat Fassett. The nominee, accompanied by his wife and mother, entered the first carriage, and the procession started.

A Young Man Shot with a Rocket.

The entire party were driven through the principal streets of the city, which were gorgeously decorated and illuminated. Conspicuous among the illuminations were the elegant residences of Charles J. Langdon, between whom and Mr. Fassett there had been some political differences, notwithstanding the fact that both are Republicans. During the drive a young man named George Bechtel was struck by a rocket, the stick passing through his neck, inflicting a probably fatal wound. At the opera house the party were escorted to the seats on the stage. In the course of a long speech Mr. Fassett spoke feelingly of his love for Elmira. Continuing, he said:

Mr. Fassett's Speech.

Right here and now, without wounding sensibilities, without creating irritation in a limited sense, I want to meet and put the issues of the campaign and to tell you how I purpose doing my share of the work. I hope this is to be a campaign of discussion. I want to have it on the lights. I want you to search the records. I want you to be satisfied, and I want you to have your party, and that is that the shall be absolutely purely a campaign of education and organization. No campaign of personal abuse, no holding up the light of false issues, no toleration of falsehoods and misrepresentations. I am amongst the first of our young Americans to think about and to come to conclusions about without sensations, falsehoods and personal detractions of any name or nature whatever.

The "Practical Politician."

I have been called a practical politician. I believe I am. I belong to the Grand Union that I wished every American citizen of twenty-one years or upward was a practical politician. It is the first duty of every American man to be a practical American politician. What do I mean by that? I mean by it to be a student of every American in the land sufficient interest in public affairs, to devote sufficient time to the study and investigation, to be able to pass an intelligent verdict on all public questions that are brought forward to him for his consideration. To see to and to be for law and order to be enforced, to ask for protection of his person and property unless he is willing to show an intelligent interest in second to the organization and participation in public affairs. Let the light be turned on the legislative record of Republican and Democratic legislators alike, and on the Democratic executive for nine years.

The Duty of a Leader.

If I understand the duty of a leader it is not to violently enforce his own will against the better judgment of his party, but so far as his intelligence and strength will permit to formally present to the people of the state the average judgment, the average hope and the average aspiration of the party behind him.

His Criticism of Governor Hill.

While I reserve myself the right to say kind things of my neighbor, Governor David B. Hill I also reserve myself to mercilessly criticise his public policy and public acts. [Cheers.] If in the discharge of his duty I shall be as cruel as the case may be, but forgotten the people for his party, or has neglected his party for the people, I shall be free to the contrary criticism and his care to the voice of the people, I have a right, say, it is my duty. I have been true to my party. I have public career I have been divisive in my duty to my constituents, if I have outraged the interests of party or party organization, I will plead guilty. If I have been indifferent to the views of the people in the primes and neglected the schools and the interests of the public welfare, it is not only the right of my Democratic opponents to say so, but it is their duty. So stand I to be under stood that this is to be a campaign if the good Lord will give us grace enough to go through on those lines, carrying the light on a liberal dissemination of records and discussion of measures, not men.

Mayor Grant a Delegate.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—Democrats of the eastern assembly districts have elected the following delegates to state convention. Among the more prominent of these chosen were Mayor Grant, Congressmen Fellows, J. J. O'Donohue, John R. Voorhis and Amos J. Cummings.

Perhaps Whitney or Lamont.

The New York Herald says: "The nomination of J. Sloat Fassett has disturbed Democratic politicians all along the line. Even the most prejudiced leaders of the party admit that the nomination is a strong one. In many respects it is the strongest Republican ticket that could be named. Governor Flower and Elmira will give the Democracy throughout the state a savage fight for supremacy in November.

"Governor Flower and his friends are not slow to appreciate Fassett's advantages of youth, popularity, intelligence and, most of all, tireless energy. The Herald says it still remains to be nominated by the Democrats, but that ex-Secretary of the Navy William C. Whitney or Don Lamont may head the ticket.

In the event of Roswell P. Flower receives the Democratic nomination for governor at the Saratoga convention he will at once resign his place as congressman.

Brooklyn's Delegates Chosen.

BROOKLYN, Sept. 11.—At the Democratic caucus held this evening to select delegates to the state convention among those chosen were Hugh McLaughlin, Albert F. Jonas, General Henry W. Slocum and James M. Hidgway.

Dickinson for Bishop.

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 11.—It is announced here that Rev. Dr. Isaac L. Nicholson has secured the position of bishop of Milwaukee. It is said that a majority of the house of delegates have given their consent by his election to Presiding Bishop Wilmarth, of Connecticut.

The Light of Hope.

There's a nice clerk in a certain Detroit music store, who has not only a dreamer, but of late he has become very religiously inclined. The other day a pretty girl from the country came into the store.

"Good morning," he said politely.

"Good morning," she responded. "Have you 'White Wings?'"

"I beg your pardon," he stammered.

"Have you 'White Wings?'" she repeated.

"Not yet," he answered meekly. Then hopefully, "but I expect to have some day, miss."

The girl looked at him for a second and hurriedly got out.—Detroit Free Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 11.—Experts Lawrence E. Brown and Taylor Faunce have stopped work as government agents in examining the books of the defunct Keystone National bank. This action was necessitated by the exhaustion of the special appropriation to pay experts on defunct banks. The suspension was unexpected, as no one supposed that such a paltry sum as $5,000 was the total appropriation for work that might include hundreds of the 3,800 national banks in the country. This state of affairs is particularly unfortunate in the Keystone bank's state of affairs, as it will necessarily greatly impede the investigation, although Secret Service Agent Albert Barrett, who is employed on a salary, will continue at work.

Mr. Faunce said that he and Mr. Brown had been placed in a place where they saw daylight in the darkness which has surrounded the mysterious disappearance of money from the bank. Had they been continued on the books they had expected to shortly clear up the mystery. Messrs. Brown and Faunce will continue, however, to work on Bardsley's accounts for the city. No more arrests of Keystone bank officials are at present contemplated.

BARON FAVA IN TROUBLE.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—Private advices received here from Rome make it appear that Baron Fava, the Italian ex-minister at Washington, who got his government into an awful controversy with the United States over the New Orleans riot and was recalled, has been placed "under accusation" for unintelligible failure to give use money allowed for the rent of a legation mansion in this city. Italians say that being placed "under accusation" is equivalent to an indictment.

It is explained that the minister was allowed by his country $5,000 a year for the rent of "a palace." While here, however, he occupied rooms in a very modest house, which, it is said, cost him a very small sum each month. Persons who entertained on very friendly footing for him called the attention of the Italian government to the matter. It is said also that the prime minister had an investigation made to determine how much style his minister kept up while here. His being put "under accusation" was the result.

PENNSYLVANIA AT THE FAIR.

She Will Offer Prizes for Plans of Her Exposition Buildings.

HARRISBURG, Sept. 11.—The World's fair commission held a regular monthly meeting, with Governor Pattison in the chair. The architectural exercises committee reported making recommendations as to the general style and character of the buildings to be erected. The cost is not to exceed $75, 000 and the space to be covered is about 4,000 square feet. The committee will offer prizes of $1,000 $600 and $300 for the best plans of the buildings.

W. A. Gill, of Philadelphia, was chosen a member of the board in place of Benjamin Whitman, resigned. The appointment of Governor George K. Snowden, of Philadelphia, to represent Pennsylvania on the committee to arrange for the opening ceremonies was announced by the governor. A. Hagner was appointed a member of the executive committee in place of Benjamin Whitman. The commission then adjourned.

Japan Will Exert Herself.

CHICAGO, Sept. 11.—Advices from Japanese officials state that the government will make the greatest display at the World's fair that it has ever attempted on a similar occasion.

The Australian Mails Delayed.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—The postoffice authorities in this city were disappointed over the failure of their project to secure speedy transmission of the Australian mails by the steamer Furst Bismarck. New York Central train 14 was late and spoiled the scheme. The mails took thirty-one days in transmission to this city and it was hoped that they could be got to Europe in another week.

William F. Rockwell Dead.

SUMMIT, N. J., Sept. 11.—William F. Rockwell, a well known New York business man, strangled himself with a small rubber-tube at the Highland House. Family dissensions are the supposed cause. Mrs. Rockwell is the daughter of Charles H. Swan, treasurer of the Hudson River Bridge company. Mr. Rockwell was thirty-two years old.

The Pensacola Off for Hawaii.

AN EAST SIDE BALL.

Mag Reilly Preserved to Wait Until Prig Showed Up.

The Swelled Head Juniors held a ball recently in Pythagoras hall. All the elite of Orchard and contiguous streets were present and some who hoped to be elite when the robins nest again, or at some later period. Mag Reilly was there, but her train, Prig Kelly, was late. Consequently Mag was the disconsolate object, a wallflower, for one miserable hour.

Mag suffered keenly, but none of the boys dared ask her to dance. They were afraid of Prig's vengeance. At last a callow youth, who was a stranger in the locality and consequently unacquainted with its etiquette, ventured to draw near to Mag. He wore a decent suit of clothing and taken altogether presented a respectable appearance. He formed quite a contrast in comparison with the rest of the crowd. He bowed politely to Mag and said:

"May I have the pleasure of a dance with you?"

The style, manner and address of the youth staggered Mag for a moment. She looked him all over, from the three inch collar to the shining boots, and then expressed in tones of withering contempt:

"What! You dance wid me! Naw!"

Just then there was a commotion at the door and Prig Kelly entered. He wore a red flannel shirt and no vest. His "pants" were supported with one gallus. His trousers were rolled up above his ankles and his hat sat far back on his head. He crossed the room quickly, throwing the dancers aside, and saluted Mag in a deep baritone, saturated with whisky and plug tobacco:

"Hello, Mag, me jim dandy crow what're ye doin here lallygaggin agin de wall? Wy don't ye yell?"

While these words still lingered in the perfumed air Prig deftly drew from his hip pocket a hook such as is used by dry goods men to drag horses. Hitching this instrument into Mag's bustle he gave her a jerk which landed her in the middle of the room. The exquisite strains of "The Kiss Waltz" floated down from the second floor at the upper end of the hall, and as Mag's head dropped upon Prig's shoulder, and his strong red arm encircled her buxom waist, she was heard in his large ear, "Oh, Prig, this is heavingly!"—Er nest Ingersoll in New York Morning Journal.

A Skilful Flatterer.

Bob Van Slyck called on a Madison avenue family, in which there were two old maiden sisters of about fifty years of age. Van Slyck is an old friend of the family, and one of them being in a bantering mood said:

"Mr. Van Slyck, which of us do you think is the oldest?"

Van was in a dilemma. He did not like to hurt the feelings of either. He looked from one to the other and asked:

"You want me to say which of you two girls is the oldest?"

"Yes."

"Neither of you looks older than the other. Each one of you girls looks younger than the other."—Texas Siftings.

How to Hang Small Pictures.

A novel way is to have the lower right hand corner of the upper picture overlap the upper left hand corner of the next lower, and so on for as many as you wish to hang together. Thus, however, look better than more with this arrangement. The plan can be reversed, of course, and the slant be toward the left and downward as well as to the right. Naturally the space and adjoining objects are to be considered.

First, friends, never ask your guests "what they are going to have." Order it yourself. You can, however, ask if your guests have any preference; for instance, in ices. Endeavor to find out before hand what they prefer, or if they have any antipathies. Aim to order those things that are peculiar to the season. Never speak to the waiter in a loud tone. Shellfish should be placed before you alive before cooking for your inspection. If the dinner is given in a large dining room be careful to seat the ladies so they will command a good view of the room. A prevailing form of dinner at the restaurant in New York during the winter is (first) deviled crabs with olives or celery, or both; (second) lobster, a la Newberg, with potatoes au gratin; (third), broiled chicken with one or two vegetables; (fourth), a salad, lettuce preferred; (fifth), ice cream, cake and small coffee.

How to Prevent Neuralgia.

An excellent way to prevent neuralgia is to plunge the sides of the head—behind the ears—in cold water immediately on waking every morning. A great number of nerves are concentrated at those points, and the shock hardens them, thus materially assisting the system in warding off neuralgic troubles. This simple practice will save many an hour of pain.

How to Behave in a Theater.

Do not crush at the box office window; you will only disturb the temper of those who are before you, and you cannot get your ticket or tickets one second earlier. Do not talk to your friend from the moment the curtain is raised until it falls; if you must say something make your remarks in a whisper. Do not quarrel with a person if you find him occupying your seat; endeavor to be polite and gentlemanly; if there is a mistake, the usher will remedy it without attracting attention. If you do not like the play or performance, do not mutter your displeasure aloud; leave the theater at the end of the act; other people may enjoy what you dislike. Always remember that those who are sitting behind you desire to witness the performance as well as yourself.

How to Ask a Favor.

A favor should never be asked unless securing it be an absolute necessity. Never ask a favor from a stranger or an acquaintance unless some business or other circumstance morally entitles you to assume that you are justified. When you really need a favor go to friends; if they are true they will grant it. Friends are often proved in adversity. It is a safe rule never to ask a favor unless you believe you can, in some way, reciprocate it. When you do ask do it confidently and fearlessly—a faint heart naturally fails in this as in other things.

How to Prevent Cabbage Odors.

When you boil cabbage put a good sized lump of stale bread in the water. This will absorb the noxious gases and prevent the offensive smell.

How to Select Fish.

The simple way to discover if fish is in good condition and fresh is by the color of the gills and smell. Fresh, sound fish have bright red gills and smell sweet. Stale fish, which are yet sound, have dull colored gills, but smell all right. Unsound fish always smell bad. In a sound fish the eyes are prominent and the fins erect or stiff; in unsound fish the eyes are sunken and the fins hang and are flabby. It is always well to see that your fish is perfectly fresh, for no food is so rich in disease germs as unsound fish.

How to Preserve Fruit Trees.

Fruit growers are constantly annoyed by the inroads of insects of one kind or other, which destroy the fruit and injure the tree.

Here is an excellent recipe for the prevention of the insect scourge and the preservation of the trees: One pound each of soot, quicklime, sunff and sulphur; mix all well together and put them into a vessel containing four gallons of soapsuds and wine. Let the mixture stand for two or three days and then (in February each year) apply it to every part of the trees with a paint brush. This not alone kills the insects' eggs and prevents their attacking the trees, but causes the trees to look particularly green during the ensuing summer.

How to Improve Mucilages.

Almost all mucilages become so dry and hard after a time that papers, etc., which have been cemented by them to polished surfaces crack and fall off. To prevent this dissolve a little brown sugar in the mucilage. This will strengthen the adhering qualities of any mucilage, as will also the addition of a drop or two of glycerine. But care must be taken not to add too much of the latter, as it would prevent the mucilage drying sufficiently.

How to Remove Fish Odors.

A difficulty is often experienced by housekeepers in removing the smell from cooking utensils in which fish has been fried or boiled. Place some redhot cinders in the pan or pot, upon them pour some boiling water and move the cinders around for a minute or two, when it will be found that all smell or taint of fish will have disappeared.

A Lover's Tryst.

Come into the garden, Maud!
I am waiting here alone,
And my heart grows warm for your promises,
dear one.
Though my feet are cold as a stone;
For the night is dark and dreary,
And the breezes sharp and bleak;
Oh, come, with the clasp of your warm, soft hand,
And the touch of your glowing cheek!

She is coming! My heart beats high
As I hasten my love to greet.
She is coming! My pulses start and thrill
At the sound of her fairy feet.
She has stepped on the graveled walk,
And I hear the gate ajar!
Fly, fly to your lover's arms, my own—
Jerusalem! 'tis her pa!

THE NEWS IN BRIEF.

H. M. Robinson, Atlanta, Ga., has been elected president of the National Association of Railway Postal Clerks.

The transportation of Sir Hector Langevin, minister of public works, Ottawa, due to the recent disclosures of crookedness in department, has been accepted.

Miss Ava, a wealthy English woman of Chicago, who failed to raise the standard of living in the slums, is reported to the police as missing. She had received threatening letters.

The appointment of Mrs. Virginia C. Meredith, one of the Indiana lady managers, is being urged as chief of the department of lish exhibit of the World's fair. Mrs. Meredith owns a stock farm.

Ex-Congressman Clarke, of Wisconsin, died at Watertown, N. Y., Sept. 10. The body will be taken to Neenah, Wis.

Adjourned by the Police.

Russia Fighting the Afghans.

Vienna, Sept. 11.—Rumors have reached this city that conflicts have recently occurred on the Afghan frontier between Russian and Afghan troops. The rumor may have some foundation as it is remembered that General Affchanoff was recently arrested in the capital of Afghanistan. He was charged with being a spy in the employ of the Russian government.

Per Flower and for Hill.

Kingston, N. Y., Sept. 11.—The Democrats of the First district of Ulster county have elected Senator John A. Linson, Henry McNamee and Edgar Snyder as delegates to the state convention. The Third district chose Congressman Cox, J. H. Healy and J. J. Hasbrouck. All the delegates for Flower and both conventions indorsed Hill's administration.

Another Outrage in China.

Washington, Sept. 11.—The department of state has received a telegraphic dispatch from the minister at Pekin reporting that a riot has occurred at Ichang on the Yang Tse Kiang river, and that an establishment of American missionaries has been destroyed. Ichang is about as far up the river as vessels of war can go.

But the Czar Enjoyed Himself.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 11.—While the peasantry of Russia are dying of starvation the czar and his family have been enjoying a grand round of festivities at Fredensborg. The effect of the unbounded joy that upon the czar is not known, and the routine of enjoyment has gone on as usual.

Killed by an Elevator.

New York, Sept. 11.—John Fleming, twenty years of age, an employe of Tittman Brothers, at the shot tower, 38 Beekman street, was ascending an elevator last night when he was caught between it and the roof and killed. His neck was broken. He lived on Jersey City Heights.

All Cattle Off the Strip.

Chicago, Sept. 11.—General Miles has received a report from Fort Reno of observations on the Cheyenne strip have been removed by the soldiers. It is now thought that negotiations for the opening of the land for settlement will be satisfactorily closed.

Gone with One Thousand Dollars.

New Haven, Sept. 11.—B. H. Sawyer, financial backer of the firm of Keyser & Co., druggists, at 816 Chapel street, says that George H. Keyser has left town with $1,000 of the firm's money.

A Bookkeeper Arrested.

New Haven, Sept. 11.—George M. Allen, bookkeeper for J. H. McDonald, has been arrested for an embezzlement of $2,000. He lost the money "playing the races."

An Aeronaut Drowned.

New York, Sept. 11.—George White, of Chicago, an aeronaut, made an ascension here and was drowned in the Hudson near Weehawken.

Seligman Feasts Hebrews.

New York, Sept. 11.—Two hundred detained Russian Hebrews were feasted at the barge office by Banker Jesse Seligman.

The State Fair Opened.

Syracuse, N. Y., Sept. 11.—The fifty-first annual fair of the New York State Agricultural society has opened at Syracuse.

The Weather.

Generally a little warmer, more saltry and from fair to partly cloudy, followed by rain.

Care of Furniture.

Furniture can be kept looking nice with so little care that it is too bad to deny it this little, yet, with the exception of the usual dusting now and then, it seldom gets any better in the majority of homes. Very ordinary articles of furniture may with care be kept looking well for years, while handsome furniture may by neglect be made to appear dingy and worn out long before its time.

Upholstered furniture that is in every day use should be gone over thoroughly once a month at least. The articles, with the exception of the very heavy ones, should be taken into the yard, or room with open windows, choosing a day when the wind is not in the direction to blow the dust into the room. Take each article to the open window or in the yard, and with a whisk broom clean out as much dirt as possible. The above, to be sure, is only for such as are upholstered in plush or any goods with a pile.

The clean haircloth, take into the sun if possible, and with a light switch beat out the dust, afterward wiping the dust from the surface with a damp cloth. Wipe over the woodwork with a damp cloth, and if there are any dents in it, place over them several thicknesses of wet blotting paper, and to this hold a warm flatiron until the dent is raised; unless the dent is a very deep one, this one trial will remove it.

When the woodwork is thoroughly dry, take some warm linseed oil, and with a soft flannel cloth rub it well into the woodwork, using a very little oil and a good deal of strength. Rub it over with a soft silk cloth or chamois leather to obtain a nice polish.—Housekeeper's Weekly.

The Average Woman.

I like to think a woman is an average woman. I like to think if two hours after she said she wasn't very fond of me, when she hears that some great trouble has come to me, that she will sit down and have a good cry and then come and tell me how sorry she is for me. Can I forget in five minutes that I heard she said she didn't like me. I like the average woman because she's more agreeable than either saints or women who know it all. You can live with her; you can put up with her faults and fancies, because she is real. You don't care if she does know a cheap millinet that she won't tell you about.

Some day, when her heart gets the better of her brain, she will not only tell you, but trot off to the woman and insist that she must do things for you at as low a price as she has for her. Another reason why I like the average woman is because she isn't what the messenger boys call "smifty." She doesn't get herself up on a pedestal and confound to what the rest of the world, and she is perfectly willing to ask questions and is equally indignant if they are not answered. Probably it's because I am such an absolutely average woman myself that I like them.—Bab's Letter.

Her Snub.

"I hurt my leg," said little Ethel.
"Don't say leg—it isn't elegant. Don't you remember I told you the other day" said her teacher.
"Oh, yes—I should say my bough."—New York Truth.

Lady—Yes. How do you expect to spend your time?
Little Girl—Wishin it was Monday.—Good News.

Fashion Echoes.

Large single hearts of pearls are used as brooches to fasten thin stuffs.

Bolts of perforated silver are worn.

Blouses and blouses are universally worn by women who row, and for those who frequent the river there is nothing really more appropriate. The stiff shirt fronts and the soft full fronts are still in request, but the majority of blouses are made with yokes. For a robe de luxe the following is most fashionable: A white serge with a turquoise blue vest, a white shirt with crepe jacket of white serge, having revers and cuffs of turquoise blue.

AN ORDINANCE

Dividing the Borough of North Plainfield into two Election Districts.

Whereas, The Borough of North Plainfield, as now divided into the two wards thereof, and therein, contains more than 972 hundred voters; now, therefore,

Section 1. The Borough of North Plainfield is hereby divided into two election districts, to be known as the First Election District of the Borough of North Plainfield, and the Second Election District of the Borough of North Plainfield.

Section 2. The First Election District shall include all that portion of the Borough thereof contained in that portion of the borough, situated to the northeast of the following boundary line beginning at the centre of stony Brook where the same empties into Green Brook, thence along the centre of Stony Brook to the centre of Stony Brook bridge; thence northerly along the centre of Stony Brook road to the centre of Mercer avenue; thence along the centre of Mercer avenue to the centre of Somerset street; thence along the centre of Somerset street to the centre of Grove street to the centre of Grove street; thence along the centre of Emily street to the centre of Somerset street; thence along the centre of Somerset street to the centre of Arlington avenue; thence along the centre of Arlington avenue to the centre of Richmond street; thence along the centre of Richmond street to the centre of Green Brook and there to end.

Section 3. The Second Election District shall include all that portion of the Inhabitants thereof contained in that portion of the borough situated to the southwest of the following boundary line aforesaid.

Section 4. This ordinance shall take effect on the eighteenth day of September, A. D., 1891.

Approved September 8, 1891.

CHASED A BOLD BURGLAR.

The Thief Threw Sand in Mr. Brittingham's Eyes and Escaped.

John E. Brittingham, a prominent resident of Westfield, had an experience with a burglar yesterday morning. Mr. Brittingham lives in a pretty house at the corner of Elmer and Sussex streets. The burglar entered the house by forcing open the cellar door. He ransacked the rooms and closets downstairs, and attempted to get into the silver closet, but was unsuccessful. He then went upstairs and secured two valuable watches and two overcoats, and took a loaded revolver from a bureau draw.

In moving about he stumbled against a bed and awoke Mr. Brittingham, who sprang up and grappled with the burglar. The thief attempted to use the revolver, but Mr. Brittingham grappled him so closely that he could not do so.

In the struggle the two men worked towards the head of the stairs. The burglar broke away, ran down and out of the front door. Mr. Brittingham pursued and was gaining on him. The fellow stooped and picking up a handful of sand threw it into Mr. Brittingham's face. Some of it fell in his eyes, temporarily blinding him. The burglar escaped. He dropped everything he had stolen.

Detective Marsh has the matter under investigation. There is no clue to the thief.

TALK OF THE TOWN

—The Hotel Netherwood closed for the season to-day.

—The Somerset county fair will begin next Tuesday.

—The Common Council will hold a special meeting next Monday evening.

—There are 34,307 farms in New Jersey with a total acreage of 2,920,773, and worth as an average price per acre of $65.

—The fourteenth annual report of the Plainfield Children's Home Association has been issued for the year ending May 1, 1891.

—The new and pretty Fall dress goods are attracting considerable attention at Edsall's. They are selling out rapidly, at very low prices.

—The season is again at hand when a few cents worth of coal may save you many days of discomfort, to say nothing of doctor's bills, medicine, etc.

—That enterprising builder Mr. John P. Emmons is to build the foundation for the large dynamo for the Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company.

—An old hunter got shot at Spencer's on Somerset street yesterday afternoon. He got his powder their also, and says for quality and price it can't be beat. See advertisement.

—Messrs. Hallock & Davis, the men's furnishers of West Front street, advertise the Century brace, and latest styles derbys, to-day. Their stock will please the most fastidious male buyer.

—The turners connected with the Plainfield Gesang and Turning Society gave an exhibition of turning, last night, at the fair now in progress in the Saenger and Turner Hall, for the benefit of St. Joseph's Catholic church.

—It takes enterprise to make business. A good example of this is that successful merchant,—Mr. J. C. Allen. His store is at present booming Royal Tooth Powder. He reports his sales as increasing daily, both in Plainfield and elsewhere.

—Under the head of base ball the New Brunswick Home News has the following to say: "The Crescents of Plainfield have refused to make a date as yet, and are clearly afraid to face the New Brunswicks. All to the West Ends of Somerville it is very improbable that any date can be arranged. But to return to the game."

—On Sunday afternoon a wagon containing two men drove down South avenue and into Broad street with their horse on a dead run and the driver plying the whip with all his might. The parties drove up nearly to the Cemetery and then returned and disappeared in the direction of Plainfield. Such an exhibition of brutality shocked the citizens and had a constable been on hand the men would have undoubtedly been arrested.—Union County Standard.

The Tenth Anniversary.

The tenth anniversary of the dedication of St. Mary's church will be celebrated with appropriate ceremonies to-morrow. First Mass will be at 7.30, second mass at 8.30, third children's mass at 9.45 a. m. At 10.45 a solemn high mass will be celebrated. Celebrant Rev. Father Stafford, deacon, Rev. Dr. Kennedy; sub-deacon, Rev. Farrer Smyth. The sermon at this mass will be delivered by Rev. Dr. Kennedy. The vesper service will commence at 7.45 at which the Rev. Father Tighe of Hoboken will preach the dedication sermon. The musical programme will be under the direction of Professor Guntzen, recently appointed organist of St. Mary's church.

Ex-Prisoners of War to Meet.

The fourth annual convention of the Northern New Jersey Association of ex-Prisoners of War will be held in the county hall, Morristown, on Thursday, Sept. 24th. The session will begin at 10 o'clock. All Union ex-prisoners of war are cordially invited to meet with the association. S. M. Imag, president of the national association, will be present.

INTENDS TO KEEP HIS CHILD.

Agpar Accused of Kidnapping Her in Phillipsburg.

Lewis Agpar, a Plainfield fruit-dealer, is charged with kidnapping his own child. He was in Elizabeth last Thursday night, at the Sheridan House. He had the child with him.

Agpar, it is said, got the child to leave school in Phillipsburg and go with him.

Mr. and Mrs. Agpar were married seven years ago. They did not live happily, and separated. She retained the child.

Agpar said at the Sheridan House that he was going to sue for an absolute divorce, claiming his wife left him without cause. He says she will never get the little girl again.

Mrs. Agpar, it is reported, will prosecute her husband for kidnapping. He says she refused to give up the child, and he found her in school.

Lehigh Valley Terminal Railroad.

The consolidation scheme of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company, merging the Roselle and South Plainfield Railroad Company, the Newark Railroad Company, the Jersey City, Newark and Western, the Newark and Passaic, the Jersey City Terminal, and the Edgewater Railroad Companies, into one corporation under the name of the Lehigh Valley Terminal Railroad Company, was carried out in Jersey City last week.

These companies were organized by the Lehigh's officers and were backed by that company's capital, to conduct a series of short lines in the vicinity of Jersey City, Bayonne and Plainfield. These, now connected, will give the Lehigh a direct route from Bound Brook to the Hudson. The stockholders of the branch companies were nearly all represented at the meeting by proxies.

Her Honeymoon Distasteful.

The shortest honeymoon that the oldest inhabitant of Dunellen can call to mind is that of Mr. William Jacobs and his bride, Mary Forman of Brooklyn. They were married at five o'clock last Wednesday evening by the Rev. Mr. Kinsey, and at an early hour Thursday morning the wife of a few hours took her departure and baggage and left for her native soil, Brooklyn. Mr. Jacobs is a gentleman much respected, and since he assumed the duties of letter carrier he has made many new friends, who feel grieved at his misfortune. He cannot account in any way for the lady's sudden change of mind, and the notoriety he has gained by it has been very disagreeable to him.—Bound Brook Chronicle.

New Officers.

The following are the newly-elected officers of the Somerset county Sunday-school Association which held a meeting in the Warren Mission chapel last Tuesday:

President — Ransom Lamb, Bound Brook.

Vice Presidents — Rev. T. E. Davis, Bound Brook; Rev. Dr. Billington; Rev. Joel Loucks, South Branch; Mr. C. Dunham, North Plainfield; W. W. Winans, Springdale.

Corresponding Secretary—Rev. J. Le-Fevre, Middlebush.

Recording Secretary—W. H. DeHart, Raritan.

Treasurer—J. H. Periee, Raritan.

Burned Out a Second Time.

A second attempt was made yesterday morning to burn out the office of the Bound Brook Chronicle. The fire started at about 12:15 o'clock, and the office and contents are nearly all destroyed. Less than two weeks ago the office was set on fire. In the previous attempt, however, the destruction is well nigh complete. It is supposed that the fires have been kindled by some one having a bitter grudge against the editor.

The Cylinder Head Blew Out.

An accident happened to the Royal Blue Line train, Baltimore and Washington express, that gets to Elizabeth at 9:30 a. m. The engine was speeding along at a rate of forty miles an hour between Elizabethport and Elizabeth when the cylinder head blew out, bringing the train to a sudden stop and nearly pitching the passengers out of their seats. Travel was delayed nearly an hour.

Chautauqua Lectures in Plainfield

Rev. Chas. B. Mitchell announced last Sunday that he would give to his congregation the lectures prepared for and delivered at one of the Western Chautauquas this Summer. His lectures are on the "Four Gospels of Matthew." The first will be given to-morrow night at the Methodist church. The other three will be given on the three following Sunday evenings.

Yee in Jail

Samuel L. Beckman and Scuzie Wiley, who were convicted at the last term of court for manslaughter in having caused the death of little Pearl Beckman by beating and starving, and who were sentenced to ten years each at State prison, are still confined in the county jail awaiting the decision of the Supreme court, to which appeal was made by their counsel, Messrs. Graff and Lindsay.

The Seaside Ice Company.

Articles of incorporation have been filed in the office of the County Clerk by the Seaside Ice and Coal Company. The incorporators of which are Monroe Hall and Benjamin F. Powell, jr., of Bounton, and Aaron D. Thompson of this city. The principal part of the business will be conducted at Asbury Park. The capital stock of the company is $50,000.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS.

A GREAT DISPLAY OF FIRE-WORKS.

One of the Greatest Displays Ever Witnessed in Plainfield.

The General Committee of the Uniformed Rank have secured one of the largest displays of fireworks ever seen in this State. They will be set off by competent men and will be the best the pyrotechnic art can produce. The Crescent League Ball grounds in North Plainfield, capable of holding ten thousand people, will be the place. During the exhibition Winkler's celebrated Seventh Regiment Band, of Trenton, will give a concert. All Knights who participate in the parade will be given a badge, which will admit them to the concert and exhibition free. The following comprises a list of the number of pieces and a description of them which will be used in the fireworks display:

Three pieces Revolving Comet Rockets displayed in the air a series of Comets, descending slowly to the ground, revolving in a shower of Gold Rain and discharging smaller Comets of various colors.

Three pieces Triple Bouquet Rockets. The rocket after reaching its highest altitude displays a bouquet of brilliant variegated stars, meteors and gold rain, then descends a distance and displays a second and then a third, producing a most beautiful and novel effect.

Two pieces Mammoth Balloon Rockets which, at an altitude of 600 feet, releases simultaneously seven Balloons with variegated Signal Stars attached, which floating together and burning changing colors make the largest and most effective display of any Rocket made.

Three pieces Changeable Star Rocket. This rocket on reaching its highest point discharges hundreds of brilliant Star, mine fires, lighting up the heavens with a wonderful brilliancy changing simultaneously to emerald and producing a weird effect.

Six dozen Electric Spreaders, eight stars each, discharging a series of stars of a beautiful green color, 50 to 60 feet in the air each of which bursts and spreads into jets of emerald, resembling electric sparks.

Twelve pieces Tourbillions or Revolving rockets. They will spin like a horizontal wheel and throw stars 50 feet in the air forming fantastic circles of fire and colored rings.

Three pieces No. 6 and three pieces No. 7 mines. They first throw out a variety of stars in brilliant colors and finally discharge with a loud report, fine bouquets of colored stars, serpents and streamers.

Three pieces Mammoth Six Star Fountains, discharging brilliant stars of various colors.

Three pieces Mammoth Six Star Fountains and serpents, discharging brilliant stars, changing to serpents and streamers.

Three pieces Brilliant Variegated Fountains. These display a fountain of brilliant fire intermingled with stars of variegated colors, ascending 15 to 20 feet high, filled with sparkling scintillations and terminating with a salute.

Three pieces Floral Bombshell, large, which after displaying a series of colored stars, will ignite a shell and send it 250 feet in the air, and bursting, show a fine bouquet of colored stars 40 to 50 feet in diameter.

One piece Electric Spreader Battery.

Two pieces Silver Fountain Battery. These batteries throw a steady stream of trailing stars and meteors, which have the effect of light and rockets and colored streamers of great beauty.

Six pieces Reporting Bombshell, viz: Two pieces Surprise Bouquet, two pieces Magic Serpent, two pieces Golden Cloud. These shells are fired from a mortar and ascend from 300 to 400 feet into the air and explode with a detonation that can be heard for miles, and display some of the most magical changes and effects known to the pyrotechnic art.

Six pieces Japanese Night Bombshells, viz: Two pieces Cascade Shell; two Shooting Stars; two Willow Tree Shells. The effects displayed are new, being different in character, displaying motion and color essentially Japanese, suspended from parachutes in the air at a height of 200 to 300 feet in beautiful combinations.

Three pieces Diamond Jerks, large, very fine. These display beautiful jerks of sparkling fire and diamond sparks in variegated colors, together with stars thrown in the air to the height of 15 to 20 feet.

Six pieces Reporting Cannon Bombshells, each equal in report to a twelve pound cannon.

Six dozen meteor candles of eight meteors each, displaying meteors which leave behind them long trails of brilliant rain as they ascend.

Six pieces Devil Among the Tailors. Opens with an illumination in colors, followed by a rich stream of brilliant fire; next shows a fountain of reported electric stars and terminates with a burst of fiery dragons thrown to a height of 50 to 60 feet and exploding there with a loud report.

Eighteen pieces Fort Fires.

Twelve pieces Colored Star Rockets.

Twelve pieces Golden Rain Rockets.

Six pieces Exhibiting Colored Rockets.

Twelve pieces Prismatic Rockets.

Six pieces Japanese Fire-fly Rockets. The rocket on reaching its highest point, displays several floating batteries and fountains, which remain nearly stationary in the air, and displays streams of stars and meteors of various colors, projected in all directions, and the effect produced is most brilliant and beautiful.

Three pieces Willow Tree Rockets. The rocket on reaching a height of four hundred feet, displays a gorgeous willow tree, whose branches slowly lengthen down-ward, waving and hanging in the air, and finally reach almost to the ground. It is by far the most beautiful fire ever used in fire-works; the color is a brilliant gold and the effect produced is exceedingly fine.

ONE WAY TO STOP SNEEZING.

Dr. Brown-Sequard Gives a Few Hints for Those so Afflicted.

It is not usually supposed that any exercise of the will power can be made efficient in checking a cough or a sneeze, but Dr. Brown-Sequard, in one of his lectures, says of the subject: "Coughing can be stopped by pressing on the nerves of the lips in the neighborhood of the nose. Sneezing may be stopped by the same mechanism. Pressing in the neighborhood of the ear, right in front of the ear, may stop coughing.

"It is so also of hiccoughing, but much less so than for sneezing or coughing. Pressing very hard on the top of the mouth is also a means of stopping coughing, and many say the will power has immense power. There are many other affections associated with breathing which can be stopped by the same mechanism that stops the heart's action.

"In spasm of the glottis, which is a terrible thing in children, and also in whooping cough, it is possible to afford relief by throwing cold water on the feet, or by tickling the soles of the feet, which produces laughter, and at the same time goes to the matter that is producing the spasm and arrests it almost at once.

"I would not say that we can can always prevent coughing by our will, but in many instances these things are possible, and if you remember that in bronchitis and pneumonia, or any acute affection of the lungs, hacking and coughing greatly increase the trouble at times, you can easily see how important it is for the patient to avoid coughing as best he can."

EDITORIAL NOTES

Demography is the new word, and it signifies social and vital science and statistics—literally, a writing of the people.

The little German emperor stands with his thumb on the button of the universe and says, "I believe I have mastered the aims and impulses of this new spirit which thrills the expiring century."

Oliver Wendell Holmes uttered the immortal saying that it was better to be seventy years young than forty years old. The doctor himself now has the great happiness of showing to the world what it is to be eighty-two years young.

The convulsions in Chili and Central America would be almost enough to make one accept the old dictum that Latin races are incapable of self government, only for the shining example of brave, faithful France, that for twenty years has maintained a republic with monarchical establishments all around her, and dangerous conspiracies in her midst.

The old, old story is repeated in Alaska. The native population of that territory has diminished by 8,000 in the last decade. Whalers say that the white man's whisky has done it. The whole population of Alaska is 31,000, of which 4,800 are white. Wherever civilized man comes in contact with the savage the wild man learns the vices of the superior race instead of its virtues and melts away under their withering power.

To Canada: You have only increased 11 per cent. in population in the last decade and not much in wealth. It's no good your trying to go it alone. We don't hanker after you particularly, but if you want to be a really live part of the world come in and be one of us. In the United States you can—and it will be the making of you—grow up with the country, a country in which even Penn sylvania, one of the oldest states of the Union, settled as long ago as Canada itself was, increased nearly 23 per cent. in population from 1880 to 1890.

"Don'ts" for Men.

One of those benevolent masculine philosophers who are willing to help women by giving them good advice, sent to the New York Recorder a list of "don'ts" for the observance of the weaker sex. The list contained some excellent preaching. But no sooner was it before the public than a lady answered it with a list of "don'ts" for men. Her list is rather the more spicy of the two, and as affording a little variety we print a part of it. It is not so long the custom for doctors, ministers and lawyers to lecture women in print that it is only fair to give the other side a brief show and for once let woman lecture man in a newspaper:

Don't misunderstand women when they occasionally wish they were men; you objected to taxation without representation yourselves.

Don't cross your legs so that a woman in passing you must brush the dirt from your shoes with her dainty dress.

Don't put a cane or an umbrella under your arm while going up public stairs. People don't like to dodge the spikes.

Don't allow a woman to stand and finally offer her a seat as if you had to give it up with a good grace or else keep it.

Don't make life a burden to the family if your shirt does not fit or your trousers are too short.

Don't wear a felt hat on a humid summer's day.

Don't scold because the children disturb your enjoyment of the evening paper; they have been deprived of it all day.

Don't expectorate on the stairs or sidewalks. You all do it.

Don't begin every remark with "by Jove." It is as bad as "lovely."

Don't save all your polite attentions for other men's wives.

Don't be jealous without sufficient cause; it belittles you.

Don't be such a crank that every one in the house is glad when you are out of it.

Don't neglect to judge your own shortcomings as severely as those of others.

The Richest Nation.

The census returns for 1890 show the total property of the United States to be $62,610,000. That makes the wealth of the country average per head to the people $1,000. In 1880 the wealth was $870 per capita, so that our riches have increased faster than the population, even counting the enormous immigration of poor foreigners into the country. We have individually, or somebody else has for us, therefore, $130 more than we could in 1880.

Verily, Americans ought to be thankful. If the estimate could be made this winter, after the crops are gathered and farmers have had returns from their sales, it would be found that the wealth had increased still more, and we should be worth more per head than $1,000. In the history of the country there has scarcely been such a wave of plenty and prosperity as has rolled over the nation in 1891.

Let a word be said. One reason why so many persons are wretchedly poor is not that other people have so much better opportunity or so much more brains than they, but is largely for want of thrift. The improvident spend all they have as they get it, and come to grief. Opportunities travel in waves. Plenty and scarcity travel in waves. In a time of abundance prepare for the dull times which is sure to follow. Lay aside in a building association or in safe investments some of the surplus this fall after all is paid off and purchases made. Get honestly your share of this rich nation's wealth and take care of it. Do not be lavish, but spend less than you get. So will become well off.

IS ACTOR CURTIS CRAZY?

His Friends Are Strongly of That Opinion.

HOW HE SLEW POLICEMAN GRANT.

Two Witnesses Who Saw the Shooting at San Francisco Say That "Sam'l of Posen" Was Certainly the Murderer of the Officer—Drunk and Demented.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 12.—M. B. Curtis, "Sam'l of Posen," the well known character actor, who is locked up in the city prison here on the charge of murdering Policeman Alexander Grant, of this city, was brought into court in the afternoon. Curtis looked pale and trembled perceptibly, evidently not having slept since the shooting had occurred. By consent the case was postponed until next Monday to await the action of the coroner's jury and to allow the attorneys to prepare their case.

The Shooting of Grant.

At an early hour Grant was shot and instantly killed, and there are several witnesses who declare that Curtis did the shooting. The outlook for him is dark. So far as can be learned Curtis, who was drunk and disorderly at the time, was arrested at 12:30 at the corner of Folsom and Fifth streets by Policeman Grant for disturbing the peace. He vigorously resisted arrest, and Grant found it necessary to put on the "nippers" before he was taking his prisoner to the Southern police station on Folsom street, when Curtis suddenly drew a revolver and discharged it at the head of his captor.

Dropped Dead in His Tracks.

The bullet missed Grant, but before he could prevent the actor again pulled the trigger, and this time the bullet entered the policeman's head directly at the top of the forehead where the line of the hair begins. Grant dropped dead in his tracks, and Curtis, meantime, firing another shot at the prostrate body, ran down Folsom to Fifth street. He was pursued by a couple of policemen, and was finally caught a block or two away.

Upon his wrist was found the dead officer's nippers—only used on obstinate prisoners. The revolver with which the shooting was done was not found upon him, but was picked up later near the corner of Fifth street, where he had thrown it in his flight. Three of its chambers were empty.

A Pitiable Spectacle.

Curtis was a pitiable spectacle when taken to the Southern station. He was still in a maudlin condition, but fully appreciated the enormity of the crime with which he is charged. He protested his innocence in an incoherent manner, and told a rambling story about his movements during the evening. He would stagger to his feet and plead to be allowed to go to his wife. "I am no murderer. I have not an enemy in the world. I had no pistol and shot no one," he protested. Curtis had been to see Bernhardt in "Camille." He left his wife at the theater, had a few drinks, and he says he was returning to the Opera House when arrested.

Alexander Grant, the murdered officer, was a native of Scotland, forty years of age. He had made a record as a cool and brave man.

Two Men Who Saw the Affair.

The only known witnesses of the shooting were Thomas Muller and E. Toomey, who stood directly across the street and heard the policeman say, "Come along, now." There was no reply, but almost at the same instant the young men saw a flash. A pistol shot rang out in the quiet street, followed in quick succession by two more reports. The officer fell to the sidewalk without a groan, and Curtis turned and fled up Folsom street.

There is no doubt that Curtis was drunk and that the murder of Grant was the result of a drunken freak. The old time footlight favorite has been drinking hard of late, and some question as to his mental condition had been raised by his friends.

His wife's stage name is Albina De Mer, who was with him in court, was terribly distressed.

Something About Curtis.

DETROIT, Sept. 12.—The comedian Sam'l of Posen was a Detroit boy. His name is Maurice Bertrand Strellinger, and he was born here about forty years ago. After leaving school he was employed in the stock company at McVicker's theater.

Then he played three seasons with Maggie Mitchell, and three with Lawrence Barrett. With this experience and the play "Sam'l of Posen," which had been constructed by himself and George H. Jessop, he felt justified in embarking upon the stage on his own account. The play was a gold mine, and he made money so rapidly with it that he was enabled to retire rich four years ago.

Successful Bowdoin Explorers.

HAWKESBURY, C. B., Sept. 12.—The schooner Julia Decker has arrived in port with the members of the Bowdoin scientific expedition. The results of the trip to Labrador have far exceeded the hopes of the projectors. Grand falls have been discovered and photographed. The total fall is upward of 500 feet, divided into one fall of 200 feet and six rapids and cascades varying from 100 to 25 feet.

A Six Months' Sentence for Murder.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Sept. 12.—Harlan W. Winbrow, mate of the schooner Hester A. Walters, of Norfolk, Va., was sentenced to six months in the county jail and a fine of ten dollars for having killed Henry Shepherd, a colored sailor, several weeks ago. Winbrow pleaded guilty of manslaughter. The spectators present were much surprised at the light sentence.

For Snitching His Own Profession.

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 12.—Charges have been filed with Simeon F. Baldwin, chairman of the committee on grievances of the New Haven county bar, against Lawyer James Cook, of Clinton, for attacking the integrity and honor of the judiciary of the state in a speech at a mass meeting in Guilford on Saturday last.

Rumored Cabinet Changes.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—It is rumored that Attorney General Miller will be given a judgeship and that Secretary Noble will be made attorney general. General J. S. Clarkson is spoken of for the succeeding secretary of the interior and General Lew Wallace as secretary of war.

Held as Freese's Murderer.

BELVIDERE, N. J., Sept. 12.—James Thomas alias Worry, a colored man, was arrested near Princeton on suspicion of being the murderer of Freese, who was killed near Hope Junction on Aug. 7.

THE WORLD OF POLITICS.

Shedding and Clothing Men at War in Buffalo.

BUFFALO, Sept. 12.—Lively times were seen at each of the twenty-five caucuses last night. In the Third and Fourth wards the anti-Sheehan men were particularly bitter. In the Twenty-first ward there was a terrible row, which resulted in the election of two sets of officers and the holding of two district caucuses. Great interest centered in this ward, as within its bounds are the homes of Mr. Wilson Bissell and Mr. William F. Sheehan, and the meeting held during the balloting, and for a moment the police, although present in good force, were powerless to maintain order. The double organization did not appease the crowd, and the yelling and cheering went on worse than ever when either side would request silence. Mr. Bissell came in for a share of the cheering and was hurriedly ejected by somebody. Mr. Sheehan did not appear. Mr. Sheehan claims to have been successful in the three assembly districts, but the result is not definitely known.

Fassett Thinks Hill Will Run.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—When asked who the Democrats would nominate, J. Sloat Fassett said today: "I have never changed the opinion I expressed seven months ago, that Hill had himself elected governor in order to get a third term as governor. It would surprise me if he were not nominated."

Magee to See Quay.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 12.—Christopher L. Magee has gone to Atlantic City to confer with Senator Quay, and the result of the meeting will have a great influence on politics in this city. He left on a train from Bellevue Harbor, where he met Secretary Blaine.

For the Assembly.

WATERTOWN, Sept. 12.—King Brown, of Harmon, has been nominated for member of assembly.

FOR KILLING RUBE BURROWS.

The Government Pays Three Thousand Dollars for the Outlaw's Extinction.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—Postmaster General Wanamaker has ordered that warrant for reward aggregating $3,000 be approved, and Jefferson D. Carter, of Myrtleborough, Ala., and Thos. V. Jackson, of Aberdeen, Miss., each receive $1,500 and that the remaining $1,000 be equally divided between six other persons. These men were instrumental in the killing of the notorious outlaw Rube Burrows and his gang in Alabama last fall. Burrows, besides committing crimes, held up a mail train and robbed it.

The reward of $1,000 was offered for the arrest and conviction of Rube Burrows, Rube Smith and another member of the gang. The question before the department was whether the rewards offered under the law, receive the reward in view of the fact that the outlaws were neither tried nor convicted, but were killed during an encounter. The postmaster general holds that there was proof positive of the guilt of the gang, and on this ground he directs that the captors receive the reward offered.

BANK ROBBERS BAGGED.

They Showed Fight, but Conducted That Surrender Was Better.

EFFINGHAM, Ills., Sept. 12.—At 1 p. m. Cashier Hedge, of the First National bank, was alone in the bank two strangers advanced to the two windows at the counter, each pointed a revolver at him and ordered him to deliver up the money on the cash table. The cashier did not comply, but stepped behind the ball open safe door and called for help. One of the robbers jumped through the private entrance and snatched a handful of bills and both made a precipitate retreat.

The alarm was at once given and by quick pursuit the robbers were captured. They were armed and at first showed fight, but seeing escape was impossible they threw up their hands and surrendered. The money taken, about $200, was also secured. The thieves gave their names as William McGuire and H. O. Neal.

American Jews and the Hirsch Fund.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—Prominent Hebrews in all parts of the United States have been asked to meet in this city on Baron Hirsch fund to meet in this city on Sept. 23 in the Hebrew Educational alliance for the purpose of co-operating in formation of an American relief committee to make the best possible disposition of the exiled Russian Jews coming to this country.

May Arrest Philadelphia Bankers.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 12.—The bank officials have all along claimed that they supposed they were dealing with Bardsley as a private citizen when they gave him interest. The district attorney will present his evidence to one of the judges sitting, and if the judge decides that the evidence is sufficient bench warrants will be issued for the bankers.

Senator Hendricks on the Collectorship.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Sept. 12.—The friends of Senator Francis Hendricks, who said that he would not accept the office of collector of the port of New York, seem to have done so without authority. Mr. Hendricks said: "I have never declined an office that has not been offered me. I cannot say for what I would do were this office tendered to me."

The Charleston at Hawaii.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—An official letter was received at the navy department from Captain Remey, commanding the United States steamer Charleston. The letter is dated Honolulu, Aug. 29, when Captain Remey arrived that day, and says that the United States minister reports affairs quiet. The Charleston is bound for China.

Train Wrecker Harrand Held.

KENNEDY, N. J., Sept. 12.—Louis Barrand, charged with attempting to blow up a train on the Lehigh Valley road near Kennedy, has been committed to the Warren county jail to await the action of the grand jury. Barrand confessed that he had placed the dynamite on the track.

A Prisoner's Daring Escape.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Sept. 12.—Thomas Mulleau, charged with forgery here, escaped from an officer last night by jumping from a train at Slade's Ferry Bridge while en route to this city from Pittsburg in charge of a local officer.

More Searles Contestants.

SALEM, Mass., Sept. 12.—Lyman Sherwood and Delia Sherwood, first cousins of Mrs. Searles, have been added to the list of the contestants of the will of that lady.

STOPPED BY THE POLICE

McAuliffe Whipped Gibbons According to Referee Dunn.

BUT HONORS SEEMED ABOUT EVEN.

When Jack Heard the Decision He Shed Tears of Joy, but the Paterson Boy Was Very Indignant and Protested That He Had Been Unfairly Treated.

HOBOKEN, N. J., Sept. 12.—Jack McAuliffe, of Brooklyn, champion lightweight of the world, and Austin Gibbons, of Paterson, N. J., fought at the Granite club last evening for championship honors, a purse of $4,000 and a side bet of $1,000 a side. About 3,500 people were present, 80% of whom paid ten dollars and the remainder five dollars apiece to see the battle. The police stopped the fight in the sixth round, but Referee Dunn gave the decision to McAuliffe. When the men weighed in McAuliffe tipped the beam at just the limit, 135 pounds, while Gibbons weighed 130½. Gibbons was very cool after he took his seat, and even offered to bet a friend who sat close by among the spectators a cigar that he would win.

McAuliffe was quite calm faced as usual. He looked to be in the very best condition.

A novelty of the fight was the initial use of the electrical clock in timing the rounds. The official timekeeper had nothing to do but to watch the men and press a button and the clock did the rest.

McAuliffe Forced Matters.

At 9:27 the men were ordered to shake hands. They both wore knee breeches but were bare from the waist up. The gloves they wore weighed a good four ounces. The electric clock was set in motion, and when a red light first came out with a bang the fight began. From the very outset of the battle McAuliffe forced matters. He went over to Gibbons' corner and smashed away there. He showed great speed and sent Gibbons reeling against a couple of times on the Brooklynite's face and body, and when the first round was over honors were about even. Even Gibbons' friends were surprised that he should do so well at the start.

In the second round McAuliffe had the best of it. He got in a couple of his noted straight lefts and Gibbons' left eye and nose bands badly under the right spy. Gibbons did not stop to wipe away the blood, however, and he returned a fine right hander on Jack's cheek. McAuliffe felt the blow and kept away the remainder of the round.

The Paterson Lad was Game.

When Gibbons came out for the third round he showed that he was all right, but one more dash at his left cheek reopened the cut and sent the blood flying again. The Paterson lad was game though, and he went back at McAuliffe with a dash. McAuliffe's gluttiness was here shown to great advantage. He jumped away from his opponent's rushes with the nimbleness of a cat, but would come back at his man with a look on his face that meant business. His right went out with viciousness, and it could be seen that he wanted to end the battle at once. Gibbons felt the blow and kept away the remainder of the round.

McAuliffe Nearly Floored.

In the fifth round McAuliffe had his man fairly dazed. He delivered two right handers on Gibbons' jaw and Austin must have thought that he thought he had him then, but Gibbons was not done yet. As McAuliffe came at him over in his corner Gibbons let go his right in a swinging blow and caught McAuliffe full on the jaw. McAuliffe fell back two steps and for a moment it looked as if he were going to fall over on his back, but by an effort he kept his feet under him and remained head up. A smile appeared upon his face, but it was very evidently a forced one for the blow was a painful.

He had apparently intended to finish his opponent at just about this juncture, but the obstruction he met with made him alter his programme. The round ended with the men sparring.

The Police Take a Hand.

The new electric clock had done its work perfectly, so far as there not having been a single break at this. When time for the sixth round was called Gibbons came up with surprising frankness. He certainly had been well punished by this time, but he had also given McAuliffe a taste of some severe medicine too. His left cheek was looking badly, and when McAuliffe left it again, as he usually did, the wound opened and there was another stream of blood. He was not badly winded, is is but fair to say. While he had been in his corner he talked to his seconds quite easily. He made a crack at McAuliffe's head, but missed, and then Jack went at him once more and McAuliffe got in one more on the bruised cheek and a clinch followed. They were pounding each other at close quarters and at a vigorous pace when Police Captain Hayes and Sheriff Lembeck sprang in, ropes and declared that the fight must end.

"McAuliffe Has Won."

There was a great hullabaloo and the men went to their corners. Everybody hoped that a peace might be patched up with the authorities, but it was no use. The captain said the fight must stop. Then the house expected to hear the referee say he would have to make it a draw, but he did not. He fairly whispered the announcement, "McAuliffe has won."

Gibbons Protested in Vain.

When the news was communicated to Gibbons he was about as mad a man as ever was seen in a ring. He ran over to McAuliffe's corner and cried out that he had been cheated. Then he told McAuliffe did not think so, so the Paterson man jumped "in the ropes near several "reporters. "This decision is given against me," he cried, "because I have a little blood on my face. It's an outrage. I am not defeated. I could go on fighting this way for two hours and I'm ready to do it." Later in the evening Gibbons sought out Referee Dunn and protested to him. Dunn said that he could not change his decision and that it had to go, and that settled it.

McAuliffe Wept for Joy.

The general opinion among thoughtful sporting men is that the decision was unfair to Gibbons, on the ground that the articles of agreement called for a finish fight, and there was no finish. It is generally conceded that the winner of a fight weeps on hearing the decision, but that is what McAuliffe did.

Gambler John Daly's Safe Robbed of $100,000.

DID HIS MANAGER DO THE DEED?

It Is Alleged That "Billy" Hollingsworth Took the Cash and Then Told His Employer to Have Him Arrested if He Dared—No Arrest Is Reported.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—The Herald says that John Daly, the king of all the New York gamblers, the man who has won more bets over a faro table than any other keeper of a gambling house in this city, the man who has been able to deal faro when all other faro banks have been compelled to close, has had his own bank broken in an unusual manner. From the safe in Daly's gambling palace, 39 West Twenty-fifth street, was taken Friday night a sum of money estimated at from $90,000 to $100,000.

It was in bills. It made a roll larger than a man's head, and the bills were big ones and tightly packed at that.

Robbed by His Manager.

The Herald says that the man who took them was William S. Hollingsworth, Daly's manager, a man living a double life. Church member and seemingly respectable citizen twelve hours in the day he counted out the money of gamblers and interested in a resort where thousands of dollars have changed hands the other twelve. John Daly's loss is the one absorbing topic among men about town.

They have wondered how this cool bettor, this master of the art of winning other people's money, how he, of all men, could have been made a victim. The subject supplanted the interest even in the Gibbons-McAuliffe fight. Nobody would ever have dreamed that any man would get the better of John Daly in the matter of money. Yet one man—the man Hollingsworth.

How It Was Done.

The story is that he took the money from Daly's safes, of which he held the combinations, and used it, or the greater part of it, to cover losses in Wall street. It was said last night that when Daly demanded the return Hollingsworth dared Daly to go to court.

Daly has taken no steps in that direction for the reason, it is whispered, that any action of that character on his part would involve persons of prominence in the administration of the city of New York.

He who can maintain a gambling house even when the bite and the fight against gambling is loudest and strongest can't afford to appear in a public courtroom as a complainant against one acquainted with his affairs. Those who know Daly and Hollingsworth and who know of this affair are as silent as the proverbial clam.

He Didn't Go to Canada.

Some of the money taken belonged to bookmakers and to some fortunate ones who had made winnings and had given them to Daly to keep for them. John Daly as a trustee is as solid as the Chemical bank. Hollingsworth, it appears, had long had access to the safe.

After the game was closed on Friday night and after Daly had gone Hollingsworth is said to have taken the money. He did not flee to Canada, as many a thieving cashier had done. He took the money home. He was seen in Wall street early the next morning. Presumably he took the money down town with him to make good his margins. It is said that he was a bear on the rising market. He sold stocks and they advanced.

Hollingsworth Denies It.

The Herald claims that Hollingsworth, who for years has been a resident of Harlem, is in all appearances a devout worshiper at the altar of St. Andrew's Episcopal church, at One Hundred and Twenty-seventh street and Fifth avenue, of which the Rev. Dr. George R. Van De Water is the rector. Hollingsworth denies that any robbery occurred, as alleged, at Daly's place.

BAILEY AND ALBERTSON FREE.

SEATTLE, Wash., Sept. 12.—William E. Bailey, the missing editor and newspaper proprietor, and his attorney, R. S. Albertson, who were abducted by detectives, are at liberty. Prompt action on the part of the police has resulted in the capture of the kidnapers and the release of Bailey and Albertson.

Mr. Bailey is the owner of the Harrisburg block, president and director of several banks and owner of the Times. Albertson is a relative of Cashier Albertson, of the Fidelity Trust company, of Tacoma, who disappeared recently leaving a shortage of $10,000. The object of Detective Sullivan and his two deputies, who did the kidnaping, was to obtain knowledge of Cashier Albertson's whereabouts. They did not want Bailey but took him because he was walking with Albertson. The pair were carried off in a hack.

Treasurer O'Brien $30,000 Short.

CHATTANOOGA, Sept. 12.—Supreme Secretary John Shaw, of Louisville, Ky., and Supreme Trustee and Commissioner of Sinking Fund J. J. Duffy, of Memphis, are investigating the affairs of Supreme Treasurer M. J. O'Brien, of the Catholic Knights of America, who is reported $30,000 short.

THE MARINER'S COMPASS.

The Floating Needle of the Chinese When It Was First Used on Shipboard.

The credit of the discovery, both of the polarity of a magnetized needle and its suitability for use by mariners at sea, must, according to a writer in the North China Herald, of Shanghai, be given to the Chinese. It is to China alone that has the credit of having first noticed that any iron needle may be polarized by rubbing it with a magnet. In the Thirteenth century the Arabs used a floating compass on their dhows. The needle was made to float on the water by attaching it crosswise to a cornstick or splinter of wood. A magnet applied to it drew it into a north and south direction. In the Chinese primitive mariner's compass the notation is that of the professors of geomancy and rests on the old astrological division of the horizon into twelve double hours.

The writer alluded to suggests how the discovery came about. In China there are boundless tracts of iron stone and among these no small portion is magnetic. Every woman needs a needle and iron early took the place of the old stone needles and were commonly used before the time of Ch'in Shih-huang—that is, more than twenty-one centuries ago. Wherever a needle happened to be made of magnetic iron it might reveal its quality by falling into a cup of water, when if happened to be attached to a splinter of wood, for example, it came in some such way to be known commonly that certain needles had its quality. The great producing centre for magnetic iron is Tzechow, in south China. This city was very early called the City of Mercy. Later the Chinese began to speak of the city as the City of the Magnet. The polarity of the magnetic needle would become known to the Chinese of that city and its neighborhood first.

The earliest author who mentions the "south pointing needle" lived in the Fourth century B. C. There can be no reasonable doubt that the polarity of the needle was known at that time. The discovery of the fact must have preceded the invention of any myth embracing it. The compass used by the professors of geomancy for marking lanscape indication was first made about the Eighth century. It was of hard wood, about 8 foot wide, and it had in the center a small well in which a magnetized needle floated on water.

In 1122 an ambassador to Corea describes the use of the floating needle on board ship while he made that voyage. This is the first instance, the earliest by more than a century, of the use of the mariner's compass on board ship found as yet by any book, native or foreign. The existence of the book in which this is recorded settles the question of the first use of the mariner's compass at sea in favor of the Chinese.

The Wishing Rod.

The wishing or divining rod is taken either from the mountain ash or the hazel, generally from the latter, and in the following manner: By moonlight a yearling shoot of a wild hazel tree is chosen which forks at the upper end, and is between four and five feet long. It is broken off from the tree after being twisted thrice round on its axis, and the person who does this must keep his face turned to the east, bow to the tree and say: "God bless this, noble shoot and summer twig!" Such a rod, consecrated by sundry incantations of old conceits, serves for the discovery of buried treasures, mineral veins, water springs, concealed thieves and murderers, remote calamities, conflagrations, etc. Held between the finger and thumb by its forked ends, the divining rod turns of its own accord with irresistible force over the spot where there is metallic ore, water, or any of the other objects of search. Wishing rods have various names, according to the special use for which they are designed. There is one called in Germany Schatzruthe, or treasure rod, which is likewise hazel of a year's growth, but instead of being torn from the tree, it is cut from it with three cuts on Good Friday morning.

Subriquets of Noted Men.

Salmon P. Chase was commonly called "Old Greenback" during the war, when he was secretary of the treasury, because he established our present system of national currency. Daniel W. Voorhees, the noted United States senator, is often called "The Tall Sycamore of the Wabash," because his tall figure and long limbs are strongly characteristic of the tall sycamore tree, which is common to his home on the Wabash. James G. Blaine is strikingly called "The Plumed Knight." Colonel Ingersoll gave him the name in his great speech in the Republican convention of 1876. Samuel J. Tilden, because of his talents, was styled "The Sage of Gramercy Stone." William B. Allison, the noted United States senator from Iowa, is also called "Big Eyed Bill." Among the noted American authors are John G. Whittier, known as "The Bachelor Poet," John G. Saxe, sometimes styled "The American Hood," because his productions resemble those of the great poet, Hood. Walt Whitman is known as "The Good Gray Poet," and the name is indeed very appropriate.

Folk Lore About the Goat.

English grooms like, when they can, to have a buck goat ranging about the stables, but are loath to follow Hodge, to skeptical inquirers, why they make choice of so unsavory a pet. They pretend that the horses like the smell of the animal, and that it is wholesome for them; but the real motive is that the presence of the buck goat—Thurnar's steed—protects the horses from being bewitched. In Suffolk and the Mark of Brandenburg, farmers with large stocks of cattle keep a buck goat in their stalls avowedly for that same purpose, for Thurnar was the ceaseless foe and exterminator of evil spirits. On the other hand, since the devil has, to a great extent, usurped the place of Thunar, it naturally follows that the favorite animal of the fallen god is often found reversing his former functions and ministering to the powers of darkness. The devil accordingly appears in the form of a goat; and witches who are high in his favor take their airings on the back of such acourser instead of bestriding a broomstick.

A Relic of Thackeray.

In the U. States and in the Queen's dominions All people have a right to their opinions. And many don't much relish "The Virginians." Persons my book, Good Sir, and if you find it A little to your taste, I hope you'll bind it. Peter Rackham, Esqre., with the best regards of the author.

"Dear R," however, refrained from binding it, and it remains in the original boards.

AN ASTRONOMICAL CHRONOMETER.

The astronomical chronometer depicted in the cut is the invention of a German genius and is described as follows in The Jewelers' Circular:

Actuated by a correctly going pendulum clock train this apparatus ordinarily denotes all the important functions of our planetary system and the effects produced by them. The cause of the terrestrial and lunar positions, the changing illumination and heating of the earth, moon, planets, etc. These phases are in precise proportions to the reality, and are me chanically and mathematically correct. The chronometer has exteriorly the shape of an ordinary mantel clock. The clock train, also the astronomical mechanism, is of a very simple construction of metal, brass and steel. The dial on the front side shows hours and minutes, and is calculated for a fourteen-day timekeeper. The sides of the case are furnished each with a colored map of the northern and southern starred heaven, arranged according to recent experiments of astronomers, and con tain the stars between the first and fifth magnitudes. The astronomical disk is located upon the upper surface of the case, and on this disk functions the apparatus showing the manner of the revolutions of the planets around the sun.

This disk is covered and mounted upon a metal plate. It shows the elliptico-eccentric paths of the planets Mercury, Venus, Earth and Mars, the direction of the paths and the duration of revolutions in days. The earth path is formed by an elliptical notch, through which passes the arbor standing in combination with the mechanism, and carrying the earth and moon.

The division of the ellipitic into 360 degs., the calendar division into months and days, the names of twelve signs and signs of the ecliptic, the division into the four seasons by the shading of color, the eccentric position of the sun, aphelion and perihelion of the planets are also introduced upon this disk.

In the sink of the astronomical disk moves the earth, as a small colored globe, together with a silver ball, representing the moon; both are of exact proportional size. The earth revolves once a year around the gold globe of the sun, which is placed in the concentre position.

The staff carrying the earth and moon at the same time revolves a hand on the astronomical disk, indicating degrees, day, month and time of year exactly to reality.

Why Leaves Change Color.

A botanist has thus explained in Forest and Stream why leaves change in color: "The green color in the leaf of plants is composed of two colors, red and blue. When the sap ceases to flow in the fall and the natural growth of the tree ceases, 'oxidation of the tissues takes place. Under certain conditions the green of the leaf changes to red, under different conditions it takes on a yellow or brown tint. This difference in color is due to the difference in combination of the original constituents of the green tissue and to the varying conditions of climate, exposure and soil. A dry, cold climate produces more brilliant foliage than one that is damp and warm. This is the reason that our American autumns are so much more gorgeous than those of England. There are several things about leaves that even science cannot explain. For instance, why one or two trees growing side by side, in the same soil and having the same exposure, should take on a brilliant red in the fall, and the other should turn yellow; or why one branch of a tree should be bright red and the rest of the tree have only a yellow tint, are questions that are as impossible to answer as why one member of a family should be perfectly healthy and another sickly."

Hiero's Fountain.

Hiero's fountain is an arrangement by which a jet may be obtained that will last for some time. It derives its name from its inventor, Hiero, who lived at Alexandria 120 B. C., and depends upon the elasticity of the air.

It consists of a brass dish (see cut) and of two glass globes. The dish communicates with the lower part of the globe by a long tube, and another tube connects the two globes. A third tube passes through the dish to the lower part of the upper globe. This tube having been taken out, the upper globe is partially filled with water, the tube is then replaced and water is poured into the dish. The water flows through the long tube into the lower globe and expels the air, which is forced into the upper globe, where the air thus compressed acts upon the water and makes it jet out as represented in the figure. If it were not for the resistance of the atmosphere, and that the liquid would rise to a height above the water in the dish equal to the difference of the level in the two globes, explains Ganot in his work on natural philosophy, from which the foregoing cut is a reprint.

An electric welding machine for making chain cables is among the latest applications of electric welding. It has been found possible to weld two links at the same time.

ELECTRIC LIGHTING.

It Is Believed That It Will Prove a Valuable Hygienic Agent.

A statement has been made that the adoption of electric lighting in place of gas at the office of the savings bank department of the general postoffice, London, has been followed by a marked reduction in the amount of sick leave. The Lancet expresses the opinion that there is authority for believing that the statement referred to is substantially correct. Although the time which has as yet elapsed—two years—since the introduction of the new illuminant has been insufficient for the collection of trustworthy statistics, the paper named thinks there is every reason to believe that electric lighting will prove to be much more wholesome than ordinary gas flames. An electric lamp does not compete for the oxygen of the apartment in which it is placed, and this circumstance gives it a marked advantage over any open flame. It cannot, like some forms of gas burner, be used to promote ventilation, but in ordinary situations its harmlessness is a much more important property.

Fruit and Gout.

Mr. Jonathan Hutchinson states in The Archives of Surgery that for many years he has been in the habit of forbidding fruit to all patients who suffer from tendency to gout. In every instance in which a total abstainer of long standing has come under his observation for any affection related to gout he has found on inquiry that the sufferer was a liberal fruit eater. Fruits are, of course, by no means all equally deleterious; cooked fruits, especially if eaten hot with added sugar, are the most injurious, the addition of cane sugar to grape sugar adds much to the risk of disagreement. Fruit eaten raw and without the addition of sugar would appear to be comparatively safe. Natural instinct and dietetic tastes have already led the way in this direction; few wine drinkers take fruit or sweets to any extent, and Mr. Hutchinson suggests as a dietetic law that alcohol and fruit sugar ought never to be taken together, and he believes that the children of those who in former generations have established a gouty constitution may, though themselves water drinkers, excite gout by the use of fruit and sugar.

Medicated Air in Phthisis.

M. Germain See has related the history of several cases of consumption, all of which were relieved and some cured by his new treatment. He shuts his patient up for two, three or more hours daily in a hermetically closed metallic chamber, into which is slowly admitted a current of compressed air, which, having passed through a mixture of creosote and eucalyptol, is saturated with the vapor of these substances. Within a year ten cases of phthisis have been submitted to this treatment, all of which cases, with one exception, had reached the period of softening, and bacilli had been detected in the sputa. The results obtained were: Return of appetite, even in advanced cases; gain of weight and strength; fall of temperature to the normal in a week or two, diminution of cough and of purulency of sputa and disappearance of other unfavorable general symptoms.

One Cause of Spinal Curvature.

An official report of two Austrian physicians to the Supreme Council of Hygiene is strongly in favor of erect rather than slanting writing. They point out that the direction of the written characters has a marked influence on the position of the body. In "straight" writing the shoulders his work, and is spared the twist of the body and neck, which is always observable in those who write slantwise, and one common cause of spinal curvature is thus obviated. The erect method is, therefore, expressly recommended for use in schools in preference to the drafting sloping line.

Etiquette

THE EXTREME OF DISCOURTESY.

How Callers Are Often Made Uncomfortable by Thoughtless Hostesses.

That it is one of the unpardonable social sins for any one to be discourteous in his own house to a caller goes without saying, but an exchange makes the following comments as to the ways in which this rudeness is often manifested: It is not infrequent that you would prefer that certain callers should stay away, but more than likely they have been repeatedly and warmly invited to call, and no one is to blame but yourself. If the cold shoulder is to be shown, or petty dislikes or slights to be displayed, there is ample room and opportunities. Your home is certainly not the place to show them. Any one crossing your doorstep, whatever his standing may be, and whether bidden or not, is for the time your guest and is entitled to the usages of polite society and courteous consideration. You should never be deluded by the idea that shortcomings in politeness and hospitality are overlooked or forgotten, for such is rarely the case, and by sensitive people such actions are much more painful than an open affront or insult. *If your callers should be back*ward or awkward, they have every right to expect you to come to their assistance in making them feel comfortable and at ease in conversation, amusement, or in whatever way it may be needed.

There are a few things quite generally indulged in by well meaning people when callers are present, who, if they would take a second thought at the time, would see that they are extremely discourteous. There may be mentioned meaning looks at members of the household or old acquaintances who may be present, signs with the fingers, whispered consultation in the hallway, the carrying on of protracted conversations one with another to the ignoring of the caller, refusing to play upon the piano if requested to do so, when the caller knows that there is no reasonable excuse except disinclination why you should not. Many other common abuses might be mentioned, and more than sufficient to at least give food for reflection.

A Tiny Flower.

It is stated that the smallest known flowering plant, namely wolffia, is the naked-sya, a Wolffia microscopia, a water weed of India. Two species of the same genus, the large one about one-twenty-fifth of an inch in diameter, are reported as growing in the eastern states.

The Household

FASHIONS IN WALL PAPER.

New Ideas and Artistic Patterns Described by Decorator and Furnisher.

The dado of wall paper is little used at present, and is not needed except in large rooms with high ceilings.

A deep wainscoting of hard wood or a movable hanging fastened by hooks to a wall or moulding is much in vogue, artistic, and should be employed when such horizontal division of the wall space is desirable.

The frieze still remains in favor and retains its place in nearly all schemes of wall decoration. Its width depends, of course, on the height of the room; and with the dado or wainscoting it adds in modifying the unnecessary height of the ordinary modern room. The lowering of the ceiling by means of a new lower tint will have the effect of narrowing these finishing bands into the old fashioned borders, or of displacing them altogether.

Where natural forms in decoration are desired, a frieze of flock paper, with a boldly painted design, may be used above the door spaces in panels. A trailing spray of wild roses in delicate shades of soft yellow declining to brown, great bunches of crimson and amber tinted roses on a field of turquoise blue, or a dull gold background, with stalks of tall red lilies, may be used with excellent effect.

Another departure in the present season's goods are the new embossing effects in silk goods. In one range of papers the ground is embossed with a deep pattern, in another the ground is a minute representation of combed work, and in another line of papers the ground is heavily embossed to represent burlap.

Fruit Frosting for Fine Cake.

Boil one cup sugar and one-third cup water together until it will thread. Beat white of one egg very stiff and pour on the syrup gradually, beating well. Stir currants, seeded raisins, citron, coconut or candied fruit of any sort (cut up fine) into the above and spread over the cake.

AN ORDINANCE
Dividing the Borough of North Plainfield into two Election Districts.
Whereas, The Borough of North Plainfield, as created at the last borough election, is divided into two election districts, and
Whereas, The Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Somerset, at their meeting held on the 8th day of September, A. D. 1891, have divided the Borough of North Plainfield into two Election Districts, and
Whereas, The Borough of North Plainfield is now entitled to three Councilmen instead of two, as heretofore, therefore
Section 1. The Borough of North Plainfield is hereby div ded into two election districts, to be known hereafter as the First Election District of the Borough of North Plainfield, and the Second Election District of the Borough of North Plainfield.
Section 2. The First Election District shall include all the territory and inhabitants thereof contained in that portion of the borough situate on the thirteenth side of the map of said borough beginning at the centre of stony Brook where the same empties into Green Brook, thence up the centre of Stony Brook to the centre of Stony Brook road, thence along the centre of Rockview avenue to the centre of Mercer avenue; thence along the centre of Mercer avenue to the centre of Grove street; thence along the centre of Grove street to the centre of Emily street; thence along the centre of Emily street to the centre of Somerset street; thence along the centre of Somerset street to the centre of Race street; thence along the centre of Race street to the centre of Front street; thence along the centre of Front street to the centre of Warren street; thence along the centre of Warren street to the centre of Manning avenue; thence along the centre of Manning avenue to the centre of Richmond street; thence along the centre of Richmond street to the centre of Green Brook and there to end.
Section 3. The Second Election District shall include all the territory and inhabitants thereof contained in that portion of the borough, situate on the southeasterly side of the imaginary line aforesaid.
Section 4. This ordinance shall take effect on the Eighteenth day of September, A. D. 1891.

PLAINFIELD EVENING NEWS.

ESTABLISHED 1884. PLAINFIELD, N. J., "THE COLORADO OF THE EAST," MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 14, 1891. PRICE TWO CENTS.

THE CONDUCTOR'S ACTION SHOULD BE REPORTED.

A Poland Miner and His Two Bright Children Ejected From a Train at Netherwood—His Fare Paid to New York.

When the 9:30 p. m. train from this city arrived at the Netherwood station on Saturday night, there alighted a middle-aged man and two beautiful children—a boy seven years of age, and a girl about a year younger. The children were neatly dressed and both were crying bitterly when the train moved away. The man took each child by the arm and started off along the track in the direction of Fanwood, but before going far he was intercepted by several persons who were passengers on the same train.

The man could speak but a few words of English, but between the sobs of his children and his own conversation it was learned that his name was Thomas Hunsiewska, a Polander who was, until recently, employed as a miner at Ashley, Pa., and that the trio were en route for Passaic, N. J., where Hunsiewska was to meet his wife, the latter having just been released from a four years' confinement in an insane asylum.

According to the boy, James, who was the most intelligent of the three, his father bought a ticket at Ashley for New York paying $4.95 for the same.

When the train reached Plainfield, he said, his father wanted to get off, but the conductor prevailed upon him to regain in the car. When Netherwood was reached the entire party was ejected. Both father and son stated that the conductor had taken up the through ticket before arriving at Plainfield. Other passengers on the train say that the man pulled the bell rope, between here and Netherwood, stopping the train, which resulted in the ejectment.

Mr. James B. Guttridge who lives near the Netherwood station, performed an act of humanitarian kindness by harnessing a horse and bringing the unfortunate ones back to this city, where Officers Lynch and Kiely asked them to stay over night, but of no avail.

The children were given nickles and pennies by sympathizing spectators. The father was presented with a ticket to New York by Officer Lynch, and the party left on the 11:30 p. m., train placed in charge of the conductor.

This is a very peculiar case if the boy's tale is true. That conductor should give some explanation of his actions.

TALK OF THE TOWN

—Bicyle tires require 1,000,000 pounds of rubber annually.

—There are on the main line of the Central Railroad, between Jersey City and Philadelphia, about 145 culverts and bridges to look after and keep in repair.

—Considerable complaint is being made of the loafing way in which work is being done on the sewers, one prominent tax-payer saying it is sheer robbery of the people.

—A new road house was opened to-day on the road leading from this city to Bound Brook. It is to be known as the Hotel Clarendon. Mr. John Mannion is the proprietor.

—A number of Plainfielders indulged in a clam bake on Washington Rock yesterday. About three thousand clams, one hundred chickens, one thousand ears of corn and twenty kegs of beer were disposed of.

—Sherwin's clearing sale of boots, shoes and rubbers continues all this month as also in the store. Call and find out for yourself just how much he has reduced the prices on goods. Mr. Sherwin says that all goods are reduced in price, not only odds and ends.

—Mr. Harry Werner, of Werner's Clothing House, at 20 West Front street announces a new advertisement to-day in complete line of Fall and Winter clothing. His stock he says is the finest ever shown in Plainfield. The advertisement will tell about the prices.

—Mr. Theodore Vroom of Manning avenue has painted a number of portraits of the Hon. John Ulrich, the Grand Chancellor of the Knights of Pythias which will be used in decoration the various business places throughout the city for the Knights of Pythias parade which occurs here next Wednesday.

A PROVIDENTIAL ESCAPE.

A party of excursionists to Washington Rock on Labor Day had an exciting experience while returning about 6:30 o'clock in the evening. Just as the stage containing the party was about to cross the Lehigh Valley Railroad tracks at New Market, the gates were suddenly shut, striking the horses on the neck. A moment later an express train flew by, causing the horses to rear and the horses' heads, which were quickly turned by driver Wm. Kuhn.

Mr. Wheat, who was one of the party, jumped out and with the driver held the frightened horses. Had the driver been warned two seconds later the stage and those it would have held on the track directly in front of the engine and death would have surely followed. R. J. Robertsee was in a buggy behind the stage.

The occupants of the stage were Mrs. J. Dickinson, Mrs. Dressler, Misses Annie Roberts and Annie Gregson, Mrs. Roberts, Isaac Huyler and daughter, Mrs. R. J. Robertson and Mrs. Wheat.—New Brunswick Home News.

TENTH ANINVERSARY.

CELEBRATED IN ST. MARY'S CATHOLIC CHURCH YESTERDAY.

The tenth anniversary of the dedication of St. Mary's Catholic church was appropriately celebrated yesterday. In the morning there were four masses at 7.30, 8.30, 9.45 and 10.30 respectively. Large congregations were present at all the services. The 10.30 o'clock mass was a high one. The Rev. Father Stafford was the celebrant, the Rev. Dr. Kennedy of Philadelphia was the deacon and the Rev. Father Smyth, was the sub-deacon. The sermon at that mass was delivered by the Rev. Dr. Kennedy. He spoke on the Blessed Virgin Mary, from whom the church was named. His sermon throughout was very interesting and held the close attention of the congregation It was nearly half-past twelve before the service was concluded.

ST. MARY'S CATHOLIC CHURCH.

In the evening the service was also very interesting. The singing by the choir, under the direction of Prof. Guntzer, was exceptionally good. The Rev. Father Stafford rendered several solos, and Miss May Flanagan rendered a solo. The Rev. Father Tighe of Hoboken delivered the sermon on the dedication. He reviewed the history of the church since the Rev. Father Smyth had been pastor; told how it had progressed under his pastorate, and commented the congregation on the prosperity of the parish. During his sermon he referred to the rebellion. With a burrah, he said it was a glorious termination of the strife. He told of the soldiers returning with their tattered battle flags, footsore but happy. He then alluded to the war now going on between God and devil.

He referred to the educational facilities and admonished parents to see that their children were given a good education as they were expected to carry on the war after we are dead. He referred to the good work of the Rev. Father Smyth during his pastorate and complimented him on his success. The lecture was one of the best that has ever been delivered in the Church.

Ten years ago when St. Mary's Church was dedicated, there was a debt of about thirty-five thousand dollars on the building and grounds. The Rev. Father Morris was then pastor but he shortly afterwards resigned. The Rev. Father DeBerg succeeded him for awhile and he resigned to take a trip abroad. Father Gillen acted as pastor until Father Smyth took charge. Since his pastorate he has reduced the debt to a few thousand dollars, built a parochial school, purchased a house which is used as a convent for the sisters, and has made extensive improvements to the property. The Rev. Father Stafford is his able assistant, and St. Mary's parish is now one of the most prosperous in this city.

A STORMY INTERVIEW.

Mr. Apgar's Wife Chased Him Down the Railroad Track.

THE NEWS of Saturday published an account of Lewis Apgar kidnapping his child from the public school at Phillipsburg. Mr. Apgar is the proprietor of a billiard room on North avenue. Saturday evening his wife in company with a female acquaintance visited his place of business, and it is alleged that a stormy interview followed. At about midnight Mr. Apgar closed up his billiard rooms. His wife was still there and it is said again began to upraid him. When he reached the street he started to run. She followed, but he was too fleet for her and disappeared down the railroad track in the direction of Netherwood. She could not ascertain the whereabouts of the child.

—A meeting of the bowling section of the Y. M. C. A., and of others interested will be held at the Association rooms to-morrow (Tuesday) evening at 8 o'clock.

AN EXCITING GAME.

The fifth game of the Crescent—West End series was played at Somerville Saturday. As the posters which greeted the eye when a person arrived at the place announced, it was a game "for blood." Well, in base ball phraseology, it was. Each team had won two games. There were two more to be played. Previous to the game there was a dispute as to ground rules. The West End management appeared to be afraid that McIndoe whuld knock the ball over the fence and they wanted it arranged that if he did within a certain line it would only count for two bases. They had good cause to make that rule too. They knew that in case of an emergency "Mac" would, as one of the Plainfielders termed it, "knock it out of sight."

The game was one of the most interesting contests of base ball ever witnessed in this vicinity. From the start to the finish the audience was kept in suspense as to which team would come out victorious.

In the first inning the West Ends scored a run. There was not another run scored until the sixth inning. Tierney, a Crescent player, made a hit and was advanced to second by Keeler's sacrifice. McIndoe went to the bat and hit a ball to centre field which Carbonell dropped. Tierney ran "home" on the hit and tied the score.

The West Ends went to the bat and were put out in one, two, three order. The Crescents followed and met a similar fate. Neither team scored in the eighth inning and the West Ends failed to score in the ninth.

In the Crescent's half of the ninth inning McIndoe went to the bat. Harkins, the West End's pitcher had two strikes on him. "Mac" spat on his hand and grabbed his bat tighter and the next ball that was pitched he knocked over the fence. He was only allowed two bases on it, however. The Plainfield contingent were fairly wild with excitement. They had not as yet heard of the ground rules and thought that "Mac" had made a home run and a game for the Crescents and although a number of them left their seats cheering and going toward the depot they unreluctantly came back.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Divorce Laws.

The American Bar association has taken a large contract on its hands. It is nothing less than starting an agitation which shall in time induce the forty-four states of the Union to pass a uniform divorce law. There is one other way to secure this result. That is by act of congress. Congress can only pass a United States divorce law after a constitutional amendment gives it the privilege of doing so. Securing such amendment will require a long and tedious process, and the Bar association rightly judges that the result can be reached more quickly by legislation among the forty-four states and territories.

A uniform divorce law will commend itself to most persons. But just what the cause for divorce should be will be another matter, and it will be a long time before the states can agree on this. Conservative sentiment favors only the scriptural divorce, without the privilege of remarriage. But this idea is opposed by individuals who have had experience similar to that encountered in the case in one of the middle states. A large estate was to be divided among several heirs. A most advantageous sale was negotiated for the larger part of it. Buyer and seller were eager to come to terms. But one of the female heirs had in her youth contracted an unfortunate marriage. The husband was a dissipated, worthless creature, who for some years had not lived with his wife. Yet in that state she could not get a divorce from him.

When the sale of the estate came on the husband, out of sheer spite, refused to sign away his right to his wife's share of the property. Nothing could avail to break his "comedness" in the matter, and so the sale was abandoned and much inconvenience and loss resulted, because it was impossible to give a clear title without his signature.

Many similar cases might be cited, so many that in states where divorce laws are liberal it will be hard to convince the citizens that more stringent enactments in this respect are for the well being of community.

A Real Reformer.

The American consul at Glasgow reports an enterprise which takes the lead of nearly all others in really bettering the condition of poor working people. In that city is a cooking school. This is nothing singular, for there are cooking schools in every city, and they are attended by the first ladies of the land. But the Glasgow place has a feature of its own. This is a visiting department. The principal of the school not only teaches workingmen's wives to cook appetizing and wholesome food, but she visits them in their homes to see that they cook it.

The most thoughtful women attend the classes, of which there are two—one for girls, the other for married women. Every detail of improved sanitation is taught—cleanliness, ventilation and drainage. Not even does the work stop here. Language, manners and dress are included as subjects for instruction. The talks are given in such a way as not to hurt the pride of the most sensitive. The teacher visits the women's homes to help them in person. The improvement is already marked, especially in ventilation, cleanliness and cooking. Their homes being made more attractive, men will not be tempted to visit the gin house, and thus, in time, the fearful drunkenness which has overshadowed Glasgow so long may be abated.

The United States treasury department has solemnly sat on the case of a ring which a young man sent from New York to his sweetheart in London. After the gift was sent they quarreled and the girl returned the ring. Not only was the the young man's love scorned, but his country was about to make him pay duty on the ring as if it had been an imported one. Finally, after consulting all the authorities, the department decided that if the ring was purely of domestic manufacture, and if it had not been in any way improved in value by the sea air and its trip abroad, then the jilted youth might have the poor consolation of taking it again to himself without paying a tariff import. Not even broken hearts escape the argus eyes of the treasury department.

Many a time persons have declared they were able to see blood on the moon, but it has been left for the great Lick telescope to find snow on the moon. Through this the California astronomers have dejected a luminous projection which they believe to be snow. Should further observation verify this, the next thing will be to look for inflections of ice in atmosphere, and with the still more powerful lenses which the telescope of the future may produce astronomers will look to find indications of life on the supposed desolate planet.

If you have still any United States 6 per cent. bonds you can change, say for 4 per cents. at any time, since the period for thus exchanging them has been indefinitely extended by the treasury department.

A newspaper woman lays down a universal truth in speaking of the requisites for making a successful journalist. She says, "It takes a wholesome disposition and a sense of humor."

TALK ABOUT THE TICKET!

Who Will the Empire State Democrats Nominate?

SOME TALK OF HILL AND JONES.

But Flower and Sheehan Will in All Probability Be Named for Governor and Lieutenant Governor Respectively.

It Is Said, at the Convention Tuesday.

SARATOGA, Sept. 14.—The New York State Democratic convention to nominate a governor and a full state ticket will be held here Tuesday. The Kings county delegates say they are ready for the fray, and intend to stand firmly by their guns, which are all loaded for Chapin for governor. Mr. Flower's friends say that Mayor Chapin is sure of the thirty-six votes from Kings county, and that is all. There has been some talk about renominating Governor Hill for a third term, but warm friends of the governor say there is nothing in it, and that Mr. Flower will certainly be nominated on the first ballot.

Sheehan for Second Place.

Mr. Ridgway, of Kings county, has a chance for second place on the ticket in certain contingencies, but the Sheehan men, who claim the office, say that Ridgway won't make it.

There seems to be no doubt that the second term practice will prevail in the offices of secretary of state and treasurer, and that Messrs. Rice and Danforth, as heretofore stated, will be renominated. Should Governor Hill be elected to lieutenant governorship Mr. Sheehan will probably be urged to accept the controllership, instead of Frank Campbell, of Bath, who has been mentioned for that place. Sheehan's friends, it is believed, will insist that he must have second place.

Maynard for Attorney General.

Isaac Maynard, of Seneca, has crept up to the top of the list of candidates for attorney general, and appears to have the call on the position despite the efforts which have been put forth by the friends of Bulger, of Oswego; Rosendale, of Albany, and Foley, of Saratoga. The last named gentleman says that he is not a candidate, but in case of seeking that position, but if it should be tendered to him he will accept it. The senator is very popular, and should there be any danger of a conflict his selection would doubtless insure harmony. John Bogart still appears to be the choice for engineer and surveyor.

A Short Session Predicted.

The state committee will meet at the Grand Union at 8 o'clock tonight, and there will also be many caucuses during the night and early on Tuesday. It is now thought that the contested cases will delay organization of the convention very materially, and delegates are figuring on but two days' session. Tammany Hall, the County Democracy and the Brooklyn delegation are expected to reach here about 4 o'clock this afternoon. Secretary Dr. French, of the state committee, is on the ground, and with his lieutenants is arranging the preliminaries. Most all of the delegates are already here.

Sheehan Confers with Hill.

ALBANY, Sept. 14.—Albany has taken on the appearance of a convention town, and most of the prominent politicians will probably stay here until Tuesday morning. Governor Hill has been at the executive chamber since early morning and has had several important callers. Mr. Sheehan arrived at the Fenmore, and a few minutes afterward was closeted with the governor. The interview was very brief, and Sheehan refused to say upon what line. He then went to Troy and had Chairman Edward Murphy come here. When Mr. Murphy arrived he found Mr. Richard Croker, of Tammany Hall, with the governor. A protracted interview took place, but nothing definite of its import could be obtained.

Perhaps Hill and Jones Again.

There is quite a good deal of talk of Hill and Jones heading the ticket. Committeeman Griffin, of Watertown, who nominated Mr. Flower for lieutenant governor three years ago, believes that Mr. Flower will not be the unanimous choice of the convention. It has been decided that the convention will meet on Tuesday and adjourn over until Wednesday, when the nominations will be made.

Mr. Sheehan Talks.

In an interview Hon. W. F. Sheehan said: "I am a candidate for lieutenant governor and I think I shall be nominated." Frank Campbell, of Bath, said: "I am making an active canvass for controller and do not fear the few competitors I have."

McNaughton versus Sheehan.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Sept. 14.—Senator Donald McNaughton, ex-Senator George Raines, State Committeeman William H. Bailey, Valentine Feelhauer, candidate for Tracy's place on the state committee, and many other prominent Democrats have left for Saratoga. Senator McNaughton said before leaving that he would accept the nomination for lieutenant governor, and that he thought it would be unwise to nominate Sheehan for the position on account of his prominence in the faction fights in Buffalo.

The McKinley-Campbell Debate.

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 14.—The chairmen of the Republican and Democratic committees have agreed upon the time for the joint debate between Governor Campbell and Major McKinley. The details as to the opening and closing of the debate and the number to be occupied have not yet been decided upon, but the time and place of the meeting will be Oct. 8, at Ada.

Troops Again Leave Brierville.

NASHVILLE, Sept. 14.—The members of the Queen City guards, of Knoxville, who went to Brierville Thursday night to guard the convicts home, returned to Knoxville. The Tennessee Coal and Mining company has decided, in view of assurances given them by the governor that no trouble need be feared at present, to withdraw them.

The Trial of the Gouldis.

ALBANY, Sept. 14.—The United States circuit court at Buffalo will witness on Tuesday the beginning of the trial of the four Gould brothers on a charge of conspiracy with George P. Whitney, defendant bookkeeper of the Albany City National bank, in embezzling over $100,000 of the funds of that institution.

The New Year at Yale.

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 14.—The academic year at Yale university opens on Sept. 24, and the number of men attending will not fall much below 1,800. Last year the total was 1,865. In the academic department there will be not less than 310 seniors, 335 juniors, 350 sophomores and 320 freshmen.

LI HUNG CHANG DEFIANT.

The Great Celestial Not Friendly to Foreigners Claim May Be Disturbed.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 14.—The steamer China has arrived from China and Japan, making the trip from Yokohama in twelve days, eleven minutes and fifty-five seconds. She brings advices from China to Aug. 30. The British minister, Sir John Wolsom, made a strong protest against the dilatory manner in which the Chinese government dealt with the riots. The latter breaks against foreigners, and put three questions to the government, asking, first, why an edict on the subject of the riots was disregarded though the empress had telegraph; second, why the Wuhu magistrate who tried to stop the riots was degraded while his superiors who did nothing were not punished, and third, why the punishment of the guilty at Wusueh was delayed.

Li Hung Chang answered these questions as follows: First—It is not the custom of China to send edicts by wire. Second—The magistrate was degraded for other reasons. Third—The rioters had been punished, but only executed and the others otherwise punished. The North China News says the reply is a palpable evasion and that China does not intend to be dictated upon by the foreign powers. The paper continues: "Meanwhile the powers do not intend to be satisfied with these replies, and what has been done by the Chinese government so far in the way of punishment and reparation. They have sent China what is virtually an ultimatum, and will not take any insolent reply. England's action is understood to be backed by other powers, and it is thought force will be used if China is not conciliatory."

Over 20,000 Chinese assembled at Lung Chow, in the province of Hunan, recently, to prevent workmen from putting up telegraph lines. Ten thousand poles were burned and the men driven over the boundary. A society has been formed to keep the telegraph out, and a mob is still on the watch.

FIVE ARE FATALLY HURT.

DENVER, Sept. 14.—Passenger train No. 314, bound toward Denver on the Gray-mont district of the Union Pacific railway, was wrecked at 11 a. m. near Beaver Brook, six miles east of Denver. Twenty-three persons were injured, five of whom will probably die. The train was late and running very rapidly, and, rounding a sharp curve, the engine car left the track and rolled down a fifteen foot embankment. It was followed by the mail and two passenger coaches, all of which turned over twice before reaching the bottom.

The train was loaded with passengers, many of whom were Knights of Pythias who were returning from their state convention which was held at Aspen last week. When the news reached Golden, Colo., a wrecking train was ordered out and was starting when Robert Hunter, employe of the road, attempted to board the engine. In doing so his revolver fell from his hip pocket, the hammer striking a stone, and the weapon was discharged, the ball taking effect in the man's neck, making a wound which will result fatally.

The seriously injured are: Mrs. Gutelmacher, of Blackhawk, Colo., collar bone broken, back hurt and internal injuries; Rudolgamer, merchant of Blackhawk, internal injuries; George B. Tarr, conductor, of this city, chest crushed and internal injuries; Burnett, of Nevadaville, Colo., spine injured and internal injuries. Mrs. Waters, injured internally. It is thought that the train was running too rapidly for safety.

The Yankee Navy Will Lead.

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—Captain Doubleday, of Stanton's army days, the friend and confidant of the czar, is in this city, having completed a tour of inspection of the American gun and shipbuilding works. He was particularly struck with the work at the Cramp shipyards at Philadelphia, where several cruisers are under construction. He was of the opinion that the United States is destined to soon lead the world with its ships of war.

Killed While He Slept.

ALBERT LEA, Minn., Sept. 14.—During a thunder storm the house of Peter A. Peterson, of the town of Geneva, Freeborn county, was struck by lightning and Chris Peterson, aged seventeen years, who was lying in bed, was instantly killed although a brother who slept with him escaped.

Captain McClung to Begin Work.

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 14.—Captain McClung, of Yale's foot ball team, is in town and will at once begin the work of preparing the eleven for the season's contests. Most of the eleven of last year will play again this, but four new men will have to be selected.

A Connecticut Girl's Mishap.

LOUISVILLE, Sept. 14.—While Miss Annie Dougherty, a young lady from Norwich, Conn., and a teacher in an academy at Williamsburg, Ky., was out driving with Willard Jameson the horse ran away. Miss Dougherty was thrown out and fatally injured.

Fell with a Lighted Lamp.

NEW LONDON, Conn., Sept. 14.—John McAndrews fell before a train in the Bacon House with a lighted lamp in his hand this morning. The lamp exploded and set the house on fire. McAndrews was burned to death and the hotel badly damaged.

She Came Too Late.

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—Charles Adolphe Pinston, the Marquis de Chambrun and legal adviser of the French government, died in his apartments in the Chelsea one half hour before his wife, who was summoned from Paris, arrived.

Mr. Scott Is Out of Danger.

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 14.—Ex-Congressman Scott is slowly but surely improving. He is now able to take and retain solid food. His physician, Dr. Peppe, is as much encouraged as to warrant him in leaving town for a week.

It Has Legs, Wings and Fins.

TROY, N. Y., Sept. 14.—A remarkably strange amphibious creature has been captured in the Hudson river. The under portion of the animal bears a striking resemblance to a shad. It has legs, wings, fins and a long tail.

Another Reciprocity Treaty.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 14.—Minister Morales, of San Salvador, has arrived here and will proceed to Washington, where he will negotiate a reciprocity treaty between the United States and San Salvador.

Defoil from the Altar.

BROOKLYN, Sept. 14.—Father Thlyssus, the riotous Lithuanian priest of Williamsburg, defied Bishop Loughlin from his altar Sunday and said that he could not be suspended.

SHE IS BADLY BATTERED.

The Big Steamer Arizona Almost Sunk at Sea.

DEATH LURKED IN THE DENSE FOG

LONDON, Sept. 14.—The steamship Arizona, of the Guion line, which left New York on Saturday, Sept. 5, for Liverpool, arrived Sunday at Queenstown in a battered condition after a thrilling voyage across the Atlantic. Early on the morning of the 6th, while the Arizona was steaming rapidly in a fog, an unknown sailing vessel, believed to be a large coasting schooner, collided with the Arizona.

Passengers Terror-Stricken.

The shock was very great and aroused the passengers from their beds. For a time the greatest excitement reigned until it was found that the steamer was not, as many feared, about to go to the bottom. The stern of the schooner struck the Arizona's front quarter. Thirty feet of the plates of the steamship's deck were carried away and a lifeboat smashed. The deck was considerably damaged, and several plates of the vessel's side were badly indented.

The Lifeboats Ready.

While the extent of the injury to the steamer was being ascertained lifeboats were prepared for the use of the passengers in case the steamship should prove a wreck. Fears of such a catastrophe were, however, soon allayed, though it was a long time before the passengers recovered from the shock.

Down to Sudden Death.

Search was made for the colliding schooner, but not a sign could be seen, nor was a cry heard. The terrible shock had apparently crushed the sailing vessel like an eggshell in a twinkling and caused her to founder. Part of the bowsprit of the schooner remained on the Arizona's deck, and other wreckage indicated the fate of the unfortunate mariners. The Arizona's machinery had not suffered by the collision. She continued her voyage.

The Germans Were Slaughtered.

BERLIN, Sept. 14.—Further particulars have been received of the defeat of the Germans in East Africa by the natives. Captain Zenewski and Officers Ettzwitz and Pierch, Dr. Dunschow and four non-commissioned officers are missing. Only two officers, Tettenborn and Heydebreck, and two non-commissioned officers are known to have escaped.

Three Hundred Blacks Killed.

Three hundred blacks under German command were killed in the engagement. A quantity of guns and munitions of war were lost to the enemy. The victorious natives followed up their success without mercy, killing all they got in their power.

The King a Prisoner.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—From Vienna comes the startling information that King Charles of Roumania is virtually a prisoner of his own ministers, and that a scheme is on foot to dethrone him in favor of Carol. The king has at heart been with the queen in her desire to bring about the marriage of the crown prince and Mlle. Vacarescu; but he was powerless to act openly, and for fear that he may relent and give way to the wishes of his almost dying wife a deputation of the ministers follow him everywhere.

Salaries for Members of Parliament.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—The Trades Union congress has thrown a bombshell into the Liberal camp by its resolution in favor of salaries for members of parliament. This means the introduction of the labor element to an important degree in the house of commons, where it has now barely a foothold. Such a change would be a most significant revolution. It would mean the abolition of the old parliament in the fullest sense, and the first step in the legislative triumph of radicalism.

Actor Curtis Remembers Nothing.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 14.—Actor Curtis still claims he remembers nothing about Friday's tragedy, and will not talk of anything but his theatrical record. Officer J. J. Allen has sworn to the complaint charging Curtis with the murder of Officer Grant. The police are fast completing the chain of evidence against Curtis, and are leaving no stone unturned to lay bare all the facts.

A Railroad Magnate Punched.

NORWALK, Conn., Sept. 14.—President Charles R. Tedcastle, of the New England Terminal company, was assaulted at Branchville last evening by John Seaman, a Bridgeport commercial traveler. Tedcastle abused Seaman, it is said, and the latter knocked him down, his nose punched and his eyes blackened. Seaman was arrested, but was later released.

Killed His Half Brother.

PRATT, Kan., Sept. 14.—Fred Wiley and John Packer, half brothers, each aged fifteen years, quarreled over the possession of a horse. Packer shot the head of Wiley, when the latter went to the house and procuring a shotgun shot and instantly killed his brother. A posse has started in pursuit of the murderer.

Big Sale of Real Estate.

MAY'S LANDING, N. J., Sept. 14.—There has been filed in the county clerk's office a deed given by Charles R. Colwell and his wife, of Weymouth, to the Industrial Land and Development company, of New York, conveying about 35,000 acres of land. The consideration is $8,198,000.

Harriet Pullman to Marry.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 14.—Miss Harriet Pullman, daughter of George H. Pullman, has been engaged to Frank J. Carolan, a prominent society man of this city. The marriage will take place in Chicago next spring.

Funeral of Fireman Luby.

ALBANY, Sept. 14.—Several thousand persons attended the funeral Sunday afternoon of Fireman Frank Luby, who was crushed to death at Thursday's big fire. A fund is being raised for the support of his family.

For Confederate Widows.

ATLANTA, Sept. 14.—The house finance committee has agreed upon a bill which will grant nearly $80,000 per annum for the support of the widows of Confederate officers.

She Has the Balmaceda Stiver.

LISBON, Sept. 14.—The steamship Moselle has arrived here with the silver shipped from Valparaiso by Balmaceda before his downfall.

ARE THE INSANE ILL TREATED?

Twenty-five Abuses Said to Exist in New York Asylums.

LOUIS BRANCH, N. J., Sept. 14.—Counsellor Albert Bach, vice chairman of the Lunacy Law Reform league's central committee, has sent to the committee's meeting in New York today a report on the condition of the seven New York state lunatic asylums. He says the inquiry was necessary to supplement the work of the state lunacy commission, which body, he declares, has laboriously examined the county asylums and exposed their defects, but that the commission's own reports show that they have omitted to examine the practical workings of the very institutions wherein they seek to remedy the county patients. He says he has obtained a mass of evidence of a startling nature, and that the truth cannot be fully learned except by a committee of the legislature with the largest power of investigation.

He states that the heads of asylums are mostly irresponsible despots and control the boards of trustees or managers, who are supposed to supervise them. Mr. Bach enumerates twenty-five different abuses which he avers exist in the state asylums. He ends by saying the state lunacy commission are entirely mistaken in their expressed belief that the state asylum inmates are properly housed, clothed, fed, educated and medically treated, and that the management of these asylums deserves public confidence. He adds that the conditions of asylums elsewhere is generally still worse and a disgrace to the country.

An Incendiary Almost Lynched.

QUEBEC, Sept. 14.—Fire started in a grocery store occupied by Oulett, at Cape Blanc, and before the flames were gotten under control had destroyed twenty-nine houses and a portion of the Roman Catholic church. Oulett's place was found to have been saturated with coal oil. When this fact was noised an infuriated mob procured a rope and capturing Oulett were about to lynch him when the police rescued him.

His Heroism Cost Him His Life.

TRENTON, Sept. 14.—Samuel B. Tantum, son of Major W. S. Tantum, a prominent business man of Trenton, died at his home here last night. In New York, four years ago, while attempting to rescue a little girl from the wheels of a truck, he struck his hip on the curb. Ever since then he has been confined to his bed with a disease which has gradually eaten away his hip bone.

Dead and Hanging on a Fence.

MORRISTOWN, N. J., Sept. 14.—The dead body of a man was found about 9 a. m. with one arm hanging over a fence, corner Hill street and Franklin place, and blood pouring from his mouth and nose. The unfortunate man looks to be about thirty-five and his features give no evidence of pulmonary trouble. He has blue eyes, dark, chestnut colored hair and mustache.

Swept Away and Drowned.

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—A pleasure yacht containing four persons was run down and sunk in Arthur Kills last night by a steam lighter. Only the lighter aboard the yacht were rescued. The others, Harry Fairchild and Walter Dodd, were swept away by the tide and drowned. Albert and Harry Stevens, the survivors, are strangely reticent about the affair.

A MISTAKE OF POPE'S,
That "what oft was thought but ne'er so well expressed" is applicable to many of the individual enterprises which have arisen in this specific age, but how true will it be found that "whatever is, is right" in the case of our carriages, we would fail to see the point, and not fail to justify the assertion, if we did not say that "the general good" take care of itself.

A STORY OF SHERMAN.

General Halleck Once Reported Him Unfit for Duty.

HOW THE INSANE TALE STARTED.

Secretary of War Cameron Thought "Old Tecumseh" Was Half-Crazy—He Said 200,000 Men Would Be Needed to Clear Certain States of Confederates.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—A hitherto unpublished letter throws an altogether new light on the source of the stories of General Sherman's insanity started at the outbreak of the war. It has been unearthed from the archives of the war department in the search for material for forthcoming memoirs. It is given to the public in a communication from Leslie J. Perry, a member of the board of publication of war records. General Sherman assumed command in Kentucky on Oct. 8, 1861. He found things in a dangerous condition, the Confederates were active and aggressive and to oppose them only a handful of undisciplined and disorganized Union troops. The general, naturally of an excitable, irascible disposition, was harassed by this state of affairs.

Called It an Insane View.

He was visited at Louisville on Oct. 16 by the secretary of war. Secretary Cameron found General Sherman in a gloomy frame of mind, and personal observation seems to have given him an unfavorable impression of the general's capacity. Among other things the general informed the secretary that it would require 200,000 men to clear the Confederates out of Kentucky and the Mississippi Valley. At that period this was deemed a wild exaggeration, and he was said the secretary pronounced it as "insane" view of the Confederate power in the west. This interview and Sherman's estimate of the force required are generally referred to in reliable histories and newspapers as the prologue to a flotilla of sensational prophecies, which for a few months had a great run.

Sherman Was Alarmed.

The true story as told by Mr. Perry and based upon newly discovered documents is substantially as follows: On Nov. 15 Sherman was relieved by General Don Carlos Buell, and, shaking the dust of Kentucky from his feet, on the 23d he reported for duty to General Halleck in St. Louis. Halleck had known Sherman in California previous to the war, and at once sent him on an inspection tour to western Missouri. He had orders to take command in case there was danger of an attack, and did so.

On the 29th he began telegraphing to headquarters that the Confederates in force, under Sterling Price, were rapidly advancing. None of the other officers at the front, however, were alarmed; in fact they sent news of an entirely different purport to Halleck.

Halleck's Remarkable Letter.

On false information Sherman had begun to move the troops of Pope and other generals into position to meet the enemy, but Pope's protests and more correct reports caused Halleck to order Sherman back to St. Louis. This episode was described in the following remarkable letter from Halleck to the general in chief at Washington:

[Confidential.]

ST LOUIS, Mo., Dec. 3, 1861.

Major General George B. McClellan, Commander-in-Chief, Washington:

GENERAL.—As stated in a former communication, Brigadier General W. T. Sherman, on reporting to me for duty, was ordered to inspect troops in three divisions, at Sedalia and vicinity, and if, in the absence of General Pope, he deemed there was danger of an immediate attack he was authorized to assumed command. He did so, and commenced the movement of the troops in a manner which I did not approve and countermanded. I also received information from officers that General Sherman was completely "stampeded" and was "stampeding" the army.

Unfit for Duty.

I therefore immediately ordered him to this place, and yesterday gave him a leave of absence for twenty days to visit his family in Ohio. I am satisfied that General Sherman's physical and mental system is so completely broken by labor and care as to render him for the present entirely unfit for duty. Perhaps a few weeks' rest may restore him. I am satisfied that in his present condition it would be dangerous to give him a command here. Very respectfully your obedient servant,

H. W. HALLECK, Major General.

How It Affected Sherman.

The original of this letter, body and signature all in General Halleck's handwriting, is now on file in the war records office. It appears from the official records that General Halleck was at this time really General Sherman's friend. Yet his letter manifestly worked Sherman a serious, almost irremediable, injury.

Six weeks after the Cameron interview in Louisville Sherman was assailed for insanity in the hospital Commercial by Murat Halstead. The Commercial's attack was vigorously sustained by other newspapers whose correspondents had been harshly treated by General Sherman in Kentucky. The charge of insanity was persisted in and rung upon so many changes that soon the general was commonly spoken of throughout the army and country as "Crazy Sherman."

The Alliance Calls a Halt.

ST. PAUL, Sept. 14.—The Farmers' Alliance leaders in Minnesota and North and South Dakota have resolved upon another attempt to stop the tremendous flow of wheat to the markets. The Alliance people assert that the 150,000,000 bushels of wheat in the No. 1 hard belt will be out of the farmers' hands before Jan. 1, and their haste will drive the price back to eighty cents.

Secretary Tracy's Defiance.

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—The Herald says that in a speech at Philadelphia this week Secretary Tracy will defend the course of the navy department in maintaining the equilibrium of revolution instead of sending the ships belonging at present to China, where there are fears of a general revolution. He thinks the instruction the men received has been of great value and was necessary.

Ready Was 101 Years Old.

JERSEY CITY, Sept. 14.—Peter Brady, a retired produce merchant, who, it is believed, was one of the oldest men in New Jersey, died Saturday evening at his home, 40 Grove street, Jersey City. He was 101 years old. His death was caused by a general breaking up of the system.

News from Chili.

VALPARAISO, Sept. 14.—The junta has issued orders for the arrest of murderers, seekers, robbers, torturers and violators of the safe conduct of foreign ministers to Chili. President Monts gave banquet to British naval officers for their sympathy in the cause.

GERMANY IN BAD SHAPE.

Bismarck's Rye Edict Cut Off Her Great Food Supply.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—Consul General Mason, at Frankfort, in a report to the state department on what he terms the German crisis in breadstuffs, presents some very interesting statements respecting the Russian decree forbidding the exportation of rye from Russia. Mr. Mason presents some data which shows how seriously the unexpected edict is likely to affect the bread supply of Germany. Very little pure wheat bread, he says, is eaten by the middle and lower classes in Germany. The "staff of life" to a great majority of the German people is black bread made with flour, ground with a mixture of rye and an inferior quality of wheat.

Rye flour enters into nearly five-sixths of the foreign rye supply of Germany.

The deficit in Germany cannot be filled from any known sources of supply on that side of the Atlantic, and the effect of the situation upon the rye market has been startling. A year ago rye sold in Berlin for thirty-nine dollars per ton. Then came the Russian edict and within two weeks the price had risen to sixty-one dollars and eighty-eight cents per ton. Add to this a short and inferior potato crop throughout nearly the whole of Germany, and it will be seen that the food question there has assumed an ominous aspect and in the end the people of Germany, like those of France and England, will have to draw upon the well filled granaries of the United States for a large part of their food supply during the coming year.

Publisher Claxton Dead.

ATLANTIC CITY, Sept. 14.—Edmund Claxton, a well known Philadelphian, died Sept. 13 at his residence on Pennsylvania avenue. He was prominent in the publishing circles and was at one time a member of the firm of J. B. Lippincott & Sons, and senior member of the publishing firm of Claxton, Remsen & Haffelfinger.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF.

The New Haven Grays on Sept. 18 celebrated their seventy-fifth anniversary.

A DAMASCUS BLADE.

This crescent shaped and flexible blade,
With time dulled, tawny gold inlaid,
Straight was that knew the eastern star
Was found within de old bazaar.
I mind me well, how, passing by,
We caught the merchant's gleaming eye,
Where in his dim recess he sat
Upon his precious Persian mat.
Urbane was and graft of mien,
This patriarchal Damascene;
He lured us to his humid diven;
At spring bar for coffee ran,
And, while we sipped, he laid before
Your widening eyes his wonder store.

There from worn sheaths, once bright with gilt,
We saw protrude the jeweled hilt;
There ivory from Bengal brought
With Saracenic art was wrought;
And there keen steel was looked upon
That like moon-burnished water shone.
But most of all on me laid hold
This blade, with letters strangely scrolled—
Some curious Koran text, no doubt,
Bidding the warrior's heart be stout—
And, when we took our way after,
I bore it from the old bazaar.

He had a deadly supple wrist
Who wielded it of yore, I wist.
And oft, maybap, in goodly stead,
In the battle's mêlée 'mid the turbaned head
When some Crusader, huge and grim,
In the thick press encrowded him.
Perchance his zealous soul now roves
In peaceful paradisal groves;
His blade is rust: no one does he know?
Is nothing but a curio!
Ah! what a fate its fate has been—
The blade was left for Raleigh!

DEPINITIONS OF HOME.

Some Beautiful Sentiments About That Place Which Is Loved by All.

The Vaughan Tid-Bits offered a prize for the best definition of home. Here are some of the best of 5,000 answers sent in.

The golden setting in which the brightest jewel is "mother."

A ship upon the ocean of life, where the captain is assisted by a first class mate.

An arbor which shades when the sunshine of prosperity becomes too dazzling; a harbor where the bark finds shelter in the time of adversity.

Home is the blossom of which heaven is the fruit.

Home is a place that a married man loves before his mother-in-law comes to stay there.

Home is a person's estate obtained without injustice, kept without disquietude; a place where time is spent without repentance, and which is ruled by justice, mercy and love.

A gerald old mirror, through which both sides of us are seen.

That source of comfort which youth does not fully appreciate, which the young men and maidens lovingly desire, which the middle aged generally possess, which the old gladly value.

A hive in which, like the industrious bee, youth garners the sweets and memories of life for age to meditate and feed upon.

The place where the cool spoils the dinner, where the baby spoils the night's rest, and where a late breakfast for an early train spoils the digestion.

A place to easily left but not so easily forgotten.

The divinely appointed school for mankind, where husband and wife, parents and children mutually educate one another.

When good, a man's kingdom and haven of refuge; when indifferent, a parade ground of duty; when bad, the torturer's cage in which of old the victim could neither move nor rest nor stand nor lie.

The kingdom of love whose queen is "mother."

A mint, in which our characters (the coins of life) are stamped and impressed.

A junction on love's railway.

The best place for a married man after business hours.

Home is the quietest, kindliest, sweetest place in all the world, the scene of our purest earthly joys and deepest sorrows.

A place the sinbman retires to when weary of his cloth.

The only spot on earth where the faults and failings of fallen humanity are hidden under the mantle of charity.

Where mother lives.

The jewel casket containing the most precious of all jewels—domestic happiness.

The place at which the tired wigner looks to obtain some little rest and quietness after a day of toil, and the favorite sojourning place of one's offspring while there is a single bit out of it, and the place just as studiously avoided by them when their pecuniary position would warrant something being got out of them.

Where we are treated best and you grumble most.

Home is a central telegraph office of human love which can transmit innumerable wires of affection, many of which, though extending thousands of miles, are never disconnected from the one great terminus.

The center of our affections, around which our hearts' best wishes twine.

A little hollow scooped out of the windy hill of the world where we can be shielded from its cares and annoyances.

A popular but paradoxical institution, in which woman works in the absence of man and man rests in the presence of woman.

A working model of heaven, with real angels in the form of mothers and wives.

The place where all husbands should be at night.

The place in which you live till you are old enough to get away from it, and to which you never fail to return when there is nowhere else to go.

The antipodes of bad roadings.

The place dearest to those who have lost it.

An abode on which the inmate, the "superior being called man," can pay back at night with 50 per cent. interest every annoyance that has met him in business during the day.

The only place on earth where a man is seen as he truly is.

A place that is either made or marred by a woman.

A place we are always unhappy away from and never contented in.

An oasis in the desert of life where one can find a shady retreat from the sun of toil and drink from the well of happiness.

A nest of bliss where naught's amiss.

A universal lodestone.

A school wherein we are taught the most important lessons of life, for they consist in the basis upon which we build the whole superstructure of our characters.

Mrs. William H. Vanderbilt sometimes rides in a high French carriage of striking design that is remarked by thousands in Central park, New York, as a very fine and unique vehicle. It is lined throughout with satin, and sets so high at the springs that it is provided with a flight of steps like the family coaches of olden time.

OUR YOUNG FOLKS

THE MERRY OUTLAW, BOB O'LINCOLN

A Little Masquerader Known Also as the Reed Bird, Rice Bird and Butter Bird.

The merry bobolink is one of the prettiest song birds in the country. In eastern Pennsylvania, along the Delaware, the bobolink is known as the "reed bird," and is eagerly hunted by gunners. St. Nicholas gives an entertaining description of this little creature, from which we glean for our young readers a number of interesting facts:

You must know that the bobolink has a third name—"rice bird." This is what it is called in the southern states, where it attacks the rice fields and devours the grain. In innumerable hosts the birds visit the fields at the time of planting in spring and then go back northward into Pennsylvania, New York and New England, where they spend the summer. About the middle of August they commence to migrate south again, and swoop down upon the rice fields once more, just at the time of harvesting the crop.

One of the largest rice growers in South Carolina tells the following:

"My plantation records will show that in the past ten years the rice birds come punctually on the night of the 31st of August. All night long their chirp can be heard passing over our summer house. On the next three nights millions of these birds make their appearance and settle down on our rice fields. From that time until the 25th of September our every effort is to save the crop. Men, women and boys are posted with guns and ammunition, one to every four or five acres, and shoot daily an average of about one quart of powder to a gun. This firing commences at the dawn of day and is kept up until sunset. During the bird season we employ about 100 bird minders on this plantation, who shoot from three to five bags of powders of twenty-five pounds each. Add to this the cost of shot and caps, and you may know at what an enormous expense our fight with the bobolink is kept up."

Between spring and late summer, when the bobolink is at the north, he displays none of these ruinous ways of his. He is all beauty and no male. Sometimes he may plunder a cornfield slightly, but in Pennsylvania he is not guilty even of that slight offense. He is known on the farms of the north only as a bird most showy in his dress of black, white and yellow feathers. The song of the bobolink is a peculiar, rapid, jingling, indescribable medley of sounds, started first by one bird, quickly followed by another and another, until the whole flock is engaged in a grand concert. Sometimes they are without any apparent reason, they all at the same instant stop. The "mellow, metallic chink" the birds utter has given them a name to fond lovers in their bobolink. When the birds mate the male appears to lose his vocal powers, and is heard to utter only a sharp, clinking note like that of the female; and the same is the case after the plundering the rice fields. Bobolinks only migrate at night. They winter in the West Indies, where they get so fat that the natives have given them a fourth name—butter birds.

A Hero.

Their names were Jack and Jill.

They were not Mother Goose's Jack and Jill. Still there is a goose in the story—several geese, in fact.

They were going down the road to school. Jack wore a long playfrock, almost as long as Jill's dress. It made him look a little like a girl. He didn't like it. But he had to wear it, because he would play in the dirt!

"What if we should meet the wolf?" cried Jill.

"What wolf?" asked Jack.

WORSE THAN WOLVES.

"Why, Red Riding-hood's wolf," answered Jill.

"Pooh!" laughed Jack. "I'm not afraid —I'd just like to meet him. I'd punish him for what he did."

Just then they saw a goose coming up the road—then another—a whole flock!

"Maybe," said Jack, "maybe, Jill, we better go around through the field."

"Why, Jack," shouted Jill, "you were brave —brave enough to fight a wolf!" said Jill.

"I am—but—a wolf—hasn't wings to flap you. Ugh!" and Jack shook. "I'd be afraid of a wolf if he had wings!"

The geese had the road all to themselves that morning.—Little Men and Women.

A Novel Device for Curing Yellow Fever.

A late device in medicine noted by a German journal is the use of cold greenhouses in tropical countries as a means of combating yellow fever. This disease, it states, can be conquered if one removes to those elevated regions in which oaks will grow. The fact recently inspired a celebrated Cuban physician with the idea of reducing the temperature of sick rooms by artificial means and wonderful cures resulted. Now it is proposed that, in districts liable to the epidemic, each town shall erect a great glass house in which plants of cold and temperate regions may be grown, the temperature being artificially cooled instead of heated, as in our greenhouses, and that they shall be devoted to the treatment of patients suffering from the fever.

The oases on the northern border of the Sahara are beginning to attract the attention of European invalids and persons in search of quiet and a mild climate for winter. The climate is said to be very equable, and railroad communication through Algeria makes them less inaccessible than formerly.

He Made a Hit.

I saw a good natured and innocent looking man give one of the ring hall park loungers a quarter the other day, and after he had gone away I sat down beside the recipient and asked:

"How did you appeal to his sympathies?"

"Told him I had lost my all."

"All but your cheek, of course. I heard you saying something about the Mississippi river."

"Yes; I told him that I was going down the Mississippi in a flatboat and that we were carried over Niagara falls and the whole family drowned but me."

"Great Scot, man! but you didn't locate Niagara falls on the Mississippi!"

"Yes, I did. Ain't they there?"

"Why, no! They are up here near Buffalo."

"Is that a fact? I saw him give a little jump when I put the falls 'way down there, but I fixed it all right."

"How could you?"

"Why, I remembered something about Buffalo, and so I located it down below Vicksburg and hit him all right. Do boats rub over the falls?"

"Never."

"Is that so? Well, no harm done. I can just as well ak my craft five miles above as to have to go over. The only object is to drown the family and lose my all, you know. Couldn't put ten cents with this and help me reach my mother's bedside in Paterson before she dies, could you?"—M. Quad in New York Evening World.

A Study in Natural History.

He was poor and not noticably industrious, but he managed somehow to be quite a butterfly of fashion and a favorite in society.

Then he married a girl in no way his superior in energy or finances, and for the past five years he has been barely able to feed his following.

A friend met him the other day on Jefferson avenue walking along very thoughtfully.

"Hallo," he said, "why so solemn?"

"Oh, I was just thinking," he replied vaguely.

"That doesn't cost anything, at least," suggested the friend; "but what were you thinking about?"

"Well, mostly about how things go by contraries. When I was in school I was taught that the grub came first and then the butterfly."

"Yes?" prompted the friend questioningly, as the other paused a moment.

"Now I discover," he went on, "that the butterfly is after the grub, and it is pretty rough on the butterfly too."—Detroit Free Press.

Disposing of a Rival.

The way in which a small boy of our acquaintance met the crisis which, in the language of the nurses, was "to put his nose out of joint," showed at least a readiness to dispose of a troublesome impediment with a bowl.

The little fellow was taken into his mother's chamber to see for the first time a baby brother. The three-year-old looked the infant over with a calmly critical regard, and then, turning to the maid who accompanied him, he said very decidedly:

"Jane, you may take it back in the kitchen."—Youth's Companion.

From the Heart.

"I wish I had saved up money enough to pay my debts," said an impecunious Austin man sadly.

"Why do you feel so badly about it?" inquired an acquaintance. "It is your creditors who feel badly, not you. Why do you wish you had saved up money enough to pay your debts?"

"Well, if I only had, I would be the richest man in this town!"—Texas Siftings.

The Rich American Derby.

CHICAGO, Sept. 14.—The Washington Park club ratified Secretary Brewsters' suggestion to make the gross value of the American Derby for 1893 $50,000 or $50,000 to the owner of the first horse. Entries for this event close Oct. 15. The club decidedon another important event for the World's fair year, to be called the Queen Isabella stake, for fillies, foals of 1890, with $10,000 added money. A guaranteed stake of $50,000 for 3 year-olds, and the Columbus handicap for 3-year-olds and upward, worth $25,000 to the winner, are other features. It is the intention of the Washington Park club to make its meeting of 1893 the grandest race meeting ever given in America.

Silk Petticoats.

The newest silk petticoats, so dainty and comfortable, are of the featherweight wash silks in narrow stripes of the color with white, and are especially liked in clear gray, blue, pink and pale yellow. They are made in sheath shape, the front and sides plain and the back full, and are finished with a welting cord instead of a clumsy belt. A gathered flounce at the foot is trimmed with white point de Paris lace set on in scant fullness. The prescribed width of these skirts is two and a quarter yards. Taffeta silk with lustrous surface in the fashionable colors, and also in fine checks, makes excellent petticoats. They are trimmed with pinked ruffles, three or four on the outside, and a wider balayeuse underneath. Some of the new skirts are made cup in bell shape, with a bias seam at the back taking away all the fullness at the top. But many figures require slight fullness below the waist to be becoming

CITY COMMON COUNCIL.

SPECIAL MEETING HELD LAST EVENING.

The Mayor Scores the Council in Several Communications and Vetoes the Sewerage Ordinance.—The Edison Electric Light Co. Apply For a Franchise. — Moffett Wants to Slap Something. — The Slap Illustrated.—Other Matters.

The City Common Council held a special meeting last evening. It was 8:40 o'clock when the meeting was called to order. Besides the president, Councilmen Ackerman, Ginna, Gallup, Hetfield, Johnston, Moffett, Roberts, Rushmore, Lee and Spangenberg responded to roll call.

The minutes of the two previous meetings were read and approved.

When the Clerk reached the minutes of the meeting of August 21st, Mr. Hetfield moved that the reading of them be dispensed with.

Mr. Ginna inquired for what reason.

Mr. Hetfield stated that as Chancellor Runyon advised Council to take no action on those minutes.

Mr. Ginna inquired if any action of the court prevented Council from adopting he minutes.

Corporation Counsel Marsh stated that n the writ of certiorari one of the points nade by opposing counsel was that the layor's message was not spread in full on the minutes of the meeting, and the Chancellor and myself, continued Corporation Counsel Marsh, in a consultation, considered it unwise for Council o approve the minutes. Council should not dictate to the Clerk how the minutes hould be made up. We propose taking he stand that the minutes were taken out of the hands of the Clerk before he had a chance to make them up.

Several applications for licenses were granted.

Mr. S. D. Collins petitioned for permission to erect a frame dwelling on West Fourth street, between Madison avenue and Union street. The petition was referred o the Committee on Fire and Buildings, with power.

Edward Wolff was elected a member of Zephyr Hook and Ladder Company on the recommendation of the Fire and Buildings Committee.

The committee on celebration of the Knights of Pythias parade, in a communication, invited Council to review the parade from the balcony of the Aldine hotel. The invitation was accepted with thanks.

To Win First Prize at Elizabeth.

Alert Hose Company was granted permission to take their hose carriage to Elizabeth to participate in the firemen's parade, which is to be held there next month.

Just as THE NEWS Said Would Be the Case.

Engine Company, No. 2, in a communication, stated that they were always anxious to respond promptly to an alarm of fire, but that sometimes they were handicapped because the horses used in driving the steamer were out of town. On motion of Mr. Hetfield the communication was received and ordered filed, and the Committee on Fire and Buildings were instructed to see that the horses were kept in town, or to make arrangements for other horses.

Reports of City Officers.

The monthly statement of the city treasurer and collector were read and referred to the Committee on Finance.

The quarterly report of the City Judge was read. It showed that one hundred and twelve persons had appeared before him during the past three months, thirty-eight of which were fined, thirty committed to the county jail, on seventeen sentence was suspended and five were acquitted. The report was referred to the Committee on Finance.

The quarterly report of the overseer of the poor showed that 208 had been expended during the past quarter for the support of the poor and that thirty-eight families were dependent on the city for support. The report was ordered filed.

The Mayor Again Scores the Council on Wasting Public Money, and Fool Business.

The following communication from Mayor Gilbert was then read:

MAYOR'S OFFICE,
PLAINFIELD, N. J., Sept. 14, 1891.

To the Honorable Common Council of the City of Plainfield:

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to submit herewith, a communication from the Plainfield Water Supply Company received by me on the 10th ult. in response to a request for information as to their terms for furnishing water for fire purposes and for the introduction of a system of sewerage shall be introduced.

While in my opinion and that the Common Council has no legal right to tax the people for the purpose of flushing the sewers by a private corporation, I will submit the proposition of the Water Supply Company in order that you may know what they are willing to do for the city. If I understand a contract with said Company to supply water for fire purposes at $15 per annum for each hydrant with a sewerage, that whenever the city shall desire to enter into a contract with them for flushing sewers, their charge for such service shall not exceed four dollars per annum for each fire hydrant.

Before this proposition before you it would seem to be unwise to enter into the contemplated contract with J. M. Bushmore for property Water Company, which binds the city to pay six dollars per annum more for each fire hydrant, than it would be necessary to pay if the sewers were already built, and ready for flushing, and no question could be raised as to the right of the City to pay for flushing the sewers of a private corporation.

A contract with the Plainfield Water Supply Company at the rate proposed to make with Mr. Low's Company, will under any circumstances save the City at least fifteen hundred dollars per annum—viz: Six dollars per hydrant for two hundred and fifty hydrants, and the amount Council will thereafter add by an increase of the number of hydrants.

There is but slight probability of sewers being built by Mr. Low or his Sewerage Company, and your vote to pay fifteen dollars a year for hydrants to his Aqueduct Company is simply voting away a large amount of the people's money without receiving adequate return therefor.

It will be time enough to contract for flushing sewers when sewers are built, and when that time arrives, you can, certainly will not be justified in paying twenty-five dollars per hydrant per annum for flushing sewers when the same service can be obtained for one thousand dollars.

Respectfully submitted,
A. GILBERT, Mayor.

August, 18th, 1891.

Hon. Alexander Gilbert, Mayor of the City of Plainfield.

MY DEAR SIR:—In a communication sent to the Common Council of Plainfield in February last, the Plainfield Water Supply Company offered to furnish the city with 250 hydrants at $15 each per year for the extinguishing of fires. Recently an offer has been made to award a contract for hydrants to other parties at $25 each per year, and I understand it is said in order to justify such action, that our proposition did not contemplate supplying water for flushing sewers whenever a system shall be constructed in the future, and that the cost of water for that purpose will probably be as much as the difference between the two quotations for hydrants, that is, $2,500 a year, on a basis of 250 hydrants, the difference increasing as more hydrants are furnished, and looking into the matter I find that ten cents a thousand gallons is considered a fair price for water for flushing sewers, and our company is willing to supply at that rate for all the water that may be required to flush any system of sewers that may be constructed in Plainfield. By a careful calculation I may how much water may be needed to flush a system of sewers not in existence; but experience in other cities indicates that sewers properly constructed may be flushed at a cost not exceeding fifty dollars a mile per year.

To put the proposition in another way, I will say that our company will agree to supply water necessary to properly flush such sewers as may be built at the rate of four dollars per annum for each hydrant subject to use for extinguishing fires. Very respectfully,

JAMES BUSHMORE, President,
Plainfield Water Supply Company.

Mr. Rushmore moved that the communication be received and filed.

Mr. Ackerman amended the motion by moving that it be spread in full on the minutes.

Don't Want Their Folly Exposed.

Mr. Hetfield did not approve of spreading every communication in full on the minutes.

Mr. Ackerman stated that the one now before Council was a very important document. His motion was lost, however, by a vote of 6 to 4. Mr. See being absent.

The document was then ordered filed.

A communication from the Mayor nominating Edward Ryan as a special policeman was read and the nomination was confirmed.

In the opinion of the Corporation Counsel the Council could not prevent the Water Supply Company from erecting hydrants, as it was a question between the property owner and the Water Supply Company.

More Light.

In a communication the Edison Electric Light Company requested permission to erect poles and establish a system of lighting by electricity in this city. The communication was referred to the Committee on Public Lights.

A communication concerning the repair of streets was adopted on its third reading and final passage.

Against Concert Saloons.

An ordinance amending the Liquor Ordinance abolishing concerts in saloons and making it compulsory for liquor dealers to leave their places open so that the interior can be plainly seen from the street, was adopted on the final passage.

In voting for the same Councilman Spangenberg addressed the chair as follows:

Mr. President:

I am heartily in favor of this amended ordinance to license taverns and [illegible]

When I voted for saloon licenses, I did not favor saloon concerts.

I desire to state that prior to the granting of Mr. Miller's license, I called upon him to find out just what kind of a place he intended to have. He gave me his word of honor that it was a first-class place, and that I would never regret voting for it. As he had been many years in Plainfield, I gave him and kept a reputable place I decided to vote for it.

How has he kept his word?

Why according to reports he has kept a disreputable place, secreting the wife of Jerry Fritts, and disgracing the good name of our city.

Words cannot express my indignation, and if anyone will make a complaint before the City Judge and a conviction is had, that case will be brought before the Council, I shall certainly vote to revoke his license.

The Mayor Vetoes the Sewerage Ordinance, and Again Scores the Combine.

The following communication from Mayor Gilbert was then read:

THE MAYOR'S OFFICE,
PLAINFIELD, N. J., Sept. 3, '91.

To the Honorable Common Council of the City of Plainfield.

GENTLEMEN:—I return herewith without my approval the Ordinance entitled "An Ordinance to provide for sewerage in the city of Plainfield."

The object of this Ordinance is to give the consent of the corporate authorities to the formation of a company by Z. M. Bonnell et al, whereby he known as the Plainfield Sewerage Company for the purpose of constructing and operating a system of sewerage in this city.

I realize full well the necessity that exists for a sewerage system in the thickly settled portion of the city, and shall be glad to co-operate with your honorable Body in an effort to secure some, if not all of the benefits of such a system, if in my judgment, due regard is shown for the interests of the city, in the selection of a system and the consideration of the franchise, whereby such system is to be made at the cost of the property owners benefited thereby.

The franchise proposed to be granted by this ordinance is in many respects objectionable, and I am not willing to approve it in its present form.

The proposed franchise is to be granted upon conditions upon which the proposed franchise is to be granted are set forth in an agreement which was submitted to your honorable Body and which is a schedule of prices to be charged by the Company for the service.

The agreement is very vague and indefinite, and as it is not accompanied by any plans, maps or profiles of the work to be introduced, nor any specifications for the construction of the same, it justifies the belief that no definite conclusion has been reached as to how the project shall be carried out.

There is nothing whatever in the agreement which indicates what kind of a system is to be constructed except the provision "that the sewerage is to be properly disposed of, either at the sewerage works or in some manner to be mutually agreed upon between the city and the Company.

A contract of so much importance as this should not be awarded to any party until by the most thorough investigation and study the intelligent conclusion has been reached as to the system to be introduced, and the character of the system should be set forth in the agreement in clear and unmistakable terms.

If the sewerage is to be carried to tide water let it be so expressed—if we are to have a flushing system, that city should have a right to know in advance where they are to be located and how the sewerage is to be purified. These are very important items and may affect injuriously a large district, both as to healthfulness and desirability as a place of residence. Let us know just what we are to have before we pass any ordinance, grant any franchise or enter into any agreement.

The city has a very deep interest in the sewerage problem. It is a matter that closely concerns the future welfare of the people, and to much care cannot be exercised by the Commissioner working on the question, the preparation of plans and the careful supervision of the work by a competent engineer working solely for the interest of the city.

Provision is made in the agreement for a sanitary engineer, but he is to be employed by the Company in the interest of the Company. No provision is made for any supervision in the interest of the city. The entire matter is treated as if the city or granting the franchise would have no right to concern itself about the character of the work, or any other important matter connected therewith, and consequently would have no need of a superintending engineer.

The provision relating to the purchase of the works by the city at the expiration of twelve years is objectionable, as it puts it within the power of the arbitrators to be chosen to compel the city to purchase at any price they may agree upon. It leaves the city practically at the mercy of three men, two of whom will represent the Sewerage Company.

The privilege of the city to purchase after the expiration of a term of years, should be at cost with a reasonable allowance for good will. In order to ascertain the cost, the Company should be required to keep an accurate account of the cost of construction, subject to inspection by the city at any and all times.

The bond provided for in the agreement, for failure to fulfil the contract, on the judgment will be of no value whatever. It is simply a bond of the Company without surety. If the sewers should be bonded to obtain money to build them as they probably will be, a judgment against the Company will be unavailable. No sound business man in any important transaction requiring a bond would think for a moment of accepting such a bond.

Section 2 of the Ordinance provides "that neither the ordinance nor said assent shall be construed as authorizing said Company to lay their pipes beneath the public roads, streets, avenues and alleys until after said Company shall have fully complied with the terms, conditions and requirements of this act entitled "An act for the construction, maintenance and operation of systems of sewerage in cities, towns and boroughs, approved June 19th, 1880."

Inasmuch as the Act referred to was approved June 19, 1880, instead of June 19, 1890, I would respectfully suggest the propriety of correcting the error in order to avoid the possibilities of future litigation. Respectfully submitted,

ALEXANDER GILBERT,
Mayor.

Mr. Hetfield moved that the Mayor's veto be received and spread in full on the minutes and that the ordinance be taken up and ordered.

Mr. Ackerman thought the motion should be divided as there was two distinct propositions in it. He requested that the Clerk read the motion.

President Smith said that the motion had been stated two or three times and that the Clerk had been paying strict attention he would have heard it.

The motion was then adopted.

In voting for the motion several of the members of the Council got mixed. Messrs. Ackerman and Ginna voted no when they meant to vote aye. They afterwards changed their votes.

The clerk was, on motion of Mr. Hetfield, instructed to advertise for bids for lighting the streets, the same to be considered at the October meeting of Council.

Mr. Ackerman moved that the Council go into a Committee of the whole to consider the assessor's tax duplicate.

Motion ordered.

After examining the duplicate, Mr. Ackerman moved that the Committee rise. The motion prevailed.

The same gentleman moved that the tax duplicate of the assessor be ratified and approved.

The matter in relation to the granting of a new sewerage franchise was laid on the table.

The Combine Wants It All.

In reference to the transferring of the three thousand dollars from the Water Works fund to the general fund Mr. Ginna was of the opinion that if Council did it the Sewerage Company would lay themselves liable to be personally liable. He said it was a special fund and should be left alone while the matter is pending in the courts.

The president stated that the money was a lying idle and thought the city should use it.

The case of Israel Lewis now pending in the Supreme Court has not been decided, said Mr. Ackerman, and the Corporation Counsel advised us by no means to approve of the Ordinance that there is dollars.

Mr. Hetfield said: "All the city would be liable for was the amount it used. We will all live to be gray-headed before if we wait to see the Lewis case argued. I cannot see any difference if we leave it in the Water fund or transfer it to the General fund."

Mr. Rushmore did not approve of the transfer and moved that the matter lay on the table until next Monday evening when Council proposed to hold another special meeting. Corporation Counsel and members of Council could consult the Corporation Counsel regarding the legality of the transfer. The motion prevailed.

Mr. Moffett moved that the street assessment fund be transferred to the General fund.

Mr. Ginna opposed the motion and favored laying the matter over. He thought Council were working in the dark. The money which Council proposed to transfer was not recorded on the books. The Water Commissioners and Council should proceed very cautiously in the matter.

Mr. Acking Johnston coincided with Mr. Ginna and said he was willing to greatly inconvenience himself to attend a special meeting if one was called on Friday evening. I do not object to the transfer, said he, but there is all sorts of talk, and we can just as well meet again in a few days and provide for the payment of the claims. I do not wish to keep any man out of his money, but a few days will not greatly inconvenience them.

Notwithstanding the objections of the gentlemen mentioned the motion was adopted.

The Auditing Committee reported the various claims correct and moved that warrants be drawn for the payment of the same but that they be not delivered until the treasurer is in funds.

Mr. Ginna did likewise. The motion was carried by a vote of 8 to 2.

The meeting then adjourned.

A Low Man Wants to Knock a Chip off a High Man's Shoulder.

At the conclusion of the meeting as Mr. R. F. R. Huntsman, a Times reporter, Councilman Ackerman and Ginna and a NEWS reporter were standing in a room adjoining the Council chamber ex-President of Council Elmore D. Moffett, who is now one of the members of the "combine," seemingly much puffed-up, forced to pass any ordinance, grant any franchise or enter into any agreement.

The city has a very deep interest in the sewerage problem. HELD FOR THE GRAND JURY.

The Editor and Proprietors of the Press Have a Hearing.

The hearing in the case of Joseph B. Miller, complainant against W. L. and A. L. Bruce, publishers, and Frank Ransford, city editor of The Daily Press, took place before Justice Nash this morning.

Before the hearing commenced Justice Nash said that it was a peculiar proceeding to have a case referred by a justice over the complainants had waived examination, but the prosecutor had taken the matter on his own shoulders.

Mr. Miller was the first witness sworn and he testified that the article was untrue and libelous. He could not see any reason the editors and proprietors of the Press were antriendly toward him was because he had withdrawn his patronage from the paper.

Mr. A. L. Bruce, one of the proprietors, testified that he respected Mr. Miller as a man and held no malice toward him.

Mr. Henry Hazard testified that he saw the man who visited Mr. Miller's place, but he did not see any disturbance. He said he was present when the man who claimed to be the husband of Daisy Delmore.

Mr. Ira Thorn said that he was at the restaurant the day the article was published; that he met Daisy and her husband, and that the husband did not appear to be angry.

Mr. William Irving Clark, the reporter, testified to having written the article, and said he got his information from several persons, one of whom was Henry Hazard.

Mr. J. Demarest, the City Editor testified to having given instructions as to the writing of the article and approved of it before it was published. He said he never met the alleged injured wife to either.

After hearing the testimony the Justice decided to hold the defendants to await the action of the Grand Jury. They furnished bonds for their appearance in the sum of $500.

—The Borough Council held a special meeting last evening and located the hydrants for fire purposes.

—Wetumpka Lodge, No. 3403, Knights of Honor, meets Tuesday evening, Sept. 17th, in Wetumpka Lodge rooms.

—The report that a North avenue butcher deserted his wife and eloped with a concert hall singer is untrue.

—The fair for the benefit of St. Joseph's Church will be continued in the Saengerbund Hall this afternoon.

—The Plainfield Reform Club will hold its regular mid-week meeting Thursday evening. A full attendance is desired.

—All interested in the workers' training class and the bowling section of the Y. M. C. A. are requested to meet in the Association rooms this evening at eight o'clock.

—Two young men were yesterday fined one dollar each by Justice Nash for riding bicycles on the side-walk at Fanwood. Assemblyman Kyte made the complaints.

—The Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of the Warren Mission changed its place of meeting to the Sunday-school room of the chapel this evening at eight o'clock.

—"Charley" Hammell, the Crescents' pitcher, was abused Saturday afternoon on the grounds of the West End base ball club, by several of the members of the West End Athletic Club. One of the game he said he could see no reason why the members of the Club could call him a "big stuff," as he never in the life offended any member unless it was by winning three straight games from them.

Public School Notes.

Assembly Hall of the Plainfield Public schools has been thoroughly refurbished during vacation and made bright and attractive by new paper in gilt bands and gilt stencils.

The Franklin and High schools have been supplied with corner book-cases in which are kept the reference books, supplementary readers, and class-room apparatus.

The ante-room to the principal's office has been converted into a pleasant well furnished room for the accommodation of visitors and the Board of Education.

Miss Edith Katline, a popular teacher of the North Plainfield Public school, is suffering from a sprained ankle received during vacation. Miss Katline was at Saratoga and while dismounting from a bicycle slipped, and a severe sprain to her ankle was the result.

A Painful Accident.

Mr. John H. Tier of Bank place met with a painful accident yesterday afternoon. He was engaged in running an ice chopping machine which is run by steam power, when he slipped on a piece of ice and one of the cogs of the machine caught the thumb of his left hand, badly lacerating it. A few years ago Mr. Tier met with a similar accident by which he lost the top of the third finger on the right hand.

A Divorce Case.

I have recommended Dr. David Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" to many in Shelton and Birmingham and I have yet to find one who has not been benefited by it.—C. L. Sawyer, Birmingham, Conn.—Adv.

The testimony in the noted divorce case of Wm. R. Avery vs. Ida A. Avery has been concluded, and the special master before whom the testimony was taken has filed his report advising that an absolute decree of divorce be granted in favor of Mr. Avery against his wife.

Mr. Avery placed his case some time ago in the hands of his attorneys, Messrs. Jacobus & Coddington and they were not long in obtaining the necessary proofs as they quickly secured the services of the New York detective and the above result has speedily been reached. And now injured wife of John B. Gable has secured the services of the same attorneys in seeking to be liberated from the man who has proven himself so faithless to her and his children.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Some of the critics consider that Amelie Rives Chanler has considerably matured and sobered down since she wrote "The Quick and the Dead." That may be, but her latest story, "According to St. John," shows that she is still an expert in kissing.

The head mistress of an English high school for girls recommends girls to learn to be teachers of cookery, if they have their living to earn. She says the demand for skilled teachers of cookery and housekeeping is constantly greater than the supply. If this is true of England it would naturally apply with still more force to America.

Some of the states have already passed laws that no alien shall own property within their limits. But the United States has treaties with France and England which expressly stipulate that citizens of those countries shall have the right to acquire lands in this country on the same terms as our people. What are the state legislators going to do about that?

It pays to be a journalist if one has a handle to his name. The London Daily Graphic paid Lord Randolph Churchill $500 for each of his letters from South Africa. A rival paper sarcastically remarks that the letters contained nothing that might not have been written at home in London, and many journalists would have been glad to supply much better ones at five dollars apiece.

It is not often that white men wish to be Indians. There is, however, such a case on record in the Cherokee strip. The government order requiring the grazing herds of white stock raisers to vacate the strip affects, among others, the property of one rich cattleman, who immediately began some lively hustling in the way of trying to prove himself a halfbreed so that he could remain in the strip with his stock.

Chautauqua.

What university extension means in England the Chautauqua Literary circle means in America. The announcement is made that this year's graduating class numbered no less than 40,000 persons, of ages ranging from eighteen to eighty. Many of the students never saw beautiful Chautauqua lake, some of them never will, yet the influence of its magic circle has reached every state and territory in the Union.

Home instruction, that acquired in the odd minutes of time week by week and month by month, is a kind that will stay by one perhaps better than the learning crammed in school. In the lives of hundreds of thousands, young and old, the Chautauqua circle has opened a new vista of delight. In the farmhouse, where the lonely boy or girl looks beyond the fields and sighs for wider knowledge, intenser experience, the Chautauqua course comes as a messenger of light, showing them and their wearied mother alike shining glimpses of the outside world. Mothers, fathers and children share its pleasant tasks, and parents grow young again drinking of the well spring of knowledge along with their children. Among Chautauqua graduates this season was no less distinguished a lady than Mrs. Mary A. Livermore.

There are still millions outside the Chautauqua charmed circle who ought to be inside. After our public schools, it is the best lever at hand for turning Americans into an intelligent, reading nation.

The Antiskirt Movement.

This curious movement suggests the tendency of the highest civilization to gravitate back in a refined and cultivated way toward the usages of the savage in the primitive simplicity of nature. We have gone the round of book learning, we have built houses with double windows and enormous walls, we have filled civilization with medical colleges and doctors' brains with science, only to drift back toward first principles and find that lighter clothing, less bodily stuffing, less medicine, and life in the open air instead of in houses are conducive to man's highest mental, physical and spiritual health.

So with the dress of the sexes. In barbarism men and women dress nearly alike. Civilization loads women with skirts, encases them in a steel frame, and pitches them in gowns in which their arms are held as in a vise. For a time the more helpless a woman's dress rendered her the more of a fine lady she was. Now comes the reaction, and demands that women shall be free as to her bodily movements; in short, that her dress shall be more like a man's, particularly in the matter of getting rid of the long, cumbering skirts.

It is interesting to note that some of the most distinguished and intelligent women of the time advocate dress reform and the antiskirt movement. Judging from other tendencies of civilization at the present time, the antiskirt changes will prevail, sooner or later. It should, however, it is suggested as a compromise, that ladies who wish to adopt it as far as possible, and still not make themselves too generally ridiculous, could shorten the skirts even two or three inches, make them as light as possible, and so be decently comfortable with the present fashions.

DEMOCRATS IN SESSION.

The Struggle for Supremacy Begun at Saratoga.

THERE MAY BE TWO CONVENTIONS.

Disaffected Erie County, Kings County and County Democracy Delegates May Leave the Hall, It Is Said, and Nominate Brooklyn's Mayor for Governor.

SARATOGA, Sept. 15.—The Democratic state convention is in session here today and the city is filled with hundreds of politicians all battling earnestly for their respective favorites in the gubernatorial fight. Those who pretend to know say that the following is the ticket that will oppose Hon J. Sloat Fassett and his confreres: For governor, Roswell P. Flower; for lieutenant governor, William F. Sheehan; for secretary of state, Frank Rice (renomination); for treasurer, Elliott Danforth (renomination); for controller, Frank Campbell; for attorney general, Simon W. Rosendale; for engineer and surveyor, Martin Schenck.

Flower Very Strong.

But little will probably be done today, and it is believed that when the temporary organization is completed and the committees appointed the convention will adjourn until 9 o'clock Wednesday morning.

There seems to be no doubt of the nomination of Mr. Flower for governor on the first ballot. D. J. Griffin, who is Mr. Flower's personal representative, said to a correspondent of the United Press that Mr. Flower would have every vote on the first ballot except the thirty-six from Kings county. Mr. Griffin puts no faith in stampedes for second ballot votes. He says it is a "bluff." "When men are beaten they must take their medicine," he said.

That Rumor of a Split.

The rumor of a possible split was caused by the rejection of the County Democracy delegates, thirty-six in number, by the state committee. The committee, by a vote of 34 to 8, decided not to admit a representation from the County Democracy in the convention. The Chapin men would like to see a second convention organized. They were feeling very blue in the morning.

No one outside Chapin headquarters would talk anything but Flower. Hugh McLaughlin, the leader of the Kings county delegation, who had come to a convention for the first time in years to give a personal supervision to Mr. Chapin's campaign, was especially discomfited. The Chapin men in the state sprung the word the Kings County Democratic club, 300 strong, marched down Broadway five abreast, headed by a big band, and wheeled into the Grand Union hotel.

The Erie county contesting delegates have discussed the advisability of calling another convention in case the Hill men refuse to recognize the contestants. They have been saying that with the Cleveland men in the convention, who will come out if summoned, they can organize a convention of more that 250 and nominate Chapin if the regular convention refuses to compromise with them.

Ready for the Tug of Breach.

The representatives of the Cleveland Democracy of Erie county, under the leadership of H. P. Bissell, Norman E. Mack and A. F. Scheu, held a final conference last night with a view to bringing about a compromise with Mr. Sheehan, agreeing to support him for lieutenant governor provided he would agree to place Mr. Scheu on the state committee. Mr. Sheehan offered to appoint a man of his own choosing in the county, but would not consent to yield the place to Mr. Scheu. The conference, therefore, availed nothing. As in the Republican convention, Erie county is the point at which the most trouble is feared.

To Join the Chapin Men.

Speaking of the possibility of another convention being held, one of the anti-Hill men from Buffalo said: "If Hill lets in the Erie county men, he will have to let in the others, who did not get a chance to get any of them in. There are 250 contestants and only 304 members of the convention, and the Cleveland men, with the exception of Herrick, will all vote out if we call them out. There are a good many sorehead about. McLaughlin is not feeling very happy over the prospect for the convention, and the Chapin men will be glad to go in with us."

Wilson S. Bissell of Buffalo says that Sheehan nominated for lieutenant governor will cost the ticket 25,000 votes in the state. His war cry is "anybody but Sheehan." He does not believe there will be a second convention.

John R. Voorhees has been elected to succeed himself as a member of the state committee.

The Convention Meets.

The convention assembled shortly after noon at the Casino rink, on Spring street. Edward Murphy Jr., called the convention to order and Hon. Grover Cleveland was elected as temporary chairman. The other temporary officers of the convention selected were: Temporary Secretaries—E. O. Hoe, Jamestown; Thomas E. Tully, James A. Betts and Calvin J. Huson. Temporary Sergeants-at-Arms—Thomas Coakley, Michael Redmond and F. D. Fitzpatrick.

Dave Hill and Sheehan Disagreed?

It is said that Governor Hill does not favor Sheehan's candidacy, for the reason that he believes Sheehan would be of no value to the party on the state committee. Mr. Sheehan is alleged to feel very much hurt at the governor's opposition.

League Magnates Meet.

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—The National league is holding a special meeting at the Fifth Avenue hotel today. Nick Young declines to give the object of the meeting.

DR. LORING'S FUNERAL.

The Obsequies of Ex-Minister to Portugal Will Be Held Thursday.

BOSTON, Sept. 15.—The funeral of George Bailey Loring, who died at his home in Boston shortly after midnight Sunday, will be held Thursday afternoon. He was born at North Andover, Mass., graduated at Harvard college in 1838 and at Harvard Medical college 1842. In 1853 he was made commissioner of fisheries, Mass. Meanwhile he had given a large share of his time to the study of practical and scientific agriculture. He was the leading spirit in establishing the New England Agricultural society in 1864, and was elected its president.

His prominence in so important a field as agriculture brought him into political relations which resulted in his election to the legislature of his state, taking a seat in the house of representatives in 1866 and 1867, and subsequently becoming a member of the senate, also serving from 1870 to 1876 as president of that body. In his legislative career he did much for his favorite causes and for scientific and public education in the common schools. In 1876 Dr. Loring was elected to congress from the Fifth Massachusetts district, and was re-elected in 1878.

In 1879 Dr. Loring was appointed United States commissioner of agriculture by President Garfield, who gave him his commission and instructions the day before he was mortally wounded. In June, 1880, he was married to Mrs. Anna T. Hildreth, widow of Charles H. Hildreth, a lawyer of New York city. This was his second marriage. In 1889 he was nominated as minister to Portugal, but resigned after a few months and returned to his home in Boston.

THE RAILROAD RECORD BROKEN.

BUFFALO, Sept. 15.—A wonderful feat of railroading was accomplished Monday by the New York Central road—a feat that eclipses everything else ever accomplished in the line of rapid traveling. The record for long distance running was not only broken, but left way out of sight. It has been the opinion of railroad men that only make sixty miles an hour, but can keep it up for 440 miles. The train made a run from New York to Buffalo, including the stops, 436 miles, the direct distance being 436½ miles. The stops were made at Albany, Syracuse and Fairport, at the two former places to change engines and at the latter place to take water and to cool a hot journal on the engine. The Syracuse and Albany stops were three and one-half minutes each and the Fairport stop seven minutes.

Deducting for the time thus lost, the actual running time was 426 minutes. The train consisted of four heavy passenger cars drawn by the company's new standard passenger locomotives built at Schenectady. The weight of the train was 120 tons, about that of the Chicago limited. The engines weighed 100 tons each. The party was composed of H. Walter Webb, third vice president; Theodore Voorhees, general superintendent; William Buchanan, superintendent of motive power, and several others. The fastest mile was made in forty-eight seconds. The best previous long distance run on record was made by the Scotch mail. It was 55.4 miles an hour for 500 miles three years ago.

NOT DEAD, BUT IN HALIFAX.

One of the Park Place Victims Turns Up After His Funeral.

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—At the time of the Park place disaster Sherman Cummins, a popular "temp" on The Mail and Express, disappeared, and as he was known to be a patron of Peterson's restaurant, located in the ill fated Taylor building, the conclusion was reached that he had perished. His wife haunted the ruins for days, and at length identified one of the corpses as that of her husband. The body was taken to her home and buried with due ceremony. Mrs. Cummins received $1,000 from the company and fixed up the old place, the home in which she and her husband had dwelt in order to find forgetfulness.

Yesterday Mrs. Cummins received a message which threw a load off of her heart. It was dated Halifax, and announced that her husband was alive and well there, and was coming home as fast as steam could carry him. It also stated that on the day of the disaster he started for Petersen's restaurant, but fell by the wayside and was picked up by a stranger who found him in a condition in which he neither knew nor cared what he was doing, and when he came to his senses he found he had shipped as a sailing vessel bound for Halifax, which place he reached yesterday.

Some human bones were found in the afternoon among the debris that came from the Park place ruins. The bones were taken to the morgue and the coroner notified.

The Interstate Press Association.

CORTLAND, N. Y., Sept. 15.—The Interstate Press association was formed at Binghahton last evening. The object of the association is the exchange of news between the papers in the association. The following officers were elected: Editor Tuthill, of the Hornellsville Times, president; Editor Scott, of the Owego Record, vice president; Editor Lee, of the Oneonta Star, secretary; Editor McKee, of the Tonawanda Review, treasurer.

General Carr Recovering.

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—General Joseph B. Carr, ex-secretary of state, is at St. Luke's hospital, where he had an operation performed for a removal of a cancer of the neck. He is rapidly recovering and expects to be "mustered out" the latter part of the week.

Crushed His Brother's Skull.

His Brains Dashed Out.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Sept. 15.—Samuel Fuller while drawing a load of furniture down a steep hill in Townsend Hollow, Delaware county, was thrown violently against a stone wall and had his brains dashed out.

To Retire the Old Enterprise.

NEW LONDON, Conn., Sept. 15.—The Enterprise has left New London for Annapolis, where she will go out of commission.

MRS. DAVIS BRINGS SUIT

Not a Cent for Writing Her Husband's Memoirs.

HER PUBLISHERS UNABLE TO PAY.

The Unhappy Experiences of the Wife of the Southern Confederacy's Late Ex-President—She Works Hard, but Others Get the Profits of Her Labor.

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—Mrs. Jefferson Davis, who finished her husband's memoirs begun by himself, has sued Robert Belford, the Belford company and Edward Lange for $10,000 for royalties, which she claims are due her from the sales of the book. She signed a contract May 8-4, 1890, the contract providing that payments were to be made to her every three months. The contract was to terminate in six years. Edward Lange guaranteed the contract, agreeing to pay $10,000 liquidated damages.

The Book Sold Well.

Mr. Belford assigned his personal contract for publishing the book to the Belford company, of which Edward Lange subsequently became manager. The book sold successfully and earned $4,000 in three months, but after that it had no returns. Her lawyer is ex-Governor Hoadly, who is authority for the statement that Mr. Belford admits that the claim, according to the statement of sales, is just, but that the company is embarrassed and cannot pay at present. Ex-Governor Hoadly says that the sale of the memoirs has not been pushed, and serious losses have resulted.

Mrs. Davis' Disappointment.

When Jefferson Davis died it was stated that he owed $40,000, and that his actual income, beyond the interest requirements of the debt, was less than $240. Mrs. Davis had counted largely upon returns from her labor, and her disappointment is keen.

Her Toil Unremunerative.

From her meager resources Mrs. Davis had been living modestly in the year preceding March 4, 1891, when the publication was announced. It had been a year of constant toil, but little of the time having been spent away from her desk and her publishers.

The memoirs were as warmly received as Mrs. Davis had been led to expect. In the first flush of success it seemed. Her publishers assured Mrs. Davis that they were pushing the book to its utmost, admitting that the most meritorious works need energetic handling. Mrs. Davis' expectations of a large financial return were kept buoyant until the date of the first settlement, June 4, when Mrs. Davis learned that although over 40,000 worth of books had been sold she could get no money.

Mrs. Davis and Miss Winnie Davis are at present guests of Mrs. H. Addison Hayes at Narragansett Pier. Mrs. Hayes was formerly Miss Margaret Davis. She resides in Colorado Springs. Mrs. Davis and her daughter expect to return to New York. Afterward they will probably go to Beauvoir for the winter.

THE BRAVE BOYS REMEMBERED.

Dedication of the Rensselaer County Soldiers' Monument at Troy.

TROY, N. Y., Sept. 15.—The Rensselaer county soldiers' monument was dedicated in this city today. The monument, which has been erected by popular subscription, is undoubtedly one of the finest memorials in the country. The principal speaker at the monument was Captain John Palmer, the new commander-in-chief of the G. A. R. The dedicatory address at Music hall was delivered by Gen. Stewart L. Woodford, of Brooklyn.

The monument stands on Washington square where the public fountain formerly stood, was designed by Fuller & Wheeler, architects of Albany, and built by Frederick & Field, of Quincy, Mass., and is constructed of the best Quincy granite. Ground was broken for it Sept. 25, 1889, by Colonel C. L. MacArthur. The corner stone was laid with appropriate ceremonies on May 30, 1890. The height of the monument completed is ninety-three feet. At the base the diameter is fifteen feet square.

Bronze tablets in bas relief, representing cavalry, artillery, infantry and naval engagements, are let into the four sides of the die. Casper Buberl, of New York, is the sculptor, and they are elaborate pieces of art. Above the faces of the die on the gabled front of the superstructure, are inscriptions. "To the soldiers and sailors of Rensselaer county who fought for their country on land and sea" is one inscription.

On top stands the effigy of Columbia, with trumpet in hand sounding the "Call to Arms." The statue is of bronze and was designed by Gutzon Borglum. It was cast by the Henry Bonnard Bronze company, New York. The weight of the statue is 4,800 pounds and is over thirteen feet in height. It is a handsome piece of work, and is said to be the largest piece of bronze statuary representing a female ever cast in this country.

General Grubb and His Comrades.

BURLINGTON, N. J., Sept. 15.—Twelve hundred veterans of the civil war congregated on the lawn surrounding the beautiful home of General E. Burd Grubb, minister to Spain, at Edgewater park, yesterday. The occasion was the tenth annual reunion of the Kearney brigade. Representatives from every Grand Army post in the state were present. To attend this reunion General Grubb came all the way from Spain. At a great table in a grove the veterans were dined in elaborate style. Rev. John Morris, of Tuckerton, was chosen president.

Mrs. Harrison's Circular.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—Mrs. Benjamin Harrison, president of the National Society of Daughters of the American Revolution, has addressed a circular to the regents of the society regarding the holding of every officer and every lady who has at any time received an appointment through any officer of the society to be held in Washington, Oct. 8. It is important that every chapter be represented. The fullest opportunity will be allowed for the discussion of every question.

Not Holding Their Wheat.

ST. PAUL, Sept. 15.—The railroad officials of the northwestern lines say that the several thousand sent by the Farmers' Alliance to the farmers instructing them to hold their wheat are having little effect, except in Kansas and Iowa, where the farmers are independent financially.

Tramps Wanted for Murder.

CORTLAND, N. Y., Sept. 15.—The chief of police here has been notified by Public Prosecutor Strycker, of Washington, N. J., to hold the tramps arrested here Sunday. They are wanted for murder.

ACCUSED APPRAISERS HELD.

The Five Must Give $6,500 Bail Each for Trial.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 15.—The five accused merchants appraisers—E. W. Patten, Samuel Hoskinson, Harry Hinkley, James F. Bell and Albert Crawford—were arraigned for a hearing at noon before Magistrate Pole. The defendants were separately charged with "conspiring to cheat and defraud the commonwealth of Pennsylvania and with making false and fraudulent returns as mercantile appraisers." The case was opened by Lawyer Ashbridge, with politicians, officeholders and others. The appraisers were held in $2,500 bail each for appearance at the next term of court.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—A conference was held at the treasury department between Acting Secretary Spaulding, Solicitor Hepburn and Controller Lacey as to the power of the government to make advances of money to continue the examination into the affairs of the Keystone National bank of Philadelphia. After the conference the following telegram was sent to the chairman of the committee of fifty:

"You are informed that if, as proposed, your committee shall advance the money necessary to continue the investigation it shall proceed under the direction of this department, and the secretary of the treasury will ask congress to make an appropriation to reimburse the advances."

A BIG PITTSBURG CRASH.

The Moorhead-McClean Company Ask an Extension of Their Creditors.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 15.—The Moorhead-McClean company, one of the oldest iron and steel manufacturing establishments in Pittsburg, has asked for an extension of time on paper amounting to about $800,000. The assets of the company are estimated at from $1,000,000 to $1,500,000. The extension is asked from the principal creditors, banks of this city. The members of the firm say there is every probability that the extension will be granted.

The chief cause of the embarrassment of the company is that M. K. Moorhead, the president, and George McClean, vice president, have been unable to properly attend to business by reason of illness for some time past. A new manager has been appointed and the business will go right along.

She Stuck in the Fence.

BRAVER FALLS, Pa., Sept. 15.—Grandmother Douglass, one of the Rev. J. W. Bristol's parishioners, has entered action against Bristol for assaulting her by chasing her through a barbed wire fence. She strayed over into his pasture and began a lively tussle against the fence when he appeared. She claims he shook his fist at her and scared her so that she tried to crawl back through the fence, being seventy years old, and weighing 200 pounds, she stuck fast and almost broke a leg. Rev. Mr. Bristol will have a jury trial next Saturday. When asked about the charges, Rev. Mr. Bristol laughed and said there was no truth in them.

The Rescue of Captain Andrews.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—The state department has received a letter from the United States consul at Antwerp giving an account of the rescue of Captain Andrews, of Boston, who attempted to cross the Atlantic in the dory Mermaid, by the British steamer Elbrun on Aug. 23. The consul says Andrews was picked up by her in great distress when picked up. The captain and his boat are now in good condition, and the boat is being exhibited at Antwerp for a charitable purpose.

Shot by Brother Bartholomew.

TROY, N. Y., Sept. 15.—A party of young men played ball in the afternoon in the rear of St. Joseph's seminary. After the game the young men raided the seminary vineyard. Brother Bartholomew (known to the world as Henry Kramper) ordered them away. The young men refusing to leave he shot at them, using a shotgun loaded with lead slugs. Three slugs struck Edward Doyle, entering his body. He will probably die. Brother Bartholomew was arrested.

A Girl's Alleged Curative Powers.

QUEBEC, Sept. 15.—A mandament from Cardinal Taschereau was read in the Catholic churches of the city condemning the faith manifested by the French Canadians in the alleged curative powers of a little girl. The mandament says that it is not only ridiculous but sinful to keep the body of the girl and on the part of believers. The girl is said to have effected some remarkable cures.

Great Success with Nickel Steel.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—The navy department made another experiment of the relative resisting capacity of nickel for protective deck armor. The result showed the superior quality of the nickel steel, as a ball perforated an all steel target, but glanced off the nickel steel target without rupturing the upper plate. The projectile was shattered into small fragments.

One of the Suicides Known.

BUFFALO, Sept. 15.—Last Thursday a man and a woman committed suicide by leaping over the falls. Neither was identified, but it has now appeared that the man was Walter Haywood, of this city, a book canvasser. A letter from Haywood has turned up requesting that if his body is found his friends ship it to his former home at Jamestown.

An Answer to David A. Wells.

BOSTON, Sept. 15.—Hon. David A. Wells' recent imputation against the integrity of the census statistics of wool manufacture is met by a flat and positive denial from Mr. S. N. Dexter, the special agent of the census in charge of the statistics of wool manufacture, who has written a letter to Mr. Wells at Norwich, Conn.

Four Laborers Drowned.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 15.—Four laborers employed by a junk dealer named Richard Cox were drowned in the Delaware river, opposite the navy yard, by the upsetting of their boat. Their names are John Fiswick, James Conley, James McGarry and John McAleer.

The Strikers Enjoined.

POTTSVILLE, Pa., Sept. 15.—A preliminary injunction has been issued by the court against the Fishback mill strikers, restraining any of them from interfering with or inciting non-union men now at work for the Pottsville Iron and Steel company.

A Quarrel Drove Him Insane.

LEXWOOD, N. J., Sept. 15.—John Saunders, a prominent young business man of Pleasantville, suddenly became a raving maniac from a boodle quarrel which he recently had with his brother. He will be taken to an asylum.

Two Machine Stories.

There are two funny characters in Machine worth, in view of everything else, the making of the strip to their baffling ends. One is an old button headed hack driver, who is so tantalized by the boys and wags of the place that he phenomenally in a high state of irritability, but being Irish he has a sense of humor. He ought to charge a quarter of a dollar for carting baggage from the depot to the house in the village, but the other day he exacted a dollar of a visitor to the house of a native. The native hunted up the drayman and asked how he could be charge the visitor four times the right fee.

"Well, sorr," said the driver, "the axed me what was my name. I told him it was Corrigan. 'Well,' says he, 'Mr. Corrigan, what do you ask?' 'A dollar to you,' says I. It is my rule to charge a quarter to all who call me Owen, me frinht name, but when a man calls me Corrigan I charge a dollar. And, sorr, he called me Corrigan."

Then there is a darky with a subcollar voice, whose business it is to capture new arrivals and conduct them to the John Jacob Astor House. He stands on the wharf and, with the voice of a foghorn, delivers himself of this rigmarole over and over again while a crowd gathers to hear him:

"Astor House! Astor House! I well do remember the old, familiar homestead. That's where the people all go. I don't do anything to stop 'em. John Jacob Astor House, up the street to the right and a little to the left. You can't miss it, I declare."

This man's name is Isaac, and he has a singular habit of addressing people with titles graded according to the dips they have given him. For instance, whoever gives him a quarter is called colonel, and for ten cents a visitor is addressed as captain. He has run across a great many persons who have given him a dollar at a time, and these he calls general and Mrs. General, according to their sex. But this summer he encountered a lady who handed him a five dollar bill—one of those mistaken persons who are very common in the west. It is a pity to have to say.

"Thank you," said he to the lady, and then he hesitated, for he did not know what title went with so munificent a tip. "Thank you, Mrs. Queen," he added, "for a queen you is."—Julian Ralph in New York Sun.

SEIZED BY SALISBURY.

The Island of Mitylene Occupied by the British.

TO BALK THE PLANS OF THE CZAR.

The Island Belongs to Turkey and from It the British Troops Can Keep Watch of the Dardanelles—Captured in the Name of Queen Victoria.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 15.—A detachment of blue jackets and marines from a British ironclad, accompanied by a battery of eight field pieces and several Gatling guns, has been landed at Sigri, on the island of Mitylene, formally occupying that place in the name of the queen of England. Sigri is about sixty miles from the mouth of the Dardanelles.

It is stated that the French and Russian ambassadors here have received telegrams from their respective consuls in Mitylene, announcing the occupation of Sigri and stating that guns have been landed and that the islet has been surrounded with torpedoes.

They Think It Is True.

LONDON, Sept. 15.—As soon as the report of the occupation of Mitylene by a British force was received here there was considerable excitement. Reporters and correspondents by the score have called at the foreign office and at the admiralty, but the officials on duty decline to confirm the report that Great Britain had taken action in the Dardanelles question. The fact that the foreign office and admiralty officials only "decline to affirm" the report gives strength to the rumors in circulation, and the public is led to believe that there must be some truth in them.

The government officials deny having any knowledge of the landing of British forces at Sigri. They say, however, that a detachment of blue jackets may possibly have landed there for drill purposes.

Of Strategic Importance.

The St. James' Gazette says that the startling news concerning the island of Mitylene obviously possesses political significance of the first importance. It adds that the island has a position of considerable strategic importance, although possessing little in the way of fortifications.

A still more startling dispatch has just come by telegraph from Athens. It is that the Greek consuls at Mitylene and at Smyrna have wired the Greek government that thirteen British men-of-war landed troops and guns at Sigri and that they have strongly fortified that place.

The islander of Mitylene would form an advantageous post from which Great Britain could control the waters of the Hellespont.

England Means Business.

Public opinion is almost universally to the effect that the situation at the Dardanelles will be met by England with force, although it is believed that neither Turkey or Russia will approve any violent resistance. The British fleet is now equal, in line of battleships, to the fleets of any other two European powers, and would, in the opinion of naval officers, speedily clear the Dardanelles and the Black sea of Russian craft and also give a good account of the French if they should interfere.

SPAINS AWFUL HORROR.

It Is Now Known That 1,500 People Were Drowned.

MADRID, Sept. 15.—The facts of the terrible loss of life by the overflow of the Consegra are beginning to be known. The official statement shows that 1,500 perished in the awful flood at Amarguillo and hundreds were injured by the building crumbling and falling upon them.

Thousands of cattle perished, and much loss of life and property is reported elsewhere.

Rewarded by the President.

BARNUM'S, Sept. 15.—Chief Officer James Thompson, of the Orange Prince, has been presented with a handsome gold medal on behalf of the president of the United States as a reward for rescuing the crew of the American vessel Amanda C. Parker in January last.

No Storm at New Alliance.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 15.—The convention of the Farmers' Alliance held here today is in the nature of an anti-subtreasury gathering, and ex-State President Hall, of Missouri, is confident that it will be a success. At a conference between U. S. Hall, W. S. McAllister and others it was decided to go into active national organization. The idea is to create an industrial alliance and to adopt a policy as to eligibility that will admit a powerful class heretofore excluded from membership. The order is to be non-political and not secret.

Mrs. Lippincott Not Guilty.

MAY'S LANDING, N. J., Sept. 15.—Mrs. Julia C. Lippincott, of Atlantic City, was acquitted in the county court here for forging a note for $425 on the Second National bank of Atlantic City. She was acquitted in the Camden county court on the same charge. It was claimed by the defense that Mrs. Lippincott was authorized to sign the names to the notes.

Frank Brown Confident.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 15.—Frank Brown, the Democratic candidate for governor, says he will have 50,000 majority.

Brown will accept the challenge of Colonel Van Neeb, the Republican candidate, to a joint discussion. Mr. Brown is confident that he can beat his opponent, although he has not touched a plow for ten years.

Dr. Eggleston Married.

MADISON, Ind., Sept. 15.—Dr. Edward Eggleston, the well known writer, author of the "Hoosier Schoolmaster," the "Faith Doctor" and other stories, was married today to Miss Mary Elizabeth Goode, an estimable lady of this city. They went at once to Lake George and will go from there to New York, where they will reside.

The President Leaves Cape May.

CAPE MAY, Sept. 15.—The presidential family left their cottage at 2 p. m. today for Camden. WHO SHOT HIBBARD?

A Connecticut Ex-Senator Fatally Wounded at Woodstock.

WOODSTOCK, Conn., Sept. 13.—This quaint old town is aglow with excitement over the shooting of ex-Senator John Hibbard by either Charles Ide or his young wife. Senator Hibbard is suspected that Hibbard was too intimate with Mrs. Ide.

When Ide returned home late at night in company with his son he is said to have found Hibbard in a compromising position with his wife. Procuring a double barrelled gun he entered the room where the couple were.

Both barrels of the gun were discharged at Hibbard, one charge entering his side and the other his neck. There is no hope of his recovery.

The guilty man has been arrested. He says that when he came in he found Hibbard strangling his father and shot him to save his father's life.

His Singular and Daring March Around Ninety Thousand Opponents—The True Story of the Union Disaster Under "Fighting Joe" Hooker.

[Copyright, 1891, by American Press Association.—Book rights reserved.]

IN THE morning of April 29, 1863, a messenger from the Confederate outposts burst in upon a peaceful and happy little domestic circle at a farmhouse in the midst of Gen. Lee's camp, on the intrenched heights south of the Rappahannock, at Fredericksburg, with the news that the Union army was crossing the river close at hand to spring an attack. Stonewall was the central figure of that circle, and like the foemen of Bonsaris at Missolonghi, he

Woke to hear his sentries shriek,
'To arms! They come!'

Kissing his babe and bidding his wife to hasten from the scene that must soon become a battlefield, he rode to the front to join his troops. When next his wife saw him he was on his deathbed, and in the meantime had become the hero of the most renowned military feat of the war—the flank attack on Hooker's army at Chancellorsville.

It was no ordinary crisis that called Jackson from his repose, not even for war. The Union army, led by "Fighting Joe" Hooker, was crossing to the attack, some miles distant from Lee's camps, intending to march around and strike in the rear. It outnumbered Lee's force two to one. It was necessary for Jackson to change front or turn away from the river heights back to the interior, and while doing so to still guard the heights. The Union general wanted no military feat of the kind done without fighting a bloody battle on their slopes, and had taken a roundabout course to get the Confederates to abandon them. Jackson controlled four divisions of about 40,000 men. He knew that Hooker could easily set apart 20,000 or more out of the 120,000 men in line to attempt the heights on the river front while the remainder assailed the Confederate rear, and so he left one division to defend the heights and with the other three hurried southward to meet the main Union columns. These had crossed north of Fredericksburg and had literally gone around Lee.

Hooker had in fact sent apart one corps, the Sixth, under Sedgwick, 22,000 strong, to cross at Fredericksburg and offer direct attack, and on May 1, after two days of bloodless maneuvers, the situation was a deadlock. Neither side would strike the opening blow for fear of getting the worst of it. Jackson had joined one division on the river heights facing eastward against Sedgwick, and his other three divisions lay across Hooker's pathway five miles in the interior at a place called Tabernacle Church. With Jackson at this point were two divisions of another corps led by Lee in person. Hooker's main body was strung out still to the westward five miles from Tabernacle Church to Wilderness Church. One good road leading to Fredericksburg intersected both the Union and Confederate positions. Reference to the diagram will show that the Confederates were between the two Union fires on May 1. On May 3 Hooker was between two Confederate fires, and on this sudden reversal hangs Stonewall's remarkable fame.

On the morning of the 2d Jackson's three divisions disappeared from Tabernacle Church and started toward a point on the long front of Hooker's vast army. The narrow space between Jackson's route and Hooker's outposts was patrolled by the cavalry corps, Gen. Stuart's troopers, in order that no chance reconnoissance from the Union lines should reveal the mysterious march. Skillful guides were at the head of the column to point out byroads and concealed ways that would shorten the distance and insure secrecy. At one point the column ran into one of Hooker's outposts, a fight ensued, and the movement of the Confederates westward was fairly disclosed and reported to Union headquarters. Hooker then raised his column farther south to avoid another collision and pressed on, making a march of fifteen miles in all and bringing up squarely on Hooker's right rear at Wilderness Church.

It was 5 o'clock in the afternoon, May 2. Twenty-four hours had changed the face of things. Hooker had his 90,000 were now beset by enemies on the east and on the west, and in spite of all were unwarned of the blow about to fall. The march of Confederates westward as reported from the scene of the little fight on the Union outposts was believed by the Union general to be a retreat from Fredericksburg toward Richmond. Hooker had sent his cavalry corps away on a wild ride along the railroads between those two cities, and hence the eyes of the army were absent. There was no scouting, no reconnoitering, no alert up-and-a-doing spirit at Union headquarters. In this lay Jackson's opportunity, for had Hooker interpreted the Confederate movement rightly and pushed out a force south or east, he would have crushed whatever attempted to stay him, separated Lee's stationary columns at Tabernacle Church from Jackson's moving body and won his point.

But fortune favors the bold, and Stonewall was currying favor with the fickle goddess that day. Hooker's vision concealed his troops from the enemy while he formed them for the grand finale, the finishing stroke. Impatient to begin yet be held back the signal two hours to allow the brigades and battalions to get ready. The devious march to the field had been a trying one, the bloody one to come would be still more so, and it was good to give the men a breathing spell. So far well done, Jackson was ready.

But there is nothing sure in war. The right of Hooker's army was held by the Eleventh corps, Gen. O. O. Howard, and the right of the Eleventh corps line by the division of Gen. Charles Devens. Jackson struck Devens' men first. Devens' pickets lay half a mile in front of his main line.

During the day, frequently from 11 o'clock until 6, the hour of Jackson's attack, these pickets reported the enemy on their front. In the earlier portion of the day this report was Stuart's cavalry masking the real movement—that is, making false motions to throw the Union pickets off their guard. Very early in the day Gen. Hooker rode along the Eleventh corps line, and returning to his tent sent word to Howard at 9:30 a. m. to make some changes in the arrangement of his troops and strengthen his works in anticipation of an attack from the west. Gen. Howard sent word to his chief at 11 o'clock that he knew that the Confederates were moving toward his right and that he was preparing for an attack from the west. There was in truth no end of warning on Gen. Howard's line that a movement in force was afoot, and Devens' pickets and trench guards were at their posts, ready, though possibly overconfident, on account of the indifference displayed by their superiors. Devens asked for re-enforcements, but none were sent him.

Between 3 and 4 o'clock, or about the hour when Stonewall's leading regiments reached the place where the attack was to begin, Devens' pickets on that very spot, the west end of the Union line, were driven in with vigor. Union scouts immediately passed out beyond the limits of the picket line and there came upon a strong force of Confederate cavalry with their horse batteries drawn up for battle. All of this was reported to Gen. Howard.

The Confederates, when ready to strike, stood in three long lines of battle, about 10,000 men in each line. Their lines extended north and south, nearly, and overlapped at each end the short Union breastwork that confronted them on the west end of Gen. Devens' short line. Stonewall sat upon his horse at the head of the first line, watch in hand, and gave the signal to the leader to sound the charge. A bugle rang out, the Confederate skirmishers started through the dense undergrowth, and for three hours or more thereafter confusion reigned all along the plank road from Wilderness Church, half way to Hooker's eastern front at Tabernacle Church.

The little church and each section of Devens' breastwork was occupied by Gen. Von Gilsa's brigade, Gen. Doles' Confederate brigade, leading the assault, was opposite Von Gilsa, and as soon as it got to work it found that the surprise was by no means complete. It was received with a heavy musketry fire, besides canister and shell. Even Von Gilsa's skirmishers attempted to withstand that vast horde. Strangely enough, the disaster which ultimately fell upon the Eleventh corps was brought about by the resistance offered to the assailants in the very beginning of the attack by Devens' men.

Gen. Gilsa made a brief and plucky but useless fight. The cowards, of which there are always some, the noncombatants and wounded men rushed back along the line, creating a panic, and the Confederates on either side, north and south of the brigade (Doles') that was brought to a halt by Von Gilsa, fell with suddenness upon the Third division, assailing it in the rear as well as in front, disrupting it and forcing it back upon the next division, which had to give way under the double pressure of retreating friends and the pursuing foes. When at length Devens did retreat, with the intention of rallying on the Third division, that body was involved in the retrograde, and there was no soundness anywhere save in the distant rear, where warning had been sufficient to enable the troops to change their facings and prepare for what was coming. This sound part was Williams' division of the Twelfth corps lying next to the last division, counting from the west front of the Union line.

Meanwhile, many of the Eleventh corps regiments had made gallant individual fights, losing from one-third to one-half of their numbers killed and wounded. In some cases Devens' men fought their way back to the rear through ranks of Confederates that had swung around to intercept them. So desperate in fact was the resistance of the Eleventh corps that the whole evening was consumed by Jackson's battle march of about two miles.

At last his progress was held up by Williams' division of the Twelfth corps. Here was Hooker's real stronghold. The Third, Twelfth and First corps, numbering 50,000 men, lay within supporting distance of one another in a general direction north and south. Into the very midst of this body Jackson was plunging at full speed, when darkness and the return blows of Williams' division and other Union troops compelled him to pause and rearrange his columns. He had already driven ahead so far that the morrow would find him between two fires again, in the midst of Hooker's main line of battle and his reserves.

Stonewall was doubtless apprehensive of this. The surprise had been all that he had hoped for. He went to the extreme front beyond his pickets to study the situation and place his men for a renewal of the fighting, when he was wounded, probably by his enemies, although his people claim it was done accidentally by his own men. His wound was not mortal, but he was suffering at the time from a cold and the two combined proved fatal. Had he lived, it is doubtful if he could have resumed his daring exploit during the war. He would have met his match somewhere, and come to grief, sudden and extinguishing.

WORK OF ARCTIC WOMEN

ESKIMO FEMALES DO NOT SEEM TO LEAD AN EASY LIFE.

They Help Their Husbands with Hard Work—They Even Have to Chew Their Spouses' Boots to Make the Hide Soft and Pliable—Industrious Wives.

While much has been written about Eskimo men—their skill as hunters, fishermen and in the management of a kyack—little has been said about the drudgery and the labor of the women in those lands.

A great deal of their time is occupied in sewing and in singing, but the Eskimo wife sings while she sews, and therefore no time is lost.

She does not have to make bread, because there is no flour in that land; neither does she have to wash and dress the baby, because the baby wears no clothes and it is never washed. Neither, for that matter, do his parents wash. The baby rests, while awake, in a loose hood, its legs spread around her waist.

The Eskimo wife accompanies her husband on all journeys and on all extended hunting excursions. Her services are needed in repairing clothing, in cooking—when there is time for such luxurious fare—and to carry a share of the load in summer, when everything that cannot be packed on the backs of their faithful dogs must be borne on the backs of the people.

When on a journey in winter the wife sits in the sled sometimes, but oftener runs alongside or ahead of the dogs. If the sled is heavy the husband, who drives the team, may sometimes rest his weary limbs on the sled, but the woman must not. When the dogs give out and the sled moves slowly the woman are the first to don the harness and help pull the load.

THE WORK THEY HAVE TO DO.

When a hut is made for the day the men build the snow hut, but as the building progresses the women close the interstices of the snow blocks with soft snow, and in very cold weather they pile loose snow against the sides, and, if need be, over the top, with a broad, wooden shovel, called a poalderit. As soon as the hut is finished the women take in the skins and other household effects, which are very few in number, and simple, having first beaten off the snow from the skins with a short stick called an anowter.

The woman also puts up the big stone lamp, lights it, melts snow or ice to make water for drinking or to cook with, erects a drying frame over the lamp and in many other ways makes herself generally useful. Her place in the hut is at either end of the bed, which is only a platform of snow that occupies nearly the whole interior, and just in front of the lamp, so that she can give to it constant and careful attention.

The man does the hunting and much of the fishing. He drives the dogs and does a great deal of the other hard work; but, after the hut is built, the dogs unharnessed and fed and everything made secure for the night, he can turn in and sleep. Not so the wife. She has to dry the fur clothing he has just taken off, by placing it on the drying frame, where it has to be turned from time to time, and when dried it has to be softened.

This she does by rubbing such articles as are made of reindeer skin between her hands, and chewing the boots, which are made of seal or walrus skin. If any of these articles require mending she must do it either before she goes to sleep or waken early, before her husband has to get up

ALSO DO IT THEN.

THEY ARE KIND HEARTED.

The women are very kind hearted creatures, though, and often sacrifice their own comfort to that of others. Often I have come into a snow hut with feet almost frozen with the cold. My hands would be so cold and stiff that I could not untie and remove my shoes and stockings. Some old woman, with a heart as big as her body, would notice my condition and immediately come to my relief. She would untie the strings, pull off my boots and stockings and put my frozen feet under her fur coat against her own warm body until the circulation was restored. I have frequently seen what seemed to me like impositions practiced upon them, but they never complained.

The women are no drawback to a traveling party. The men do not have to wait for them. They are not very graceful walkers and could not win a crumb at a cake walk, but they can keep up with the procession, even if their hips do appear to come unhinged at every step.

The women and girls can all juggle, by throwing stones up into the air, as well as any professional juggler I ever saw—three, four or six stones, with one hand or both hands. They make all sorts of figures with a string—reindeer, bears, geese, mosquitoes, dogs and the like—and there is one thing they can do to perfection—a woman will change her coat right in front of your eyes, and there will not be the slightest suggestion of indelicacy in the act.

It must be remembered that a snow house consists of but one room only, and idea of that one room is taken up by the bed, which is also of snow.

HOW SHE CHANGES HER COAT.

It is not often that a woman has occasion to change her coat—once or twice a year perhaps—but if she does she cannot go into the privacy of her bedroom, for her bedroom is the common bedroom of the entire household, and there is no such thing as privacy. So that is why, I presume, they have acquired the art of making lightning changes of costumes in public, so as not to shock those who chanced to be present. All one ever sees is the new coat poised in space for a moment, then a little wriggle and the flash of the discarded garment flying through the air.

The women are boot and shoemakers, as well as tailors and mantuamakers. Boots are made of sealskin throughout, or else the legs of sealskin and the soles of walrus or ook-book skin. Before being made up the skins have to be tanned, the hair scraped off, and then chewed to make them soft and pliable. The chewing can be done while they are walking around, and does not confine them to one place like sewing does. So, when an Eskimo woman goes visiting, instead of taking knitting with her she takes her chewing.

A middle aged woman shows the effect of this part of her work plainly, for her teeth are worn down nearly to the gums. But they are very strong, nevertheless, and when any of these people have to take a long cold journey they will use their teeth.—W. H. Gilder in Ladies' Home Journal.

A Cool Closet.

A novel device for keeping food cold, where one has no ice, was recently seen, and if one were sure of always having a cool, well ventilated a cellar as that house-wife had, it would certainly save many a weary step. It was a box very like an ice box, built into the pantry floor and extending into the cellar, and there was in use. It was about 4 feet long, 2 feet wide and 2 feet 4 inches high, with a bottom of narrow slats placed 2 inches apart. The top opened back by hinges, and across each end and one side was a shelf. Country Gentleman says that the housewife was loud in its praises, and it was cold in summer and warm in winter.

Corn Oysters.

Corn oysters are made from grated sweet corn. Use one and one-half dozen ears of sweet corn grated as fine as possible. Mix three large tablespoonfuls of flour and the yolks of six eggs. Season till very light, with the grated corn. Have in the frying pan an equal portion of lard and butter. When boiling drop in portions of the mixture the shape and size of oysters. Fry them brown and serve them while hot. They should be about an inch thick.

Peach Dumplings.

Line half a dozen well oiled cups with paste and fill them with finely sliced peaches, sweetened to taste, cover with more paste, then set them in a pan half filled with boiling water and bake or steam forty minutes. Turn out on a dish and serve with liquid sauce.

Mr. Randolph was a well-to-do farmer, and was unmarried. Great excitement was caused.

TALK OF THE TOWN

—The anniversary exercises of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union will be held in Vincent Chapel Thursday, at 3:30 p. m. The President's address and the reports of the year's work in the several departments will be read by the Superintendent.

—The United States recruiting station, which has been at the Sheridan House, Elizabeth, for six weeks, was removed yesterday, owing to lack of applications to Montclair. The total number of applicants to enlist in the regular army from Union County was only sixteen, and of the number only four were accepted.

—Mr. Joseph B. Miller, the proprietor of the Elkwood, this morning swore out warrants for the arrest of Messrs. W. L. and A. J. Force, the proprietors and Mr. J. A. Demarest, the city editor of the Press, charging them with criminal libel. The arrest of the parties mentioned was the outcome of an article published in the Press of last evening, stating that Mr. Miller was a perjurer. Justice Wadsworth issued the warrants and Constable Jesse Moffett served them. The justice held them each in $200 bail to await the action of the Grand Jury. Mr. C. K. Moore gave surety for their appearance, if wanted.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS.

THE GRAND DEMONSTRATION TO-DAY, AND TO OCCUR TO-NIGHT.

Divisions of Uniformed Men From Elsewhere.—A Grand Parade.—The Town Gaily Decorated.—Music, and a Competitive Drill.—A Fine Display of Fireworks To-Night on the Crescent Grounds.

First and foremost we suppose we are indebted to our popular young lawyer-ex-Assemblyman-editor-ex-City-Judge-Past-Grand-Master-of-the-Masons-State-Grand-Chancellor-of-the-Knights-of-Pythias-and-the-Lord-only-knows-what-else John Ulrich of Plainfield and Westfield and Belmar, and the Lord only knows where else, for the grand demonstration—the grand Pythian demonstration—which on this beautiful day of our Lord, brings so many thousand chivalrious and gorgeously-attired (not tired)

GRAND CHANCELLOR HON. JOHN ULRICH.

Knights of Pythias from all parts of the State to enjoy our hospitality, the hospitality of "Plainfield, the Queen City of New Jersey, and the Colorado of the East."

We feel highly honored, and THE NEWS delights to welcome these Knights, welcome them in behalf of the people of Plainfield, the finest body of people in God's universe.

These Knights come upon us like an army with banners, but not to strike terror into 'our hearts at their mighty hosts. We hang our banners on the outer walls—that is most of us do—and big them come on. We are not afraid, though they may have appetites as big as the honorable John himself, and are veritable cannibals, in horns and feathers. Our hotels, which are our arsenals for the inner man —are all loaded and full, and if the Knights don't get loaded and full before they get home it will be because they will wisely conclude "discretion is the better part of valor," and retire in good order.

SIR KNIGHT GEORGE POLHEMUS, LIEUTENANT-COLONEL.

So we extend these gentlemen our heartiest welcome, and trust they will carry away with them only the most refreshing memories of their visit to our beautiful city. We are sure we will remember the occasion of the visit most pleasantly, and the order as worthy of our highest regard for its praiseworthy principles, the faithful adherence to which can do no harm, if it does not make us better and in every sense better men. Again, Sir Knights, we welcome you.

The event is the annual parade of the First Regiment, Uniformed Rank, Knights of Pythias, which took place in this city this afternoon. The column formed on Peace street and paraded over the following line of march:

Peace street to North avenue to Park avenue to Front street, Front street to Central avenue to Seventh street to Central avenue to LeGrand avenue, LeGrand avenue to Washington street, Washington street to Front street, Front street to Somerset street, to Linden avenue and Crescent Ball grounds. A competitive drill took place for prizes which will be announced to-morrow.

We give below a list of the Divisions in the parade:

Palestine Division, No. 1, of Jersey City, Capt. Gus. Steup in command.

Myrtle Division, No. 2, of Paterson.

Unity Division, No. 3, of Elizabeth, Capt. John Farewell in command.

Black Prince Division, No. 4, of Newark, Captain C. M. Stimis in command.

Friendship Division, No. 5, of New Brunswick, Capt. John Pollard in command.

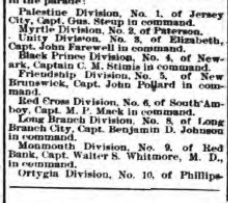
Long Branch Division, No. 8, of Long Branch City, Capt. Benjamin D. Johnson in command.

Monmouth Division, No. 9, of Red Bank, Capt. Walter S. Whitmore, M. D., in command.

Ortygia Division, No. 10, of Phillipsburg, Capt. J. Mitchell Reese, M. D., in command.



SIR KNIGHT, J. E. PLANKEET, CAPTAIN.

Excelsior Division, No. 11, of Trenton, Capt. Edwin F. Margerum in command.

Crescent Division, No. 13, of Plainfield, Capt. J. E. Flannery in command.

Calanthe Division, No. 14, of Newark, Capt. Theodore H. Baldwin in command.

The Un-uniformed Knights consisted of representatives from nearly every one of the one hundred and thirty-two Lodges in the State, and was officered as follows:

Grand Marshal — D. N. Messler, of Somerville.

Assistant Grand Marshal—Hon. Geo. T. Cranmer, of Barnegat.

Major-General Carnahan was present to inspect the parade and drill.

There will be a grand concert and a thousand dollar display of fireworks this evening, a full description of which is published elsewhere.

THE K. OF P. FIREWORKS.

At the Crescent League Grounds.

The fireworks at the Crescent League Ball ground, to be given under the auspices of the Knights of Pythias this evening, promises to be the finest ever displayed in this section of the State.

Persons who are anticipating to see some of the aerial display will miss the best part if they fail to see the set pieces, which alone can be seen in the grounds.

The ground will be beautifully lighted with electric lights, and the Seventh Regiment band concert will be exceptionally fine.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

Defending Prosecutor Marsh.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—Is Prosecutor Marsh guilty of the crimes charged against him by by the Press? The latter said yesterday that the State's Attorney had given Justice Nash a written opinion that the charge of criminal libel made by J. S. Miller against the proprietors and editor of the Press was such a "simple case that Nash could settle it himself." If that statement is so then Prosecutor is placed in a very equivocable position. When any person is arrested upon any criminal charge it becomes at once the duty of the Prosecutor to represent the State and if the defendant demand a trial before a Justice, to give the Justice whatever assistance may be necessary. When a hearing is demanded it is the duty of the Justice to hear the evidence on the part of the State and if from that it appears probable that the law has been violated to hold the defendant to bail. The only possible way in which a Justice can "settle" such a case is to dismiss the complaint. Now the Press seems to intimate that in the Miller case the defendants consulted with the State's attorney and that he, without hearing the evidence for the state, and upon the application of the persons charged with crime, virtually directed the Justice to dismiss the case, and others told him it was so "simple" a case that he could settle it himself, which amounts to the same thing. If this is true, if a person arrested for a crime can get our State's Attorney to direct a Justice to dismiss the complaint before the evidence for the State has been produced, then the law-abiding citizens of Union county are in great danger, and criminal proceedings are indeed a farce! The board of Justice Nash yesterday was that of the State of New Jersey vs. Messrs. Force Bros. and Demarest. Mr. Miller was merely a witness. The Attorney whose business it was to represent the complainant is Hon. Fred Marsh, prosecutor of the county. Mr. Miller had no reason and no right to hire a lawyer to represent the State. The Prosecutor did not appear, and the Press says he had already virtually directed the Justice to let the defendants go free. It seems hardly possible that such a charge could be made. If it is true, and our people will be loth to believe it. It can't be true! But the Prosecutor should hasten to set it at rest. As a citizen, he should at once denounce it, and let the people understand that although the defendants charged with crime may be ever so influential, although they publish a newspaper of his political faith, yet when they wont obey the law, and when charged with crime they must not expect him to connive at their escape by suggesting to the Justice that he dismiss the complaint, or by any other abuse of the power of his office.

FAIR PLAY.

AMID SILENT COMPANIONS.

Conducted for The News by William Cushing Bamburgh.

The death of the James Russell Lowell has called forth the wailings and "Alackadays" from the lips of those who think the decline of poetry and who fear that the death of our poets will leave the higher planes unfilled. Such are in the wrong; for they distrust the perpetuation of that God who is the highest ideal of poetry. Such are in the wrong; they must be condemned. That there is a dearth of new and healthy poetry is evidenced in England, where Swinburne is the only active singer of note, and he is no classic. Prose is there light, frivolous thoughtless verse holds sway; as well as in America, where happy catches of clever rhymers receive more attention than the true and serious poetry of our patriarch poets.

Poetry is in its twilight period, mainly because it is no longer the serious medium of ideal imaginative and pure thought, but has become the recognized medium of highest truth. It is a matter of sobriety and common utterance and bad verbiage; tales are no longer told in verse as the discovery and publicity of "Elaine," "Samson Agonistes," "Evangeline" and "Tri Laudfal," but are doomed to the staid, commonplace dress as prose. This is natural, however, for an age of weak poetry is an age of fine prose. There is no dearth of literature nor of belles-lettres, though gossip and small talk are gradually undermining the nobler thoughts of our daily life. Poetry is not in fashion; in fact, we may justly dub this an inquisitive, not an aspiring, era, for with the tendency of universal knowledge comes the universal tendency of levelling all things. Poetry is affected. Morals in poetry are neglected, Triteness of thought has taken the place of simplicity. "Sobriety in poetry is poverty, simplicity is grandeur. To give each thing the quantity of space which fits it, neither more nor less; this is simplicity. Simplicity is justice," and justice in poetry is the truth of genius.

We are curious as to causes, caring little for the character and sense of the effect. We are at a loss to distinguish the excellent from the inferior in poetic diction. In that way poetry is stunted as well as by the absolute monarchical regime of materials. Poetry is a hothouse exotic even in the genius of natural born singers; it droops if not cared for; it withers by the side of the weed which grows so lustily. Poetry, such as has been left by Dante, Goethe, Spenser, Tennyson, Milton, would have failed had it not shown in itself that "Beauty is its own excuse for being." A true poet lives solely for his art; he takes it to himself as an ever youthful bride who, neglected a moment will become wayward, unfaithful. He is serious, and his soul is not his own. Should we not, then, ask ourselves an important question: "Does neglect poetry?

It is not meant, by this term poetry, flights of verbal vocabulary compatible only to light, genre paintings; nor to that weak moral construction generally termed, to distinguished it from a nobler poetry, philosophical poetry. All poetry, correct in its truth and imagination poetically expressed, and being as Milton said all poetry should be, "simple, sensuous, impassioned," is philosophical inasmuch as it produces a well-defined and strangely developed beauty out of chaos, its morals governed by the laws of divine eternity. Poetry may well be termed the thoughts of angels but there is much to be considered aside from language. There is feeling which may not be noble and therefore is not poetic feeling. There is thought which may not be simple yet perfectly expressed and still not poetic thought. We know that "Thought is deeper than all speech,

Feeling deeper than all thought,
Souls to souls can never reach."

What unto themselves was thought;

and yet we cannot call the poetry of the soul poetic. Although in poetry of the soul we find the highest expressions of love, pure poetry is the highest expression of the judging mind; for it is the rarefied, lusciously-ripe fruit of feeling, yearning, spreading soul. Its qualities are the same as Paul commands the Philippians to evermore have in their minds, "Whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are elevated, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are amiable."

True excellence appeals to eternity for sympathy, for recognition, for approval, and exerts its power over all time. "Do we neglect poetry" yes, but we do not neglect the minor rhymers. We raise monuments to the great poets, but we know not what they have written. We pause at Browning's tomb in the Abbey, and recall that he wrote "Pippa Passes." But we have read it not. So it is right that poetry should be left to the critics, and that we should refuse to make it part of our household inspiration toward nobleness and light? Let there be light! Yes, but as Hugo said, we are spelling now; soon we will read. Then there will be light.

That we do neglect poetry in this country is one reason for the dearth of great poetry; yet there will be a dawn when we will give notes and render sensuous mercies and a song born of simple art, will arise from our cosmopolitan race, and with a vivid voice will tell new tales and upraise the retarded course of song and truth who will see in the world "One God-built shrine of reverence and love," who will direct our eyes from this consuming time, who will as in olden times sing joy and peace and liberty with a prayerful spirit which will proclaim from among men, "among men but not of them," strong and valorous in chronicling the highest aim and achievements of his time.

Unless we grant the purity and eloquence of poetry we will never be willing to grant the laurel to a new poet. The power of poetry over thought and morals must be maintained—to let it alone to show lack of love. To find in it the highest communion of the mind is to acknowledge its extraordinary essence from which arises the sole beauty of the thinking man. To sing as Burns did; to judge as Dante did; to chronicle history as Homer and Shakespeare did; to sing praises as David did, is to be divine in soul and to merit an eteral crown. Poetry is not passing away. Men are are who believe it essential to a noble and holy character.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The New Joint Stock Era.

When the financial history of nations comes to be written the last quarter of the Nineteenth century will be found to have marked a new era in industrial and commercial investment. For some years the market for railway stocks has been phenomenally dull, so much so that the stock exchanges in various cities had apparently scarcely a reason for existence. The old bonds, stocks, mortgages, etc., in which capital had been wont to be invested, seemed to be in a Rip Van Winkle sleep, without hope of awakening. For one thing, there were not so many new railroads to build; for another, the proved rascality and incompetency of numbers of railway officials made the public chary of putting money into such securities.

At this moment a new class of securities slowly loomed up on the financial horizon. It was a full grown moon when the attention of the investor was first called to it. This was industrial stocks and bonds. How they are coming to be more and more a favorite investment for capitalists and speculators is traced out in The Forum by Mr. J. Selwin Tait.

Industrial stocks are the securities of some great manufacturing or commercial corporation. Suppose, for instance, a man has built up alone a gigantic business. He has grown rich. There is no need that he should toil longer. But what shall he do with his business? He does not want it to run down; he cannot transfer it well to any other individual. What does he do? He changes it to a joint stock company, selling a large part of his interests to his employees and others, at $100 per share usually. Thus the business goes through the process of industrial capitalization and comes out a joint stock concern.

Sometimes many small manufacturers put their capital stock together, buy out other firms and form a great syndicate. In one form or another, this is the way in which all the larger enterprises immediately ahead in the industrial world will be conducted, and the securities of such great corporations will be the favorite form for investment of idle capital. On the whole, too, it will apparently give the investor of small means a better fighting chance.

A New Gold Field.

Strange changes would happen in the financial world if suddenly should be discovered somewhere vast new gold fields similar to those of California, Australia or South Africa. If the yellow metal should become plentiful as it once was in comparison to silver, we should find silver no longer going begging on the market and the gold standard nations of Europe would be obliged to reconstruct either their coins or their doctrines.

Meantime there has been in the United States another small find of gold, but quite sufficient to send thousands of people off their heads. Twenty-five miles northwest of the town of Ogden, in Utah, the splendid mineral region recently discovered bids fair to rival some of the fabulously rich gold districts of California. A vein of galena has been followed already over a mile, and assays 80 per cent. in lead. Gold is found in a carbonate ore. Other metals, especially silver, are also present. The finds have been sufficient to cause on a small scale a repetition of early scenes in California. In seven days a town grew to have 1,200 inhabitants, with a hotel and all the saloons attendant on the advent of civilized man. Its name is La Plata. Transportation cannot be found for the thousands of miners and prospectors rushing to La Plata, and many of them trudge thither from Ogden on foot, camping out.

In Germany a trial has been made of running silk weaving looms by electricity. The power was supplied from a one horse power motor by cable for a distance of 100 feet. Two looms were prepared and the motor gently set to work. The result was that the looms were operated more satisfactorily than by any small motor heretofore tried. It also indicates that manufacturing possibly will turn to the old order of things and artisans do their work at home instead of in the great factories as at present. Electricity is apparently the coming household motor.

Sarah Bernhardt has had unhappy experiences enough to fill half a dozen lives. Specially unlucky at the time when she was a poor, struggling artist, she said: "Pitiless criticism, without decency, systematically attacks an artist of growing talent, who with a little encouragement might become great. Stopping not, it even searches into the details of her private life, her sorrows and her sad remembrances, like the jackals searching graves for carrion."

Churches and church members are unanimous in the opinion that gambling is sinful. At the same time a majority of those who are engaged in the most desperate and furious gambling of all on the city grain and stock boards are church members.

The Chicago Tribune has found a new and first class name for patriotic city councilmen who give permits for the tearing up of public streets on the slightest pretext. It calls them Jack the Rippers.

LIKE JOHNSTOWN'S FATE

First Details of the Great Spanish Floods.

DEATH, DESOLATION AND DESPAIR.

Several Towns Were Swept Away by the Raging Waters, People Were Drowned in Their Beds and the Total Number of Victims Is at Least Two Thousand.

MADRID, Sept. 16.—The floods which have caused so much damage, and which are already known to have resulted in the loss of thousands of lives, have been general in the south of Spain. The damage done is simply terrible in its extent.

In the province of Toledo the rush of water from the Conasegra river was so sudden and unexpected that hundreds of people were drowned in their beds. The aspect of the town is positively frightful. Four hundred bodies have already been recovered, and at least a hundred corpses can be seen floating in the swollen rivers. A national relief fund has been opened.

Thousands Are Homeless.

The wine and grain crops, naturally, have been destroyed throughout the flooded section of the country. The towns of Urda, thirty-two miles from Toledo; Villafranes, twenty miles from St. Sebastien; Camunas, Yebenes, twenty-one miles from Toledo, and Vera have suffered heavily. Thousands of families are homeless and starving. Relief trains are being sent to the scenes of the disaster.

Two Thousand Dead.

An estimate, classed as a moderate one, and which is within rather than over the actual number, places the total of the death list at 2,000. Large numbers of corpses still rest where they were found. Unless they are soon interred an epidemic of fever is feared.

So far as possible the bodies of the drowned are being gathered from the streams, mud banks and ruins and are being buried in trenches dug for their reception. Many of the bodies found are entirely nude, showing that they must have been washed from their beds or else in the hurry to escape the drowned people must have jumped in night dress from the windows of their habitations only to meet death in the swollen waters surging around them.

Heartrending Scenes.

Along the river banks, near the scenes of the most severely visited districts, heartrending occurrences are witnessed hourly as the survivors of almost exterminated families recognize their dead and try to save them from consignment to the common death trench. Unhappily, the worst is not yet known and months of terrible privations and suffering are among the before the utterly impoverished survivors. The crops are gone, the cattle swept away, houses and household furniture ruined, and all the means available them to earn bread has vanished beneath the torrents of water which have rolled over town and village, field and farm.

Pillaged by Starving Men.

The extreme distress prevailing in many sections has another and if possible blacker side. The gripings of hunger, the wail of starving children and children, have in several instances, driven the men to desperation, and they have been goaded to pillage and even extensive and systematic. Bands of desperate men, determined to obtain bread at any cost for their destitute, hungry tortured families have been driven to making raids on stores and pillaging buildings where they expected to find food.

Harrowing Tales of Survivors.

The troops have been instructed to take the most severe measures to protect property.

Survivors give harrowing accounts of the onset of the flood. Many mothers were seen struggling in the water with baby children and finally succumbing to the rush of the torrent. Others were confined in rooms with no hope of escape. One man who was caught on a wooden bridge saw hundreds of persons float past crying piteously for help, which he was unable to give. The bodies of sixty persons were found in a public hall where they had been overtaken by the flood in the midst of a wedding feast.

The queen has subscribed $20,000 more to start a national relief fund.

Clemency for Forger Bidwell.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—Home Secretary Matthews has remitted eighteen months of the sentence of imprisonment imposed on Arthur Bidwell, the American forger, for frauds perpetrated on the Bank of England. Bidwell, Arthur's brother, was released in 1888 on the customary ticket of leave for good behavior, and immediately left for the United States. The latter expected to have received $280,000 of the $500,000 secured.

Has England Occupied Mityleue?

LONDON, Sept. 16.—The assertions and denials regarding the alleged occupation of Mityleue keep the public mind in a feverish and unsatisfied condition. It is satisfactory that does not eminate directly from the British foreign office. It is suggested that the purpose is to keep Europe in the dark until the occupied post has been so strongly fortified as to make successful attack very difficult.

Cardinal Manning on Labor.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—Cardinal Manning, in an interview with a delegate to the Trades Union congress, said that nothing would so help on the movement for universal brotherhood as world's congress. "No subject after the way to eternal life is, in my judgment," said the cardinal, "more vital than the welfare of the world's labor."

Italy's Warlike Preparations.

ROME, Sept. 16.—In view of the gravity of the European situation the government proposes to increase taxation to the amount of 15,000,000 to 20,000,000 lires. The government is privately urging the speedy completion of men of war. All merchantmen classed as auxiliary cruisers are ordered to given points to ship guns and munitions of war.

Relief for Starving Russians.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—A St. Petersburg dispatch announces that 20,000,000 rubles has been appropriated by the Russian government for the relief of the poorer classes of the famine stricken people. The money is to be used to purchase and distribute seed for the winter sowing.

Russia to Move Troops.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—The Standard's Odessa correspondent says that during the coming five weeks 30,000 troops will be conveyed by the Russian volunteer fleet from Batoum to Sebastopol and Odessa.

A REWARD FOR FITZSIMMONS.

Every Effort Will Be Made to Capture Pittsburg's Jail Breaker.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 16.—The escape of the notorious criminal Fitzsimmons, the murderer of Detective Gilkinson, from the county jail is the all absorbing topic of interest in the city. The county commissioners and the chiefs of the department of public safety of the city have started a systematic search for the fugitive. The county commissioners have offered a reward of $1,000 for his capture. They have also employed the best possible detective talent, and hope to run down their man within a short time. It was ascertained that a few days ago Fitzsimmons received a draft for $6,000. He had the draft cashed and handed the money to a friend for safekeeping. It is also known to the police that early in the morning after the escape Fitzsimmons was supplied with a suit of clothing by two lady friends. The women are now under police surveillance.

The prisoner gained the jail corridor by sawing the bars on his cell door. He then scaled the walls, reaching the top of the building, where he used his saw on the bars of the window overlooking the warden's house. By a most desperate leap he reached the jail court by means of a lightning rod and the same high stone wall by means of a rope that could have been secured only by means of outside assistance. From the top of the jail wall he jumped to the roof of the shed on the Old Avenue side of the jail.

An examination of the cell disclosed a very clever dummy occupying the cot. The bars of the cell door show that the sawing was not of recent date; that the bars had been only partly severed, only enough of the sawing remaining to hold them in position. They had offered no resistance when the prisoner was ready to step out. The sawing of the bars in the window at the top of the jail is a mysterious incident. How it was possible for any one to either reach the window, or to remain there unobserved long enough to accomplish the work, is a question that has taken more than an hour to accomplish, is yet unexplained. At 11 o'clock a farmer living out the Butler plank road several miles from the city called police headquarters by telephone, inquiring if Fitzsimmons had escaped from jail. When informed that he had escaped the farmer said that he had been the murderer passing along the highway in front of his house. The indications are almost conclusive that the fugitive had able assistance from the outside.

YOUNG EDSON IN TROUBLE.

The Son of an Ex-Mayor of New York Charged with Fraud.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Sept. 16.—Henry T. Edson, son of Ex-Mayor of New York Franklin Edson, and senior member of the firm of Henry T. Edson & Co., produce brokers of this city, was arraigned in the police court on a charge of grand larceny by simulating a check drawn by German American bank out of $5,000. He waived examination and gave bail in the sum of $5,000 to await the action of the grand jury. Mr. Edson says that the shortage of funds to meet his margins, called on the German-American bank and presented a note on his credit for $5,000, which was cashed. Shortly afterward he again required money and upon presenting a draft on his father for $5,000, was given $1,500 in cash and the note he had formerly negotiated.

The draft on his father came back marked "payment refused." The bank then demanded the money from Mr. Edson, but on account of recent losses he was unable to make a settlement. Subsequently, however, Mr. Edson took up the draft and gave in exchange therefor a note indorsed by his wife and by Cashier Allen, of the German-American bank. The directors of the bank disapproved of Mr. Allen's action and left the bank of the prosecution by Mr. Allen. Edson says that he did not intend to practice any fraud, and that he has been in the habit of drawing drafts on his father.

A New Haven Anarchist Threatened.

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 16.—On Labor Day Otto Schiebel floated a red flag over his saloon, which act was interpreted as a display of anarchistic sentiment on his part. A printed circular addressed to Schiebel, being circulated throughout the city. It is signed "The G. A. R. vigilants," and threatens Schiebel with "summary justice" should he again "flaunt the flag of hell" in the faces of the loyal people of this country. In conclusions it bids him to "keep in mind the fate of your Chicago pals."

Fatal Accident at Erie.

ERIE, Pa., Sept. 16.—Lightning struck a trolley car on the Eighth street line, burning out the armature. The passengers jumped from the swiftly moving car. All escaped without injury except Miss Bertha Markley, aged twenty-five, a dressmaker, who was thrown violently to the pavement. She died a few hours later. Five other cars had a similar experience.

New York Heads the Hop List.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—The census of fice has in press a bulletin showing the production of hops in the United States. Hops are grown for commercial purposes in seventeen states. In the year 1890 60,320 acres of land were cultivated in hops, producing 56,162,270 pounds. New York heads the list with 30,670 acres, yielding 30,062,600 pounds.

Secretary Tracy and Chief Justice.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—Secretary Tracy says, respecting the policy of the navy department, as reflecting the United States naval force in China waters, that six vessels are now on the China station, which is about the usual number which have constituted the Asiatic fleet for the last eleven years.

Accidents at a Big Hotel Fire.

MEMPHIS, Miss., Sept. 16.—The new and elegant Southern hotel, costing $150,000, was burned here. W. A. Royce, treasurer of the Memphis Drop company, fell from the fourth floor, receiving serious injuries. H. E. Davidson, a fireman, fell five floors through an elevator, fracturing his skull.

A Rubber Volcanizer Explodes.

TRENTON, Sept. 16.—A large rubber vulcanizer weighing ten tons exploded at noon in the rear of the Globe Rubber company. Considerable damage was done to the interior and machinery, and Cobb Bennett, a workman, was so badly injured that he will die.

Billy Smith the Victor.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 16.—Tom McCarty, of Boston, and Billy Smith, of Australia, heavy weights, fought for a $1,000 purse at the California club last night. McCarty was defeated in the eighth round.

A Painter's Fatal Mistake.

BANGOR, Me., Sept. 16.—Alfred L. Jones, while painting a telegraph pole, touched wires supplying power to the electric road and was instantly killed.

AS MUM AS AN OYSTER.

John Bardsley Refuses to Testify in Court.

PHILADELPHIA BANKERS GO FREE.

The Court Decides That They Were Morally, but Not Criminally, Guilty in Paying Interest to Bardsley—Ten Years for the Kennedys.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 16.—Another act of the drama of Bardsleyism was presented in the common pleas court No. 1. John Bardsley, the convicted ex-city treasurer, was the principal actor, and some of Philadelphia's most prominent men took part as defendants, witnesses and on-lookers. The district attorney said that he proposed to call to the attention of the court some cases arising out of the recent troubles, so that the court might consider them, and if the evidence justified it that warrants of arrest might be sued against the guilty parties.

Bardsley's Name Called.

The commonwealth had subpoenaed Glendenning & Sons, Auditor General Mackamant, William H. Livezey, cashier in the state treasury, who was not present, and the officers of the Farmers and Mechanics', Third National and Seventh National banks, selecting these banks, the district attorney concluded, in which there could be no question as to knowledge as to whose money Bardsley was being paid interest upon. Here the name of John Bardsley was called. The clerk offered to swear him, but he replied and said:

His Word of No Value.

"The public have been taught to believe that there is no value in my word whatever. I have been maligned and I have been today more than I can bear. My self respect, however, in view of all that has been said and done, will not permit me, under any circumstances, to give any testimony in this court."

Judge Fell reminded him that he could refuse to answer questions, but he only insisted that he would not be sworn. The district attorney here insisted that he should be sworn.

As Dumb as an Oyster.

"Mr. Bardsley, it is your duty to take the oath administered to you. You are a citizen subpœnaed here regularly, and it is your duty to take the oath. The other matters will be attended to when they are reached," said Judge Gordon.

Bardsley replied, "If your honor says so I will take the oath." Bardsley then took the oath. Then he asked, "Is not I know Mr. McCamant?" he said: "I decline to answer any questions at all. I have simply been sworn out of deference to your honor because you think it is my duty."

After a large number of other questions had been asked Bardsley—all of which he declined to answer—he finally said: "I have declined to answer any questions. My mind has irrevocably been made up and no inducements under the circumstances can prevail upon me. It is useless for Mr. Graham to further distress me." Bardsley was then dismissed from the stand.

Glendenning and Hahn Held.

The Glendenning case was next called, and after a lengthy examination Robert Glendenning and, George H. Hahn, constituting the firm of Glendenning & Co., were held in $10,000 bail each for court on the charge of having aided and abetted Bardsley in the conversion of the public money. Bail was then entered in their behalf.

The Bank Presidents Go Free.

The cases of the three bank presidents were then taken up. Mr. Graham said it was a question in his mind if the presidents could be indicted, as the law of conspiracy did not cover the case, and he wanted the matter settled. Judge Gordon sitting to whether the presidents of these banks could be indicted for paying interest. "It is a question for the court," said Mr. Graham "that this question as presented in my own mind is one of immorality and not of criminality, and if the court agrees with the thought in my own mind I should feel it my duty to recommend that no further action be taken and that no warrants be issued, feeling that there is not sufficient in the law of conspiracy to warrant an arrest."

After the court had retired for a space of ten minutes they returned and read their opinion. In which they decided that no action would lie as against the persons paying interest.

Ten Years for the Kennedys.

Francis W., president, and Henry H. Kennedy, cashier of the defunct Spring Garden National bank, who were convicted recently for wrecking that institution were each sentenced by Judge Gordon to ten years each in the Eastern penitentiary.

Two Many Experts Abroad.

The experts of the committee investigating the affairs of John Bardsley as city treasurer have resumed work on the books of the defunct Keystone National bank, and after having been, it is said, ordered to stop by the authorities at Washington. The reason for their suspension was said to be the belief that there were too many experts around.

Telegraphers May Amalgamate.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 16.—At the second day's session of the Brotherhood of Telegraphers, Eugene V. Debbs, of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, made an address to the convention, pointing out the advantages of amalgamation of the Order of Railway Telegraphers and the Brotherhood of Telegraphers. The conference committee reported favorably to the amalgamation.

A Peacemaker Shot.

PORT HURON, Mich., Sept. 16.—Three painters while passing the house of Theodore Wilhelm, near Ypsilanti, heard cries of "Murder!" and on entering the house found Kyne beating his wife. They remonstrated with him, when Kyne shot and killed Wesley McLean, one of the painters. Kyne is now in jail here.

Moorhead & McLean's Statement.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 16.—Moorhead & McLean, of the Soho Iron and Steel works, have issued a detailed statement of the financial condition of their firm. The statement is reassuring, and shows a bal ance in favor of the assets of $1,571,654.28. It is now almost certain that the creditors of the firm will grant an extension.

Above the Snow Line.

Guest (at Chicago hotel)—I wish you would have one of the boys take my overcoat down to my room and press the suit.

Clerk—I would advise you to put it on, sir, if you are going to your room. It's on the top floor, and you'll need it before you get up there.—Cheshire and Furnisher.

Return of the Wanderer.

It was a silver headed sage,
With head bowed down before,
His palsied hands could scarcely lift
The latchstring from the door.

A parcel in his arms had he;
"I've sad that he could bear,
As one by one his footsteps fell
Upon the creaky stair.

He mounted up four flights, and then
He paused, as if in doubt,
Before the door, as though he hoped
The tenant would be out.

He knocked. And as an aged face
Peered out, he spoke "I'm back,
I hope y'll pardon this delay,
I've brought that dress suit back."

Second Day's Session of New York Democrats.

DISBURSING THE SILVER PLANK.

Committee Jenks, of Brooklyn, Proposed a Reference to Grover Cleveland, but the Resolutions Committee Did Not Favor It.

SARATOGA, Sept. 16.—The Democratic state convention, which adjourned for the day without making any nominations Tuesday afternoon, convened again this morning about 11 o'clock. It is believed that today the Democrats of New York will come out for honest money. If the statements of those who have assisted in preparing the resolution on this most important subject may be trusted the declaration will be equally as strong as the Republican one, which was so loudly cheered at Rochester.

In his speech to the convention Chairman Raines drew forth cheers when he quoted Hill's oft repeated phrase, "I am a Democrat." He praised Jefferson, Jackson and Tilden, and then announced that the programme was to confine the campaign to state issues. Then the speaker scored ex-Senators Platt and Miller and J. Sloat Fassett. He said:

Chairman Raines' Speech.

We are no longer left to enumerate as to Republican leadership. Platt on stilts in midday for popular view and judgment. Estle Miller is silent. Belden is indifferent. Wadsworth is fallen. Becker has a genuine German fit of indigestion. The cultured White had been the candidate of Mr. Platt for several months, then general spontaneity uprose in its majesty, and ordered Sherman in favor of a young gentleman whose name had been mentioned in no caucus convention of the party. The Dana ex machina "worked the other eye," and instantly all the subways of Plattism poured forth blue flame, and in the great light the name of Fassett "led all the rest."

World's Fair Matters.

The delays imposed on the World's fair legislation by Fassett, in a struggle to secure a partisan advantage in patronage, resulted in the assembly in New York of the most magnificent array of worth and talent in the assembly to utter the indignation of New York. The hour of that assembly was the signal for the surrender by Mr. Platt of his senatorial blockade. The cessation of relief when it was announced at that meeting that Platt would present the project in the consideration, and, if not too late, aid with his influence the movement to secure the fair for New York will never be forgotten by a state to which that fair would have been worth, in fact, as Mr. Depew is said to have said, $100,000,000. The hour had passed and the senatorial blockade had been effective.

The greatest offense of Plattism has been committed against the free and equal suffrage of our citizens. Why a member of assembly in Hamilton county should be selected by 22,000 people, in Washington county by 32,000 people, while in Erie, Monroe, Kings and New York counties 60,000 people are required, and more than 63,000 people are necessary to select one member of assembly, cannot be explained. The results of Plattism are apparent. Its dangers to our institutions are apparent; its immorality is betrayed in the level of practical politics of the most cool and audacious kind.

Cheers for Gorman.

District Attorney Ridgway offered a resolution commending the congressmen who opposed the federal elections bill last winter, and giving special praise to Senator Arthur P. Gorman, who led the Democratic fight. The mention of the Maryland senator's name met with cheers. Delegate Thayer, of Rensselaer, presented a brief resolution calling for the discontinuance of contract labor in prisons. Both were referred to the committee on resolutions.

The County Democracy of New York then entered a protest about being kept out of the convention.

Judge Maynard Withdraws.

Judge Isaac H. Maynard, deputy attorney general, has determined not to allow his name to be presented to the convention for the nomination of attorney general. Judge Maynard, in explaining his position, said:

"In the interest of harmony I have concluded to withdraw my name from the consideration of the convention. My action has been influenced solely by a wish to prevent discord in the convention which might imperil party success at the polls."

The Platform Committee Meets.

The committee on platform and resolutions was selected with especial care, as it has been manifest that questions of much moment would be discussed. The main point at issue has been the money plank. Daniel G. Griffin, the near neighbor of Roswell P. Flower in Watertown, has maintained that such a plank should be left for the consideration of the national convention. It had no place in a campaign involving solely state issues. Others insisted upon a plank condemning the free coinage of silver should be inserted.

The committee met in the Grand Union at 4 o'clock. A preliminary draft of the platform was read. Governor Hill's private secretary, Timothy Williams, was present most of the time. The introductory planks in the document were general in their character, unaffirmed the national platforms of 1884 and 1888. The opinion that the money question should be left to the national convention provoked discussion. Mr. Jenks, Mr. Boody and Mr. Tracy believed that a specific plank against the freer coinage of silver should be inserted.

That Reference to Cleveland.

It was decided to incorporate into the platform a plank in opposition to the present law, known as the Sherman bill, which directs the coinage of silver to $4,500,000 a month. It was also determined to speak specifically for "honest money," and unless the decision is upset this programme will prevail. One of the most interesting features of the meeting was the resolution offered by Almet F. Jenks, of Brooklyn. It was:

That we stand with the record of the Democratic House of Representatives of 1887-89 and Grover Cleveland against all legislation tending to bring about the reckless experiment of free, unlimited silver coinage.

Those present objected to any such resolution. The name of Grover Cleveland hadn't been mentioned in the convention and the ex-governor was still at Lake View. It was thought inadvisable to introduce any of the Cleveland ideas in this committee and so it was decided to settle so important a question. Mr. Cookran and Mr. Croker and others agreed that this policy was the better. The Jenks resolution was not allowed to come before the committee. The resolution following the Sherman bill was introduced and carried by the aid of Mr. Cookran, Mr. Croker and their friends.

The committee on credentials organized by the election of J. D. McMahon, of Oneida, as chairman and Major J. W. Hinkley as secretary.

When the Erie county contest came up William F. Sheehan talked for the First district fighters, and accused the Sheehan faction of all sorts of sharp tactics in the caucuses. Then he said:

"This is a serious question. The Democracy of Erie is now split in two, and unless something is done the ticket will be disastrous. We will be bound by and acknowledge the decision, but we cannot be responsible for the people."

William E. Delaney, for the Second Erie district, followed in much the same line, as did John G. Milburn for the Third district.

Charles F. Whitcher, who spoke for the Sheehan side for all Erie districts, told how 200 grain handlers carried off one of the houses at which a caucus had been called.

The assertion that the party in Erie was seriously divided he denied, and said that all there was to that was an effort to make it appear so on the part of a certain eloquent tribune. He said that it could not lead William F. Sheehan by the nose, was trying to kill him. In conclusion he said that the contestants did not want to go into the state convention. They want to go into the state convention. All they wanted was to stir up strife.

It is believed, however, that the decisions will be in favor of the sitting delegations in Erie and in all of the others, except the First district of Cayuga and the First and Second in Queens. Both sides are likely to be admitted in the two Chautauqua districts and the two in Monroe. each delegate to have half a vote. The Albany district will probably be settled by admitting two of the three contestants and retaining Delegate Grogan of the sitting delegation. In the New York matter it is said that there are votes enough with Tammany to carry out her purpose of keeping the entire representation as the dominant and recognized Democracy of the metropolis.

Day State Republicans Meet.

BOSTON, Sept. 16.—The friends of both Hon. William W. Crapo, of New Bedford, and Hon. Charles H. Allen, of Lowell, are confident that their man will be nominated in the Republican state convention today. The contest for auditor has as chief candidates Hon. E. C. Milliken, of New Bedford; General John W. Kimball, of Fitchburg; Henry E. Turner, of Malden; Captain Moses P. Palmer, of Groton, and Major J. Henry Gould, of Medfield. Should Crapo be nominated Mr. Turner's prospects are decidedly bright.

Fassett and Depew to Speak.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—The ratification meeting under the auspices of the Republican clubs will be on Tuesday evening at the new music hall, Fifty-seventh street and Seventh avenue. J. Sloat Fassett and Chauncey M. Depew are to be the principal speakers.

THE TRAIN WRECKER TELLS ALL.

His Companions Stopped the Wrong Train and Then Fled.

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—Charles Howard, the man who was arrested on suspicion at the scene of the attempted train wrecking on the Pittsburg and Fort Wayne road near Whiting, Ind., has made a full confession, in which he says he was hired to place ties on the track. He said it was the intention of himself and a half dozen companions to rob the two Adams express cars, but the passengers were not to be injured.

The ties were placed on the track for the purpose of stopping, not wrecking, the train. When the train came to a halt his companions discovered that it was a local passenger train carrying no express, and they made their escape. Howard could not restrain his joy at seeing the train stop without injury, and ran toward it, forgetting his position and only thinking he was not a murderer.

Hamel Wrecked Other Trains, Too.

EASTON, Sept. 16.—Another confession has been secured from Aime Louis Barrand, otherwise Louis Hamel, the dynamite train wrecker, who clears up two mysterious wrecks of trains in the early summer. One was near Hartford, June 30. Dynamite exploded under a local train, and the track was torn up considerably. On May 31 a way train on the New Jersey Central exploded dynamite at Little Ferry, N. J., and a wreck followed, the chief damage being to the track.

Barrand confesses that he did both jobs. Between July 13 and 18 he was at Niagara, and he tried to blow up a hotel, but the fuse, laid to a large package of powder, went out before the fire reached the explosive.

A Convict Escapes from Sing Sing.

SING SING, N. Y., Sept. 16.—William Cooper, a convict in Sing Sing prison, escaped from that institution at 9:30 a. m. He was in charge of Keeper J. J. Griffin, and was working with six other men in the lime quarry. Cooper was one of the smartest and ugliest men in the prison. This is the second escape in a week.

Typhoid Fever in Jersey City.

JERSEY CITY, Sept. 16.—The impure drinking water of Jersey City has caused an epidemic of typhoid fever. There are twelve cases at the city hospital and nearly all the patients are delirious. Physicians fear a general spread of the disease.

The Presidents at Washington.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—President Harrison, accompanied by Private Secretary Halford, Miss Halford, Lieutenant Parker and Mrs. D. Parker, and Mr. and Mrs. Mitchener, arrived here at 8:40 last night.

Commissioner Beattie Decapitated.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—At the request of Mayor Grant, Commissioner Beattie, of the street cleaning department, was removed from office today because the streets are not kept clean.

CABLE BREVITIES.

Cholera is spreading with virulent rapidity in Asiatic Turkey. From June to Aug. 1 there died of the disease at Aleppo 2,000.

According to the latest advices from China, the powers are deeply affected by the recent outrages perpetrated upon foreigners in China, and have agreed upon joint action.

General Saussier, the commander in chief of the French army of manoeuvers and the general who was looked upon as the man to take the supreme command of the French forces in case of a war with Germany, allowed himself to be surprised and captured in by the so called "enemy's" cavalry.

Mr. Spurgeon continues to improve, and his condition is now so satisfactory that it has been decided to discontinue the daily bulletins.

A carpenter named Wasenat, da Berlin, has been sentenced to six months' imprisonment for publicly referring to the Kaiser and his entourage as "the emperor and his gang."

OUR YOUNG FOLKS

A VALUABLE TURTLE.

From Which is Obtained the Beautiful Material Known as Tortoise Shell.

The true turtles inhabit the sea and can be distinguished from allied species by the form of the legs, which are much elongated and flattened, enabling them to swim with great ease. These reptiles spend almost the whole of their time in the sea, seldom coming ashore, except for the purpose of laying their eggs. Rev. J. G. Wood gives in Golden Days (from which our cut is reproduced) the following interesting information about them.

The common green turtle is found off the shores of the West Indies. The usual mode of capturing it is by watching it go ashore and then tilting it on its back by levers which are thrust dexterously beneath it. Much practice is required in the art of turtle turning, for the reptiles are very heavy, very strong, and when they take alarm scuttle off seaward with wondrous speed, kicking the sand and stones behind them with such force that the hunters are often half blinded before they can secure their prey.

Another valuable species is the hawksbill turtle. This is the creature from which is obtained the beautiful material so familiar under the name of "tortoise shell." In this reptile the thirteen plates of the carapace are distinct back ward, and overlap each other like the tiles of a roof, as may be seen in the figure. These plates, or "scales," as they are termed, are separated from the shell by placing the turtle with its back downward over a clear fire. The heat loosens the attachment of the plates and enables them to be removed. The turtle is then replaced in the sea, where, in process of time, a fresh set of scales will be produced. In Celebes, however, the turtle is first decapitated, and then the plates are removed by placing the animal in boiling water. When the scales are first removed from the animal they are rough, brown, and unless held to the light, give very little indication of the beauty which lies concealed.

The manufacture of tortoise shell is a rather complicated process. The reader must be familiar with the common tortoise shell combs. These are of equal thick ness throughout their length, whereas the plates from which the combs are made are thickest in the middle and diminish in thickness toward the edges and points.

No one piece of material is sufficient for one of these combs, so that if there were no means of uniting the plates, such objects would not be made. Fortunately, the tortoise shell is amenable to the joint influence of water and heat, so that when well steamed, any number of plates can be pressed together, and will look as if they were a single piece.

Even the little scraps which are cut away by the carvers are useful, being put aside, steamed, placed in molds and, by the action of a powerful press, squeezed into any design.

This valuable turtle frequents the warmer seas, its chief home being in the tropical Pacific, and the inhabitants of the many islands which stud that ocean make various uses of it.

A Little Bird Tells.

It's strange how little boys' mothers
Can find out all as they do,
If a fellow does anything naughty
Or says anything that is not true!
They'll look at you just for a moment,
Till your heart in your bosom swells,
And then they know all about it—
For a little bird tells!

Now, where the bird comes from,
Or where the little bird goes,
If he's covered with beautiful plumage,
Or black as the king of crows;
If his voice is as hoarse as a raven's
Or clear as the tinkling bells,
I know not; but this I am sure of—
A little bird tells!

The moment you think a thing wicked,
The moment you do a thing bad,
Or angry, or sullen, or hateful,
Or ugly, or stupid, or mad;
Or tease a dear brother or sister—
That instant your sentence he knells,
And the whole to mamma in a minute
A little bird tells!

You may be in the depths of the closet,
Where nobody sees a mouse;
You may be all alone in a cellar,
You may be on the top of a house;
You may be in the dark and the silence,
Or out in the woods and the dells—
No matter! Wherever it happens,
The little bird tells!

And the only contrivance to stop him
Is just to be sure what to say—
Sure of your facts and your phacies,
Sure of your work and your play;
Be honest, be brave, and be kindly,
Be genial and loving as well,
And then you can laugh at the stories
The little birds tell!

A Difference in Tastes.

GEORGE WASHINGTON CLAY

Quoth brave Johnny Bull,
With his mouth rather full,
And his waist with a napkin begirt,
"Of dainties the chief
Is the noble roast beef,
With plum pudding, of course,
for dessert!"

"Jes' hab yo' own way,"
Said George Washington Clay,
"An yo 'long wid dose fine yo's a tellin'!
Dar's nuffin' lak dis!"
And chuckling with bliss,
He extinguished himself in a melon!

"Wal, mebbe you're right,"
Observed Jonathan Bright,
With a wink of his merry young eye:
"But for all you're so knowin,
The dish ain't again
Can come up, I reckon, to pie!"

—St. Nicholas.

An Interesting Census Item.

According to the last census, there are at the present time in England and Wales upward of 900,000 or nearly 1,000,000, more females than males, the exact number being 900,302. The total result of the census of England and Wales, taken on the night of April 5, demonstrated the existence of 14,950,540 females and 14,050,840 males, showing the difference just stated.

Table Covers.

The custom of covers for tables is being more fully appreciated daily. A cover is a great saving to a good table and helps to hide the imperfections of an old one.

The much used scarf is being laid aside, and the long covers come in squares and hang down five or six inches on each side of the table.

We have a great many kinds of material from which to choose in the construction of these covers. Bolton sheeting, stamped with a conventional design and worked with rope linen floss is very pretty.

It can now be found in colors. A soft shade of blue, worked in different shades of brown and tan, with a fringe of linen floss, is lovely.

Quite a new idea is a cover in a dark, rich shade of green felt. Any favorite color might be chosen which would harmonize with other surroundings.

The felt has a border of pansies in natural colors, painted so that the lower petals reach the edge of the felt. The pansies should just touch each other and be somewhat larger than the natural ones, as the border must not be too narrow. Paint the pansies in different colors, as a dark, rich shade of purplish blue; next a yellow or white, with here and there a bud or leaf.

Use sable brushes for the work and thin the paints with turpentine. For the high lights use silver white added to paints you have been using for the petals. For the shadows of the dark pansies use madder lake, mauve or permanent blue. For the center of the pansy a dot of delicate green with side markings of silver white.

Endeavor to make the pansies as natural as possible, and the best way is to procure some cut pansies for a study. For the stems and leaves use d green with a trifle of burnt sienna add, how ochre for the shading. Use a small brush for the stems, and if the work is carefully done I am sure you will consider the cover a thing of beauty and be more than satisfied.

After the work is dry take a sharp pair of shears and cut the felt along the lower petals of the pansies, throwing the cover into scallops.—Ladies' Companion.

An Ancient Teakettle.

Mrs. E. T. Henley, of Demopolis, owns a teakettle which is at least a hundred years old, besides historic interest attaches to it. Her father, Mr. Robert R. Harwell, brought it from North Carolina when he moved to Alabama in 1812. While crossing the Chattahoochee river at the place where is now the site of Eufaula, in May, 1812, the Creek Indians robbed the wagons and stole this kettle with other effects. Mr. Harwell threatened to report them to Major Hawkins, the agent at that time of the Creek Nation. Mr. Harwell moved and settled at Old St. Stephens.

In about six months afterward the teakettle and the other effects were left by some one with the ferryman near that place, to be delivered to Mr. Harwell. No one knows how the Indians found out where he had settled. Mrs. Henley often entertains her friends with interesting Indian stories. She is one of the most substantial among the people of Demopolis. She is the mother of the first mayor of Birmingham and of Dr. Henley, a prominent physician of that city.—Birmingham (Ala.) News.

A Woman's Woman.

What we mean is this: Men and women usually admire in one another the opposite qualities from those most congenial to their own sex. But the ideal human being is an all-rounder, combining masculine strength and energy and feminine tenderness and insight. Where we find in women only the qualities complementary to men, without the others, we find men's women; and when they are all-round human beings we call them women's women. A woman's woman can give you strength and counsel, and has a wide range of thought and sympathy than a man's woman.

There are many women's women who are highly valued by men; but these are chiefly to be found in the complementary qualities in a woman, and are "superior." The ordinary and average man prefers his own complementary woman, especially if young and skittish, to the all-round one. And I will go so far as to say that some of these complementary women do make delightful wives and admirable mothers of little children.—Cor. London Spectator.

Women Who Can Wear Blue.

The question of what color a woman may blue is one that is continually arising. Napoleon blue, a grayish tint, is only adapted to brunettes, and the peculiar shade of blue known as Alexandra blue and sapphire, sometimes called robin's egg, sometimes called electric blue, is also best suited to the ladies with dark hair and clear dark complexions. Blue shades are very apt to make a blond look colorless. A pure blond with clear eyes can always wear baby blue in the evening, but if she wishes the, white tone of her skin and the bluenese of her eyes and the yellow of her hair to be brought out most effectively she will choose rose color. All the dark shades of blue are fixed to make one look well be wisest if she chooses them in preference to all other shades of the color.—Mrs. Mallon in Ladies' Home Journal.

Stuffed Eggs.

An appetizing and easily eaten dainty especially suited to the railway hamper is prepared as follows: Boil some hen eggs for ten minutes; immerse in cold water to prevent their turning black, and peel off the shells; cut the eggs lengthwise; take out the yolks and beat them well with a little butter, then add potted ham and a suspicion of mustard. When done, fill the hollowed whites with the paste and press the halves together, wrapping them in different colored tissue paper, twisting the ends tightly together to hold the paper secure. Eat them with meat sandwiches.—Her Point of View in New York Times.

Metallic Iron from Shooting Stars.

A learned Danish professor has come to the conclusion that every year the weight of the earth is augmented by the falling on its surface of metallic iron in very fine powder, and that this iron, which comes to us from shooting stars, falls almost continually, sometimes alone and sometimes mixed with rain or snow. In all snow he found iron in appreciable quantities, and in a state of fine subdivision. He has in this way procured material enough to form a small charm, which one of his friends wears attached to his watch chain.—London Tit-Bits.

A Kerchief Collection.

Mrs. Walter Damrosch has a fine collection of kerchiefs. She has a little soft cambric affair said to have belonged to Marie Antoinette. It was a gift from one of the high French officials, an admirer of her father. Then she has a Persian scarf, wrought by the harem ladies in figures representing an ancient bottle. It is superbly embroidered. An Irish point, an antique Egyptian bordered silken handkerchief and a Mexican worked linen one complete the artistic collection. —New York Recorder.

DELIGHTS OF YACHTING.

By a Fellow Who Was Taken Aboard for Ballast.

I assisted at a yacht race about ten days ago, and the doctor says that I may sit up in bed now and write an account of it. It is believed by the general public that I am drowned, but my physician informs me that this is not true. Many letters of condolence have been received by members of my family and placed on file. One is from the captain of the yacht that I sailed on. He closes by saying that it must be a great comfort to my friends to reflect that if I made as good shifting ballast as he ever used. This captain is a rough seaman, but it will be noticed that his heart is on the right side. I regard him as a physiological phenomenon.

My weight, at times when I have not recently been drowned, is about 240 pounds. They wanted me to sit on the windward side to keep the yacht level, and I was expected to sing "Larboard Watch, Ahoy," "White Wings" and "The Wreck of the Jule La Marie" at stated intervals. I did not know these songs, but I gave my pants a hitch and sang "Gathering in the Sheaves" in a manner that made the captain look sad.

We carried about half an acre of canvas and plowed the billows merrily. This caused me to sing a few verses of "The Plowboy's Joy," which everybody pronounced timely and appropriate. The captain said that everything depended upon me. I was to lie flat under the windward rail and bear down hard. He said he would like to have me weigh as near a ton as I could. I was admonished to avoid drawing in long, deep breaths as much as possible, because after was light and it would not do for me to be making a balloon out of myself at a critical time like that. The mate suggested that I might do all the breathing that was necessary when the yacht was in stays and hold my breath when she was on a tack.

At about this juncture the yacht capsized. There were five life preservers on board—one for each man. The reader who does not suppose that I possessed myself of those life preservers in a hurry does not *understand my grasping nature. I shout*ed to the others that I would try to save the life preservers if they would endeavor to rescue the pig iron that was inside of the yacht. Then I kicked myself free from the wreckage and floated off. Our noble captain was the last man to leave the yacht. "Save yourself!" he cried. "Never mind me. I have no wife nor little ones at home."

This was true, for his family had gone to Ypsilanti on a visit. Then this self sacrificing man took a large chew of tobacco and calmly waited for a boat to come and take him off. He knew that the yacht had air cans enough stowed away to float her, but he didn't want any company.

The other members of the crew overtook me and seized all of the life preservers. I am informed that my remains were subsequently recovered and were "worked" for all there was in them by the life saving crew.

Yachting is a manly and pleasant diversion. Therefore I have bought a farm in the interior of Kansas.—Harvey Smith Tomer in Detroit Free Press.

Is Suited the Deposits.

"Oh, what a precious little money bank," exclaimed a visitor at the Fangles, as she examined Freddy's birthday gift.

"Yes," said Freddy, "and there's precious little money in it too."—Detroit Free Press.

KNEW HIS WIFE.

His Observations by Proxy Through the Knothole of His Back Yard Fence.

He was about five feet tall, had light hair and looked meek. He was making stenuous but unsuccessful efforts to reach a knothole in a high board fence on the outskirts of East New York. A tall man was passing, and the small man glided up to him, plucked him timidly by the coat and said:

"Hate to trouble you, sir, but would you mind doing me a favor?"

"Not at all; would be happy to." The small man took him by the arm and led him over to the fence.

"You see," said he, "I promised my wife I'd be home four hours ago and beat a carpet, and—well, I just want you to stand on that rock, look through that knothole up there, and tell me what is going on inside."

The tall man looked rather surprised but complied, while the other leaned up against the fence to await developments.

"What do you see?" asked the meek man presently.

"Why, I see a woman"—

"Sh! Not so loud! Tall- woman, with auburn hair, red face and wart on her cheek?"

"That's her."

"Beating a carpet, isn't she?"

"Yes."

"Look warm?"

"I should say so."

"Kinder excited, too, isn't she?"

"Well, yes."

"Um—got her skirt up around her knees, and her sleeves rolled up to her shoulders?"

"Exactly."

"Has she got on a black bonnet with a white feather stuck hind side before and tied underneath the chin in a double hard knot?"

"That's just the way she's dressed."

"What's she using, a carpet beater or a broom?"

"A hoe handle."

"Lord! She's worse than I thought."

Just then came from the other side a crack, a rip, and a snort. The fence shook, and the tall man almost tumbled from his post.

"Gee whiz!" said the other, trembling; "but she's got 'em bad this time. Did she smile when she hit that whack, stranger?"

"Smile! She sniggered."

"That's all right. Much obliged to you, sir. That will do. I guess I won't go in yet. Good day, sir."—New York Sun.

Pretty Ways of Serving Fruit.

Tastefulness in preparing and presenting fruit for the table makes it doubly delicious. Muskmelons cut in half and thoroughly chilled on ice before serving are tempting and much used as the first breakfast course on hot mornings. Canteloupes ought not, however, to be kept in a refrigerator with milk and butter, as they give a bad flavor to these latter. In the country a good way is to tuck them away in the grass over night, as the falling dew gives them freshness and crispness for breakfast. Large, fresh, juicy peaches should not be chipped up into little bits, but cut, after peeling, into two or three large, luscious looking pieces. Sprinkle granulated sugar over them and half freeze them in the freezer, which will take about an hour. Just before serving take them from the freezer and sprinkle on a little more sugar, serve in a glass dish.

A very pretty way to serve orange or lemon ice is to mold it in halves of orange peel.

True to Life.

An Italian paper, Il Carlino, recalls a practical joke that appeals to our sympathy as well as to our sense of humor. A painter had been commissioned to paint the image of a saint on the refectory wall of a convent.

The price stipulated was very low, but it was agreed that the painter should have his meals provided at the expense of the convent until the work was finished. But the only food supplied to the poor artist was bread, onions and water.

The day for unveiling the fresco at length arrived. The friars stood around the artist, the curtain was withdrawn. It was no doubt a very fine picture, but the saint had his back turned toward the spectators.

"What does this mean?" shouted the indignant prior.

"Padre, I was compelled to paint the picture as you see it, for the saint could not bear the smell of onions."—Youth's Companion.

A Provoking Woman.

He had married her for her money, and their domestic life was not the most harmonious.

"I was sold when I married you," he said to her one day in a tone of disappointment.

"Possibly," she replied very quietly; "possibly. I wouldn't undertake to say; but if you were, dear, you haven't realized any cash on the sale yet, have you?"

He picked up his hat for answer, and went out where he could take a long breath.—Detroit Free Press.

AN ORDINANCE

Dividing the Borough of North Plainfield into Two Election Districts.

Whereas, The Borough of North Plainfield, as manifested at the last borough election held therein, contains more than 400 legal voters; now, therefore,

The Mayor and Council of the Borough of North Plainfield do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. The borough of North Plainfield is hereby divided into two election districts, to be by known hereafter as the First Election District of the Borough of North Plainfield, and the Second Election District of the Borough of North Plainfield.

SECTION 2. The First Election District shall include all the territory and inhabitants thereof contained in that portion of the borough situate on the northwesterly side of an imaginary line beginning at the centre of Green Brook where the same empties into Green Brook; thence up the centre of Green Brook to the centre of Stone's bridge; thence easterly along the centre of Rockview avenue to the centre of Medford avenue; thence along the centre of Mercer avenue to the centre of Grove street; thence along the centre of Somerset street to the centre of Grove street; thence along the centre of Grove street to the centre of Emily street; thence along the centre of Emily street to the centre of Front street; thence along the centre of Front street to the centre of Race street; thence along the centre of Somerset street to the centre of Race street; thence along the centre of Race street to the centre of Warren street; thence along the centre of Warren street to the centre of Plainfield avenue; thence along the centre of Plainfield avenue to the centre of Manning avenue to the centre of Richmond street; thence along the centre of Richmond street to the centre of Green Brook and thence to end.

SECTION 3. The Second Election District shall include all the territory and inhabitants thereof contained in that portion of the borough, situate on the southeasterly side of the imaginary line aforesaid.

SECTION 4. This ordinance shall take effect on the Eighteenth day of September, A. D. 1891.

Sept. 8, 1891. CHARLES PLACE, Mayor.

SENTENCED IN UNION COUNTY.

Judge McCormick Sends Several Prisoners to State Prison.

The Union County Court of Quarter Sessions at Elizabeth held a session yesterday at which a number of offenders were dealt with. Judge McCormick was on the bench.

John Wartie, the negro who played the role of highwayman in Union Township, where he held up John Meeker, the owner of Meeker's Hotel, and then robbed the house, pleaded guilty and was sentenced to seven years in State Prison.

Hudson Green, a negro, who broke into the house of Mrs. Isaac Phillips, on Maple avenue, Elizabeth, and with a razor slashed half the finger off Charles W. Downes, was sentenced to one year in state Prison.

Joseph O'Brien, pleaded guilty to assaulting Chief of Police Edward B. Kelly, at Summit and was sentenced to two years at Trenton.

Benjamin M. Williams was sentenced to nine months in State Prison.

John Arend, alias "Holland," got five months at the county jail for resisting an officer.

Charles Williams got three months for stealing a coat from Charles Cook of this city.

James Dealing, the eight-year-old boy wrongfully charged by his father with stealing a watch, was discharged, after having deprived of his liberty nearly two weeks.

TALK OF THE TOWN

The season for shooting gray squirrels began Tuesday of this week.

Justice Nash yesterday awarded Mr. A. M. Degen, the hardware dealer, a judgement of $200 against Mr. J. B. Miller.

The Water Supply Company proposes to put seventy-five hydrants in North Plainfield but the borough will be compelled to pay for only four to the mile.

Several of the former members of the defunct Middlesex Gun Club will reorganize a gun club shoot on the outskirts of this city to-morrow afternoon.

James Abos of the Florence mission, New York, will be one of speakers at the young men's meeting at the Y. M. C. A., Sunday at 4.15 p. m. David M. Moore is expected to lead.

There will be a moonlight bicycle run from the Y. M. C. A. rooms to Westfield Saturday evening. Members of the Association and others interested are requested to be on hand at seven p. m. sharp.

Prof. H. Barney, of Asbury Park, the temperance evangelist, will speak at Reform Hall this evening. He is reported to be a rare orator, and the committee say he should be heard by all. Admission free. Everybody welcome.

—Mr. Charles McCarthy of Plainfield avenue desires us to contradict the statement that he was recently married. Mr. McCarthy says that there is a report afloat lately being circulated throughout the city, and he says his friends insist on congratulating him everywhere they see him. He says the report as to his marriage is untrue and without foundation.

WANTED TO KNIFE HIM.

Two Colored Men Quarrel and an Outsider Gets Hurt.

At about half-past five o'clock yesterday afternoon two colored waiters named Peterson and Randolph who were engaged for the day at the City Hotel engaged in a fight. It is alleged that one of the disputants tried to use a large bread knife on the other one and that Mr. Edward Crater, one of the guests of the hotel, while endeavoring to get the knife away from the infuriated colored man, was badly cut on one of his wrists. The police were notified but when they arrived the affair had been settled.

Burglars at Work.

During the afternoon yesterday some sneak thieves effected an entrance into the residences of Mrs. Mooney and Mr. Sebring on Elm place. The occupants of the house were absent from home at the time viewing the parade of the Knights of Pythias. In Mrs. Mooney's house the thieves secured one dollar in money and some valuables. At the residence of Mr. Sebring they were more fortunate as they secured a gold watch and six or eight dollars in money.

Some sneak thief effected an entrance into Mr. E. P. Thorn's saloon on Park avenue some time during last night and stole about thirty five dollars from the cash drawer. Entrance was effected through the rear window of the store.

To Have Electric Lights.

The people of Westfield have been talking for a long time of having the town lighted by electricity. It now looks as if the matter might be accomplished before long. At the last meeting of the Town Committee a five-year exclusive franchise was granted to J. H. Vail to introduce a system of electric light and power, the committee stipulating that Mr. Vail's company should furnish free one street light for every mile of street wire.

Struck by Flying Glass.

Tuesday evening one of the incandescent lamps in the foundry of the Pond Machine Tool Works exploded and a piece of the flying glass struck Mr. Richard McCluskey, an employe, in the eye, near the sight. The wound is very painful. Dr. Doane attended him.

YESTERDAY'S BIG DAY.

THE KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS REVIEWED BY MAYOR GILBERT.

The Winners in the Competitive Drill.—The Fire-Works and the Grand Concert.

As reported in THE NEWS of yesterday the First Regiment, Uniformed Rank, Knights of Pythias held their annual parade and inspection in this city. It is estimated that two thousand men were in line exclusive of the bands and drum corps. As the parade passed the Albion it was reviewed from the piazza by the following city and borough officials: Mayor Gilbert, City Judge W. R. Goddington, Collector John Johnson, Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh, Post Master E. R. Pope, Freeholder A. Vanderbeck, City Treasurer A. Titsworth, Borough officials, Borough Counsel C. A. Reed and Councilmen Schaub, Burke, Sebring, and Powell. At the conclusion of the parade the Uniformed Knights adjourned to the Crescent League ball grounds on Somerset street where they indulged in a competitive drill for prizes. The movements were announced as follows:

General J. Madison Drake of Elizabeth, General Sherman Carrison of Company E., Third Regiment, and Lieutenant Runyon of the Fifth Regiment of Newark were the judges for the drill. They awarded the first prize to Ostygia Division No. 11, of Philipsburg, the second prize to Unity Division No. 3, of Elizabeth and the third prize to Black Prince Division No. 4, of Newark.

In the evening there was a large gathering at the Crescent League ball grounds to witness the grand display of fireworks and to listen to the band concert. The pyrotechnic display was a grand one indeed, and by long odds the finest ever seen in Plainfield. Some of the set pieces were loudly applauded.

The concert by Winckler's Seventh Regiment band was one of the best that has ever been heard in this city, and all who visited the grounds departed, well satisfied with the entertainment furnished by the Knights. The programme of the band concert is as follows:

1. March, "Transition".....Voelker
2. Overture, "Postboy".....Sayer
3. Potpourri, "A Night in Berlin,".....Hartman
4. Selection, "Poor Jonathan,".....Millocker
5. Cavatina, "Dear La Mirandola,".....Gibbs
6. The Dance of the Foblins..Boeker Loraine.

DESCRIPTIVE—Near twelve o'clock midnight, the night birds, owls, etc., are heard, the steeple clock strikes the hour, the goblins assemble at the old church yard, they begin to dance until they are suddenly frightened away by the watchman's pistol, but after a while return to their dance, but before, more particularly a young goblin, the whistle of a passing locomotive on the river near by is heard; when the dance is at its height a second pistol shot scares them all away; the hurried music and weird efforts describes them scattering in all directions.

PART II.

7. Overture, "Robert le Diable".....Balfe
8. Medley, "Ten Minutes With the Minstrels,".....Bowron
9. Selection, "Reilly and the 400,".....Simpson
10. Waltz, "La Barcarolle".....Waldteufel
11. The Darkies Dream.....Lansing
12. A Policeman's Life.....Reeves

Synopsis—Gathering at the station for the assignments. A march movement is heard in the distance, increasing in volume as the men approach. Each one answers "Here" to the roll call and marches away to the Lonely Parrot. Passing along over his beat he hears the Evening Hymn, sung in a happy home; he joins, mattering the tones of "A Policeman's Life." The sounds of a Merry Dance is heard, followed by a Serenade. He hears a signal, which is answered. Inspired by the music of the serenade, he sings, "A Policeman's Lot is not a Happy One." Sounds of the Night. The dogs howl. The cats squall. The latter perform a cat duett, which ends by the discharge of a pistol into the fleeing crowd, which scatters them at once. A Drunken Party make night hideous singing "We Won't Go Home Till Morning," so badly that the long-suffering policeman sounds the alarm. A fight ensues, which results in The Arrest of the Culprits. Duty over. The grand parade follows.

Major-General James R. Carnahan, of Indiana, reviewed the parade and was very much pleased with the appearance of the men in line. Last evening he said he was delighted with Plainfield, which he regarded one of the prettiest cities he had ever visited. During the day Grand Chancellor, the Hon. John Ulrich, was presented with a handsome scarf-pin.

The visiting Knights departed for their various homes at about eleven o'clock last evening by special trains.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

"The News" Greatly Pleases the Knights.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Sept. 17, 1891.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—On behalf of over ten thousand Knights who were represented in the parade yesterday, I desire to thank you for your very manly, kind and impressive article in yesterday's NEWS.

Some our Pennsylvania brethren who were much impressed with it will request to that State this morning with a determination that others shall know of your kindness to a large representative body of men. Very respectfully yours,

JOHN ULRICH.

A BALL HIT HIM IN THE FACE.

Ever Since He Has Had Frequent and Peculiar Spasms.

John Miller, a baker employed by C. K. Compton, is suffering from a strange illness. On Labor Day Miller went to Bryington Beach on an excursion and played ball. A swiftly pitched ball struck him on the side of the face, knocking out a few teeth, but otherwise he seeming not to injure him. A day or two later he was seized with peculiar spasms. The closing of a door or the tone of a voice is sufficient to throw him into violent nervous spasms. His body and limbs twitch violently, his facial muscles seem to be convulsed with pain, and for a minute or two the paroxysm passes away. He does not lose consciousness, but his trouble seems to grow worse.

He was taken in a carriage to his parents' home, in Finderne, yesterday. The best physicians are unable to account for the trouble. It is feared that Miller will not recover.

SOCIAL & PERSONAL

Mr. L. W. Randolph, the prosperous West Front street druggist, has returned, with Mrs. Randolph, from a pleasant outing in Pennsylvania.

At the tea to be given by the Hillside Tennis Club on Saturday afternoon next, Mrs. Samuel Huntington will receive, assisted by Miss Wood, Miss Dumont and Miss Van Boskerck.

A Runaway on North Avenue.

A horse belonging to Mr. Albert Hedden, the liveryman, was frigstened by a band of music on North avenue yesterday afternoon and ran away. The frightened animal succeeded in freeing itself from the wagon to which it was attached and ran upon the sidewalk which was crowded with pedestrians at the time, many of them being women and children. Fortunately no one was injured. The wagon was wrecked.

An Obstinate Prisoner.

Monday evening Policeman Fredrickson arrested William Kenny, a well-known character. The next morning when he was arraigned before City Judge Codington he was charged with being drunk and disorderly. A fine dollar fine was imposed. He paid the fine. As soon as he was released from custody he again began drinking and at noon Tuesday he was again intoxicated. Policeman Fredrickson arrested him after considerable trouble succeeded in locking him up. Yesterday City Judge Codington sentenced him to the county jail for thirty days.

A Runaway on Liberty Street.

Monday a horse attached to a light wagon became frightened on Liberty street and ran away. Two men, who were under the influence of liquor, were seated in the wagon at the time and were thrown out. They escaped serious injury, however. The horse was caught near Front street but not until it succeeded in wrecking the wagon to which it was attached.

Uniformed Express Employes.

An order has been issued by the United States Express Company that on Oct. 1 all employees within the New Jersey Division must wear the prescribed uniform of the Company, the Company to bear the expense of the first outfit.

BOWLING GREEN.

The Championship Badge Changes Hands.

The Middlesex Bowling Green Club had a meeting on the Schepflin Court at Dunellen on Saturday afternoon, when the annual contest for the championship badge came off. There were 16 contestants who were paired off in eight rinks. After the first contest there were four rinks and then two rinks. The four players left were Frederick Weigel, L. A. Powelson, H. B. Willis and Frederick Reichter, the holder of the badge last year.

Frederick Weigel drew Fred. Reichter for an opponent and H. B. Willis drew L. A. Powelson.

Fred. Reichter beat Mr. Weigel and Mr. Willis beat Mr. Powelson. This brought the final contest down to H. Brewster Willis against Frederick Reichter and Mr. Willis won by a score of 21 to 18.

The play began 2:30 p. m., and was not concluded until dark. The championship badge was awarded for the first time years ago, and was first won by Mr. Howard Mac Sherry, and then by Dr. W. E. Lindsell, and last year by Mr. Frederick Reichter. Mr. Reichter turned it over to Mr. Willis as the champion bowling green player of the season of 1891, and Mr. Willis with appropriate remarks received it and pledged himself to defend it against all comers.

Next Saturday there will be a practice game in preparation for the contest for the silver cup presented by Mr. John Adams, which will be played for by all regularly organized clubs in the United States, who enter on or before Oct. 1st. The contest will come off on a date to be fixed in October.

HE LEFT HIS TROUSERS.

A Bicycle Racer who Proposed to Be Comfortable.

Saturday's bicycle road race was highly interesting. Good time was made, although no records were broken. To ride fast, suitably clothing must be of the style of the Summer girl's bathing suit—of which the song says:

"I wear but little here below,
Nor want that little long."

One of the riders, a very popular young man, wore knickerbockers—that is, he wore them when he started. He is of a fellowship turn of mind, however, and after he had covered several miles he found that dust, perspiration and fast bicycle-riding—combined with knickerbockers—were making that leather seat a little less uncomfortable than a pickerel fence. Wherefore, he solid reasoning. Later he got down off that wheel, and removed his trousers then and there on the roadside.

When he remounted a little chill ran over him, but continuing the race warmed him up again, and when, as a result of a small boy, caused by his appearance must have caused a blush. The boy said:

"Gee whittaker! Here's a feller's rode his pants off."

The missing garment was later returned to Captain Martin's by a young man, who sarcastically observed that "there must have been some fast riding done."

THE SOMERVILLE FAIR.

Gov. Abbett and a Number of State Officials Present.

There were 10,000 people at the Somerset County Fair yesterday.

Gov. Abbett was present with Senator Adrian, Col. John T. Van Cleef, Senator Keys and various State officials. They spent the afternoon in the judge's stand watching the races.

The track was in excellent condition and the racing was fine. The Special County Race for a purse of $200, was won by Mr. Ellis, a stock farmer, in three straight heats.

A. M. Quinten's Rachel B. won the 2:27 class race, taking three heats out of five. Fanning Rock second money.

James Berlew's Consolation won the three-year-old race in three straight heats.

Base Ball.

[From the Somerville Messenger.]

For five innings the Crescents' scoreboard showed nothing but round horse-collars, but in the sixth, with Torpey on second, McIndoe drove the leather into centre, and as Carby let it slip through his hands Torpey rounded the rubber. The score remained a tie until the ninth had come and gone for the West Ends. Then it was with McIndoe at the bat. Harkins gave him a ball that the smallest boy on the bleachers could see did not bite the head cover on it. Mac met it squarely; it sailed over the fence for two bases, and the hopes of the West End roosters fell below the zero point. Then Hammil sacrificed. Mac stood 90 feet nearer the rubber and the stillness was oppressive. Holly, whom we always call "Big Stuff" (but will do so no longer), now took the bat. Would it go safe? It did. Hammil started for home.

I closed up the score-book, disgusted for the first time this season. The Plainfield mob rushed over the field, delirious with joy, and the agony was over. Reconcentrated with beating us on our own grounds, the Plainfield men, crazy with delight (and I never appreciated this expression to its fullest extent until then), "must rub it in." They sent a man to Harrison, hired a band, gathered their cohorts around them, and paraded up and down the main street of our little village for hours, stopping in front of the club house and making the night hideous with catcalls and yells of derision. They finally left Somerville, going to their own town, where, if rumor is correct, their backchamber festivities were kept up until a very late hour.

—A "potato walk" is the latest social feature in Southern Virginia. A large, knotty potato is lifted from the floor in a small teaspoon in a given length of time and carried the entire length of the room. It seems quite easy to do, but it is not so, by a long ways, it is said. Prizes are given to successful contestants.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

BASE BALL.

Westfield Defeated by New Brunswick.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Sept. 17, Special.—The New Brunswick and Westfield base ball teams had a highly exciting game on the Rutgers College grounds yesterday afternoon. The Westfield team was ahead in the ninth inning with a score of 4 to 3. With two "outs" Harkins of Somerville, playing on the Brunswick team, made a long hit to right-field, which McManus of Westfield muffed. The New Brunswicks scored two runs thereby, and shortly after made two more, winning the game by 7 to 4. There were many visitors from Westfield and they were greatly chagrined at their nine's defeat.

FRIENDS WHO WERE FOES.

They Have Not Met in a Quarter of a Century.

Gen. Sterling of Plainfield was sent to West Point when a young man, by his father, a dry goods merchant of Pittsburg, Pa. From West Point he went to New Orleans as Lieutenant, serving in the Quartermaster's department. While there he met the gentleman so pleasantly referred to below in an exchange.

After the war was over Mr. Sterling was appointed Cattle Inspector by the late Gen. McClellan, under a special act, with the title of Inspector General or General Inspector. The act was repealed while he was in office, and the office abolished, but his friends have since dubbed him "General." He held at the close of the war a commission as Captain. He is an old resident of Plainfield, is conspicuous in local politics as a Democrat, and is generally well liked.

Unless the fates will it otherwise there will be an interesting meeting next December between United States Senator Edward D. White, of Louisiana, and Gen. Sterling, of Plainfield.

A warm friendship sprang up between these two prominent citizens during the war, but they have not seen each other for twenty-six years.

The story of the strange circumstance and how it came to be interrupted was told to a reporter yesterday by Judge Thomas S. Henry, of Newark.

"My wife and I went to New Orleans last December to attend the carnival," Judge Henry said. "I had letters of introduction to a number of prominent gentlemen, among them Senator Senator White, who had been a Supreme Court Justice in Louisiana. I took quite a liking to the Senator, and we had numerous conversations. One day he was talking of the events of the war, and met and he spoke of the kindness extended to him by one of them during the war. Senator White was in the Confederate Army, and was captured while fighting in the northern part of Alabama. He was sent under guard to the native city, New Orleans, then in charge of the Federal troops commanded by Gen. Ben Butler. At that time he was assigned to a fierce-looking Federal officer. The two chatted a while. Next day the officer sought him out, and finally a warm intimacy sprang up between them. Through the influence of this officer, Senator White, who was then a major, I believe, was allowed many privileges, and ultimately was allowed to spend the greater part of every day with his family. Of course, he was exceedingly grateful for the attentions made in his behalf, and he was sorry for his inability to prove how much he appreciated the disinterested kindness of his Northern friend.

"After the war was over they corresponded for some time, but in changing his residence Senator White lost his friend's address, and, strange as it may seem, he forgot this friend's name. He was puzzled himself to understand this, in view of the circumstances under which they had become acquainted, and because of the fact that the Senator has an unusually good memory for names. So it was, however.

"Senator White was very much grieved over this lapse of memory. He made inquiry everywhere that he could think of, but could not find out, and he gave him a clue to the name of the man who had befriended him at a time when friendship counted for so much.

"He searched the army records, but did not see any name there that would suggest the right one to him. He looked for, and then he concluded that it was hardly likely that he should ever again see or hear from one whose friendship he was anxious to retain.

"Just after his election as United States Senator he was pleasantly surprised to receive a letter of congratulation from Gen. Sterling, dated Plainfield, N. J. In this letter Gen. Sterling reminded him of their meeting in New Orleans and recalled several circumstances connected with that place.

"Senator White wrote a warm reply and told the General how sorry he was for the interruption to their correspondence, and suggested that in December, and when he comes North for that purpose it is his intention to call upon Gen. Sterling to renew the friendship that began amid such stirring surroundings."

I have recommended Dr. David Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" to many in Shelton and Birmingham. I shall say still to find one who has not been benefited by it.—C. L. Seaver, Birmingham, Conn.—Adv.

EDITORIAL NOTES

What W. T. Stead Thinks of Him.

The leader in The Review of Reviews this month is a remarkable paper on Emperor William II of Germany. Stead finds as many characters to compare the little emperor to as there assumed to the lightning change artist on the stage. First, he is "the switchback of Europe," like the railway which is all ups and downs and always rattling and jumping violently about. "The kaiser skips like a kangaroo about the plain."

Next, he is like a brave bull in a bull-fight. As the stings of the matadores wake him up the "good bull" charges hither and thither and makes all scamper out of his way. But the trouble is that nobody knows where he will charge next, consequently the game is much more interesting to the English and Americans than it can be to anybody on the continent of Europe, and only English and Americans can stand back as interested spectators and shout, "Bravo, toro!"

The emperor, again, is a born journalist. While he rails at newspapers, he himself is sure that he has exclusive tips from the Almighty, and he enjoys nothing so much as giving them to the world." Moreover, he is remarkably like the first Napoleon. Here is the same feverish, eternal activity, the same frightful, burning self consciousness, the same jealousy of subordinates. Apparently neither Napoleon nor William have felt so certain of their own overwhelming superiority as to be willing to let anybody else near them alone. Like Napoleon, William perpetually meddles in things and tries to boss everything. Like Napoleon, too, William is "always on the go."

Another remarkable point of resemblance that Stead finds to Napoleon is in the fear and jealousy of intellectual women. The really superior man has none of this jealousy, the small man has it always, and those two rulers share it inordinately. This was the secret of William's bad treatment of his mother. He knew her intellectual superiority and she knew it, therefore in self defense the little emperor "overdid the role of the dominant male." Bismarck was largely responsible for the brutality William formerly exhibited toward his mother. With the first dawn of his intelligence Bismarck instilled into the youth's mind contempt for women, and the notion that their mission was "to fill the cradle and spread the table."

A man who believed an empire could only be "cemented together with blood and iron" would naturally have the military idea of women. They could not be soldiers, hence they were no good. But Mr. Stead tells us there are symptoms that William is getting more sane on the woman question lately since he has been emancipated from the Bismarck string-pulling. He now hates Bismarck so sincerely that he will be apt to repudiate all his teachings.

The greatest good the frisky young man has done is, in the estimation of The Review of Reviews, the waking up he has given to Germany on the subject of education. He has issued a thunderbolt against the one sided cramming of German students, which stuffed them with Greek and Latin and left them without a knowledge of the necessary things of their own day. William also advocates the new education heart and soul.

Stead sums up the ruler as follows:

The emperor has made kingship more vividly palpable before the eyes of the present generation. He may not be able to do it right, but as yet there are no signs of weakening. So far he has, on the whole, done well. He has made no war. He has given a much needed stimulus, and a still more needed direction, to the cause of social reform. He is as yeast in the midst of monarchical Europe. His activity has excited the despair and envy of the Prince of Wales, and his example tells everywhere against idleness and indulgence. As a worker who limits his labors by no sight hours' rule he is unlike no less a statesman, a sovereign who is full of sympathies with the laborer, and a patriot who is yet destined, let us hope, to raise the level of German culture and the sentiment as to women to the English and American levels. On the whole, he is far and away the most remarkable potentate now ruling in the Old World or the New, and his acts and words lend a new interest to the drama of contemporary history.

Yet another method of applying steam as a motive power has been tried which is attracting attention among English engineers. Into a closed chamber full of hot, dry gases steam is suddenly injected at a high pressure and mingled with the gases. The mixture is then suddenly admitted to the cylinder, and its expansion works the engine. It is claimed that this mixture is superior in expansive power to steam alone.

The Omaha World-Herald is moved to remark as follows: "The plan of paying the South Dakota Indians in harrows, hayrakes and plows for lands purchased might be considered in a favorable light if the lands the Indians now hold were susceptible of tillage, but at present it looks like trying to establish agriculture on the top of a brick kiln."

At the great reunion of the Smith family in New Jersey one of the oldest women present summed up her estimate of the difference between the old times and the new in these words, "There were more trees then and folks were honester."

Andrew Carnegie declares that he has no family tree or long line of aristocratic ancestors. Thereupon the Chicago Tribune is moved to suggest mildly that Mr. Carnegie is a child of the American protective tariff.

THAT CRISIS IN CHINA.

Danger to Europeans Increases Every Day.

THE SITUATION A VERY GRAVE ONE

Civil and Military Authorities Are Helplessly Inactive and Fear to Seize the Leaders of the Rioters—Catholic and Protestant Missions Looted and Burned.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 17.—The Ichang riot was planned at Kalashni and executed by disguised Hunan soldiers. Catholic and Protestant missions and the residence property of members of the foreign settlement have been looted and burned. The British consulate, the customs houses and Chinese property inside the city were protected by the populace.

The Authorities Helpless.

The civil and the military authorities are helplessly inactive. They fear to seize the leaders of the outbreak. A detachment of British troops has gone to Ichang on a chartered steamer. The situation is very grave.

China Preparing a Protocol.

China is preparing a protocol to the powers on the recent riots. It is believed the foreign ministers will not wait for this document.

Buried Without Identification.

MADRID, Sept. 17.—The survivors of the great floods say that, though the river was noticed to be rising rapidly, no serious apprehension was felt, consequently the waters seemed to make a rush forward, overwhelming everything. Then came a wild scene of terror, the people dying in all directions. Many climbed upon the roofs of their houses, but the buildings gave way beneath them.

Some idea of the force of the water can be gathered from the fact that the flood bodily lifted from the ground the entire framework of a good sized suburban residence and carried it almost as it was taken up for eight miles.

Twenty-seven bodies have been found in one dwelling house. As a sanitary precaution hundreds of the dead have been buried without waiting for identification.

It Will Defeat William O'Brien.

LONDON, Sept. 17.—An official who revised the voting lists at South Tyrone has refused to consider objections offered in behalf of the Nationalists to the names of 800 Unionists on the lists. This will make it impossible for Mr. William O'Brien to defeat the Unionist, T. W. Russell, who is one of the most active enemies of the Irish national cause.

A Victory for Organized Labor.

BOSTON, Sept. 17.—The first fruits of the Trades Union congress have been gathered in Liverpool, where the city council has resolved that all persons carrying on contracts for town work must pay the wages agreed upon between the trades unions and other employers. This is an important concession to organized labor.

"Lohengrin" in Paris.

PARIS, Sept. 17.—"Lohengrin" was given at the Opera house without serious disturbance last evening. A mob gathered and sang songs, but was dispersed by the police.

Bridal Toilets.

Our cut shows two dresses prepared for a fashionable trousseau. The bridesmaid's dress is in cream nun's veiling, with a trimming of gold tinsel net and sequins, which forms the corselet, shoulder caps and a band around the bottom of the skirt. The hat of white crinoline is ornamented with ostrich feathers, chiffon and white quills.

BRIDE'S AND BRIDESMAID'S DRESSES.

The bride's dress is of rich white duchesse satin, the front of the skirt being trimmed with four deep flounces of old Brussels point lace and a sash, ends of the same all round the train. The bodice is laced down the front and draped with lace and orange blossoms.

A Big Day at Yonkers.

YONKERS, N. Y., Sept. 17.—Yonkers people are making great preparations for the unveiling of their soldiers and sailors' monument next Thursday. Secretary Tracy has ordered that a warship be present.

To Open More Oklahoma Land.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—It is probable that the proclamation opening more than 1,300,000 acres of land in Oklahoma will be issued by the president today.

A Troy Lawyer's Fatal Mistake.

TROY, N. Y., Sept. 17.—Gerald Riordan, a prominent lawyer of Troy, died of this city, last evening drank carbolic acid for wine of cocoa and died in awful agony.

This Date in History—Sept. 17.

1621—Cardinal Robert Bellarmino, famous Italian controversialist, died, born 1542.
1796—Cesimir Perier, French statesman and philosopher, born; died 1868.
1861—Battles of Morristown and Rich Mills, Mo.
1862—Battle of Antietam or Sharpsburg, Md.; Federal loss 12,469; of all kinds; Confederate loss about 10,000.
1864—Battles at Fairfax Station and Belcher's Mills, Va., and Doniphan and Black River, Mo.
1871—The Mont Cenis tunnel formally opened.
1890—Increasing financial flurry; announcement made that all English investments in Argentine Republic are lost; heavy demands for gold to ship to England and Russia; the Rothschilds threaten a collapse unless the Jews in eastern Europe receive better treatment.

BETRAYED BY A WOMAN

Three Train Robbers Caught After a Desperate Struggle.

SAVANNAH, Sept. 17.—Brakeman J. De Laughter and Flagmen J. A. Turner and J. A. Perkins, who held up a train on the Georgia Central road and robbed the southern express near Savannah, have been captured at Madison, Fla., after a desperate fight, in which Detectives Bach and Wetherton, of Savannah, were wounded. Although $30,000 was in the car only $600 was stolen. This was recovered. The men were betrayed by a woman.

Three Robbers Got $2,500.

MUSKOGEE, I. T., Sept. 17.—The Missouri, Kansas and Texas southbound passenger train was held up and the express car robbed at 9:30 p. m. at Lelliaetta. The robbers covered the train officials with their pistols and two of their number ordered the expressman to open the large steel safe, which he was unable to do. They thereupon dumped the small iron chest, which contained $2,500, out of the express car door, and breaking it open took the entire amount. They made no attempt to rob the passengers. The robbers were masks of red flannel. Officers are in pursuit.

SHIELDS SHORT $100,000.

A Sensational Rumor Concerning an Allegheny Man.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 17.—It is rumored that Thomas L. Shields, secretary and treasurer of the Allegheny Heating company, is short $100,000 in his accounts. The heating company claims there is a deficiency in Mr. Shields' accounts, but how much cannot be learned.

Mr. Shields' lawyer says it is only a mistake in Mr. Shields' accounts and will be straightened out. Mr. Shields is an heir to a large fortune and is liable for double the amount mentioned.

Book's Grievance Against Secretary Tracy

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—Lieutenant Commander George Book, of the navy, has filed a petition for a writ of mandamus to compel Secretary Tracy to restore his number on the naval register. Commander Book was sentenced by court martial in 1889 to suspension for two years and to retain his present number on the list of lieutenant commanders. In December, 1889, the president remitted the sentence, but Commander Book is still kept at his old number, junior officers having passed him in the naval list. Commander Book was convicted of absenting himself from duty without leave.

The Gould Brothers on Trial.

BUFFALO, Sept. 17.—The trial of William Gould, of Albany, charged with helping George Whitney to embezzle $70,000 from the Albany City National bank, has begun in the United States district court. Gould is defended by Congressman Daniel Lockwood and William B. Hoyt. The chief witness against Gould is Whitney, who is expected to turn state's evidence. The four Gould brothers will be tried separately.

Judge Swan and the Chinese.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—Acting Secretary Spaulding has directed the collector at Detroit to return to Canada the Chinaman whom United States District Judge Swan decided had come from Canada. The eastern district of Michigan will now become a loophole through which Chinamen from Canada may enter the United States. The decision practically nullifies the Chinese exclusion act.

Veterans Visit Antietam.

GETTYSBURG, Pa., Sept. 17.—The Fourteenth Connecticut and One Hundred and Eighth New York veterans have gone to Shepherdstown to join with One Hundred and Thirtieth Pennsylvania in a brigade reunion on the Antietam battlefield. It is believed there will be the largest gathering of veterans at Antietam since the war.

Slavin Will Fight Sullivan.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—Frank Slavin has written to The Police Gazette under date of Sept. 4 expressing his willingness to meet John L. Sullivan for $25,000 a side. The Police Gazette will back the championship of the world. He says he will toss for choice of battle ground, which will be either America or England.

Sherman's Seventy-eighth Birthday.

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 17.—The committee on toasts for the banquet to be given to Judge Allen G. Thurman on his seventy-eighth birthday, Nov. 13, announce that among the speakers on that occasion will be Governors Russell, of Massachusetts, and Pattison, of Pennsylvania.

Hendricks to Succeed Fassett.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—The Press says: Within twenty-four hours Hon. Francis Hendricks, of Syracuse, will be collector of the port of New York. The Press has positive information that President Harrison has selected him as Collector Fassett's successor.

A Body Found in the Ruins.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—The searchers among the ruins of the Fulton street fire have found the body of a man. It was burned beyond recognition, but is probably the famous one of the Adelmans, either father or son, who were reported missing.

Over Five Hundred Men Are Idle.

HUNTINGDON, Pa., Sept. 17.—At Orbisonia, about a hundred Poles employed in the mines of the Standing Stone Rock Hill Coal and Iron company have struck because of a reduction in wages. Over 500 men are idle.

Crushed by a Rush of Coal.

SHAMOKIN, Pa., Sept. 17.—John Brovey was instantly killed at the Springfield colliery. He was fixing a shot when a rush of coal occurred, completely covering him and also injuring John Soneski, a fellow laborer.

Cal Wood Convicted.

LAKE GEORGE, N. Y., Sept. 17.—Cal Wood has been found guilty of murder in the first degree. He killed Leander Pasco, a constable at Tinurman, Warren county, N. Y., May 11, 1890.

Pensions for September, $8,353,000.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—A treasury draft for $1,100,000 on account of pensions was signed by Secretary Foster yesterday, making the total pension drafts so far this month $6,353,000.

Scourged by Diphtheria.

SHELBYVILLE, Ind., Sept. 17.—Thirty deaths have occurred within the past forty-eight hours, caused by diphtheria, which prevails here in a malignant form.

A Big Railroad Combine Rumored.

MONTREAL, Sept. 17.—It is reported here that the Canadian Pacific, Great Northern and Soo lines will consolidate.

THE STANDARD BEARERS

Flower and Sheehan Nominated by the Democrats.

CHAPIN'S FIGHT FOR FIRST PLACE

Rice for Secretary of State, Campbell for Controller, Rosendale for Attorney General, Danforth for Treasurer and Schenck for Engineer.

SARATOGA, Sept. 17.—The Democratic state convention has adjourned after nominating the following ticket:

For Governor—Roswell P. Flower, of Jefferson.

For Lieutenant Governor—William F. Sheehan, of Erie.

For Secretary of State—Frank Rice, of Ontario.

For Controller—Frank Campbell, of Steuben.

For Attorney General—Simon W. Rosendale, of Albany.

For State Treasurer—Elliott Danforth, of Chenango.

For State Engineer—Martin Schenck, of Rensselaer.

Flower versus Chapin.

Flower was nominated on the first ballot. The total vote cast was 377, of which Flower received 334 and Mayor Alfred C. Chapin, of Brooklyn, 43. Kings county voted solid for Chapin.

John P. Adams, chairman of the Kings county delegation, moved to make the nomination unanimous. Three cheers were given for Kings county. When the convention had quieted down a little, Mr. Adams said that this was the result of the action of the Kings county delegation at a meeting held in the morning. The other candidates were nominated by acclamation, and the convention adjourned after heartily cheering the ticket.

The New State Committee.

The nominees of the new state committeemen and their respective districts follow: 1, Nicholas Muller, Jr.; 2, John Delmar; 3, James A. Hedgeway; 4, Hugh McLaughlin; 5, John Cottier; 6, P. T. Fitzgerald; 7, Thomas T. Grady; 8, E. D. Fitzpatrick; 9, Ridenondalter; 10, W. Burke Cockran; 11, Hugh J. Grant; 12, J. J. Martin; 13, T. F. Gilroy; 14, D. C. Hickey; 15, Charles Barnum; 16, Samuel J. Tilden, Jr.; 17, C. M. Ansley; 18, Edward Murphy, Jr.; 19, D. Cody Herrick; 20, E. D. Cutler; 21, Andrew T. Talmage; 22, Daniel G. Griffin; 23, Samuel J. Bowne; 24, Clinton Beckwith; 25, William S. Kirk; 26, Pat Maloney; 27, Charles F. Dunston; 28, Alex C. Eustis; 29, John F. Flanagan; 30, William H. Tracy; 31, William Hamilton; 32, Gerhart Lang; 33, John M. Wiley; 34, J. W. McMahon.

The Platform.

The following platform was adopted amid thunderous applause:

The Democratic party of the state of New York, in convention assembled, renews the pledges of its fidelity to Democratic faith, and as regards national issues reaffirms the doctrine of the national platforms of 1884 and 1888, indorsed by the popular votes in those years and so conclusively ratified by the popular verdict in the congressional elections of 1890.

We now, as then, steadfastly adhere to principles of sound finance. We are against the coinage of any dollar which is not of the intrinsic value of every dollar of the United States.

We therefore denounce the new Sherman silver law, under which one-tenth of our gold stock has been exported and all our silver output is dammed up at home, as a false pretense that artful hindrance of return to free bimetallic coinage and as the most flagrant prodigal and reckless waste of the public moneys.

We denounce the new Sherman silver law, under which one-tenth of our gold stock has been exported and all our silver output is dammed up at home, as a false pretense that artful hindrance of return to free bimetallic coinage and as the most flagrant prodigal and reckless waste of the public moneys to provide a change from one kind of metal to another.

The Sherman Law Denounced.

We therefore denounce the wholesale of honest money every where in stigmatizing the Sherman progressive silver basis law as no solution of the gold and silver question, as a mere bid for popular favor to the subsidy and bounty swindle, the McKinley worse than war tariff, the Blaine reciprocity fraud, the Force election law, the advancing deficit, the defective census, the failed representation and the revolutionary protest of the billion dollar congress, all justly condemned by the people's great uprising last November, a verdict which renewed next year, will empower Democratic statesmen to give the people's councils and to execute the people's will.

We congratulate the people of the state upon the beneficent results which followed the election of a Democratic assembly last autumn. That victory secured the election of a Democrat to the United States senate, a representative in the following congress by a popular majority on great questions of federal policy. It gave the state the lowest tax rate of thirty-six years and for the first time in a generation freedom from taxation for the general purposes of government. It gave New York city the means of securing rapid transit, a boon which Republican legislatures had for years denied. It gave the people the shortest legislative session in seventeen years, a tribute to the faithful industry of the Democratic assembly, by whom this result was achieved in the interest of economy and good legislation.

Pledges Redeemed.

Our pledges to the people contained in the Democratic state platform of 1890 were promptly redeemed by the Democratic assembly in the passage of the following measures:

1. A bill to protect the residents of the state, preparatory to a reapportionment of senate and assembly districts.

2. A bill to redistrict the congress districts in pursuance of the federal statute and upon the basis of the new federal census.

3. A bill to provide for a constitutional convention in accordance with the wish of the people as declared by a large majority at the polls in 1890.

4. A bill to revise and consolidate the excise laws in such manner as to secure equitably framed, carefully regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors, prescribing just fees for licenses and providing all needful restrictions for the maintenance of order and the good of society.

5. Several bills to ameliorate the condition of the industrial labor and to lessen the burden of direct taxation.

The Apportionment Question.

All those measures passed by the Democratic assembly in obedience to the demand of the popular majority were defeated in the Republican senate by the representatives of the minority of the people. Thus has the Republican party continued to betray the people's interest. It defied the will of the people when a representation in the legislature to 1,310,000 new inhabitants of the state by refusing to pass an enumeration bill—the preliminary step to the abolition of the present antiquated apportionment of the senate and assembly districts, which is based upon the census of 1865 years ago. It not only conspired with the federal census bureau to defeat for the state of an additional representative in congress, but by illegal and forged by a fraudulent count of the inhabitants of New York city, it refuses to comply with the command of its own federal congress to rearrange the thirty four congress districts of the state so that each district shall be nearly as practicable an equal number of inhabitants.

It ignores the emphatic declaration of the people, who, by a majority of 328,000 votes, recorded themselves in favor of a constitutional convention.

Concerning Prohibition.

It insists upon a passage of sumptuary laws which needlessly interfere with the personal liberty of law abiding citizens. Inhabitants the hypocrisy of its professions by twice recording itself in the legislature in favor of a prohibition amendment, and then refusing to make provision for its submission to the people, except at a special election not desired by the people, involving an unnecessary expense of over $800,000 to the taxpayers. It refuses to ameliorate the condition of wage earners by enacting just and conservative laws in their interest. It shows its disinterestedness to the moneyed influences by ignoring the demands of the agricultural and working classes for reforms in methods of taxation. It covertly extends its influence to the restriction of manhood suffrage. It indicates its hostility to home rule by its efforts at meddlesome interference with the affairs of large cities.

It encourages expensive legislative investigating committees, whose investigations degenerate into strikes for political patronage upon the official authorities of Democratic municipalities.

The World's Fair.

It inflicted a hostile blow on the best welfare of the state, by depriving New York of the World's Fair, because the Republican leaders could not control its board of directors. By that act New York was deprived of the benefit of the accommodation and expenditure of millions of dollars within its borders. By that act the interests of every wage earner, every merchant, every factory, every manufacturer, every householder, every railroad and transportation company were cruelly sacrificed. The people will not forget that the most conspicuous agent in this partisan crime is now the candidate of his party for governor. Against that record of machination and betrayal the Democratic party most earnestly protests.

To Revise Excise Laws.

We affirm the principles and pledges contained in our state platforms of 1889 and preceding years. We oppose needless special legislation. We favor home rule for counties and municipalities.

We believe in low taxes and in economical administration. We demand a revision of the various statutes regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors and the enactment of a just, equitable and comprehensive excise law framed in accordance with existing public sentiment as repeatedly manifested. We believe that all taxes, including those for municipal and local purposes, belong to the treasuries of the localities under whose authority licenses are issued, to be applied for the benefit of such local taxation.

We are opposed to all sumptuary legislation that needlessly interferes with the personal liberty or reasonable customs of the people. We favor the laws which secure the fullest social ease consistent with the public welfare. We demand an extension of electoral reform, with a view of securing to the people unpurchased elections, money by candidates and political committees; but we resolutely oppose any effort to hamper or restrict the constitutional privileges of manhood suffrage.

Electoral Reform.

And we congratulate the people of the state that the persistent efforts of a Democratic governor, sustained by Democrats in the legislature, in defense of this principle there at last, at last, wrung from a Republican legislature by force of public sentiment a genuine electoral reform law which secures to every elector a secret ballot, which prevents intimidation and corruption, which reserves for men the right to vote in their own time, which enables the voter without loss of pay for time consumed, which largely diminishes the opportunities for fraud, and is a good money all around, which prescribes a careful system of registration of electors, which imposes penalties for corrupt practices in elections, and which preserves inviolable to every citizen, however humble or unlettered he may be, the right to cast his ballot for whomsoever he may choose for any office within the gift of the people.

The Preservation of the Canals.

We favor the revision of the tax laws whereby personal and corporate property shall be made to bear its full and just burdens.

We favor a businesslike and honest Democratic assembly, and had for its object the further restriction of convict labor competition. We favor the legislation forbidding the export or sale from the state of the World's Columbian exposition, to be held in Chicago in 1893, and we specially commend the measure to secure that object which was passed by the Democratic assembly last spring but which a Republican senate, in accordance with custom, defeated after its successful efforts to locate the fair in Chicago, refused to enact. This country has always been the refuge of the oppressed from every land, exiles for conscience sake, and in the spirit of the founders of our government, we condemn the oppression and persecution practiced by the Russian government upon its Jewish citizens, and call upon every government in the interests of justice and humanity, by all just and proper means, to use its strongest and best efforts to bring about a cessation of those cruel persecutions or the dominions of the czar and insure to the oppressed equal rights.

Governor Hill Eulogized.

We heartily indorse the able and statesman like administration of Governor Hill during his seven years as chief executive of the state. He has resolutely maintained the principles of the Democratic party. He has faithfully conducted for the interests of the people. He has ably resisted the aggressions of the successive legislatures. He has given the state a safe, honest and capable. It is a ticket that will gain strength every hour until election day, while the Republican ticket grows steadily weaker."

Fassett Fires the First Gun.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—The first gun of the campaign in this state was fired last night by Fassett, Republican, at the Union League clubhouse in Brooklyn. He spoke to 15,000 people. Mr. Fassett was heartily cheered. He said:

I bring a message of greeting and congratulation from Erie county. Everything is assured there. The Democratic convention in Saratoga has done its work and we are sure to win. Erie county has said, "No man from Kings county need apply." The Republican party put its arms around a man from Kings county and the party is going to carry him to victory. The convention at Saratoga said further that no old fashioned Democrat need apply.

There is no room for the County Democracy here, and the Democracy knows it. There is only room for Tammany Hall. Tammany Hall must get its seal of approval upon everything done by that organization, large or small, or Croker, Murphy, Sheehan—these three, the triumvirate—will not be tolerated. It was a triumvirate that killed Jacob Sloat Fassett, and we intend it rule us. Kings county, just across the river, is a perpetual menace to Tammany Hall, and I say to you that we will never submit to it.

In regard to the World's fair project Mr. Fassett said:

It was Tammany Hall that defeated this proposition. They were not willing that a non-partisan fair should be held in our metropolis. Their representatives in congress—acting through my friend Speaker Crisp—did what they could to bring the fair to New York, but their efforts were defeated because Tammany Hall was altogether too busy in Albany and New York city to attend to Washington.

Rev. Spurgeon Has a Relapse.

LONDON, Sept. 17.—The Rev. Mr. Spurgeon, who had been progressing favorably, is again in a precarious condition.

BAY STATE MEN ARE FOR BLAINE

Allen and Halle Nominated for Governor and Lieutenant Governor by the Republicans of Massachusetts—Hearty Cheers for Harrison, Blaine and Lodge.

GREENSBURG, Pa., Sept. 17.—About two hundred delegates attended the first session of the State People's party in this city Wednesday afternoon. No ticket was nominated but a platform was adopted F. H. Agnew presided. A resolution was carried recommending every citizen to vote as he pleased on the constitutional convention question.

The Platform.

The platform adopted recommends the abolition of national banks as banks of issue and the substitution of greenbacks for national bank notes; condemns alien ownership of land and land holding by railroad companies in excess of that necessary to their traffic; demands free and unlimited silver coinage; equal taxation a graduated income tax; government control and if necessary ownership of railroads and a direct vote of the people for president, vice president and United States senators. It also recommends that the government loan money at 2 per cent. on real estate and non-perishable products.

It was decided to organize a state committee and issue an address. It is said that an attempt was made to capture the convention for the Tilden Democratic nominee for state treasurer, but it fell through. Among the well known men present were State Lecturer Butler, of Philadelphia, and Editor Tucker, of Erie.

Allen Nominated at Boston.

BOSTON, Sept. 17.—Charles Herbert Allen, of Lowell, is the Republican candidate for governor of Massachusetts. He was nominated on the first ballot, receiving 781 votes to 511 cast for W. W. Crapo, of New Bedford. It was an enthusiastic convention.

The Complete Ticket.

The ticket in full is as follows:

For Governor—Charles H. Allen.

For Lieutenant Governor—William H. Haile.

For Secretary of State—William M Olin.

For Treasurer—George A. Marden.

For Attorney General—Albert E. Pillsbury.

For Auditor—John W. Kimball.

An Ovation for Lodge.

The convention met in Tremont Temple and Henry Cabot Lodge was made permanent chairman. When he advanced to the front of the platform to deliver his address he was tendered an ovation. The huge temple resounded with cheer after cheer from 1,300 throats. His mention of Harrison was the occasion of more cheers, but it was not till the name of Blaine fell from his lips that the convention really let itself out. Then even the greeting to Mr. Lodge himself was eclipsed, and for fully eight minutes the din was deafening. It was clearly a Blaine convention from the platform to the doors.

The Platform.

Then the committee on resolutions submitted the platform. It began by recommending the administration of Harrison and congratulating the Republican party upon the extension of civil service reform. Equal rights and the purity of the ballot are to be maintained, and the unlimited coinage of silver is to be restricted. The Democrats party is abused for the alleged attempt to defeat free coinage in the platforms of Ohio and other states. The fidelity of the party to the principle of protection is affirmed.

The country is congratulated upon having the success said to have followed the tariff legislation of the last congress, and the removal of the duties on sugar is spoken of as a gricious boon. The idea of reciprocity is regarded as the natural outcome of the protective principle. The course of the administration of extravagance in the distribution of pensions is resented. The restriction of immigration is recommended, and the platform also favors legislation for the suppression of the evils following the traffic in liquors. It is urged that the commonwealth of Massachusetts advance the interests of the working classes and encourage education.

Their Choice for President.

As a result of the inquiries by the Boston Globe among the delegates to the Republican state convention as to their preference for president in 1892, 491 answers were received, as follows: Blaine, 372; Harrison, 47; Alger, 4; ex-Speaker McKinley, 3; Major McKinley, 2; Lodge, 1; Fassett, 1. For second choice: Harrison, 9; Blaine, 83; McKinley, 30; Alger, 13; Long, 13, while 289 had no second choice.

They Ignored Mahone.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—The members of a committee appointed at a conference of Virginia Republicans here have given out a call for a Republican state convention to be held at Roanoke, Va., on Oct. 1. The document is the General Mahone's championship of the Republican state committee, and refers to him as being responsible for an act of political treason in advising Virginia republicans to support the candidate of another party.

Lieutenant Governor Jones Silent.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Sept. 17.—Lieutenant Governor Jones was asked what stand he should take, following the nomination of Heswell D. Flower for governor. He declined to talk, but added that, at the proper time, he should have something to say. Many believe that he will try to defeat Flower.

To Discuss Constitutional Reform.

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 17.—The first dinner of the State Democratic club for the season of 1891-2 will be attended in this city on the evening of Tuesday, Sept. 22. It is expected that the cause of constitutional reform will be given a vigorous push on that occasion.

Chairman Macune Denounced.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 17.—At the Farmers and Laborers convention the resolutions approving the Fort Worth platform and denouncing Chairman Macune, of the National Alliance, were carried.

McCreary For City Treasurer.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 17.—The Republican County convention nominated George D. McCreary for city treasurer and William G. Shields for register of wills.

A Reception to General Grubb.

JERSEY CITY, Sept. 17.—The Union League club, of Jersey City, will tender General E. Burd Grubb a reception Oct. 5.

Quite Delicate.

Mrs. Gabb (hostess)—Your little son does not appear to have much appetite.

Mrs. Gadd—No; he's quite delicate.

Mrs. Gabb—Can't you think of anything you would like, my little man?

Little Man—No, 'm. You see, mom made me eat a hull lot before we started, so I wouldn't make a pig of myself.—Good News.

Papers Sued for Alleged Rebates.

HARRISBURG, Sept. 17.—The attorney general has brought suits against the Philadelphia Press, Inquirer, News, German Democrat, North American and Evening Bulletin to recover the sums of money alleged to have been paid as rebates to the persons who procured for them advertisements of the mercantile appraisers' lists.

Slingluff Under Arrest.

MORRISTOWN, Pa., Sept. 17.—W. F. Slingluff has been arrested on a warrant sworn out by Albert Longaker, a director of the Montgomery Trust company, charging him with altering the books of that company and appropriating $180,000 of its funds to his own use. Slingluff was released in $10,000 for court.

To Assist Foreign Exhibitors.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—Secretary Foster, as a conference with foreign representatives concerning World's fair matters, assured the foreigners that every effort would be made facilitate the passage of goods for exhibit through the customs houses.

Married a Waterbury Belle.

WATERBURY, Conn., Sept. 17.—Colonel John B. Doherty, commander of the Second regiment of the Connecticut National Guard, and postmaster of Waterbury, was married last night to Miss Catharine Sedgwick Brown, a Waterbury belle.

Almy Indicted for Murder.

WOODSVILLE, N. H., Sept. 17.—The special grand jury in the case of George H. Abbott, alias Frank C. Almy, brought in an indictment charging him with the murder of Miss Christie Warden, of Hanover.

Messrs. Carney Bros. have sharpened and repaired our lawn mowers for our entire satisfaction. WM. MCCANN, Head gardener for J. T. Johnson.

My experience has shown that Messrs. Carney Bros. are thoroughly reliable in sharpening and repairing lawn mowers. ERNEST LOUIS CONRAD, Head gardener for Mayor Cooley.

There is no need to send your mower to any factory while Carney Bros. do the repairing. They understand the mower. THOMAS CLARK, Landscape gardener

They made as good a job of our mower as any one could with PATRICK KELLY, Head gardener for Mr. Lawrence Myers.

The above are but a few of the pleasant words we get for our efforts to please our friends who have entrusted their mowers to our care, and it shall be our endeavor to send each and every mower home as near right and perfect as can be. Believing we can satisfy the most particular owner of a lawn, as far as sharpening and repairing goes, we remain the public's obedient servants.

SWEEPING A ROOM.

A Careful Housekeeper Should Proceed with Skill and Patience.

Every housekeeper knows that there is a certain art in sweeping a room which requires skill and patience. All the difference between a refined, dainty kept parlor and a lounging room slighted with dust and disorder lies in the proper doing of this simple work. The great mistake which the novice in sweeping makes is to take long heavy strokes. These are manifestly labor-savers and are the subject of sweeping is not to wear off the carpet but to brush the dust out of the carpet. Short, light, even strokes do the work as it should be done. In addition carpet always best to sweep it often with the grain and then again across it, going over each two or three yards of the carpet in this way till it is all swept.

Where there is a fireplace it is well to sweep up and if necessary the dust in one pile. Where the carpet is old and worn even it is not quite as necessary to sweep it in both directions, but where it is new and there are perceptible ridges in the weaving, it is best that it should be done as is always necessary. A Brussels or ingrain carpet should always be swept in this way.

There are many ways to dispose with the dust after it has been swept up. Some use brooms and dusting cloths for sweeping. Before beginning to sweep a room, places should be covered where articles liable should be placed with an old sheet. All small pieces of bric-a-brac and other articles should be taken from the room. Large pieces of furniture like sofas, bureaus and bookcases, should be carefully and closely covered with dusting sheets.

The windows should be opened and the blinds dusted but if the windows are to be washed it should be done after the sweeping, where the latter is practicable. After the first sweeping, a room should be left for five or ten minutes, for the dust to settle, when the paint and walls must be dusted down with long feather brushes provided for the purpose. The pictures should be thoroughly dusted with soft dry cloths. Brushing around the edges of the carpet with a whisk broom is a regular part of the sweeping and should not be omitted. After going over a room thoroughly and allowing the dust to settle, it is always necessary to brush it over again, and it is best to do this with a damp broom, so as to collect all the dust.

Wiping with a dampish cloth will only dry as powder from water in which two tablespoons of ammonia has been put to a gallon will bright colors and make the carpet look fresh and new. Before putting the furniture back into the room, all finger marks and soiled spots on the paint or woodwork should be wiped off. If there is a fireplace the hearth should be washed up and the iron work rubbed off with a rag dampened slightly with kerosene oil. If there is brass work it should be carefully polished. The dusting sheets may now be removed and the furniture put back in place, dusted and fresh.

Such a sweeping as this is a part of the regular housework every week in a house where there are carpets, and every room in the house should be swept as thoroughly as this. While upon this subject it is well to suggest that housekeepers who are buying heavy pieces of furniture, not easily moved, should purchase only such pieces as are lifted up on legs, leaving a clear space for the broom to pass under and collect the dust.—New York Tribune

How to Manage a Husband.

The amount of advice given to women as to the better methods of retaining their husband's love is simply appalling in its extreme. The fact that much of this is written by those spinsters who have never themselves ratified their experience as a guide may have made many a fatal if inadvertent error. However, I heard a chat between two clever little women the other day upon which, I have been pondering ever since.

"Yes," said Mrs. A., "I am awfully fond of my husband and he is a splendid fellow but do you know he has sometimes acquired the habit of smoking? He has little actions which he feels me in the most elaborate fashion? Why at first I felt dreadfully over it and was at a loss, but little jokes of tears, and fancied myself one of the most deeply injured of women. Did I chide him or reproach him, or did I tell him that I should never more have faith in him? Not I.

"I just sat down and gave my head thought to the matter and decided that it was not worth while to sacrifice so much happiness. That for me, I would be gone and he so deeply humiliated as to no longer strive for my love or admiration. Of course I was not going to allow such a matter as woman must needs have a princely amount of money to be an article of use. No, this, fortunately for me, perhaps, my husband has not power to do. So I went home late with a most interesting account of the supper which he gave to one of the boys, as he said he thought he would like to take it from me. He didn't want I should begin and spared no pains to prepare it.

"When he has forgotten him and the supper is really gone, I am glad, and always away. I have so far succeeded in persuading myself that I fail to remember that it is the second compliment paid to the departed friend, and though I feel a little bit sore you may be sure that I put it most safely factory conditioned in the case. Not that it thrown on the cold ashes of the fire, but I have also found that the social rules of courtesy also. But that is a woman must always have some impishly in what her husband has for himself that if she cannot believe in it herself, herself that she shall assume that faith, and then shall she secure her own comfort and that of her husband by the same flattery thus implied.—Chicago Herald.

Women and Exercise.

The best for ever of the kind sports of all kinds displayed by our girls, and of the large number of women who are turning their thoughts to physical culture as a means of livelihood, call to mind the comments of the same made by a well known writer the other day. "No one," said he, can prize more than the present writer the luminous advance made in athletic performances within a quarter of a century, but it has its drawbacks. A great deal of our present is still nervous where it should be masculine.

"It is hard to avoid noticing in our amateur athletic exhibitions, especially among women, that scope of the best performers even the teachers themselves, have a look which is the reverse of solid.

"There is very often a strained, worn aspect as of excessive nervous tension, so that the better the instructor swings the clubs or gyrates on the parallel bars the more suggestion is given of a possible nervous prostration waiting not far off.

"Indeed it happens not very seldom that the woman who becomes a teacher of physiology has herself begun by breaking down, so that though she has brought her self back to what she calls health she never again attains to the standard of the Johnson provided the line 'Who rules o'er freemen should himself be free,' by making it read, 'Who drives fat oxen should himself be fat.'

"If we stimulated that every woman who teaches people to be well should also be well, and look well herself, we should be carrying the same demand a step farther.

"It must always be held in view, and the writer speaks from some experience, that to attain anything like a high muscular training of a young woman is a problem incomparably more difficult than the same thing for men. The slight excess of fatigue for which a healthy boy atones with a few days' rest or comfortable sleep sometimes cost years of impaired health to an apparently healthy girl. This makes the science of health for women more important, of course, but also more difficult."—New York Post.

The Girl at a Boys' College.

The girl who goes to the university of Michigan today, just as when I entered there in 1872, finds her coeducational place in one of the quiet homes of the pleasant little city, whose interest centers in the 2,300 students scattered within its borders. She takes the regular arrangements for her mother's fuel and its storage, she finds her washerwoman or her laundry, she arranges her own hours of exercise, of study and of sleep, she chooses her own society clubs and church. The advice she gets comes from another girl student of superior dignity who chances to be in the town, or possibly from a still more advanced young woman whom she met on the journey, or at one in church on her first Sunday.

Strong is the comradeship among these students girls, who nurse one another in illness, almost one another in health and rejoice one another in study only less eagerly than they all rival the boys. In my time in college the little group of girls, suddenly introduced into the army of young men, felt that the fate of our sex hung upon proving that "Lady Greek" involved the accents, and that women's minds were particularly absorptive of the Latin grammar. And we were right. In those sections where, with growing experience, the practices about coeducation have been adapted to health and beauty in relationship and honest rivalry between young men and women exists. It is a stimulating atmosphere and develops in good sturdy sense, and undisputed balance which test in after life.—Mrs. Alice Freeman Palmer in Forum.

The Care of Sprains.

Severe sprains require elevation of the limb, support to the joint and a local bath, as hot as can be borne, to be repeated every three hours after rest. In bath the joint should be wrapped generously in cotton batting, over which should be applied a tight flannel bandage of a loose rubber bandage.

After the third day, the stage of active hyperemia or excess of blood having passed, massage may be used on the parts, and when the swelling has somewhat subsided a starch bandage may be applied.

The splint should include the entire foot except the toes, and extend one half or two-thirds up the leg, and when hardened should be cut open down the front and thus made removable. The hot bath should be repeated several times a day, from ten to twenty minutes at a time, the limb being dried and then well massaged during the intervals.

Precaution should be used in working the foot not to turn it in, otherwise the external lateral ligament fibers which were torn and stretched—now undergoing repair slowly because of their low vitality or meager blood supply—may be reform, the tender parts bruised, pain caused and repair delayed.—Youth's Companion.

When Bathing Should Begin.

Bathing should be begun from the day of birth. Let no foolish old wife's stories cause you to omit it. A young infant is apt to cry at first, but this is a good exercise as he can have at the time always provided it is not a severe screaming. Bathing is a necessity to perfect health in the development of muscle. The fact that certain children, like swine, seem to thrive in neglect and dirt is only a proof of the vigor of their physical nature, which will in time, if apparent health suffer such an whole one surroundings. Such children often develop afterward scrofulous sweatings.

It has been repeatedly proved in tenement districts of large cities that only a comparatively few of the children, and those the more vigorous, survive the squalor and dirt survive. When a child is restless at night a warm bath—about 90 degs in the right temperature—with a cup of rock salt dissolved in it is wonderfully soothing. Only a pure soap should be used. A little fine starch is the best baby powder. It is hardly safe to use any other powder about a young child.—Hall's Journal of Health.

The Eyesight of Children.

When quite young children often show a disposition to hold objects very close to their eyes, others have a slight tendency to squint. This is usually found that there is an inequality in the eyes. If attended to in time this can be remedied by wearing specially prepared spectacles for a given time, but if neglected serious evil is to be apprehended, nothing remains but a surgical operation. Parents cannot be too careful about this matter, during school days the sight of one eye on account of the ignorance and negligence of the parents.

When a child first enters school its eyesight should be thoroughly tested by means of certain simple tests in the hands of the teacher, so that it can be ascertained beyond the possibility of a doubt whether there be any defects. And every child should bear the necessary strain arising from close application to study. Nothing is of so much importance to a child as its eyesight. If the eyesight progresses as it should at school unless the eyes are in a normal condition.—Philadelphia Star.

A Professor of Physiognomy.

Professor Oppenheim is a short, genial looking young woman, with a fair complexion very red cheeks, a large mouth showing fine white teeth and has a good clear gray eye. She wears a rotten gown of black silk over her walking costume, and rejoices in her fair hair rests the academic mortar board.

At her lectures she explains the indications which the hand, the eyes, the nose and mouth reveal. She carefully trained mind. Subjects are invited to come upon the platform, and she reads from their heads and faces as from a printed chart just what sort of persons they are. She informs the persons beforehand that she will not hear harshly on any too disagreeable traits of which they may be so unlucky as to be the possessors.

One very good test of her powers in this respect is to have a person whom one knows intimately well, but whom Professor Oppenheim has never seen before in her life, subjected to her analytical scrutiny.—London Cor. New York World.

Something Worth Remembering.

Here's a new idea which is worth a little reflection:

If in the putting up of decorations you see to it that lines from the tops of the different objects with which we are to decorate a mantel form angles pointing downward, then the effect produced will be cheerful. If the points of the article point upward the effect will be opposite. Straight lines as well as curved lines produce the effect of solidity, durability and support.

This is a constructive axiom, accepted from the earliest ages. On this principle are mantelpieces, doors and mantels built in straight and curved lines. But it would be manifestly wrong to furnish a mantel with ornaments whose tops or projections would give a downward or straight effect, unless you desire such a room to be stiff and prim.—New York World.

Velvet Lining for Medicine.

Many people avoid taking medicine when they need it on account of the disagreeable taste. A medical friend informed me the other day that the taste of the worst medicine treatment was nonsensical. A little extract of licorice destroys the taste of aloes, peppermint will disguise the nauseous taste of salts, milk and a good admixture of the bitter flavor of Peruvian bark, and cloves that of senna. Castor oil cannot be tasted if beaten and thoroughly mixed with the white of an egg.

Another method, he said, of covering the nauseous taste of castor oil or oil is to put a tablespoonful of strained orange juice in a wineglass, pour the oil into the center of the juice, and then squeeze a few drops of the juice upon the oil and upon the edge of the glass.—New York Telegram.

A Floral Barometer.

A small bouquet of artificial flowers is made of white tissue paper—a bunch of asters, for instance. When finished they are dipped in a solution of the following ingredients: One grain of chloride of cobalt, one-half grain of common salt, one-quarter grain of gum arabic, one eighth grain of cobalt chloride and three ounces of water. Proportions can be increased according to the quantity desired to be used. The flowers of this floral barometer become red in dry weather and white when it is damp. In dry weather they assume a violet tint, and in protracted spells of drought they show a beautiful deep blue. In localities where great dryness prevails the solution mentioned above must be mixed with a few drops of glycerin.—New York Recorder.

Care of an Oil Stove.

The prevention of the disagreeable smell in an oil stove is to use good oil and to keep the stove absolutely and perfectly clean. Every day the fires over the burners must be thoroughly cleaned. Rub the fine ashes of old soft cotton cloth tied around a stick answer for this purpose better than any brush. The oil reservoir must on no account be filled to the top of the oil supply out and causes a smell. Once a week it is well to wash every gettable part with hot water and soda. This thoroughly takes off any oily soot which may have accumulated and which is the chief cause of smell. —St. Paul Pioneer Press.

The Skill of Women in the U. S. Treasury.

The most skillful persons to identify the notes and bonds which were defaced and charred in the great Chicago fire were women. There was one mass of charred paper from the Chicago fire amounting to $165,000, consisting of legal tenders, national bank and fractional notes, bonds and coupons. They were so charred that they would crumble at the touch. This black mass was given to six ladies for identification, and in the course of time they accomplished their task. Other like amounts from that city were in like manner successfully identified.—Washington Cor. Boston Journal.

A Girl's Surprising Feat.

A young girl in France, Mlle. Diendonne, accomplished a wonderful musical feat, the transposition of Guirand's "Allegro de Concert," which she read at sight in a couple of days ago. M. Cesar Franck, who was the first to achieve this difficult task, received great honor for the then considered almost superhuman power. It has since been repeatedly repeated and is most irrefutable evidence of the solid education given to the girls of Paris.—Exchange.

An egg cooks just under the boiling point, and if a custard boils it is liable to curdle. To tell when it is cooked sufficiently dip a spoon into the hot custard, and if a coating remains upon the spoon the custard should be taken from the fire at once. But if the spoon comes out clean, let the custard cook a minute more, then test it again.

If a wick does not move easily in the holder, draw out one or two threads from the side. The wick should be as large as the holder will receive. Do not cut it after the first trimming to make it even, but pinch off the burned portion every day with a circle. The best wicks are woven soft and loose.

The fashion of using a canton flannel cloth under the linen tablecloth is a very desirable one. It prevents noise when dishes are set down, saves much wear on the linen cloths, making them last longer, and gives body to an old or thin cloth.

Contrary to the opinion of some physicians, one doctor has found out that gaslight is not injurious in a sickroom, if placed out of a draft and shaded. "Tallow candles," he says, "emit too strong an odor, and must not be used."

If a tablespoonful of kerosene is put into four quarts of tepid water, and this is used in washing windows, they will be more lustrous if pure water, there will remain upon the cleansed surface a polish no amount of mere friction can give.

An exquisite chocolate set of cream china has the tall cups with dark brown handles mounted in gold. Saucers, the high tankard with brown handle and spout has trailing sprays of the same flowers.

Richard Wagner's widow, the daughter of Liszt, is a tall, fine looking old lady. Her features are those of Liszt, softened to a feminine mold, and her face is rather striking than handsome.

When you have spilled anything on the stove or milk has boiled over and a suffocating smoke arises, sprinkle the spot with salt and it will disappear immediately.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF.

The treasury department announces that it can now supply the demand for dimes which has been so great for several months.

The residence of Mr. Krevel, United States consul at St. Pierre, Martinique, was destroyed by fire and nearly all of the furniture pretty well used up by the recent hurricane. Nine-tenths of the buildings in St. Pierre suffered a like fate.

Charles Woodbury died in Salem, Mass., of hydrophobia. He was bitten by a dog about six weeks ago.

The academic year at Brown university has begun. The number of students is in the vicinity of 400.

France and Italy have recommended the new Chilian government.

Testimonial.

I have used Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy for constipation and acknowledge it is worthy of all that can be said of it in the orders of that kind.—Nellie A. McQuade, 250 Main street, Amsterdam, N. Y.—Adv.

EFORE the waits was over
They sought a moment's brief respite
Out of the wind and where the light
Was soft and mellow

And while he set and spoke to her,
She showed such lovely, rearly teeth,
He raised his voice in tones much louder,
You surely must use the ROYAL TOOTH POWDER!"

The truth she acknowledged, then quietly told
The exact place in Plainfield where the Powder was sold.
To Allen's, on Front street, you now must repair,
Then this secret of beauty you'll surely find there.

"ORIGIN OF WRITING"

AS GRAPHICALLY PORTRAYED BY PROF. FREDERICK STARR

In Assembly Hall to a Large Audience Last Night.—Pictures, Symbols, Syllables and Letters.

Prof. Starr lectured last evening in the High school Assembly room on "The Origin of Writing," and had a large and highly appreciative audience. He is connected with the museum of Natural History of New York.

He illustrated his remarks on the black board by pictures and characters, symbols and letters.

Thus he showed how the Indians recorded their ideas by pictures which were reminders, and which was the first stage of their progress in writing. The next stage was in part pictures. Thus if an Indian cut the throats of five other Indians he would not draw five Indians. That would be too laborious. He just made five circles side by side to represent heads, with two down strokes to each, to represent necks, and one line extended across all the necks to represent that their throats had been cut.

The Dakota Indians, in the course of time, got a little further than this. That is her fond for making symbols. This would not be a picture of the idea as a reminder, or a part picture. For instance when they wanted to represent Summer they made a tadpole.

You will ask no doubt, how does that represent Summer? Well, said the speaker, I will show you. In Dakota when the Dakota Indian went to drink from the pools or ponds where he went for water, the first thing he noticed upon the approach of Summer was that the pools would become filled with tadpoles. So he took the tadpole as the symbol which every Dakota Indian would understand when he saw represented to mean Summer.

Other tribes of Indians have not to this day reached this stage, although they give in chronological order a record of events in their own lives by picture writing. Thus I have seen a lot of footsoldiers fastened one after the other, when the Indian had drawn, very crudely of course, pictures intended to illustrate his deeds from boyhood up. In former times this was done on bark and skins.

The Dakota Indians also record events in the history of their tribe on what is known as the Dakota calendar. This is very old. It is written on the inside of a buffalo skin which has been specially prepared. The writing is usually in white and red. One year, given as 1830, an Indian is represented by black figures and filled with red dots. That means many of the Indians died of small pox that year. Another year, given as 1831, an Indian is shown with three lines extending from his mouth. That means many of the people died from the whooping cough. Thus they record the most important event to them tribe each year. The pictures are in spiral form beginning small and growing larger and larger each year, the whole forming a very valuable record, especially in showing the origin of writing.

The Chinese began in the same way. First with pictures, then part pictures, and then symbols. In pictures a circle represented the sun, and a crescent the moon, an upright line crossed by an upward pointing semi-circle at the top for branches and vice versa at the bottom for roots meant a tree, and an ellipse a mouth. In time these were changed to square of different forms.

But suppose they wanted to spell the word "beautiful." They could not represent that by a picture, so they made part pictures. They just put a circle and a crescent, the sun and moon, side by side. That meant bright. To spell taste a short horizontal line was drawn in the ellipse. This something was put in the mouth and meant "taste."

To illustrate the third stage in the Chinaman's progress in writing, I will take the word "beautiful." There were nothing in the two previous stages to illustrate the word "beautiful." So the Chinaman adopted a symbol, and what do you think it was? And what could be a more beautiful idea? He drew a few lines to represent a boy, and a few more lines beside them to represent a girl. These two, side by side, meant, and mean to this day, the word "beautiful."

The Chinaman constructed about 20,000 of these symbols, and characters to represent them. This appalling laugheria used by him to this day and represents the first step of progress before the Indian with his picture writing.

The Japanese had no written language when they first met the Chinese, but quickly saw its advantage. The Japanese never originate anything, but are the greatest imitators in the world, and they have a faculty of improving whatever they borrow. Thus they took the 20,000 Chinese characters used in writing the Chinese language, and reduced the number to 47, which they manage to make serve all the purposes of their written language.

The Egyptians went a step further than the Chinaman and gave us syllables. He began the same as the Indian and Chinaman with pictures as reminders or ideograms, then with part pictures or phonograms, and then with symbols. Thus the symbol of night was represented by two parallel horizontal lines with their ends joined and having a star underneath, while sunrise was represented by a circle above a horizontal line. But the Egyptian was not content with this. He would spell out the word first by picture writing, and would add the symbol to prevent any mistake.

Take for instance the word sarra, the Egyptian word for giraffe. The Egyptian would make the first syllable above the second by proper characters, and after them draw a picture of a giraffe. Gradually he simplified the writing by taking the first part of each part-picture, or symbol, to form the word. The speaker illustrated this point by the name of Miss Bulkley, the principal of the Plainfield public schools, who was present and taken by surprise. He showed seven pictures, one for each letter. For instance the first part of a bird stood for B, the first part of an urn for U, the first part of a leaf for L, and so on. Everybody laughed and applauded. Miss Bulkley heartily joining, when her name was spelled out in this way.

Owl, the Egyptians pronounced Mu. In time, only the first part was given, and this resembled in sound the word "Mah."

The Phenicians resembled the Japanese in one respect that they were imitative, and also improved what they copied. Being near the Egyptians they soon learned the advantage of their written language, and proceeded to learn it and improve it. Thus, for instance, simply took the three lines forming the horns and shoulder of the Owl making a character like this Y except that the first up stroke was short and the last down stroke long.

The Greeks learned from the Phenicians, but they changed the characters somewhat, in the character referred to putting part of the last line long first and leaving the final line end at the top in a downward hook.

The Romans learned this alphabet from the Greeks, and this character for instance, becomes M, and leads us to our own alphabet, the fourth and final stage of written language of which I speak.

Prof. Starr stopped promptly at nine o'clock, but the audience expressed regret that he could not continue an hour longer so intensely were they interested.

TALK OF THE TOWN

—The City Common Council, will, in all probability, hold a meeting next Monday evening.

—Sunday-school will be held in the First Baptist church hereafter at 2:30 p. m. instead of at 2:30 a. m.

—Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., held their regular weekly meeting last evening. Three candidates were initiated.

—The Exempt Firemen's Association will hold a meeting this evening at eight o'clock, at which important business will be transacted.

—It is said that there were several pick-pockets operating in this city last Wednesday during the parade of the Knights of Pythias.

—The "shoot" which was to have taken place on the outskirts of this city today has been postponed indefinitely owing to the illness of one of the members of the committee.

—"U and I" is the title of the next play to be given at Music Hall. It is advertised for next Thursday evening and is said to be one of the funniest plays ever put on the stage.

—Some one has thief picked a lady's pocket on the 4:30 o'clock train from this city Wednesday evening. She grabbed the thief by the arm and he dropped the pocket-book at her feet.

—Gazelle Engine Company No. 1 has been invited to participate in the annual parade of the Somerville Fire Department which is to be held at Somerville Tuesday, October 6.

—The ball grounds were illuminated for the band concert, given under the auspices of the Knights of Pythias, by the Edison Electric Light Company of South Plainfield, Mr. George C. Polhemus did the wiring.

—At about half-past eight o'clock last evening a bicyclist, while attempting to turn the corner of Second street and Park avenue, collided with a woman who was crossing the street at the time. The woman was not injured in the slightest.

—The surviving members of the Fourteenth Regiment, New Jersey Volunteers, held their annual re-union at South Amboy yesterday. A number of veterans from this vicinity attended. They report having had a very enjoyable time.

—One of the neatest arguments in favor of good roads comes from an unexpected source, the Buffalo Medical and Surgical Journal. It says: A movement for improving and maintaining better roads throughout the country is beginning to attract considerable attention. While all kinds of taxes are said to be increased by good roads, perhaps no class of people can have more interest in the subject than the doctors—unless it should be the doctors' patients. For whatever contributes to assist the doctor in reaching his patients rapidly to the summons of his patients, rebounds to their welfare as well as to the health of the community. Singular that nobody seems to have thought of this before, and yet how pertinent it is. Imagine a critical situation in some home a few miles out of the town or city. It is a matter of life or death. A minute's delay seems an age and may result in the death of a member of the family. With roads such as they were in Union county three years ago a physician could hardly reach the patient at all, and ran the risk of his own life in hurrying over such roads as we then had. But now there is no reason whatever for delay. At any and every season of the year the roads are safe, hard and in excellent condition. The safety to human life is certainly a powerful argument in favor of good roads. The longer we have them the more are their advantages apparent.—Elizabeth Journal.

CUT OUT THE THUMB NAIL.

Mr. John Ammon Underwent a Painful Operation.

About a month ago THE NEWS published an account of a painful accident which befell Mr. John Ammon, a carpenter. He was engaged sawing a board when he saw he was using slipped and nearly severed the top of the thumb on his right hand, the saw-teeth penetrating the thumb-nail. Mr. Ammon sought Dr. Hedges and had the wound dressed. Shortly afterwards the thumb became very painful and after a careful examination the doctor ascertained that an abscess had formed under the injured thumb nail. An operation was deemed necessary and yesterday afternoon Mr. Ammon went to the Muhlenberg Hospital. He was put under the influence of ether and Dr. Hedges, assisted by Drs. Long and Tomlinson, cut the thumb nail out. The operation is a very painful one.

ANOTHER ROBBERY.

Burglars Effect an Entrance Into Grant Avenue Station and Rob it.

Burglars effected an entrance into the Grant avenue Railroad station some time during last night and stole about fifty dollars from the cash drawer. Patrolmen Cooney and Kiely telegraphed to Elizabeth and other points along the Central Railroad, but they were unable to obtain any trace of the culprits.

There appears to be a band of burglars operating in this vicinity and for several months past they have been carrying on their depredations successfully. They give the central part of the city a wide berth and operate in districts where there is no police protection. Therefore the policemen cannot be blamed for neglect of duty, especially while the combine continues in power.

The Somerset Courts.

The September term of the Somerset County Courts will begin on Tuesday next. The Grand Jury will be sworn on that day, charged by Judge Bartine, and retire to attend to their duties. They have several serious cases to come before them.

There will be a number of interesting cases to be tried at this term. Probably the most important is the criminal line is that against Cook and Walker, the perpetrators of John Toms. They have pleaded not guilty to the charge of assault with attempt to kill, and upon this they are to be tried. There seems to be little doubt as to their guilt and if found guilty they will get a severe sentence, as they have caused great trouble ever since they were placed in jail.

The calendar for the Supreme and Circuit Courts is not yet complete, but the following are the cases already filed in the Supreme Court for trial:

George S. Corle vs. John G. Schenck, James J. Bergen; Louis H. Schenck, Charles Bohde and Lizzie Bohne for Louis E. Bowser vs. Paul Wack—on contract. Jackson & Codington; Craig A. Marsh, Rocco Agoglia, administrator vs. John Shields—in tort. Alvah A. Clark; J. A. Bullock, Peter Brunson vs. Caroline R. Brunson et al., executor of Jeremiah R. Van Deventer, deceased—on contract. Jackson & Codington; R. V. Lindabury, Andrew J. Berrien vs. F. R. Shephard—on contract. Wm. M. Stillman; S. B. Huff-Hutchinson.

Isabella Lamma vs. Adam Schneider—in ejectment. H. M. & H. h. Gaston; John A. Freeh.

William P. Bergen vs. Mary R. Gaddis—on contract. George W. Anderson; R. V. Lindabury.

Arthur M. Griffen vs. James Hardy—on contract. Jackson & Codington; C. A. Reed.

George W. Venable and Moses J. Heyman vs. Lewis M. Codington—replevin. Nelson P. Dungan; Alvah A. Clark.

A POLICEMAN'S PREDICAMENT.

Mr. Giese Purchased Carrier Pigeons but They Would not Stay.

The many friends of Policeman Giese are enjoying a joke at his expense. Some three weeks ago some friend of Mr. Giese's informed him that Mr. Henry Liefke had some carrier pigeons for sale. Mr. Giese purchased the pigeons, took them to his home and locked them up until a day or two ago. Thinking they had become accustomed to the place he then released them. They flew around a while then all but one of them started for their former home. Mr. Giese was mad. The remaining one he said slighted on the barn, looked down at him and then also departed for Mr. Liefke's home. Mr. Giese immediately donned his coat and hat and went to the residence of Mr. Liefke and told him that if he had known that the pigeons were going home he would have sent the money with them. It appears that he had not as yet paid for the pigeons. To a friend he said, in a disgusted manner: "Its pretty tough to have three dollars flying around in the air when you can't get it. He has wisely concluded that he has had enough of carrier pigeons.

A Bicyclist Injured.

Walter Weidermann, of Rahway avenue, Elizabeth, collided with another wheelman Wednesday night while speeding his bicycle between Elizabeth and Westfield. He was badly hurt. The other rider was injured, but not seriously.

I have recommended Dr. David Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" to many in Shelton and Birmingham, and I have yet to find one who has not been benefited by it.—C. L. Seaver, Birmingham, Conn.—ADV.

SPORTING NEWS

There will be racing on the track of the Gentlemen's Driving Park on Park avenue tomorrow afternoon, weather permitting.

The West Ends of Somerville will visit Plainfield to-morrow and cross bats with the Crescents in a game of base ball. The game will be the final game of the series, the Crescents having won three and the West Ends two.

The Bicycle Club's team will cross bats with a team from the Bayonne Outing Club in a game of base ball to-morrow afternoon. The game will be played on the Park avenue grounds.

Joseph Pike, a well-known Plainfield bicyclist, is to take part in the two mile handicap race on the track of the Manhatten Athletic Club of New York, to-morrow afternoon. Mr. Pike is considered a fast cycler. He came in second in the road race here last Saturday. He went to New York yesterday and spent the day in practicing for the event.

A colt belonging to Mr. C. C. Brower of this city won second money in the three-year-old trotting race at Mt. Holly yesterday, and "Wesley," another horse owned by him won third money in the 2:41 race.

CRAZED BY DRINK.

A Ruralite While Drunk Causes Considerable Trouble.

At about half-past nine o'clock last evening Policeman Lynch arrested a German farmer who was under the influence of liquor. The fellow appeared to be crazed with liquor. He was seated in a wagon and was driving his horse recklessly on the streets. On Somerset street he drove upon the sidewalk and narrowly escaped running over two women who happened to be walking along that thoroughfare. When the officer placed him under arrest he fought desperately to free himself. He kicked Mr. Lynch on the legs and endeavored to turn his clothing. With the assistance of Policemen Kiely and Fredricksen he was finally lodged in the station house. When he was placed in a cell he seized a zinc pail and began to smash it to pieces against the iron bars of the cell door. He was very docile this morning when arraigned in court. He gave his name as Fritz. City Judge Codington fined him $10, which he paid.

SOCIAL & PERSONAL

Prof. Barney will speak again in the parlors of the Reform Hall.

Mr. Brown of Newport, R. I., is visiting his sister, Mrs. John Lindsay of West Front street.

Miss Whitman, formerly of this city, but now of New York, is visiting her friend, Miss Coles, of East Front street.

Mr. Andrew Vanderbeck, Jr., the proprietor of the sporting goods store on Park avenue, continues dangerously ill.

Mr. H. Barney, a well-known temperance evangelist, lectured at Reform Hall last evening. His remarks were very interesting throughout and were eagerly listened to by all present.

Wednesday evening Mr. Joseph A. Haynes, the station agent at the depot here, succeeded in dispatching five excursion trains in twelve minutes. This is considered very quick work.

Mr. Noah W. Pike of this city has accepted an invitation to the reception in New York of Mr. Chas. R. Russell of Kingsbury, N. Y., upon the return of that gentleman from an extended tour of Europe. The reception is to be held Sept. 23d.

Mr. Richard H. Trewin of Orchard place and Miss Minnie Rockafellow, daughter of Constable George Rockafellow, of Warren, were married Tuesday evening by the Rev. Cornelius Schenck, the pastor of the Trinity Reformed church.

Mr. Cornelius Guinee and Miss Kittie Kelley, both of this city, were united in marriage in St. Mary's church, yesterday afternoon, at one o'clock. The pastor, the Rev. Father Smyth, performed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Guinee went to Washington, D. C., on their wedding tour.

This morning Mr. George W. Moore, a member of Winfield Scott Post, No. 28, G. A. R., received from Commander-in-Chief John Palmer, a diploma appointing him an aid-de-camp on his staff. The members of the Post regard the appointment as a very high honor, especially as it was obtained without any effort on their part.

Mr. R. M. Fairbairn of this city died at Danville, N. Y., Wednesday. Mr. Fairbairn went to a Danville sanitarium to be treated for an incurable disease. His remains were brought to this city last evening and taken to his home on Second place. A wife, one son and a daughter survive him. Mr. Fairbairn was a New York broker.

Mr. Anthony LaBoyteaux and Miss Martha A. Powlison of Grandview avenue, North Plainfield, were united in marriage in the Congregational church last evening at five o'clock by the Rev. Mr. Goodrich, the pastor of the church. A number of invited guests witnessed the ceremony. At its conclusion a reception was tendered Mr. and Mrs. La Boyteaux at the residence of the bride's parents. The newly married couple left on the eight p. m. train on their wedding tour. A trip will include Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington.

THE ANNIVERSARY.

The Members of the W. C. T. U. Celebrated Yesterday.

[Contributed.]

The anniversary of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union was held in Vincent chapel, yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Dr. Tomlinson, the esteemed president, presided. The Rev. Mr. Goodrich offered an earnest prayer, after which the President read her annual address, graceful and beautiful as usual, and full of convincing power and argument.

The reports of the different superintendents were read, interspersed with bright and pertinent remarks from the witty members of the Union.

It was the expressed wish of many that Plainfield could witness as large a procession of total abstainers as was in line on Wednesday's street parade, and that the experience of all saloon-keeps might be as mournful as that of a certain dispenser of spirituous liquors who was heard to moan out, as he hauled down the decorations from the front of his establishment: "I can't stand this trouble and I never sold a drink."

Its Pastor Forty Years.

Last Sabbath will long be remembered as a noted day in Basking Ridge. It was the 40th anniversary of Dr. Rankin's pastorate over the Presbyterian church. The morning service was conducted by Dr. Liggett of Rahway, who preached an eloquent sermon from the two main thoughts—"a faithful pastor, a faithful people"—found in Eph. ch. 21: 1 Thess. v. 13. In this he gave Dr. Rankin much credit for the wise manner in which he had for so many years ministered to the people, as well as for the firm judgment and sound Bible teaching that had always guided and directed his interourse with them. He congratulated the pastor upon the degree of success that had crowned his labors among them; having as a necessity passed with them through the deepest experiences of their lives, he had brought them through a period of 40 years with a marked degree of spiritual blessing and with the most peaceful and kindly feelings existing between the pastor and his people.

Dr. Liggett also congratulated the people upon the possession of such a pastor, saying that he, himself, should always feel highly honored that he had been privileged to preach on such an occasion, for such a man as Dr. Rankin.

In the afternoon services were also deeply interesting and were participated in by the ministers of the neighboring churches. Many excellent sentiments were expressed relative to a pastor's thoughts and feelings toward a people and a people's thoughts and feelings toward a pastor.

Dr. Rankin made the closing remarks. The music, under the direction of the choirmaster, James H. Mc Collum, was finely rendered. The church itself was tastefully decorated with flowers, flowering vines. The dates "1851" "1891" were displayed in golden rod above the pulpit—the decoration showing at once the work of the ladies.

Proper Treatment of Carriages.

[From the Rider and Driver.]

A carriage should be washed immediately after it comes in, and on no account should the spots of mud be allowed to dry on, or the varnish will be spotted. This is especially the case with new carriages during the first month. When being washed the carriage should be placed out of the sun to avoid the risk of blistering, and plenty of water should be used, taking care that it is not driven into the body by the sponge and windows, to the injury of the lining, which is generally the case when a pipe or hose is used. Mud spots on the body should first be softened by splashing the whole, and then by squeezing water out of a large sponge, when the dirt will soften and harmlessly run off. Care should be taken to dry the carriage quite dry with clean chamois leather after each washing, and to dry the water from footboards, lamps, and all parts likely to rust. The under carriage and wheels may be washed with a soft mop, but never with a hard brush unless one wants to scratch the varnish off. The same care is necessary as to the use of hot water, for heat or the water will stain the varnish and injure the durability of the carriage.

W. C. T. U. at the State Fair.

The Waverly fair corporation has given the women of the W. C. T. U. of New Jersey a lot on the fair grounds on which to erect a building for their use.

The State Executive Committee decided to accept the gift and put up a Woman's Temperance Exposition Cottage, as a white ribbon haven, where tired strollers can come in for rest, and so coming, learn something of the work. A committee was appointed to obtain plans and make preparations for the cottage. This committee has called in the aid of the different unions throughout the State, and an attractive little building has been erected. It is two stories in height, and the decoration committee have made it very pretty. It was dedicated on the 23d instant at 3 p. m. Some noted temperance speakers are expected. Music and other attractions will help to make it an interesting occasion.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Rich People's Daughters.

Some time since a French lady of the highest culture was employed to give instruction in languages in a fashionable school for girls in a large American city. She brought to bear the thoroughness of study to which she had been accustomed in her native land. She insisted that the young ladies should learn their lesson or she would know the reason why. So thought the mother resolved that she would make good scholars even of rich women's daughters.

What was the result? A howl of wrath from all quarters. Protest after protest poured in from parents that she was distressing their daughters. She must stop it or be dismissed, or they would remove their girls from the school and break it up. The head mistress could not afford to let her school be broken up; madame could not afford to lose her living. So the higher education of women in that institution was dropped at once, and it remains to this day one of the most expensive and fashionable schools for girls in America.

One of the sternest arraignments ever presented of the average rich American mother is contained in the paper called "Physical Hindrances to Teaching Girls," in The Forum by Charlotte W. Porter. It lays bare the true cowardliness of the private school for girls as nothing else has yet done in print. It lays the blame, too, where it belongs, not on the proprietor of the girls' school, but on the silly mother, who says to the teacher: "My daughters do not have to earn their own living. I do not care to have them study very hard, and I do not want them to be worried." So the feeble, lazy, self indulgent girl begins her first year. If Miss Porter had told us of such it would seem incredible that girls could be so silly as these described below:

Nervousness, backache, weakness, loss of appetite generally follow soon upon the realization that school means work. A hard lesson to be mastered lays a girl low with a headache or dissolves her in floods of tears. Tears, indeed, especially during the first part of the year, are of daily downfall. Tears behind worthy problems, tears great the refusal to allow boxes of candy, tears full copiously when overshoes are insisted upon and when short fur capes are declared insufficient covering for zero weather. Moreover, let the fun run a bit too high, or a mischievous boy tap on the window in the evening or a moose suddenly appear and only a dose of pure English and tout ensemble prevent an epidemic of hysterics.

The education that many a girl milking cows on the farm would give five of the best years of her life to win is thus rejected by the foolish rich girl that her body is weak because her mother never made her realize the need of healthful food and exercise. Her mind is weak and hysterical because it has never been disciplined. Miss Porter says the head of one girls' school declares frankly that there is more laziness than ill health in the world.

The strong, stirring intellectual delight, which is the most satisfying and inspiring of any in the world, these poor creatures never know. They certainly have brains as good as any, but they are never allowed to use them. The lot of the sturdy, rosy daughter of the emigrant who plays in the streets and wins the prize in the severe public school is enviable beside that of the lackadaisical pack-luster rich girl who never had a taste of, the joy of intellectual acquisition in her life.

Worst of all, riches take wings. The great estates which in the years this nation has existed have remained in the same family more than two generations may be counted on the fingers of one hand. It is not too much to say that at least a third of these pampered, wreaking girls will need in course of time to earn their own living. What then will become of them?

Of the responsibility of the private teacher in the teeth of this opposition of heottedly stupid mothers Miss Porter writes:

For the sake of popularity and a living, the private school has too often repeated and emphasized the mistakes and failures of the home. The common notion of a private school proves this—the notion that in common with home life, little order and discipline, no systematic study, no standards of scholarship and attainment, no more work, few tasks and many privileges. Yet the principals of these schools are women of liberal education and broad culture, capable of forming a high ideal and of working to make it real. It is to supply what the home training often lacks. They must insist upon obedience, punctuality, wholesome and regular diet, vigorous exercise, proper and modest clothing, good reading, hard thinking and systematic self control. If they do, they will be called "strict," and they will probably meet with adverse criticism and pecuniary loss. They will.

Teaching is of too vital importance to be a matter of dollars and cents, and if a private school principal cannot earn her living by a good school, let her seek some other work. Let her not dare to prostitute her high office and ministry to her own self support. "Speak unto us smooth things, prophesy deceits," is a command that has met with only a ready response. It is time that private schools joined hands in "decoration" of superficial work and indiscipline, in order that parents may be compelled, if they send their daughters to school at all, to send those where their shall be obliged to learn physical and mental control. Dreadful as many schools are they would then rapidly disappear.

I am glad to know that there is at least one Spanish American republic in which there is apparently no sign of immediate revolution, and that is Mexico President Diaz sticks close to the constitution and has secured important concessions and Mexican trade. This is owing to the magnetic influence of the big republic of the United States on the south.

Soon the period of maximum sun spots will be here. Telescopes have gained so much in power since the last great sun spot period that we may look for very interesting discoveries.

GREAT ARMIES AT PLAY.

Watched by President Carnot and Emperor William.

FRENCH CAVALRY'S GRAND CHARGE

Germany's Kaiser Rides About the Field with Indefatigable Energy at a Big Sham Battle—Smokeless Powder Was Used and the Air Was Perfectly Clear.

PARIS, Sept. 18.—The whole press of this city condemns Emperor William's recent speech at Erfurt, in which it was reported he alluded to Napoleon I as the "Corsican Parvenu." Le Paris says: "This violent attack on a man of genius and greatness like Napoleon will have no diplomatic results. It simply reveals the character of a monarch who seizes every occasion to revile France and her institutions."

His Bark and His Bite.

La France says: "This time it is not we who can be accused of talking of revenge. It is to the German emperor, who reminds us that armies are things of a day. His remarks are an impudent outrage on the patriotism of a great people."

Moderate papers, like Le Temps, La Liberte and Journal des Debats regret the tone of Emperor William's speech at Erfurt, but make allowance for the excitement of the occasion, adding that the bark is perhaps worse than the bite.

Carnot Reviews His Army.

At Vitry-le-Francais President Carnot and his cabinet reviewed the French army, consisting of 110,000 men, which has been taking part in extensive maneuvers since Sept. 3. The review concluded with a magnificent charge up to the grand stand, accomplished by the squadrons of the seven massed force of cavalry—16,000 men. They thundered up in splendid style, and then reined in sharply and presented swords amid a scene of indescribable approval from the crowds who witnessed this fine maneuver.

President Carnot Speaks.

At luncheon President Carnot delivered an oration. He said: "The army has again shown what France may expect from it, and the whole country, which has followed the army's movements with passionate interest, is grateful. The people know full well that calm firmness, prudence and international loyalty can be counted upon the country the gift of sincere friendship and confidence warranted by its resources and love of peace, which they do not wish to see disturbed. From the plain soldier, valiant and alert, to the leader of the highest rank, all inspire us with confidence."

The Emperor in a Sham Battle.

BERLIN, Sept. 18.—The German emperor was present at a sham battle at Mulhausen. He galloped from point to point with indefatigable activity throughout the battle. Sixty thousand men were engaged. The fire was incessant, yet owing to the use of smokeless powder the atmosphere was perfectly clear.

FORECASTINGS OF FALL STYLES.

The Skirt Remains Straight, with Indications of Paniers for Thin Stuffs.

There is a slight change in sight only a speck of a cloud on the distant horizon—as to the tightly made skirts. It may be that next year we shall see more material, as well as more gores, allowed in the tailor made gowns. For the present, however the Parisian mode appears to be that skirts shall remain close and long, except those in very thin materials, where are there are gores slightly indicated and a little drapling of the skirt at the front or side. The variety in corsages is number less. Gimpes, vests, plastrons and corselets all figure in the race among evening corsages. For heavier stuffs the cost basque continues popular, and it is likely that the new fall and winter costumes will employ it largely.

DINNER OR DEMITOILET CORSAGES

Our cut gives an example of a quite new gown for dinner or demitoilet occasions, in which the paniers are really pronounced. These, together with the pointed bodice and tunic, are in copper brocade. The kerchief folds are of white mousseline chiffon and the braces of ecru colored lace, like the flounces on the sleeves and in front of the skirt. The bows are also of lace bordered on the stomacher, which is in plain copper faille.

Carelessly Killed His Comrade.

WILLIMANTIC, Conn., Sept. 18.—John Peterson, of Company G, of Putnan, accidently shot and killed Richard Rabbington, of Company G, of Putnam, and seriously injured William Malone, of Company E, of Willimantic, at the target practice of the Third regiment.—C. N. G., Thursday afternoon. Peterson was loading with a gun which he supposed was not loaded.

Matthews Wanted Three Pensions.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18.—Peter Matthews, who drawes a pension as a veteran of the Fifth New York cavalry, is held for the grand jury in this city. He was discharged from the Soldiers' Home at Hampton, Va., for attempting to secure another pension under another name, and was arrested here on the charge of filing a claim for still another pension.

Mr. Blaine Saw Them Wedded.

BAR HARBOR, Me., Sept. 18.—The wedding of Miss Mary Dodge Woodward, daughter of the distinguished artist, the late William Morris Hunt, and Mr. Horatio Nelson Slater, the millionaire of Webster, Mass., took place at the cottage at Mount Desert. Secretary Blaine and daughter were present.

Failure of a Big Hat Firm.

DANBURY, Conn., Sept. 18.—Nichols & Nash, one of the largest fur felt hat manufacturing firms in the country, have assigned to the law firm of Dempsey & Booth. The firm recently moved into a new factory, the largest of its kind in the United States.

O'Brien's Deficit $70,000.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 18.—C. J. Kimcheer, of Toledo, has been selected to succeed M. J. O'Brien, the defaulting supreme treasurer of the Catholic Knights of America. O'Brien's deficit is more than $70,000.

SHE WILL WEAR TIGHTS.

A Society Girl of New York to Sing in "Indigo's" Chorus.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—When "Indigo" is produced in Baltimore on Monday night next by the Carleton opera company a daughter of Daniel C. Washburn, of this city, will appear as one of the hours of King Indigo's harem. Miss Washburn's father was formerly a partner in the Stock exchange firm of Townsend & Washburn.

The troubles of the Baring Brothers carried Mr. Washburn down. In one brief week he found himself plunged from affluence to poverty. The family were obliged to give up their home in Montclair, and are living in Harlem. Miss Washburn resolved to earn her own living. She was engaged as a chorus girl in the Carleton company, and a fortnight ago she began rehearsals. It will be necessary for the debutante to wear tights covered with gauze leggings. She is a tall girl, with a slightly figure, and tips the scales at 160 pounds. She has just passed her twenty-first birthday.

She Feels Like Fainting.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 18.—Very soon after Miss Washburn's histrionic ambition had become known among her society friends their letters began to flutter about the boarding house on Franklin street. With these she discussed her plans and the "tights" question.

Yesterday evening she spent in trying on costumes, leaving for the last a toilet which she regarded with fearful eyes. These were the tights. She finally summoned courage and slipped into them.

"You have no idea," she said, "what a strange sensation I had when I looked down at my feet and saw instead of a dress only the tights. I think of Monday night I feel like fainting."

NO DIVORCE FOR GRANT.

The Highest Power at Rome Declares Against the Reported Man.

HARTFORD, Sept. 18.—Advices have been received here of a very important decision delivered in Rome, Aug. 16, in the famous matrimonial controversy which has been in the courts of the Roman Catholic church for four years. William Grant, of Bridgeport, separated from his wife and a divorce was granted in the courts of this state. The couple had been married by a Methodist minister, but subsequently Grant had joined the Church of Rome, to which his wife belonged. He applied for an ecclesiastical divorce, claiming that a Methodist marriage was not recognized by the church.

In 1887, after a careful hearing, the board, presided over by the Very Rev. James Hughes, V. G., of this city, declared the marriage valid. Grant appealed to the archiepiscopal tribunal in Boston, and there the Hartford decision was reversed. The question was appealed finally to Rome and now the highest authority declares the marriage binding, and the divorce is refused. Grant is and has been for some years living with a second wife.

England Wants Hawaii Now.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18.—Celso Caesar Moreno, acting as the agent in this country of the National party of Hawaii, has laid before the president a letter asserting that England is now planning to take possession of the kingdom. The queen is favorable to the British interests. The president was interested by the letter and asked Mr. Moreno to communicate with Secretary Blaine.

Chicago Firemen Dead or Dying.

CHICAGO, Sept. 18.—At a small fire in the office of the Anderson Printing company on the Parish building, this city, this morning seven firemen were overcome by dense smoke and fell unconscious to the floor. Two of them are dead and the others are dying. The dead are Captain Mulvey, of the fire insurance patrol, died in great agony. Several other members of the department will die.

President Hippolyte Talks.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—President Hippolyte, of Hayti, has given his views to The Herald editor on the question of which Frederick Douglass and the new United States minister, Durham. He declares that there is no difference between the black and yellow inhabitants of the republic, and says he does not object to colored ministers from the United States.

The McCamant-Bardsley Letters.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 18.—District Attorney Graham has been ordered to appear before the legislative committee in Harrisburg on Saturday next and bring with him the correspondence between Auditor General McCamant and ex-City Treasurer Bardsley.

Two Years of Life a Blank.

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 18.—Fred B. Benton, a well known young man of this city, mysteriously disappeared from his home on Aug. 3, 1889. After an absence of nearly two years, he returned, apparently recuperated. Benton says he doesn't know where he has been.

Seventy-five Kegs Exploded.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Sept. 18.—The grinding station of the Phoenix Powder Manufacturing company near Farmingdale, was blown to atoms late at night. The workmen had just left the building. There were seventy-five kegs of gunpowder in the building.

Judge Calvin Pratt Renominated.

BROOKLYN, Sept. 18.—Delegates to the Second judicial Republican convention met yesterday in the Kings county court house and nominated for re-election Calvin E. Pratt for a justice of the supreme court. It was a unanimous nomination.

Fifty-two Buried Alive.

TRIESTE, Sept. 18.—A tunnel in course of construction for a private railway is caved in, burying fifty-two workmen. Twenty dead bodies have already been taken out, and it is feared that not one has escaped.

Suicide at Harrisburg.

HARRISBURG, Sept. 18.—Henry Fischer, whose home is at 312 Myrtle avenue, Brooklyn, plunged into the canal at Market street bridge, this city, and was drowned. It was a deliberate suicide.

Held for Murder, but at Liberty

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—Policeman John Foster, of the Union Market station, who was held without bail for killing Michael Dunlap, was lodged in the Tombs, is again on his beat.

Supports All but Sheehan.

BUFFALO, Sept. 18.—The Enquirer's leading editorial supports the Democratic state ticket with the exception of Sheehan, whom it bolts.

The Weather.

Generally warm or warmer, and more wintry and generally fair.

A DECLARATION OF WAR

Lieutenant Governor Jones Will Fight Flower.

THAT COURSE IS HIS DUTY, HE SAYS.

The Temporary Defeat of the Party Is, in It's Opinion, Harmless Compared with the Effects of the Control of Certain Men He Does Not Name.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Sept. 18.—Lieutenant Governor Jones has furnished the following for the press: "Being requested by the press to announce my intentions relating to the nominations of the Saratoga convention I would say that my political action has always been controlled by my sense of duty as a citizen, never recognising conflicting party obligations.

Party Interest Sacrificed, He Says.

"Believing, in this instance, that not only have the interests of the people been sacrificed but the existence of the Democratic party jeopardized, for behind the nominations and in absolute control of the party are men whose every sentiment of patriotism is subject either to their personal ambition or their selfish greed, and the administration of public affairs is shaped to perpetuate their power.

Temporary Defeat Preferable.

"So complete is the power of these men, and so dictatorial have they become, that members of the party are but serfs so far as political action is concerned. Continued subservience but makes the condition too degrading to be quietly borne by the American citizens. There is but one way to dislodge these usurpers. The temporary defeat of the party will be harmless compared with the effects of their control.

To Oppose No Nominee.

"For the welfare of the state and in the interest of the Democratic party, to me my duty appears clear, which is to oppose the election of the nominees of the Saratoga convention to such an extent as may be within my power and in such manner as may seem best to accomplish that purpose.

"DAVID B. JONES."

Mr. Jones declines to specify just what action he will take in the matter.

Mr. Flower Welcomed Home.

Last evening 8,000 citizens turned out to welcome Mr. Flower home. He was met at the railroad station by a brass band and was escorted to his carriage. The crowd unhitched the horses and some of the leading business men of the city drew the carriage to Mr. Flower's residence, where ex-Congressman Lanning, of the city, welcomed him in a short congratulatory address. Mr. Flower replied as follows:

"I regret that I cannot thank each you for this friendly demonstration, recognizing the fact that you do not greet me as allies in the coming activity, but as friends who have divided our people, but as my neighbors and old time friends, bound together by ties of interest, of sympathy, of duty and, I hope, by bonds of mutual regard. The nomination to the office of governor has come to me from my party unsolicited. I am grateful for the honor proposed to be conferred upon me of presiding over the destinies of the Empire State, the greatest state in the Union. Only fourteen nations of the world have more inhabitants than this commonwealth.

This honor conferred upon me is not alone a personal one. It is an honor to this northern section of the state. It is the state of Silas Wright, in 1844, has a gubernatorial candidate been selected by either party from this section, and never before has one been chosen upon a Jefferson county key. As one of her sons I hope I can win her laurels. It will only require a full discharge of public duty for as the arrows of political hate have been aimed at me in the past, surrounded as I have been by the armor of conscious rectitude, they fall—harmless at my feet. Should I be elected governor and I believe I shall be, I shall endeavor to faithfully serve all the people of this great state, seeking aid from him who doeth all things well."

After the speech Mr. Flower shook hands with the people for fifteen minutes and was then driven to the Union club, where a number of leading citizens of both parties gave him a reception.

Campbell Opens His Campaign.

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 18.—Governor Campbell opened the Democratic campaign at Sidney, O., to a fair sized assemblage. He said that one of the most encouraging features of the campaign was the apprehension exhibited by Republicans in regard to the tariff. The Republicans, by the nomination of McKinley, had made the tariff the issue, and now they were dodging it. Referring to Senator Sherman's predictions of the result of free coinage, the governor said Sherman was a false prophet, and cited instances in which what the senator predicted had not come about. Intelligence with free silver men were read to show that they claim Mr. McKinley as one of their number. "The Democrats of Ohio do not agree upon free coinage," he said, "but the Republicans do. Free coinage could be quite as absurd and unnatural as the circulating of warehouse receipts, or pawn tickets, based upon uncoined metal. The Democratic platform denounces the demonitization of silver. Who defends the demonitization of silver? Every man connected with it, except Senator Sherman, denies having knowledge of it at the time."

I have used Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy for constipation and acknowledge it is worthy of all the praise said of it in the orders of that kind.—Nellie A. McQuade, 230 Main street, Amsterdam, N. Y.—ADV.

Proceedings of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union.

[OFFICIAL.]

ELIZABETH, N. J., Sept. 3, 1891.

Absent—Messrs. Force, West.—1.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and on motion approved.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Sept. 2, 1891.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union County:

Gentlemen—I do hereby certify that the year during which Sr. Georges avenue, city of Rahway, R. M. and J. F. Shanley, contractors, are required to be kept in repair, expired on August 2, 1891.

As the proper repairs have been made and the road is now in a condition satisfactory to me and in accordance with the specifications and contract, the ten per cent. reserved, less the cost of repairs, is now due and payable, for which amount I have given a certificate this date.

F. A. DUNHAM,
County Engineer.

On motion of Freeholder Thompson received and placed on file.

COMMITTEE REPORTS.

To the Honorable the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

Gentlemen—Your committee appointed to examine Newark avenue, from North Broad street, Elizabeth, N. J., to the city line would respectfully report that they found the surface of the same in need of repairs, and it being the main outlet of the heaviest traffic of our county and city to Newark, Jersey City and Hoboken, we recommend the repairing of the same as a portion of our county road system.

WILLIAM H. TRAHON,

TO SAVE LINGO'S LIFE.

Startling Story That Miller Killed His Wife.

A SISTER'S ALLEGED CONFESSION.

One of Philadelphia's Detectives Claims That Mary Collins Was Stated That Annie Miller Was Murdered at Home and Her Body Carried to the Woods

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 18.—Henry Campbell, a detective of this city, has made an affidavit, in which he claims to have received a confession that the Miller murder at Merchantsville, N. J., was committed in Mrs. Annie Miller's own home. That was the theory set up by the defense at the trial last spring.

This evidence may be taken before Master in Chancery George A. Vroom on an order of the court for presentation to the supreme court in support of the motion for a new trial, which is to be disposed of at the November term.

He Sought Out Miss Collins.

The trial of Lingo was scarcely over before his counsel renewed their efforts in behalf of the negro. Detective Campbell was employed, and his first move was to form the acquaintanceship of Mary Collins' relatives in this city. That accomplished, he was introduced into John Miller's household, of which Miss Collins was a member. Shortly Campbell's attentions and was followed by her husband. The two quarreled about something, and Miss Collins heard her sister cry out: "Oh, no, Miss Collins, according to Campbell's affidavit, ran to the stairway and asked:

"What is the matter?"

Was Miller the Murderer?

"You keep away or you'll get some, too," said Miller.

Some time afterward Miller came down stairs, completely unnerved, and said:

"I've killed her."

The affidavit goes on to say that Miller and Mary Collins started then to carry the body out for concealment in a haystack back of the barn, but that Miss Collins' heart failed her. She sat at the window watching till dark, when Miller got his brother Henry to assist in carrying the body out.

To Fasten the Crime on a Negro.

It was dressed and the men started for the haystack, the intention being to let it remain there for a few days. Outside the house, however, it was decided to take the body into the bush lot in a wagon. The wagon was at the suggestion of Miller's brother who, according to the affidavit, said it would then look like a "nigger job."

Mysterious Murder at St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 18.—The body of Michael Tiernan, aged forty-five, brother-in-law of City Prosecuting Attorney Dierckx, and private watchman of the Missouri Pacific, was found about 7 a. m. lying between two lines of freight, with one bullet hole in the back of the neck, a second in the left temple and a third in the left cheek, which was powder burned. It is supposed the deed was committed by tramps.

A Child Crushed to Death.

STEINWAY, L. I., Sept. 18.—Elizabeth Kohn, a little twenty-two-months-old child, was playing in front of her parents residence, at 345 Kowahonun street, was run over by a wagon driven by Jacob Wessman and crushed to death instantly. The driver was arrested and admitted to bail by Coroner Maines, of Long Island City.

She Was Riordan's Wife.

TROY, N. Y., Sept. 18.—Myra Reynolds, who was on her way to the theater with Gerald C. Riordan, the young lawyer who took a fatal dose of carbolic acid in a drug store, believing it to be cocoa, said today that she married the Riordan in October, 1890, in New York city.

THE OLD HOME.

For many a year the globe glowed in the red of the passing day,
And the evening light on the old brick chimneys slowly died away.
There in the ancient attic, under the garment-hung beams,
Children dreamed, in the herb scented air, no end of waking dreams.
Of those who had sat in the high back chairs, clad in comical things;
Of the prim faced dame, the schools, the spinning wheel, the fiddle devoid of strings;
As in the helmet, and crazy calash, and bonnets wonderfully made,
They danced about on the nut strewn floor to half frightened masquerade.
At night, snugly tucked in a trundle bed, their sleepy eyes would see
Where the moonlight glimmered on a warming pan or revealed an old footstove.
No fervour then in the meeting houses, and of footstoves there was need
For those who couldn't keep warm enough by hearing the Calvin creed.
And in the cedar roofed garret, they heard the sleet on the dormer panes,
Or listened, in dreamy, hazy content, to the whisper and patter of rain;
Then slept till they heard from the barnyard the morning challenge shrill,
And the distant rooster's answers were drowned by the coffee mill.

Below on the high, wide mantel, in fifstoonery quaint and old,
The tall and the short brass candlesticks were polished to look like gold;
There were the bright, steel andirons, and the bellows florally gay;
And a glass protected the corner where the nice old time lay.
And the charming old lady in snow white cap,
A boy's ideal of what one should be in relation to doughnuts and pies.
By the kitchen dominion does she not stand, just as we saw her then.
Pleasantly fondling a jealous cat and tossing grain?

The gate to the box bordered garden clicked to with ball and chain;
Such fruit and such flowers as grew there can never be grown again.
There the feathery fennel flourished, by which grandmother set great store,
And the sunflowers turned in rainbow ways, on the path from the gate to the door.
At the end of the gooseberry walk was the orchard of ancient trees,
Where orioles haunted the branches, and green apples dropped in the breeze.
Ah, me! It seemed that all must go on in just the accustomed way,
In the dreamy, listless stillness of the long sun midsummer day.
—George E. Townsend in New York Sun.

MOTHER AND DAUGHTER.

There Should Be Perfect Confidence Between Them on All Subjects.

A girl's mother should be her best friend—for many years of her life her nearest and dearest friend. If she marries this place should be filled by her husband, but, until then, no one should usurp the mother's right to the closest intimacy with her child. How many of you mothers can say that you are your daughters' most intimate friends? I am afraid very few. Where does the fault lie, and is it altogether on either side? Perhaps it is. Selfishness with the mother, who does not take advantage of her opportunities to win the confidence of her child for life.

Every child has an individual character that may be modified by training or by circumstances, but can never be wholly changed. Different temperaments require varied treatment, some yielding more and some less to the influences brought to bear on them. Do you realize that you are moulding your child's mind by daily touches, each one too slight in itself to effect any result, yet all together giving it as a bias that alters the whole?

There are many things which a girl should learn from her mother, and which it would be easy for you to tell her, if there were an unbroken habit of confidence from earliest childhood.' It is a mistaken idea—so utterly false and mischievous it must have been originated by the very spirit of evil—that there is a want of delicacy in a mother speaking to her child of subjects which are absolutely essential to her future welfare. How a mother can be cruel enough to let her child go forth to meet life unprotected by such knowledge passes comprehension. The tender, delicate being is placed in our keeping. If you look back on your own childhood, you will know that early, very early, before you dream of approaching danger, the veil of ignorance, which too many confound with purity, will be rent asunder by other hands than yours. You will be robbed of what ought to be your dearest privilege.

Forestall those who would take it from you. When your little girl comes to you with questions about the mysteries of life which trouble her innocent soul, never put her off with foolish legends and explanations that will not bear looking. Tell her simply and truthfully all that you wish your mother had told you. Make it a sacred confidence between her and yourself—something not to be spoken of to any one else. She will feel a new sense of dignity and importance from the mere fact that her mother has trusted her.

As she grows older do not be afraid to talk to her of the sacredness and beauty of the love and marriage that has not been thought unworthy of being chosen as a type of the relation between Christ and his church. She will not indulge in silly flirtations if you have done your part faithfully. She will know that while love is the crown of a woman's existence, it may never come to her, and that marriage without it is a mockery of the consecrated name.

It is only by encouraging the confidences, and by treating them with the same seriousness that your child does, you can retain your hold upon her and make her feel that there is no confidante in the world to be compared to her mother.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Looking Ahead.

The coming woman—she who is playing with her doll today—is going to be well equipped with the small silver for her coming establishment. The custom of giving silver spoons on birthdays and on Christmas time to the little daughters of the home is becoming so prevalent that some silversmiths keep duplicate patterns for regular customers. The coffee and dessert spoons are selected in harlequin patterns, the tablespoons and the forks are preferred of a single design.

In some family circles different members take upon themselves the providing of one certain set of silver; as, for instance, grandmother selects to give the dessert forks, an aunt the dinner size, a mother the table spoons, and a father, perhaps, the dinner knives, and so on. A single piece is selected for each holiday, bearing the proper date and name, and when the small mine becomes a large one, exchanging eight years for eighty, she has a case full of silver that represents a considerable sum, and is a valuable start in her housekeeping.

Another pretty custom in the same direction is the reversal of this just recounted, where the children contribute, each of them, on mamma's birthday to the home silver basket.—Her Point of View in New York Times.

How to Retrieve Icy or Other Vine Pot-sonning.

Apply soft soap freely, without removing it with water. With some people a weak tincture of belladonna relieves the poisoning quickly.

How to Pack a Trunk.

To pack a trunk properly requires a plan. If one is going on a trip and proposes to live in the trunk, so to speak, then the plan should be made with reference to easily getting at those things most frequently in demand. If, however, the trunk is packed merely to move clothing from one place to another, where the trunk will be unpacked, then the plan should call for a folding of all garments in as large folds as the size of the trunk admits of. As each layer is made all the spaces at the sides and ends and in the corners should be filled with small articles. It is a bad plan to put in a lot of garments one on top of the other and then when the pile has reached the top of the trunk try to fill in these vacant places. Besides mussing things up you will lose valuable space by such a method. The proper way is to build layer on top of layer, making each one complete as you go along. The result will be that you can get a great deal more in a trunk, and the compactness of packing prevents the clothing from getting creased and mussed. It is said that no woman ever thoroughly mastered the art of trunk packing.

How to Cool Inflamed or Heated Eyes.

A little contrivance called an eyecup can be bought for fifteen or twenty cents at drug stores, of which few people know of. It is like a tiny goblet of thick glass, whose bowl is slightly elliptical in shape, and whose top edge is curved downward, so it will fit closely over the hollow in which the eye is set. This filled with cold water, with a few grains of salt, is held to the eye bent over to meet it. When the head is lifted the eye can be open and shut many times in the liquid, of which not a drop need escape. Any eye wash or cooling lotion can be applied by this means.

How to Address Letters.

If you are addressing a business letter, send it to Mr. John Smith or to Messrs. John Smith & Co. If the letter be a social communication, address it to John Smith; Esq. The English rule is to address dress tradesmen as "mister" and gentlemen and professional men as "esquire." But this rule won't work for obvious reasons in America. Address a letter to "General Smith" or to "Dr. Smith," but never under any circumstances to "Mrs. General Smith" or "Mrs. Dr. Smith." If such an identification be essential to a correct delivery, use an extra line and address to "Mrs. Smith, in the care of General Smith." If the letter be to a widow and her identity be obscure without the title of her husband, then the obsolete form might be used of "Mrs. Mary Smith, widow of General John Smith." But such is not an imaginable case. There is no use of putting "for" or "to" before the name of a person addressed. In addressing a person the unmarried sisters the grammatical rule is to write, when the given names are not mentioned, "The Miss Smiths," and when the names are mentioned "The Misses Mary and Sarah Smith." But "The Misses Smith" has been adopted by general consent and will do. To a man to whom the title of honorable is due the article should be used and he should be addressed as "The Hon. John Smith." But no man in America except the lieutenant governor of Massachusetts is entitled by law to such a mark of distinction. We accord it, however, very liberally, and maybe we are right. "His Excellency" is only given by law to the governor of Massachusetts. The president of the United States should be addressed in so many words, and the beginning of a letter to him should be simply "Mr. President," or "To the President of the United States, Sir."

How to Make Icing That Will Not Harden Soon.

Stir the sugar into the unbeaten white of the egg. This will keep soft sometimes a week or more.

How to See Under Water.

If there is good ice, cut a hole just large enough for the face, get down to it and cover the head and hole with a blanket so as to exclude the sunlight. If there is no ice, a raft with a hole in the center will answer the same purpose. By excluding the light thoroughly you will be able to see with surprising clearness to the bottom of water several feet deep. Lost articles of any marked color can be seen on the bottom almost as easily as if there were no water.

How to Suspend One's Skirts in Wet Weather.

Make a belt large enough to button around the waist outside of dress. To this fasten at regular intervals four tapes, perhaps eight or ten inches long, and on the end of each tape place a large safety pin. The contrivance may be carried always in a waterproof or mackintosh pocket, and with its aid a dress can easily be lifted and as high as desired. If black tapes and belt are used they will not look bad even if no waterproof is worn.

How to Make a Chicken Coop.

Fit a window sash closely into a large dry goods box or board frame made for the purpose, leaving a space of four or six inches above the sash for a ventilator. Have a slope of five or six inches to the roof. In the rear end partition off a foot or more space in which to feed. Place the entrance at the side and keep the coop cool and clean. When the sash is no longer needed, it can be removed and slats put in its place.

The Ventilation of Collars.

When the housekeeper has bought, built or hired her house, after due consideration of the family needs and tastes, and after careful examination of the locality and construction of the chosen home, her earliest attention should be directed to the cellar, that part of the house, which is most often neglected and where order and convenience combined, adds no small amount to the comfort and healthfulness of all parts of the house.

The arrangement of the cellar takes time and attention rather than any great outlay of money. The windows should first be seen to. A dry, unventilated cellar, full of dead air, is an abomination. The windows should be so hung that they can be removed from the frames during all but the extreme winter months should be taken out, and even then in mild days they should be opened in the middle of the day. The outside of the windows should be protected by galvanized wire window netting, costing 2½ cents the square foot. A heavier, coarser meshed quality can be used instead, but all strength is desired. This quality costs six cents the square foot.

The hatchways of city houses are troublesome in cold weather. Both the rear and front hatchways admit a great deal of wind during the winter, in spite of the wooden covers that are fitted to them, and make the kitchens and dining room floors drafty and cold. This can be remedied by covering the iron grating over each hatchway with several folds of old carpeting or furniture sacking, and then fitting the cover down tightly. The hatchway on the sunny side of the house must be frequently opened for air. The cellar ceiling and walls should be thoroughly whitewashed, two heavy coats being enough.—Agnes B. Ormsbee in Harper's Bazar.

Scrap Screens.

The art of reproducing and engraving pictures has in our day reached such a point of perfection that our weeklies and monthlies offer us almost more than we can care for. And the only way to obtain any lasting pleasure or instruction from these charming works of art is to devise some method by which we may preserve them for our study in hours of leisure.

The scrapbook is the first thought, and these are invaluable for pictures of a small or medium size, but there are others for which a screen or portfolio is well adapted.

An original and artistic pictorial screen is made thus:

Select interesting and well executed engravings, if possible, those that come in a series, or that illustrate some special story or poem.

A recent number of one of our popular magazines portrayed a number of Ideni children's faces, and for the small sum of twenty-five cents one could secure a perfect gallery of loveliness.

Buy at wholesale a large quantity of plain white cardboard cut into squares or oblongs of a uniform size. On each of these paste with care a number of small pictures that are cut out close to the margin, each with all similar. Have ready three each cardboard with a narrow band of plain pine or cherry or any other wood that you may fancy.

These may be arranged in a number of ways in a room devoted to reading or lounging, or in a day nursery for the older children. If there are modern low book shelves, let the framed cardboards run all along the top, or the wall above a low mantel may be entirely filled in with them, running in narrow strip of the same wood across the top and down the sides to inclose the whole in one large frame.—E. A. Matthews, in The Housewife.

In an English Bedroom.

Bedrooms are not usually nearly so comfortably furnished in England as are ours. It is quite unusual to have a fire in one's bedroom, and the rocking chair, that comfortable solace of every American woman's life, is conspicuous by its absence. It is not customary either to have gas in the bedrooms. There is an idea that it is unwholesome, and candles are still almost universally used, except on the parlor and dining room floors. I have sometimes thought that the poor lighting of the bed and dressing rooms of the English homes had much to do with contributing to the dowdy and untstylish dressing of the women, the majority of whom always have their skirts a little bit crooked, or the petticoat showing unevenly on one side or the other.

In furnishing a bedroom the dressing table—used instead of our bureaus—is always put against a window so as to catch all the light possible. This looks odd both in the room and from the outside of the house. You see the unpainted backs of looking glasses at the upper windows of the handsomest houses, and even in Marlborough house—the palace of the Prince of Wales.—Ladies' Home Journal.

How Abyssinian Women Tattoo.

Painting is temporary and needs frequent renewal. In many parts of the world we find color designs, often quite curious, sometimes beautiful, made permanent by tattooing. The pattern and the method vary greatly with locality. In some regions men only tattoo, in others only women, in others both sexes. Here it is confined to the nobles, there to the servile. In Abyssinia women chiefly tattoo. The whole body is covered, and the gums, too, are picked blue. An old woman operator's tools were a pot of blacking (charred herbs), a large iron pin, bits of hollow cane and pieces of straw—these last for pencils. She marks out the design, pricks dots with the pin loaded with the dye, and goes over it repeatedly. To allay the subsequent irritation it is plastered over with a green poultice; the scab must not be picked off.—Popular Science Monthly.

Patti's Age.

There is a row about Patti's age. The Bible in her castle has been stealthily consulted, and the date of her birth is fixed at Feb. 18, 1847. Then she must have been less than ten years old when she sang in Cincinnati at Smith & Nixon's hall, near Vine street, on the north side of Fourth, with her sister, Mrs. Strakosch, and Ole Bull drew his magic bow with the diamond in it over his ancient violin.—Murat Halstead in Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.

Alum Colors Hydrangeas.

It is a new thing to have hydrangeas of that pale blue tint which is so beautiful and so seldom seen. The process is exceedingly simple, and is invariably successful. Put alum in the water that you use to water the plants. Use the alum every day, especially after the buds appear, and when the plant blossoms there will be the rare blue flowers.—New York Advertiser.

How to Keep Flies from Picture Frames.

Boil three or four onions in a pint of water; then with a gilding brush go over the frames of your pictures and chimney glasses, and rest assured that the flies will have an aversion to the smell, and when the plant blossoms there will be the rare blue flowers.—New York Advertiser.

1861—Battle of Barboursville, W. Va., had much to do in consolidating to the Union sentiment and unstylish dressing of the women, the majority of whom always have their skirts a little bit crooked, or the petticoat showing unevenly on one side or the other.
1873—Jay Cooke failed; great financial panic and five years of "hard times."
1890—Dion Boucicault, actor and playwright, died in New York city, aged 66.

Undoubtedly.

Mr. Bingo (at summer resort hotel)—What the mischief has become of my diamond pin? I left it on the table while we went down to breakfast.

Mrs. Bingo—Why don't you ring for the bell boy. He probably has it on.—Clothier and Furnisher.

The Autumn Girl.

You may talk of the gushing summer girl,
With a rippling laugh and eyes of blue,
With hair that grows in a close, tight curl,
And gleams like gold as the sun shines through;
Who sports a racket and wears buff shoes,
Climbs hills and mountains, and romps and tears;
But—
Her reign will soon cease when the summer's o'er,
When the winds of September the dry leaves whirl,
And the heat of the summer sun's no more.
'Tis then we shall get the autumn girl.

With a face of the olive's soft, warm hue,
A cheek like the leaf as to red it turns,
An eye that the fire of love shines through,
And heats your heart till it throbs and burns;
With a mouth like the huntsman's curving bow,
Lips as red as the ripe, ripe cherry,
Pearls for teeth in a perfect row,
As white as the breast of the partridge berry;
With locks that fall o'er her shoulders white,
And 'round her full neck like serpents cling,
Black as the sky on a starless night,
And glossy as ever a raven's wing.
With a form that bends like the wind blown tree,
And bending sets your brain in a whirl;
She is the queen of our hearts indeed!
Our willowy, warm hatful autumn girl.

TALK OF THE TOWN

—Bicycle "run" from Y. M. C. A. tonight.

—Answer await "Alexander," "Doctor H. E. Robinson."

—Don't fail to read the special announcement in Edsall's new advertisement to-day.

—The members of Engine Company No. 2 took their apparatus out for a "wash" last evening.

—The annual meeting for the election of officers of the W. C. T. U. will be held in the rooms Monday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

—The Emerald Beneficial Societies of New Jersey are to hold their annual State Convention in this city next month. A big turnout is anticipated.

—Prof. Barney, formerly an actor, speaks in Reform Hall tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Good speaking, good singing and a lively time generally.

—The Somerset county temperance convention will be held in the Second Reformed church at Somerville on Tuesday, Sept. 29. Rev. Addison Parker will deliver the address.

—The young Linden avenue ball nine, of North Plainfield, played a game of ball with the Jackson avenue nine this morning. The former nine was defeated by a score of 20 to 14.

—Special attention is called to the change in time, of holding the sessions of the First Baptist Sunday school. Hereafter the school will open at half-past two o'clock in the afternoon.

—The United Tea and Coffee Growers' Association have just received a large consignment of butter which they are disposing of at the lowest possible prices. See their advertisement in another column.

—Two games of base ball are being contested in this city as we go to press. One between the Crescents and the West Ends of Somerville and the other between the Bayonne Outing Club and the Bicycle Club.

—The postmasters in the United States will soon receive for the use of their offices a quality of fine wire kind, to be known as the "Eagle lock key," and to be used on the Eagle lock, which are to be put into service within the next few months.

—There were 233 failures in the United States reported to Bradstreet's during the week ended 178 in the week preceding week and 162, 190, 124 and 144 in the corresponding weeks of 1890, 1889, 1888 and 1887 respectively. The total number of failures in the United States January 1st to date is 8,326 against 7,100 in 1890.

—The road wagon finished in natural wood is coming into more and more favor every year. They present a neat and "bobby" appearance, costless money and do not show mudge so much as the vehicles that are painted and varnished so as to plainly show every scratch on them and the particle of dust and mud they come in contact with.

—The Plainfield papers are rather mild at the result of the game last Saturday. They realize that the game was well played by both sides and that the Crescents won by a scratch. They condemn the action of those who called Bammill "a stuff" and justly so. Chaffing is well enough, but when it goes further than that it is indecent and should not be indulged in by respectable people.—Somerville Democrat.

Blocked by a Disabled Engine.

An accident last night at the depot in Elizabeth blocked travel on the Central railroad for over half an hour. A freight engine on the Pennsylvania with a long, loaded train attached broke down on the crossing between the two roads interest. The machinery connected with the pumps gave way, sending all the water into the firebox and putting out the fire. It was some time before another engine could be procured to haul away the train of blocked West Grand street. The accident happened just at the time of day when passenger traffic is the heaviest over both railroads.

To Celebrate Their Anniversary.

Invitations will soon be issued for the second anniversary of Minquomamo Tribe, No. 318, Improved Order of Red Men, which will take place in their wigwam on the evening of October 9th. There will be both vocal and instrumental music, recitations, etc. The members of Minquomamo Tribe are determined to make the coming entertainment the best ever given by them and they have secured some of the best talent obtainable. Admission will be by invitation only.

The Turners Coming.

The various Turning Societies of Brooklyn, Newark and Elizabeth will visit this city to-morrow and hold their annual picnic on the top of the mountains. They will be entertained by the members of the Plainfield Gesang and Turning Society. During the day a number of athletic contests will be indulged in and the day's festivities will be brought to a close by a banquet which will be in the Saengerand Turner Hall on Somerset street.

Young Miller Improving.

John Miller, the Plainfield young man who was struck in the mouth by a base ball at Boynton Beach on Labor Day and who has been in a precarious condition ever since, is reported as much improved to-day and his physician expresses strong hopes of his ultimate recovery. He is now at the home of his parents in Finderne.

G. O. P. CLUBS TO MEET.

According to the Call they May Do Lots of Things.

Elmore W. Sanderson, of Newark, Secretary of the New Jersey State Republican League, has issued a call for a convention of Republican clubs in Taylor's Opera House, Trenton, Thursday, Oct. 15. The object of the convention will be the reorganization of the League, election of officers and the consideration of plans to promote the cause of Republicanism in New Jersey. The call says:

All Republican clubs now existing, or which may be organized prior to the Convention, are requested to send their President and five delegates and five alternates to represent them in the Convention. Names of delegates should be sent to the Secretary, at his office in Newark, not later than Oct. 10, that the roll of clubs may be made up.

"Let every Republican and ward be represented, that an aggressive campaign may be commenced against fraud, corruption and extravagance; that the purity of the ballot box may be preserved and crimes against it punished, instead of being rewarded with public office; that economy in the administration of State affairs may be inaugurated, and local taxes reduced; that useless offices may be abolished and extravagant fees and salaries cut down; that State institutions may be taken out of the realm of partisan politics and administered in the interests of the taxpayers and the unfortunate inmates; that personal aggrandizement at the expense of the public may be checked; that the people of each locality may be allowed to administer their own affairs without having either county Excise Boards or irresponsible Boards of Public Works thrust upon them.

Let the young men of the party rally for protection to American industries; for honest money and for economical and honest administration of State affairs.

J. H. GARRIL, President.
E. W. SANDERSON, Secretary.
No. 740 Broad street, Newark.

FOUND THEM ON THE ENGINE.

A Plainfield Passenger Station Robbed—Three Men Arrested on Suspicion.

At about four o'clock this morning Sergt. Gerstung received a telegram from Plainfield stating that the Grant avenue station of the Central railroad had been broken into and robbed. The thieves were believed to be on a train going in the direction of this city.

Serg. Gerstung and Officers Nolan and E. Smith waited at the Union depot, and when the train reached this city, arrested John A. Mathews, John Kehoe and Jacob Kelly whom they found on the locomotive.

These men answer the description of the thieves, but they have nothing on their persons belonging to the railroad. They deny the charge. Detective Morris was at police headquarters this morning, and at his request the men will be held for further hearing—Elizabeth Journal.

TOOK A TURN AT MIDDLESEX.

The State Board of Taxation is Still Going the Rounds.

The State Board of Taxation met the Assessors of the cities and townships of Middlesex county in New Brunswick Thursday. The meeting and its results were disappointments to a large number of taxpayers, who claim that their assessments are too high, and who supposed they had nothing to do but present themselves before this board with the evidence that their property was taxed higher than neighboring property of greater value in order to have their tax reduced. The board did not broach the subject of the adjustment of taxes or assessments.

Expect to Complete the Road.

A meeting of the Executive Committee of the Rockaway Valley Railroad, which runs from Whitehall, where it connects with the Lehigh Valley line, to Wharham, about eight miles from Morristown, took place yesterday. The secretary reported that $22,000 of the $40,000 required to extend the line had been subscribed, and that $14,000 had been deposited with the Secretary of State as the law requires. The number of miles of track to be laid is seven. The amount of money yet required to complete the road is $18,000, which it is expected will be in hand inside of a month.

Gored by a Cow.

Four-year-old Anna Burnett, of Washington Valley, went into her father's barnyard a few days ago while he was milking and before any one could prevent it, a young cow, attracted by the bright red dress she wore, charged upon her, bellowing and snorting fiercely, knocked her down, trampled upon her and gored her frightfully. Besides inflicting other wounds, the animal ripped open her cheek and tore her scalp in many places. The little girl is not expected to live.

The Somerville Fair.

Fifteen thousand persons attended the Somerset County Fair Thursday. The race-track was the main attraction and much interest was manifested in the attempt made to drive the team Clayton and Lady Thorn in 2.24½. The former was owned by John C. Delavergne, of Fleetwood Park, N. Y. The mile was covered in 2:38½, Reference, owned by J. C. Delavergue, won the 2:28 class race in 2:30¼.

Who Was This Man.

An unknown man was struck and instantly killed by a Central Railroad express train on the Bergen Point and Elizabeth bridge about 9 o'clock last night. His body was recovered, but nothing was found on his body to establish his identity. A brass baggage check, No. 97, was the sole contents of his pockets. He was apparently a laboring man.

SOCIAL & PERSONAL

Miss Etta LaSourelle, of White House, is visiting her cousin Miss Bennett of this city.

Mr. James Whitfield, formerly of this city but now of Tacoma, is visiting Plainfield for a few weeks.

WORLD'S FAIR NOTES.

Some of the Interesting and Wonderful Exhibitions That Will be Seen.

Siam has decided to make a exhibit at Chicago which shall eclipse the one it made at the Paris exposition, where it carried off the honors in the oriental section.

The publishers of Puck, the well-known comic paper, have been granted space 50 by 100 feet, for a building on the Exposition grounds, in which to show fully every detail of the process of editing and publishing a humorous paper.

An imposter, calling himself "W. Stinson, of 19 Rue Louis Armand Paris," has been engaged in selling, in Europe, agencies for the Exposition. He sold the ingencies for Norway and Sweden to a Stockholm man for $2,000. The Exposition authorities have taken steps to put a stop to the operations. No one is authorized to sell agencies for the Exposition.

Henry B. Worthington has offered to furnish the Exposition, free of charge, pumps with a capacity of 40,000,000 gallons of water a day.

It has been decided to have the Ma*chinery Annex an annex in fact instead* of being an isolated structure as at first planned. The annex will adjoin Machinery Hall on the west. The entire structure will have measure 500 by 1,400 feet and be second in size only to the Manufacturers' Building, the dimentions of which are 700 by 1,687 feet. The art galleries, the latter building will have forty acres of floor space.

More than $151,000 was paid into the Exposition treasury, on stock subscriptions, on August 31st, and for a week or more previous the receipts ran from $50,000 to $75,000 daily. The Exposition Directors, some time since, offered one ticket for each share paid up before September 1, and many have accepted the proffer. On or about the 20th of each subscriptions, making 60 per cent. in all, was due September 1.

The first cotton gin, made by Eli Whitney, will be exhibited at the Exposition by the New Orleans Machinery Company, which will also make an extensive exhibit of cotton gins, sugar mills and other machinery.

*A genius at Muhlenberg, Pa., has com*pleted a marvelous clock for exhibition at the Fair. Around the dial is a railway track, on which a miniature locomotive makes the round every five minutes. It requires a steaming pressure of 100 pounds, and it has been named "The Gem."

The preparation of Colorado's exhibit is progressing energetically. Besides the mineral, agricultural and educational exhibits, the flora and fauna of the State will be shown in great completeness. Already more than 1,000 specimens of plants have been preserved, nearly 300 varieties of fruit have been duplicated perfectly in wax, and more than 2,000 species of insects have been mounted.

The Texas World's Fair Association is pushing, with great energy, the work of collecting funds for the States representation at Chicago. The sum desired is $300,000, and $150,000 has been assessed among the 245 counties as nearly as possible, according to population, on a basis of fifteen cents per capita. The association has headquarters at Fort Worth, and has distributed all over the State sumptuous literature with excellent results. In one of its circular letters appears the following: "We are preparing to participate in an exhibition costing nearly fifty millions of dollars; one in which every nation of consequence on the face of the world will be represented, and where she can show her vast resources to fifty millions of visitors, which number in five years a million new people and five hundred millions more money to circulate in our State."

A magnificent microscope has just been completed by the Magnolia Pueller Physical and Optical Institute for the great Chicago Exposition, at a cost of $8,250. It possesses a magnifying power of 11,000 diameters. As might be expected, electricity plays an important part in the working of this wonderful instrument, which, after inspection by Americans, is expected to give an impetus to the Munich manufacture of scientific apparatus. The electricity furnishes and regulates the source of light, which is placed in the focus of a parabolic aluminium reflector reaches an intensity of 11,000 candle power. The electricity also provides the means of an ingenious automatic mechanism for the centering of the objectives, which produces and illuminating the lenses. There is an arrangement for the exact control of the distance between the objectives. The most important novel feature is the cooling machine. By this ingenious device an account of the extreme heat, 1-43 calories per second, generated by the intense illuminating power, is carried off and kept regulated by a Helmholtz electric centrifugal regulator provides the several microscopic and polarizing systems of the apparatus with a fine spray of fluid carbonic acid, which immediately after its evaporation in the copper vessel, in which it is held under a pressure of 25 atmospheres, is converted into a cool gaseous matter, so intensely cold that only .0007 Gramme of carbonic acid per second is required to do the work. The magnifying power of the apparatus with ordinary objectives, as has been proved, is 4,000 diameters, but with the oil immersion it can be increased to 16,000.

Workers' Training Classes.

The workers' training classes of the Young Men's Christian Association which have been so successful in the past year will begin work Oct. 1st. The course of study in both classes will tend to fit the members for the Sunday-school work. The lessons will be very different from the Sunday-school lessons, but will be very useful to Sunday-school teachers.

The Ladder Slipped.

A young man named Holmes was engaged painting a gutter on a house belonging to Henry Fisher on West Fourth street this morning, when the ladder on which he was standing slipped and fell on the adjoining building. He escaped serious injuries, although he was covered with paint from head to foot.

DEATHS

DICKSON—At Oak Tree, N. J., Sept. 18th, Jennett, wife of Thomas Dickson, aged 45 years, two months, 15 days.

Funeral services from her late residence Oak Tree Monday, Sept. 21st at two o'clock p. m.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

THE DWYERS WANTED $4,000.

The Telephone Company and the Race Track Proprietors Can't Agree.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19, (Special)—W. C. Hutchinson of the W. U. Telegraph Company acted to-day as arbitrator between Phil. Dwyer and DeLacy. The meeting lasted one hour.

Dwyer wanted $4,000 to allow the Company to put a wire in the race-track inclosure.

The Company's representative thought that as racing will only continue a few days more, the amount was exorbitant. No agreement was reached.

A TERRIFIC GAS EXPLOSION.

A Brewery and Several Buildings Destroyed.—Men Injured and Killed.

BRUSSELS, Germany, Sept., 19th, (Special.)—A terrific gas explosion occurred in a Brewery here to-day. The brewery was demolished.

Several workmen in the building were seriously injured. All the near-by dwellings collapsed. A wealthy merchant passing by was instantly killed. Fire followed the explosion.

79 DEATHS BY TYPHOID.

The Report Made by the Authorities.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19. (Special.)—The Bureau of Contagious Diseases reported to-day that there had been 79 deaths of typhoid fever within a week.

This is 20 over the number at this time last year.

SUICIDE AT BORDENTOWN.

Business Trouble the Cause.

BORDENTOWN, N. J., Sept. 19, 1891 (Special.)—Charles Pitter a cabinet maker, aged 53, committed suicide to-day by hanging himself with a rope, in his work shop. Business trouble is said to be the cause.

Her Pocket Picked.

Wednesday afternoon Mrs. Joel Giddis of Dunellen started for Plainfield with a well-filled pocketbook to do some shopping and at the same time view the parade. In the cars upon her return home a well dressed man sat in the seat with her. At Evona he got up to leave the car and at the same time Mrs. Gaddis felt for her pocketbook and found that it was gone. Instantly she took hold of the man by the coat sleeve and demanded her money. He denied emphatically that he had taken it. Mrs. Giddis then called upon the conductor and several gentlemen in the car to arrest the man, who commenced to feel the seats of Somerville headed by the Crescent Cornet Band of Raritan. In case the West Ends win to-day it will require another game between the two teams to decide the championship.

A Woman and Child Injured.

A man named Smith, who resides at New Market, informed a reporter that as he was driving along Clinton avenue, Tuesday afternoon, the horse which he was driving dropped dead. He further says that his wife and child who were in the vehicle, to which the animal was attached at the time, were thrown out and both badly injured.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Sarah Bernhardt says that art, literature and civilization are making such giant strides in the United States that soon Americans will have nothing to envy France except the climate, the gayety of the French people and their cooking.

Our own Benjamin was simple Major Butterworth when he went abroad with the other Columbian fair commissioners. Now he comes back to us General Butterworth. How did he get to be general? Perhaps it is his good looks and good nature.

In southwest Louisiana is the largest farm in the world. It measures 25 miles by 100 and contains over 1,500,000 acres. It is owned by a syndicate of northern capitalists, who cultivate rice, sugar corn and cotton. All the farming is done by steam power

Few persons have any idea of the vast quantity of what is literally "star dust" that falls upon the earth year by year. Infinitesimal meteorites that nobody sees touch our atmosphere constantly and dart down upon the bosom of mother earth. They are so many that the earth actually increases in weight to the amount, it is believed, of 90,000 tons a year.

Straws that show the wind to be blowing in curious directions stand out before the observant eye in the workman's parliament at Newcastle, England. There was the hottest sort of a debate in the committee of arrangements over the proposition to drink the time honored toast of loyalty, "The Queen and the Royal Family." Heretofore her majesty has had no more faithful subject than the British workingman, but on this occasion he held out stoutly against the usual toast. At length it was modified to read, "The Queen and the Country," and was then allowed to go on the programme. Another significant fact was that socialism is creeping into the British workingman's thoughts. Formerly the trades unionists governed the labor congresses entirely and socialism, was repudiated as un-English, therefore wicked. But the old trades union leaders are losing their influence and men who hold socialistic ideas are taking the reins Commended to Anglomaniacs.

Nothing illustrates the comparative estimation in which women are held in Great Britain and America better than an incident that happened lately at a working girls' fair in England. The occasion was the festival of the Girls' Friendly society. Of course various personages from the "superior ranks" stooped from their heights to patronize these humble creatures in their own proper sphere. There were prizes offered for the various accomplishments supposed to befit females in the humbler walks of life. Among the prizes so offered his high mightiness the bishop of Bedford Park offered the second and third best—for what? Was it making preserves or bread or ironing or perhaps the artistic arrangement of the dinner table? Well, no, it wasn't. It was for boot cleaning and blacking.

The British hired girl must clean the mud off her master's boots and black them. If there are several grown sons in the family, their foot coverings go along too, and the inferior creature who does the household has a whole assortment to go over every morning. Here is an idea for our Anglomaniacs Let them set the hired girl to blacking boots as a part of her work, and at the next festival of the Working Girls' club in the midst of the musical performances and the papers on literature, let us have a boot blacking contest among the girls with a bishop to boss it.

Baldness and Culture.

A learned German savant, Dr. Alexander Winckler, quoting the statement that the man of the finished civilization will in all probability be baldheaded and toothless, proceeds to give directions for enabling the average individual to reach the state of high culture as soon as possible, at least so far as baldness is concerned.

The first rule to attain this sign of culture quickly is to keep the head as warm as possible. Barebeaded nations have thick hair, consequently they are low in the scale of civilization. So cover your head close and hot, winter and summer In winter always wear a fur cap. In summer do not patronize such uncultured and trashy devices as straw hats, but bear about upon your cranium a stiff felt or silk headcovering Do not go bareheaded even in the house. Uncultured nature might then assert herself and decline to make you bald. Wear therefore, a fez or cilakin cap in the house.

If nature refuses to help women along to baldness rapidly enough, let them put on rolls of false hair. This is one of the best possible devices for hastening the sign of culture. So are surgical curling irons and the old fashioned night caps so prized by our grandmothers The hair waters and pomades of the ancients are also to be recommended So is raking the head twice or thrice daily with sharp toothed combs and steel brushes. Dissipation is an excellent means to the same end. Among all these, if in a short time your head does not become as naked as a peeled onion then it will be certain that there is no audacity for the highest culture in you.

ANOTHER FIGHT FEARED

Kentucky Miners Are Ready to Invade Tennessee.

GOVERNOR BUCHANAN ALARMED.

He Telegraphs Governor Brown, of Kentucky, Asking Him to Stop the Proposed Advance Upon Briceville—The Convict Labor Question Again.

LOUISVILLE, Sept. 19.—From telegrams that have passed between Governor Buchanan, of Tennessee, and Governor John Brown, of Kentucky, trouble of a serious nature seems to be again brewing in the Tennessee coal mines at Briceville over the employment of convict labor leased by the state to mining companies. The recent crisis when the militia and the miners were opposed in battle array at Briceville was averted by the calling of a special session of the Tennessee legislature to consider the report of the laws concerning the leasing of convict labor. The miners threatened to make more trouble and to release the convicts in the stockade unless the obnoxious law was repealed.

The Cause of the Trouble.

When the legislature met the other day it discussed the question at great length, but finally decided that the laws must remain unchanged. This has infuriated the miners and more trouble is probable. Governor Buchanan, of Tennessee, has sent the following telegram:

Governor Buchanan's Telegram.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Sept. 18.

Governor Brown, Frankfort:

Reliable information received here indicates miners from Kentucky are preparing to attack Tennessee prisoners in the branches at Briceville and Coal Creek Tenn. These parties have once before invaded Tennessee and released convicts. With this information before you, I am satisfied you will use your influence and power to keep down the threatened lawlessness on the part of the citizens of your state. JOHN P. BUCHANAN, Governor.

Governor Brown's Reply.

this telegram Governor Brown promptly replied:

FRANKFORT, Ky., Sept. 18.

Governor Buchanan, Nashville:

Your dispatch received. In so far as I may have any power will do what I can to antidote the threatened outbreak However, would suggest that if citizens of Kentucky and Tennessee for any unlawful purpose they are liable for punishment by your state. JOHN BROWN.

A Sop to the Miners.

NASHVILLE, Sept. 19.—By a rising vote of 14 to 11 the senate adopted the resolution introduced by Mr. Penland expressing it as the sense of the house and senate that it would be profitable to the sub lessees to remove the convicts from Briceville, employ free labor and give them a check weighman as the best means of settling the convict question.

Although strong objection was made by Mr. Penland, the senate passed the appropriation bill, which authorizes the payment of $14,333 expenses incurred by the state troops during the Briceville trouble.

Comp'ny's Coming.

Ma, she's dreadful busy a-hurryin 'round the house,
As boys are in the way she says—Oh, mercy! what a noise.
I can't sit here, I can't sit there, or even white a stick,
Without I hear this same old cry, "Move out o the way there, quick!"
Oh, what's a fellow to do, and where's a fellow to go?
And how can he keep on livin when his mother treats him so!
But she wasn't one 'round the house an keeps me jest a-running
On errands o' her's—'cause why? Why, com p'ny's coming!

IT'S AWFUL TO BE A BOY. That this house moves on, now I tell you—an they're for ever running.

But more especially days like this, 'cause why? Why, comp'ny's coming!

But after all—when the comp'ny's gone an bedtime comes once more,
An ma takes up the nursery lamp an marches us through the door,
An up the stairs like a flock o' sheep, an hurries us into bed,
An tucks us in an hears our prayers an pats us on the head,
An kisses us all an talks awhile an laughs an jokes with me—
Somehow or other I kind o' forget the hard work an the fuss.
An think that there ain't in all the world a mother half so good
If she does keep me a-runaing to split the kindlin wood,
An gather the eggs an run to the store an a hundred other things
An when she sits beside my bed an rocks the baby an sings,
An smooths my hair an praises me up an calls me her good boy,
I'm glad that there ain't in all the world a mother half so good
As the one I've got, an look into her face an hear her gentle humming,
An love her when the angels knows—even when—comp'ny's coming!

THE BEHRING SEA DISPUTE.

England Claims That Uncle Sam Has Shown Bad Faith.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—Sir Julian Pauncefote, the British minister, has called the attention of the United States to a violation of the terms of the modus vivendi in force between the two countries as to the catch of seal in Behring sea. It is alleged that the North American Commercial company has exceeded its catch. Special Agent Williams, of the treasury department, it is understood, admits the fact alleged.

What the Thunderer Says.

LONDON, Sept. 12.—Commenting upon news announcing the Behring sealing discussions published in its columns, The Times calls the Americans' claims preposterous. It says: "Their action is arbitrary and high handed. If they will show a reasonable spirit of compromise, it will be a good thing to come to an arrangement, for a closure during the breeding season of an area of perhaps twenty miles round the breeding grounds."

MILLER WILL SUE FOR LIBEL.

He Declares That Detective Campbell's Story Is a Fiction.

CAMDEN, N. J., Sept. 19.—Judge Wescott, counsel for Linge, has served an order for the taking of the evidence of Detective Campbell and others for presentation to the supreme court in support of the motion for a new trial. The hearing will take place next Tuesday before Master in Chancery George A. Vroom.

When John Miller heard of the publication of the Campbell affidavit he called on Prosecutor Jenkins and told him that the detective's story was false. He told a reporter that he would bring suit for libel against ex-Judge Wescott, prosecutor.

Campbell declares that his affidavit is absolutely correct, and that he will support it when he comes under examination.

Judge Wescott claims to have secured other important testimony which can but so impress the supreme court judges as to grant a new trial for the negro. One part of this is the location of a black Astrakhan coat which Mrs. Miller was said to wear the morning she went away. Mary Collins swore at the hearing that Mrs. Miller wore such a coat, and none was found on or about the body when it was discovered in the bushes. Now, however, Judge Wescott declares that he has evidence that Mrs. Miller did wear a coat, a black Astrakhan, which her sister, Mary Collins, gave her, and that coat, he says, has been seen since the murder.

The question of how did it reach the Miller house? And the judge thinks it points, like many other small but strong things, to the fact that Mrs. Miller was not murdered in the bushes where she was found. That settled, Lingo's innocence would be established beyond a question.

HORRIBLE CASE OF CANNIBALISM

Starving Russians Disinter a Woman's Body and Devour It.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 19.—A well authenticated case of cannibalism is reported from the government of Penza, where the famine rages in its worst form. It is said that the starving family of a peasant removed from the graveyard the freshly buried body of a woman of the better class, who had died suddenly, not from starvation but probably some heart trouble, and removed and fed upon portions of the flesh.

The horrible fact was discovered by other famine victims who, instead of exposing the case, themselves insisted on a share of the remains. Finally the cannibalism came to light through a revelation made to the priest of the village. Such confusion reigns in the famine districts that nothing has been done to punish the cannibals, who would probably welcome imprisonment with food at the government expense.

Roscoe Conkling's Brother Dead.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—Colonel Frederick A. Conkling, aged about seventy-five years, brother of the late Roscoe Conkling, died at his residence, 27 East Tenth street, at 5 p. m. Sept. 18. His death was unexpected, although he had been unwell for some time. Cancer of the stomach was the cause of his death. Colonel Conkling served in both houses of the legislature as a Republican, but during the Greeley campaign he changed his politics, being bitterly opposed to a third term. He was a member of the Geographical society.

Twins Drowned.

PATERSON, N. J., Sept. 19.—John W. and Fred Walmsley, twins, aged nine, were drowned at the lower end of the Passaic Falls Friday afternoon. They were bathing when one of them slipped off a rock. His brother jumped after him and both sank. They looked so much alike that those who saw the drowning could not tell which made the attempt at rescue.

To Break Succi's Fasting Record.

CORTLAND, N. Y., Sept. 19.—George Stratton, cook at the Messenger House here, has signed a contract to outfast Succi in New York next month. He will try to make it fifty days. He has fasted forty days Stratton drinks two gallons of water daily If he is successful he will beat the fifty days' record at the World's fair.

Did Scheide Rob Rouss?

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—Joseph Scheide, a tinware manufacturer of Brooklyn and Portland, Me., has been arrested at the store of Charles Broadway Rouss, charged with presenting altered and fraudulent bills for goods sold to Rouss. It is alleged that Scheide had obtained something like $75,000. Scheide denies.

Ate Toadstools and Will Die.

YONKERS, N. Y., Sept. 19.—The family of James Giblin ate a quantity of toadstools that had been gathered by Mr. Giblin for mushrooms, and all the members are in a critical condition. Mr. and Mrs. Giblin and her sister, Mrs. Annie Smith, will probably die.

He Murdered Two Wives.

SAVANNAH, Sept. 19.—Albert Monea, alias Grant Kitchen, the negro wife murderer, was hanged in the county jail at 10:43 a. m. Kitchen confessed to the killing of his first wife in 1889, and his second wife in April last. Both murders were diabolical in character.

Postmaster and Green Goods Man.

BIRMINGHAM, Pa., Sept. 19.—The postmaster at Edwardsville, Clebourne county, M. D. Thrasher, is charged with corresponding with green goods men in New York with the object of obtaining a supply of the goods. He is under arrest.

To the Bitter End.

HUNTINGDON, Pa., Sept. 19.—The employes at the Rock Hill iron and Coal company's plants at Orbisonia have decided to continue the strike to the bitter end. The company say they will start up with imported men.

"Lord" Beresford to Be Punished.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—"Lord" Walter S. Beresford, the Rock Hill Britt who enticed many gullible Americans in this city and in the state of Georgia, is to be sent back to Georgia for his crimes there antedate his frauds here.

They Robbed the Dead.

MADRID, Sept. 19.—At Consuegra, in the flooded districts, two men have been arrested charged with robbing the dead. The prisoners had in some instances acted as the receivers of stolen goods.

They Killed Two Red Men.

SAGINAW, Mich., Sept. 19.—In a drunken quarrel between Dan and John Sagonaw, two Indians, and Charles Norton and James Bradshaw, two white men, the two Indians were killed.

Miners on Strike.

SHAMOKIN, Pa., Sept. 19.—A strike for an advance in wages has been inaugurated by the miners employed by the Bryon colliery.

THE WORLD OF POLITICS

Was Mr. Jones Offered the Gubernatorial Nomination?

HE IS REPORTED TO HAVE SAID SO.

Some Time Ago, He Is Reported as Stating, the Leadership Was Tendered Him, but Upon Terms Which He Would Not Accept—Alleged Independent Move.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—A correspondent of The Herald telegraphs from Albany that Lieutenant Governor Jones says he was offered the Democratic nomination for governor six months ago. The following conversation is said to have occurred:

Could Never Be a Candidate.

"See here," Mr. Jones said, with emphasis, "did you notice that the Binghamton correspondent of a New York paper said I was very much dejected at the result of the Saratoga convention? I want to deny that. I have not seen a correspondent of that paper since the convention at Saratoga. More than that I was not dejected. Whatever disappointment there may have been to my ambition it was all disappointment more than six months ago. What do I mean? Why, that terms have been offered me upon which I could have had the Democratic nomination for governor. I rejected the offer and was told that I could never be the candidate of the Democratic party."

No Light on His Plans.

Asked if he knew anything about a concerted movement to nominate him by an "Independent" and "farmer" combination, he declined to answer. Nor would he speak about either ticket or shed any light on the plans he may have already projected to carry out the threat made in his Binghamton "address."

Alleged Third Party Movement.

The correspondent says that Thomas Callahan, of Utica, representing the Independent Democratic association of the state, is in Albany and is reported to have said: "We will soon hold a convention of our own and nominate a ticket of Binghamton." Further than that the stranger was non-committal, but he was subsequently seen in conversation with Henry E. Alvord, of the State Farmers' league, and it is believed that a scheme is under way to work up a boom for the Binghamton scalemaker that will go far to help him carry out his threat.

Mayor Chapin Offers to Take the Stump

WATERTOWN, N. Y., Sept. 19.—The following congratulatory letter from Mayor Alfred C. Chapin of Brooklyn, has been received by Hon. R. P. Flower:

DEAR SIR—The distinction conferred upon you by the Democratic state convention yesterday should be accepted with pride by any citizen. I beg leave to congratulate you upon your nomination for the high office of governor. I need not say that your candidacy will receive strong and loyal support in this county. If you wish me to render any service in the course of the campaign do not hesitate to call upon me.

Springer Opens Iowa's Campaign.

SPENCER, Sept. 19.—The Democratic campaign was opened in this city by Congressman William M. Springer, of Springfield, Ill., in the presence of an immense crowd. Mr. Springer is the unanimous choice of this part of Iowa for the speakership. The principal portion of his address was devoted to the tariff.

Green and Ward Nominated.

BUFFALO, Sept. 19.—The Republican judiciary convention of the fourth district nominated Manly C. Green, of Buffalo, to succeed Judge Daniels, whose term expires, and Hamilton Ward, of Allegany county, to succeed the late Judge Corlett.

Sherwood to Succeed Faisett.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—"Franklin D. Sherwood, of Hornellsville, will probably be Mr. Fassett's successor in the senate," said Republican State Committeeman Parkhurst, of Elmira. "Sherwood will be nominated and elected without a doubt."

They Will Support Sheehan.

BUFFALO, Sept. 19.—Wilson S. Bissell, General Peter Doyle and Augustus Schoellkopf, who have been among the prominent leaders here, have announced their intention of supporting the entire Democratic ticket, including Sheehan.

A Paper's Change of Politics.

CORTLAND, N. Y., Sept. 19.—The Cortland Journal, the only daily in the county, has changed its politics from an independent to a Republican newspaper. It supports the entire Republican ticket.

Belden for Secretary of War.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—It is believed here that Congressman J. J. Belden, of Syracuse, N. Y., will be appointed secretary of war. Messrs. Platt and Hiscock are said to favor his selection.

Mlle. Vacaresco Attempts Suicide.

MILAN, Sept. 19.—It is alleged that on Wednesday night last Mlle. Vacaresco, driven to despair, attempted to commit suicide because she could never marry Prince Ferdinand and would never be allowed to return to the side of the queen, whom she loves so dearly. Medical aid was quickly summoned and the physicians came just in time to save her life.

President Hogan Killed.

BOCAS DEL TORO, Colombia, via GALVESTON, Texas, Sept. 19.—Passengers by the American schooner Wilford announce that the settlements along the Hondupas coast at which the vessel touched are rife with wild rumors, and President Bogman is said to have been assassinated in his private office by a prominent member of the Barilla party.

Tried to Burn His Store.

MORRISTOWN, N. J., Sept. 19.—W. G. Lacy, a cabinetmaker in Morristown, was committed to jail by Justice Cliff on a charge of arson. Policemen saw Lacy enter his store and set fire to a pile of shavings, and arrested him.

Pacific Train Robbers Captured.

MUSKEGEE, I. T., Sept. 19.—The officers in pursuit of the Pacific train robbers have overtaken them seventy-five miles west of here. After a sharp fight, in which one of the Bolton boys was wounded, their capture was effected.

Buried Alive by a Cavein.

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 19.—John Dwyer, of State street, was making a sewer connection in James street, near Grand avenue, when the earth caved in, burying him alive.

England Should Explain.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 19.—The Novoe Vremya, referring to the Sigri incident, says that England should explain the landing of troops at Mityleue.

A KINGSTON BANKER'S FALL.

Treasurer James E. Ostrander Arrested for Stealing About $100,000.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Sept. 19.—The city was thrown into a flutter of excitement by the announcement that James E. Ostrander, one of the best known of bank officers here and treasurer of the Ulster County Savings institution, is a defaulter. The amount he has appropriated is estimated to be between $70,000 and $100,000. The peculations extend over a period of many years, small sums being taken at a time Ostrander's downfall is the result of extravagant living.

The bank has deposits of $2,250,000, with a surplus of nearly $300,000, and will ride over the difficulty without embarrassment. Notwithstanding this there was a slight run on the bank and about $30,000 of deposits withdrawn. Several large deposits were also made.

Ostrander was arrested on a charge of grand larceny in the first degree and arraigned before the recorder. He waived examination and will give bail. He has been a member of the board of education, the common council and has held many other positions of trust.

Colonel Couthouy $10,000 Short.

BOSTON, Sept. 19.—An investigation into the accounts of Gould W. A. Couthouy, Boston agent of Clubbs & Sons, general agents for the Marine Insurance company, of London, has revealed a shortage of $10,000. Couthouy is said to be short in his accounts with the Providence Washington Insurance company. He has left town. He moved in the best society, and was very popular.

CHICAGO HAS $3,000,000.

That Amount of Cash Already on Hand, It Is Said.

CHICAGO, Sept. 19.—It is announced that the $8,000,000 required by the city ordinance to be collected by the World's Columbian exposition on subscriptions to its capital stock before the city would place on the market the $5,000,000 worth of bonds it was authorized to issue in aid of the Columbian enterprise, had all been collected.

The Chicago members of the European World's Fair commission, accompanied by Henry T. Wood, secretary of the English commission; Herr Wermuth, German commissioner; James H. Soper, of the British commission, and Robert McCormick, the London agent of the commission, arrived in this city last night. A pleasant programme has been arranged for the visitors, including a banquet or two, carriage rides and exploring parties to the scene of the building operations at Jackson park.

Made an Example of Wing Lee.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—Wing Lee, who pleaded guilty to having abducted fifteen-year-old Lizzie Sprout from Camden, N. J., was arraigned for sentence before Recorder Smyth. The court said he was going to make an example of such violators of the law, and sentenced Wing Lee to state prison for three years and eleven months. Wing was a Philadelphia laundryman and slopped Lizzie as she was taught his class in a Camden Sunday school.

Brookfield Is Chairman.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—At a meeting of the Republican state committee William Brookfield was chosen to succeed General Knapp as chairman of the Republican state committee and General Husted became chairman of the executive committee. James W. Wadsworth, of Geneseo, was elected treasurer. "What will be the plan of the coming campaign?" was asked of General Husted. "It will be simply this," was his response. "We will go and do as Wellington said to his troops at Waterloo, and then we will down them, which Wellington might have said, but did not."

Whitney Accuses Gould.

BUFFALO, Sept. 19.—At the trial of William Gould, Jr., implicated in the Albany City National bank looting case here, Isaac P. Whitney testified that no director ever examined the ledger to his knowledge. The identifying of checks of William Gould, Jr., & Co. was proceeded with, and Whitney showed where he had charged them on the ledger to other parties than this firm.

HE DIED FLACK'S DEBTOR

Justice Monell Owed the Ex-Sheriff Money.

NEW LIGHT ON THE DIVORCE CASE

This May Explain Why Monell Used Such Extraordinary Means to Procure a Separation a Vinculo for His Client Without the Wife's Knowledge.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—The Herald says: When James A. Flack was sheriff of New York he put away his wife with a secret divorce. The late Ambrose H. Monell then justice of a civil court, was his counsel. Judge Brookstaver, of the court of common pleas, granted the divorce. Many people wondered why Justice Monell had allowed himself to be drawn into such a transaction.

Monell Owed Flack.

The Herald tells some facts that throw a new light on the relationship between ex-Sheriff Flack and Justice Monell, in personal counsel.

The time is not far distant when all the truth about that relationship shall be known. In the meantime it is certain that when Ambrose H. Monell died he was deeply in debt to James A. Flack. It is a fact that Mr. Flack is now trying and has been trying for months to find Justice Monell's widow in order that the summons and complaint may be served on her in an action against Monell's estate.

Menaced to Flack.

At what stage in his political career did Monell find it necessary to call on Flack for assistance? Perhaps when these questions are answered the reason will be plain why Civil Justice Monell was active in the procurement of the secret divorce, the exposure of which drove James A. Flack from the sheriff's office.

It has been said that the late Ambrose H. Monell was as one manacled to ex-Sheriff Flack through money indebtedness.

He Insured Monell's Life.

Certain it is, however, that Monell was in debt to Flack, for the latter took good pains, as he supposed, to secure himself by insuring the life of Monell in the sum of $10,000 in the Mutual Reserve Fund Life association.

Maguire Wants a Divorce.

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 19.—Suit has been instituted by Richard Maguire for absolute divorce on the grounds of desertion and infidelity.

He has also retired from the firm of McIntyre & Maguire, and will soon go to Europe for years of confinement to business and the conduct of his wife, it is said, have made such a step necessary.

Married a Dying Girl.

PLAINFIELD, Conn., Sept. 19.—Miss Eunice Knight, seventeen years old, the daughter of Jerah P. Knight, is dying of a dying condition in her father's house from injuries received in a runaway accident a few days ago. The girl was married last evening to John G. Wood, of Jersey City, by the Rev. John Elderkin.

They Paid No Interest.

HARRISBURG, Sept. 19.—The legislative committee investigating the Bardsley steal are here. Several presidents of banks and trust companies have testified that they had no right of state funds, but paid no interest thereon.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF.

Secretary Tracy has awarded the contract for building torpedo boat No. 2 to the Iron Steam works, of Dubuque, Ia., for $115,000.

The United States Savings bank, of Topeka, Kan., has failed again.

Rev. Dr. Helwig, president of Wittenberg college, O., and late Prohibition candidate for governor of that state, has left the Lutheran church and gone over to the Presbyterians. The reason given is the alleged tendency of the Lutheran church to Catholicism and ritualistic services.

The steamship Mondego, from Montreal for Dundee, is a total wreck on the coast of Newfoundland. Loss, $120,000.

A. M. Haines & Co., apothecaries, Boston, have offered ten cents on the dollar to their creditors.

G. W. Hopkins, of Anna, Ills., who had threatened the life of his nephew, J. A. Hopkins, was killed by the nephew Thursday.

The agent of the Barnaby mill at Fall River, Mass., will grant no concessions to the striking weavers, who will remain out.

William Walsh was killed by a burning emery wheel in the shop of the G. F. Warner Manufacturing company at New Haven, and six other men injured.

Mrs. Hobart Kennedy, her son and daughter, Mrs. B. W. Armstrong, of Duluth, Minn., have become heirs to a fortune of 10,000,000, which has for years been in the English court of chancery.

At the celebration of the anniversary of Mexican independence at Rio Juana Thursday, a bear, fighting with a wild bull, climbed out of the arena among the spectators and created a panic before being lassoed.

The recent suicide of Captain Dodge, U. S. A., at Detroit, has caused Mrs. B. W. Cox, an inmate of the government hospital for the insane at Washington, and a former fellow patient with Captain Dodge, to drown herself.

Ex-Judge Lynde Harrison has sold his interest in the New Haven Palladium to Henry Alloway, owner of the New York Journal of Finance. The Palladium will change from a four page to an eight page six column newspaper.

Congressman Robert Bullock, of the Second congressional district of Florida, is dangerously ill at White Springs, in that state, and will probably die.

General Isaac F. Quimby died at Rochester, N. Y., Sept. 18, aged seventy years. He was born in Morris county, N. J. He was a classmate of General Grant.

Ex-Mayor Atwood, the secretary of the Landers, Frary and Clark company, died Sept. 18 in New Britain, Conn., aged fifty-four years. He went to New Britain in 1872. He was three times chosen alderman and once mayor.

Lorenz Brentano, ex-congressman from Illinois and ex-consul to Dresden, died at Chicago from paralysis, Sept. 18. He was born in Baden, Germany, in 1813, and in 1848 was the leader of the Liberal-party at Frankfort. He was president and later director of the provisional government of Baden in the year of 1849.

Bob Fitzsimmons took a big knife from a wild and irate Chinaman in Sacramento the other day, and then gave "One Lung" an ear warning that he won't forget for a year.

An Important Banking Suit.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—The question of the constitutionality of the tax of one half of one per cent., imposed on the annually net national banks, is raised in a case against the treasurer of the United States and the question will go to the supreme court. The bank bringing the suit is the Iowa Twin City National bank, of New Brighton, Minn. It would take more than $10,000,000 to refund the taxes for the past five or six years.

The Militia Withdrawn.

OTTAWA, Sept. 19.—The militia have been withdrawn from protecting the mills. The strike continues, but the men are so quiet that no trouble is now feared. Two thousand strikers formed in line and marched through the chief streets. Mill owners have issued an ultimatum declining an increase of fifty cents a week and shorter hours.

American Cattle Will Enter.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—It is probable that as soon as the new system of inspecting cattle for export has been thoroughly tested, American cattle will be allowed to enter British ports free from the ten days quarantine. Secretary Rusk says the new inspection system has increased the price of our cattle from $18 to $19 a head.

Two Killed on a Grade Crossing.

NORTH HATFIELD, Mass., Sept. 19.—William Morton, aged seventeen, and Charles Atkins, aged five, while driving a load of lumber on a grade crossing near here last night, were struck and instantly killed by the south bound Montreal express on the Connecticut River railroad. Morton's father received fatal injuries.

Buchanan's Home Sold.

LANCASTER, Pa., Sept. 19.—"Wheatland," once the historic home of James Buchanan, has practically passed into the hands of a Lancaster company, which secured the property for $25,000. The brick mansion will be used for a chapel and dwelling for the cemetery superintendent.

Austria Offended with the Kaiser.

VIENNA, Sept. 19.—A painful impression has been produced in the highest Austrian circles by the report of the kaiser's remark to Prince Napoleon of The house of Hapsburgh has Napoleon enrolled as one of its connections by marriage, and doesn't like the suggestion that the Archduchess Maria Louise was referred to as a "Corsican parvenue."

That Story About Hawaii.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 19.—D. A. McKinley, the Hawaiian consul, denies the report that Hawaii's queen favors annexation to England. "It is not likely," said the consul, "that if the queen favored such a move as this she would have her cabinet composed entirely of Americans. The story is preposterous."

Shot on an Excursion Train.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Sept. 19.—In a riot on an excursion train over the Louisville and Nashville road, near Jetts station, Henry Settles, of Hagdad, was instantly killed and Tol Brown shot through the neck. The man who did the shooting jumped from the train and escaped.

HE LIVES.

"Speak tenderly! For he is dead," we say;
"With gentle hand smooth all his rough-ness and past.
And fullest measure of reward forecast.
Forgetting all save that pierced his brief day."
Yet when the brother who slung our way—
Prone with his burdens, heart worn in the fight.
Failure before us, how we search his life,
Censure, and sternly punish while we may!

Oh, weary are the paths of earth, and hard!
And living hearts are even less spared.
At least begrudge not to the sore distraught
The reverent silence of our pitying thought.
Life, too, is sacred; and he lives unforgiven
Who says, "He errs, but" (tenderly) "he lives."
—Mary Hapes Dodge in Boston Woman's Journal.

THE MAIDEN'S LEAP.

The sun had sunk behind Ben Nevis' towering triple peak, and the mountain cast a deep shadow over the castle of Inverlochy and far out upon the placid blue waters of Lochiel.

A merry group of Highland lads and lasses were congregated upon the green-sward before the castle's walls, threading with joyous steps the mazes of the dance, to the inspiring notes of the shrill bagpipe.

All was mirth and glee, when an untoward accident disturbed the harmony of the scene. A band of Highlanders descended the mountain pass, driving before them a herd of cattle. A bull, shaggy and untamed, broke from the herd, and with a ferocious bellow dashed toward the circle of dancers.

With shrill cries they broke up their sport and fled in all directions. The infuriated animal singled out the fairest girl, probably attracted by her scarf, the prevailing color of which was red, and closely pursued her.

Though fear lent her wings, the mad beast gained upon her. He was close at her heels, his head leveled for the plunge, when a tall Highlander sprang before the flying girl, grasped the bull by the horns, and with a dexterous movement hurled the huge animal upon its back. Ere it could rise to its feet again, the deliverer, who had been swarming to the rescue of the girl, bound it securely with cords. When goaded to its feet again, the bull moaned plaintively, and looked around bewildered and subdued by its rough tumble.

The villagers of Inverlochy thronged around the man who had performed this great feat of muscular strength, and the fair girl he had saved timidly thanked her deliverer. They all gazed curiously upon him, for it was now perceived that he did not wear the tartan of the Campbells, and was a stranger.

He was a boy in years, not over twenty, and yet fully developed, standing full six feet four inches in height, clad in Highland costume, which displayed his well proportioned limbs to great advantage, and wearing an eagle's feather in his bonnet, the symbol of a chief. His target, or shield, "round as the moon," covered with ox hide and studded with brass knobs, hung around his neck. The hilt of a huge two handed claymore peeped from under his left arm, and a long dirk rested in the sheath upon his right thigh. Clad in this picturesque garb, with long flowing locks of light brown hair, a ruddy complexion and a bright blue eye, he was a fine type of those ancient warriors of the land whose the bard Ossian has immortalized in song.

"What is thy name, pretty lassie?" he asked the girl, when she had thanked him for the good service and stolen a glance of admiration at the frank, open face and stalwart form of her preserver.

"I am called Annie of Lochiel," she answered, blushing at the avowal of a name that had a strange fascination for the young Highlander, who found it impossible to withdraw his gaze from that witching face.

"Are you a Cameron of the Clan Lochiel?" he asked, eagerly, and with interest.

"Not she!" broke in one of the men of Inverlochy, who wore the badge of an under chief. "She is a Campbell, and we call her Annie of Lochiel because she was born by yonder water. Her mother was a McLean; she died when Annie was an infant. Her father was Duncan Campbell, laird of Morven, and he was slain by the Gordons of Huntley in the raid of Gartoch. There's her history in a nutshell. If that tell it to you am Malcolm MacPhie, captain of Inverlochy, and now, my brave gillie, who are you?"

The Highlander reared his tall form with haughty pride as he replied:

"I am Alaster MacDonald, son of Colla-of-the-left-hand, chieftain of Mingarry and Kintyre."

A buzz went around the circle at these words. The MacDonalds were a bold and warlike clan, and Colla-of-the-left-hand was not unknown to fame.

"I have heard of the chieftain of Kintyre," returned Malcolm MacPhie, "but why do they call him 'of the left hand?'"

"Faith! I know not," answered Alaster carelessly, "unless it be that he can wield his claymore as well with the left hand as with the right."

A murmur of admiration greeted this announcement. Strength of limb and skill in arms were considered great virtues in those warlike days.

"Come, Alaster," cried Malcolm, his heart won by the bold bearing of the young Highlander. "Thou has preserved our fairest maiden from a cruel death. Bide with me in Inverlochy for a few days and taste the hospitality of our ancient castle."

"There is no fend between our clans," returned Alaster, "and I accept your offer."

They entered the castle together.

Malcolm MacPhie had cause to rue the hospitality which had induced him to invite the young Highland chieftain to enter the walls of Castle Inverlochy. It soon became apparent to others besides himself that the bold Alaster had found favor in the eyes of pretty Annie of Lochiel. A strong affection seemed to have arisen at the first meeting of this young pair, an affection which their eyes were not slow to confess, and which was revealed in eloquent glances.

Malcolm had detected more than one of these glances as he dispensed the hospitality of the castle, and he resolved in his own mind that Alaster should not bide long at Inverlochy. He prevented all chances of conversation between them until it was time for Annie to retire for the night. He then invited Alaster to walk with him upon the battlements, and pointed out the strength of the castle.

A taper gleamed from a low turreted window that looked out upon the parapet.

"Who occupies you chamber?" asked Alaster.

"Annie of Lochiel," replied Malcolm.

"A winsome lassie!" responded Alaster warmly. "I would I could persuade her to go with me into the land of Kintyre and become the mistress of Castle Mingarry. It would glad the heart of Colla-of-the-left hand to welcome so fair a daughter."

"That can never be," returned Malcolm, quickly, with an angry flush. "Annie is the ward of Sir Donald Campbell of Auchinbreck, my chief and kinsman. Seek an other bride, Alaster MacDonald, for Annie is to be my wife."

Alaster's eyes were fixed upon the little window as he listened to these words, and he saw a fair face appear there. As an egretic shake of the head said very plainly "No, no!" to Malcolm's assertion, and the fair vision disappeared.

"I wish you joy," replied Alaster, with a quiet smile; "happy will be the man who calls the lovely Annie his."

A white hand was waved for a moment from the casement, and quickly withdrawn. Alaster was enraptured and answered. Malcolm was totally unconscious of this novel courtship.

"A rare place this for an escalade," said Alaster, leaning over the parapet and pointing to a spur of Ben Nevis that reared its craggy head almost on a level with the battlements.

"For a goat, yes," answered Malcolm disdainfully. "No human being could scale you cliff. Look at the distance; it is twelve feet from the battlement, with a yawning abyss between. An enemy will never enter Inverlochy from that quarter."

"A lover might scale yonder cliff to speak with his sweetheart," returned Alaster carelessly, "and he would think lightly of the danger for the boon of one sweet smile."

"And break his neck for his pains," answered Malcolm with a laugh. "Come the night is nearly spent, and you are wel come to a share of a soldier's couch."

They left the battlements without further words and descended to Malcolm's chamber.

In the morning early Alaster departed, for he had no excuse to prolong his stay and Malcolm MacPhie drew a long breath of satisfaction when he saw the stalwart form of the young Highlander disappear up the glen.

That night when the moon veiled her silvery face behind the towering head of Ben Nevis, Annie of Lochiel wandered pensively upon the battlements of Inverlochy, gazing ever and anon upon the craggy platform that jutted out from the mountain's side.

A tall form emerged from the shadows and advanced to the edge of the cliff.

"Alaster!" whispered the maid in cautious tones, bending over the parapet.

"I am not a goat," answered Alaster with a gleesome laugh, "but it is even I Alaster, fair Annie."

"How dare you are!" cried the maid involuntarily. "You have undergone this danger to see me once again?"

"You know right well what brings me here, Annie, I love you. Short as our acquaintance has been, you have enslaved my heart. I have scant time for wooing. My presence here may be discovered at any moment. If you bide in Inverlochy, it will be to become the wife of Malcolm MacPhie. Fly with me to the land of Kintyre and share a chieftain's home."

"Alaster, I would willingly fly with thee to escape the dreaded fate that awaits me here; but how can I escape? Malcolm MacPhie has watched me closely all the day"—

"Aye, and he watches thee now," cried Alaster, hoarsely, conscious of the last tirement. "Fickle jade! didst think to out wit me?"

Annie uttered a faint shriek of despair.

"Leap, Annie, leap," cried Alaster, in sharp, ringing tones. "The space is narrow—spring boldly from the parapet—thy lover's arms await thee!"

Annie's conscious what she did—impelled by desperation and that instinctive feeling of obedience which true love prompts—Annie avoided the grasp of the unsuspected Malcolm, ran a few steps upon the battlements, and with a wild cry of despair sprang from the parapet.

Malcolm MacPhie, who had rushed aghast to the spot, heard the dull sound of her form as it struck the rocks beneath. But he only heard a cry of joy, and saw Annie borne in the arms around Alaster's neck, while his clasped her in safety to his breast.

To this day the curious traveler who visits the old gray ruins of Inverlochy is shown the spot from which Annie sprang, and that part of the battlement still bears the name of the "Maiden's Leap."

Alaster and Annie disappeared in the gloom, and Malcolm hastened to alarm the castle and urge a hot pursuit. But who could follow the bold Highlander as he leaped lightly from crag to crag, bearing his precious burden in his arms. Pursuit was unavailing; the fugitives could not be found, and Malcolm MacPhie returned sullenly to Inverlochy, swearing a deep and bloody vengeance.

There was high feasting in the land of Kintyre, when Alaster Mingarry opened its hospitable gates, so that all of the Clan Donald might witness the nuptials of Annie of Lochiel and Alaster, their young chief.

A year had scarcely elapsed when Malcolm MacPhie urged the Campbells to undertake an expedition against the Clan Donald. Castle Mingarry was surprised and burned, but Alaster and his bride escaped and fled into Ireland. So ended the "Raid of Kintyre."

When Montrose raised the royal standard in Scotland for the service of Charles I., the Marquis of Antrim promised him assistance and looked about for a leader for his troops. Alaster presented himself and claimed the post.

"On what ground do you ask for the command?" demanded the marquis.

Alaster drew forth his claymore and replied, "This, this is the best hand to wield the claymore of any in Scotland."

"And which is the next best?" asked Dears MacAlister, a brave Highlander who also wished the command.

"Faith, this!" replied Alaster, shifting the claymore from the right hand to the left. The others withdrew their claims and the command was given to Alaster.

And now the work of retribution was commenced. In the fierce strife that began, under the able generalship of James Graeme, marquis of Montrose, the first man slain was Malcolm MacPhie.

Alaster led the claymores which decided the day at Tippermuir, Perth and Aberdeen.

On Candlemas day, 1645, the royal army, commanded by Montrose and Alaster, descended the defiles and ranged themselves upon the banks of Loch Linnhe to encounter the Campbells, who were drawn up under the walls of Inverlochy and commanded by Sir Donald Campbell of Auchinbreck.

In the first charge, Alaster, with one sweep of his claymore, cut off Sir Donald's head, and carried consternation into the ranks of the foe. The Campbell's were utterly defeated, Inverlochy taken and the "Raid of Kintyre" avenged.—George L. Aiken in True Flag.

Remember This When You Call on a Zulu.

A Zulu chief, when you enter his hovel, remains silent for some moments, and seems quite unconscious of your presence. At length he says in a tone of grave dignity, "Ge saku bona" (I see you), to which you reply in the same way. The longer he takes to "see you," the greater man you are supposed to be; and until you are thus "seen" you must keep silent, and appear as much unconscious as he is there at all!—David Ker in New York Epoch.

The National League's Invitation.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—The National league meeting adjourned after resolving "that the league would be glad to welcome the return of the American association as a party to the national agreement in the same manner as they wandered therefrom, namely, by notice to the national board." This leaves matters in pretty much the same condition as before. The American association is not likely to enter the national agreement again unless King, Baldwin, Reilly, Kelly, Stovey, Bierbauer and other contract jumping players are returned to it.

Johnston Breaks the Record.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 19.—At the last day of the meeting at Homewood Driving park Johnston paced three of the fastest heats ever made at Homewood park in a race, winning the free for all race and lowering the record half a second. Time, 2:12, 2:11 2:12. Grant's Abdallah was second, Dallas, third. The entry list was so large in the 2:32 trot that it had to be made into two divisions. Instant won in the first division and Kentucky Bird in the second. Rosalind Wilkes took the 2:15 trot in straight heats.

Murphy Breaks a Record.

PEORIA, Ills., Sept. 19.—At the first day's racing of the Peoria Bicycle club in the two mile safety handicap, W. F. Murphy, N. Y. A. C., covered the distance in 4m 59 1-2s., lowering the world's record of 5m 11 1-2s. made by Rich at Hartford this year. A. L. Zimmerman won the one mile ordinary in 2m. 46 3-5s.

Slosson and Schaefer Matched.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—The final arrangements for the billiard match between George Slosson and Jacob Schaefer were made last night. The conditions are that the game be played on or before Oct. 28 in New York city for $500 a side, 600 points, 14-inch balk line game.

Nelson Ties Allerton's Record.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Sept. 19.—The event of the day at the West Michigan races was Nelson's race against time. The stallion succeeded in tieing the record held by Allerton, making the mile in 2:10. Time by quarters was 33½, 1:08, 1:37½ and 2:10.

A Second Monbars.

CHICAGO, Sept. 19.—The race for the stallion stakes was won by Ceraloid. St. Lockout, a 9-year-old colt by Sultan, broke the Ohio record for two year olds, trotting a mile in 2:26 with ease. He is thought to be a second Monbars.

"Oh, Harry," she whispered, "I love you so much, but really I'm too young to think of getting married right away."

"Of course you are, darling," he urged, "and that's why I'm so anxious to have it come off early. When you get older you will probably change your mind."—Detroit Free Press.

Language in Sealing Wax.

The language in sealing wax is practiced by those who are sentimentally inclined. An engagement or even a proposal of marriage must be sealed with white wax, while accepted lovers may use ruby color. Jealousy is expressed by yellow wax, blue implies constancy and brown and melancholy, green suggests hope and a paler shade of green conveys reproof. A letter of condolence should bear a violet seal in reply to the latter was intimating death, and the ordinary scarlet hue is still used for business. Invitations to dinner display chocolate seals, gushing young ladies fasten their confidences with pink, and gray is the general tint for letters to ordinary acquaintances.

Coffee Pudding.

For coffee pudding beat together one cupful of butter, one and a half cupfuls of sugar, one cupful molasses, one egg, one cupful cold coffee, four cupfuls prepared flour, one tablespoonful of cloves, one tablespoonful of cinnamon, one grated nutmeg; add one half pound each of raisins and currants, if desired. Bake and eat with any sauce preferred.

They caught a moment's brief respite
Out of the whirl and where the light
Was soft and mellow.

And while he sat and spoke to her,
She showed such lovely, pearly teeth,
He raised his voice to tell them such a louder,
"You surely must use the ROYAL TOOTH POWDER!"

PLAINFIELD EVENING NEWS.

ESTABLISHED 1884. PLAINFIELD, N. J., "THE COLORADO OF THE EAST," MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 21, 1891. PRICE TWO CENTS.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Miss Kittie McCann is at her home on West third street from a six weeks' stay with friends in New York State.

The Misses Crissie and Flora Smalley have returned to their home on Jackson avenue after short stay at Raritan.

Mr. Job Male of Canada, nephew of the late ex-Mayor Job Male of this city, is spending a few days with friends here.

Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Gunnee have returned to their house in this city from their wedding trip to Washington, D. C.

Mr. A. M. Vanderbeek, nephew of Freeholder Vanderbeek, is lying dangerously ill at his home, with typhoid fever.

Mr. James C. Pope of West Fourth street is suffering from a sprained ankle, which has confined him to the house for several days past.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Walsh returned last evening from their wedding trip to Fall River, Mass. They will reside on Arlington avenue.

Mr. Lewis Scott formerly of this city but now of Ithica, N. Y., is visiting his old friend, Mr. George Demarest of Race street, North Plainfield.

Mr. Harry Bowers, a son of ex-Councilman B. O. Bowers, has returned to his home on LaGrande avenue from a pleasant visit to Albany, N. Y.

Mrs. Eugene Gross of Union avenue is visiting, after twenty years' absence her old home in California. She will be away until about Thanksgiving.

Mr. W. E. Johnson, of Manning avenue, North Plainfield, starts this week for Richmond, Va. He will visit relatives in the South and expects to be gone about two weeks.

The Myrtle Glee Club is the latest acquisition to the social clubs of this city. The members have leased rooms on North avenue, opposite the depot and have rehearsals two or three times a week.

Mr. Joseph Pike of this city was one of the contestants in the two mile handicap bicycle race on the grounds of the Manhattan Athletic Club in New York Saturday afternoon, but he failed to secure any of the prizes.

Captain F. L. C. Martin, of the Plainfield Bicycle Club, has been appointed one of the assistant scorers for the bicycle tournament which is to be given at Elizabeth next Saturday, under the auspices of the Elizabeth Wheelmen.

The funeral services over the remains of the late Robert Fairbairn, took place at his late residence on Second place Saturday evening at seven o'clock. The services were conducted by the Rev. Dr. Yerkes the pastor of the first Baptist church. Interment was private.

TALK OF THE TOWN

—Mr. A. Venino will resume his instructions on the piano this week. See his advertisement in another column.

—The registration officers have been officially notified to begin canvassing the city for the names of the voters.

—There will be an entire change of programme at the Elkwood this week, as may be seen by glancing at the advertisements.

—At the conclusion of the ball game Saturday afternoon the stage owned by Mr. E. K. Allen collided with a light buggy and wrecked one of the rear wheels.

—The game for the benefit of the Crescent players will take place on October 3d. The New Brunswick team, will in all probability be their opponents. A good game is looked for.

—Lawrence McCann, a resident of West Third street, who is an employe of the Scott Printing Press Works had one of his feet crushed Friday afternoon by a large piece of iron falling on it.

—Next Saturday the Crescents of Brooklyn will play a game of base ball with the Crescents of this city. On Labor Day the Brooklyn boys defeated the Crescents by a score of 1 to 0. Mr. George Cadmus, a former Plainfielder, was in the "box."

—During Saturday's game of base ball between the Crescents of this city and the West Ends of Somerville, Keeler, the Crescents short-stop accidentally "spiked" Roberts of the West Ends' first baseman, inflicting a painful injury in his foot.

—A woman complained to Policeman Lynch at about one o'clock yesterday morning that her husband had turned her and her child out of doors. The officer went to the house and arrested the accused husband. This morning he was given a trial before City Judge Codington. There being no evidences against him he was discharged.

—This week has been of great interest for the old soldiers of New Jersey. The survivors of the Ninth New Jersey Regiment met on Thursday at Pleasanton; the survivors of the Seventh met the same day at Paterson; and the survivors of the Fourteenth met at South Amboy. Grand occasions they were, every one of them, and every loyal man will rejoice that so many of the men who were at the front and braved the storm of battle are yet with us and capable of holding re-unions and enjoying them. The ranks are being gradually thinned, and these occasions cannot last much longer. Let the soldiers have all the hospitality that can be granted them at each and every re-union.—Elizabeth Journal, Sept. 9th.

A NARROW ESCAPE.

An Actor Nearly Killed at the Depot Yesterday Morning.

As the 8.33 train was leaving the depot in this city yesterday morning, on of the performers who had been filling an engagement at the Elkwood during the past week had a narrow escape from death.

The train was under headway when he attempted to jump on the last car. He missed his footing and was dragged some distance before a brakeman assisted him to the platform of the car.

Policeman Kiely was at the depot at the time and he considers that the man had a very narrow escape from death.

While clinging to the car the man dropped a box of face powder and a hair brush which he had in his hand at the time he attempted to jump on the train. Policeman Kiely recovered the articles and left them with the night baggagemaster.

Mrs. Staples Improving.

For the past few months the wife of Geo. Staples of Dunellen, acted in a very queer manner and was subject to fits of melancholy. She finally became so that her relatives thought fit to place her in confinement. About one month ago she was taken to the New Jersey State Lunatic Asylum for treatment. A few days since Mr. Staple received a letter from Dr. John W. Ward stating that his wife was in a fair way to recover, and often speaks of home and friends and wishes to be taken to them. She still clings to some of her foolish fancies, although her mental condition has much improved and the doctor has great hopes of her ultimate recovery.

The great trouble which first upset her mind was when her husband had his arm taken off by the cars. Mr. Staples was a brakemen on the Central Railroad, and on Dec. 2, 1890, while riding four cars into a switch at Plainfield a defective wheel gave way, throwing him under the front trucks, which went over him, cutting his arm completely off. In justice the railroad officials have done well by him, having advanced him a round sum in ready money for the loss of his arm, and furnished him an easy position on the road with a promise of advancement as soon as a proper vacancy occurs.

Abused the Horse

Last night a colored man was running a horse attached to a carriage up and down Front street at a break-neck speed. Policeman Flanagan attempted to catch the fellow but he did not succeed. The horse was noticed to run everyman in this city and when it was returned to the stable it could be easily seen that the horse had been terribly abused. Long ridges, where it had been hit with the whip, were raised on its sides. It is said that the colored man had a woman with him in the wagon at the time. The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals should investigate the matter.

Opposed to the Railroad's Plans.

The new Port Reading Railroad Company in running its line through Metuchen has cut North Plainfield avenue, the most important thoroughfare in the village, down from 66 to 35 feet in width by an over-head bridge. The authorities of Raritan Township have appealed to the officers of the Reading Railroad Company, who are behind the new line. They were refused any satisfaction, and will appeal the case to the Middlesex Grand Jury.

Trouble About a Girl.

Friday evening several young men quarrelled on Somerset street. The trouble, it is alleged, was caused by a girl. The principals in the dispute adjourned to Manning avenue and engaged in a fistic encounter. While they were pummelling each other Marshal Rutledge appeared on the scene and placed them both under arrest. Saturday morning they enriched the borough treasury by paying a fine.

Another Week for the Concerts.

The ordinance prohibiting the holding of concerts where liquor is sold and making it compulsory for the owners of hotels and barrooms to so arrange their windows that the interior of their barrooms may be plainly seen from the street between the hours of seven o'clock Saturday night and six o'clock Monday morning, will go into effect one week from next Thursday.

Mrs. Brunn Again Missing.

In another column Peter Brunn advertises that his wife has again left his bed and board and he warns the public not to harbor or trust her at his expense. Mrs. Brunn is the woman, who, a few weeks ago, Chief Carey found after a long and weary search. She returned to *her husband and they again lived to*gether until a day or two ago when she disappeared.

Taken to Trenton.

Sheriff Hicks Saturday went to Trenton having in custody four prisoners, all of whom were sentenced to State prison at the special sessions of the Union county court on Wednesday last. They were John Warren, the colored highwayman who robbed John Meeker, at Union; Hudson R. Green, colored, for an assault on Mr. Downes; Benjamin Williams and Joseph O. Brien.

Badly Cut.

A man, whose name we are unable to ascertain, fell in a fit on Second street Saturday evening. In falling his head struck the curb stone and a deep gash was inflicted. He was taken to a nearby drug store where the wound was dressed.

SPORTING NEWS

THE CRESCENTS DEFEATED.

The West Ends Won the Sixth Game by a Score of 8 to 5.

The sixth and last game of the Crescent-West End series was played in this city Saturday afternoon. The Crescents had won three games and the West Ends two. The home team was confident (perhaps too confident) that they would win Saturday's game, and that is the probable reason that they lost.

The game on both sides was noted for reckless playing. It was a game made up of errors—much to the disgust of the admirers of both teams.

In the first inning the West Ends made two runs and in the third the same team made three. It was not until the fourth inning that the Crescents scored and then they succeeded in making four runs. The audience yelled like Indians. Men threw their hats in the air and acted like mad. They thought the home team had a show to win, but they were doomed to disappointment. In the fifth inning the West Ends added another run to their credit, and in the sixth the score was enlarged by two more runs, while the Crescents were satisfied with making one run in the seventh. Neither club scored in the eighth inning and the West Ends won the contest by a score of 8 to 5.

The actions of Kennedy disgusted a large number of the spectators and even disgusted Harkins, the West End's pitcher. In the absence of Farrell, the West End's captain, Kennedy acted in his stead, and he played—what is known in base ball circles as baby ball playing.

Hammill, the Crescents' pitcher, pitched a very good game, and Bonner caught him to perfection. Harkins also did good work in the pitcher's box for the opposing team, and to him is due the credit of winning the game. The score by innings is as follows:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
West Ends.....	2	0	3	0	1	2	0	0	0	— 8
Crescents.....	0	0	0	4	0	0	1	0	0	— 5

The base ball team connected with the Plainfield Bicycle Club succeeded in defeating a team from the Bayonne Outing Club Saturday afternoon on the Park avenue grounds by a score of 8 to 5.

A number of young gentlemen of the Bicycle Outing Club of North Plainfield rode to Rahway yesterday afternoon and were pleasantly entertained by a number of lady friends of that place.

The Boys' Club defeated the Young Cuban Giants in a game of base ball Saturday afternoon by a score of 17 to 12. The members of the Cuban Giants claim that their pitcher and catcher sold the game and that they bounced them at the conclusion of the game.

MARRIED AND MADE A NEW WILL.

A Wedding by Which Plainfield's Reformed Church Lost $50,000.

The officials of the Trinity Reformed Church have just learned how a wedding of twenty months ago lost them $50,000. A few years ago, during his residence at Park avenue and Sixth street, this city, John Goldsmith Payntar was one of the most regular attendants at the then called Dutch Reformed Church, which afterwards merged into the Trinity Reformed Church, and his relative, the Rev. J. Simonson, late of this city, occupied the pulpit at that time.

Mr. Payntar was a rich bachelor, and past sixty, with no near relative. He was well pleased with the little church on West Second street, and he set it his will for $50,000. He told Mr. Simonson so, and Mr. Simonson before he died told some of the church officers what Mr. Payntar had done.

But after living a bachelor for half a century, Mr. Payntar, in February of last year, married an estimable woman, to whom he had been engaged twenty-six years before, but from whom he had become far a time estranged. The result of this new tie was a new will, and the Trinity Reformed Church of this city was forgotten. Mr. Payntar died August 11. He left the bulk of his fortune to his wife. There were no children. Trinity Church is not mentioned, but, instead, the First Presbyterian Church at Newtown, L. I., is bequeathed $61,930.25 for a new building. This is the church Mr. and Mrs. Payntar attended regularly after their marriage.

Mr. Payntar is buried near the site of the proposed new church. It is he built of stone. The spire of stone will cost $4,000, and a stone and iron fence around the edifice will cost $5,000. The will further bequeaths $5,000 to the church for a permanent fund, the income of which is to be used for keeping the building and grounds in order. The new edifice will eclipse anything of its kind in the neighborhood.

The Prize Hog Dead.

The big hog which won the first prize at the Mt. Holly fair last week, died at the depot in this city Saturday night. The hog was being transported from the above-mentioned fair to Waverly and one of the attendants informed a by-stander that it had become contrary and ran away thereby becoming overheated. The attendant said it weighed about one thousand pounds.

A Fight at the Depot.

Saturday evening two young men from Bound Brook engaged in a fight at the North avenue depot. It is said that they pummelled each other unmercifully for awhile. When the police were notified they hastened to the scene of the fracas but the participants had made their escape. Their names are known and warrants will be issued for their arrest.

THE VIRTUES WHICH GEMS POSSESS.

And Which Made Them of Great Value to Their Owners.

Although popularly supposed to be itself a deadly poison, the diamond has from remote ages been credited with the power of protecting the wearer from the evil effects of other poisons, a reputation which it retained until comparatively recent times. According to Pliny it also keeps off insanity. Amber, too, was supposed to possess the latter virtue. Besides the diamond, several other stones were supposed to possess medicinal virtues. The ruby was considered good for derangements of the liver, as well as for bad eyes.

The sapphire and emerald were also credited with properties capable of influencing ophthalmic disorders, and there is a superstitious belief that serpents are blinded by looking at the latter stone.

The turquois, although not credited with either remedial or protective properties, so far as disease was concerned, was nevertheless regarded as a kind of sympathetic indicator, the intensity of its colors being supposed to fluctuate with the health of the wearer. The latter, moreover, by virtue of the stone which he carried, could, it is said, fall from any height with impunity. The Marquis of Villena's fool, however, was somewhat nearer the truth when he reversed the popular superstition in his assertion that the wearer of a turquois might fall from the top of a high tower and be dashed to pieces without breaking the stone.

The opal was look upon as a thunderstone, and although many women now appear to have a strong superstitious prejudice against wearing one, it was by no means held in the highest estimation, for it was supposed to combine virtues of several other gems. On the other hand the onyx—so named on account of resemblance to the color of finger nails—could scarcely have been a nice stone to wear for, according to mediæval superstition, it rendered one particularly susceptible to annoyances from nightmares and demons.

Temperance advocates, if they have regard for the beliefs of the Greeks and Romans, might seriously consider the advisability of distributing amethysts among drunkards, for it was supposed that these stones prevented intoxication. Coral was made use of by the Romans as a charm against evil eyes, and popular superstition has credited the topaz with the power of depriving boiling water of its heat.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

Dr. Lewis on the Situation.

To the Editor of The News:—"In my capacity as one of those who stand as the guardians of the moral and religious interests of our city, I cannot refrain from speaking concerning the attitude of the rum power in Plainfield that power with its attendant evils, has been gaining ground steadily for two of three years past. Every good interest in the city has been injured in the same proportion. The development of the concert saloon business, is a legitimate result of the supremacy of this element in our city government. When a majority of the Common Council refused to regard the remonstrances of the better class of citizens, they threw aside the last barrier, against the downward tide. I call upon every member of my church and congregation to adopt such a course of action as will break the power of the saloons over our city government. The open and defiant Concert Saloons, are an insult to the pure womanhood and the decent manhood of the city. It is well, that our young husbands, and bear the name of "Christian" visit these places. Whoever bears these sacred names as it crosses such thresholds, stains his manhood, and brings disgrace on his position and profession. The time has fully come when Plainfield should call a halt in this downward trend. I trust and believe that you will be found among the first to aid in bringing such influences to bear, as will break the hold of these evils, and remove from our city such menace to its real prosperity, and such disgrace to its good name."

Rev. A. R. Lewis, D. D.

The Turners Have An Outing.

The Brooklyn, Elizabethport and Newark Turning Societies, visited this city yesterday and spent the day on the mountains where they held their quarterly re-union. The day was spent very pleasantly. During the morning various acrobatic feats were indulged in. The members of the Plainfield Gesang and Turning Society, of whom they were the guests, saw that their every want was attended to. The visitors left last evening on the seven o'clock train.

A Large Casting.

Saturday morning another large planer bed was cast in the moulding department of the Pond Machine Tool Works, under the supervision of Foreman Andrew McCardle. It required thirty-five tons of iron to make the casting. The massive piece of iron is for the government. Previous to it being poured two of the cranes were broken. The accident caused a delay of an hour or more.

SENTENCED TO BE HANGED.

McMullan to Suffer the Extreme Penalty of the Law.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Sept. 21st. (Special.)—Edward McMullen, the wife murderer, was sentenced to be hanged here to-day. The details of the crime as published, showed it to be a horrible one.

EPIDEMIC OF SNEEZES.

Hay Fever and Cold in the Head is Abroad.

The noise of the sneeze is heard in the land. Hay fever is making its annual tour, and an unusually severe epidemic of cold in the head besides is prevalent just at this time. The latter epidemic is giving the doctors a great deal of trouble, for the unusual severity of it has given a decidedly serious aspect to the state of the public health.

Old and young are afflicted alike, and, while the sufferer is not generally confined to bed, the uncomfortable sensations make him sigh for the grave. The doctors declare that the last time generally an epidemic of cold in the head every Fall, which sets in with the harvest moon; but this Fall it is unusually severe, and nearly twice as many people as well as many dogs and horses are suffering from it.

Scientists have not been able to agree upon the cause of the animal epidemic, but it always makes its appearance coincident with the harvest moon. A well-known physician said yesterday to a reporter there were two effective and simple cures for a severe cold in the head. One is red-hot lemonade taken just before getting into bed. That cure would do well for temperance people, but the others intended for those who have no conscientious scruples against taking a little strong drink. The doctor says it is sure cure. Make a strong Jamaica rum punch, put a dash or two of red pepper and a piece of butter in it and go to bed. Follow this up the next night and the cure will be complete.

The hay fever exodus has fairly set in and an unusual large number of people are fleeing to the high lands. Scientists claim that hay fever is caused largely by a bacillus that comes from the crop fields at harvest time, and the only cure for it is to get above the crop line on some mountain.

THE CONDITION OF THE CROPS.

New Jersey's Agriculture.—Farmers Well Pleased.

The observers and crop correspon*dents of the New Jersey State Weather* Service report for the week ending Friday, Sept. 18, that the temperature and sunshine have been above and the rainfall below the seasonal average. These conditions have most favorably affected all maturing crops, especially corn, buckwheat and vine truck.

The cutting of corn on high fields has begun in many sections of the State, and if the present favorable weather conditions continue for a few days longer, the harvesting of the crop will be quite general in all the districts, except in very low fields in the northern portions, where it matures slowly.

In the southern counties all farm work is well advanced and Fall seeding is nearly completed. Sweet potatoes and celery are in a most promising condition, and the marketing of tomatoes and other vine truck is nearly finished, with the middle counties potato digging is well along and the yield and quality are both satisfactory.

In the northern counties the harvesting of buckwheat is now in progress, and the yield will fall decidedly above the average. Late varieties of orchard fruits are maturing nicely, and all are promising good yields. In the dairy districts the pasture is all that could be desired, and the live stock is in fine condition.

In Burlington and Cape May counties cranberry picking has begun and the indications are for a fair average yield, but solid fears are entertained that the rot will be extensive in the latter county.

Will Alerts Capture a Prize?

On Friday next Chief Astfalk of Elizabeth will invite New York and select the prizes to be contested for at the coming firemen's demonstration in Elizabeth. The prizes will be on exhibition for one week in Bauer's shoe store on Broad street, and afterward taken down town for exhibition. Last Monday evening Council granted Alert Hose Company of this city permission to take their apparatus to Elizabeth and participate in the parade, and their many friends and admirers here hope that they will capture one of the prizes. Chief Engineer Downs has also been honored by being appointed one of the judges.

I have recommended Dr. David Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" to many in Shelton and Derby, and have failed to find one who has not been benefited by it.—C. L. Seaver, Birmingham, Conn.—Adv.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Owning an Orange Grove.

In the Florida Farmer and Fruit Grower Mr. E. S. Hubbard gives some useful information about the cost and profit of an orange plantation in that state. To begin, the original cost of such plantation will be for every acre as follows:

Good land, one mile from wharf	$30 00
Clearing, trees and stumps and breaking	50 00
200 budded trees set 20 by 16 feet at 25 cents each	50 00
Setting, cultivating and fertilizing, first year	40 00
Cultivating and fertilizing, second and third years at $20	60 00
Total	$230 00

The fourth year the grove will begin to bear, and will produce enough to pay all the expenses that are incurred. The fifth year the fruit will average one box to a tree, worth $1.50 unpacked. The owner will get per acre $291. After that all is plain sailing, and the lucky orange man will have year by year a noble income, which will be left to his children and grandchildren following him.

The writer counts average favorable seasons, not taking into account droughts or frosts such as afflict orange growers occasionally. Of course nearly everything depends on the "horticultural knack" and perseverance of the orange grower himself, and it is Mr. Hubbard's observation that about one man in four has the knack and perseverance. Often a young grove can be bought from a discouraged beginner for less than it cost to make it. But the chances are all in favor of the person who stays on the ground and cultivates or oversees the cultivation of his grove himself, and against the one who stays away and hires somebody else to develop it.

Meantime, too, while the planter is waiting for the orange trees to grow he can generally make his living raising vegetables and small fruits. An ordinary farm gardening outfit will be needed. This seems an easy way to drift into a competency, easy certainly compared with the task of the mechanic who works for daily wages in a city year in and year out, and is often overtaken by old age before he has laid up enough money even to buy him a home.

As to the market for oranges, it seems to grow apace. An orange for a first course, on which to begin breakfast, is now one of the necessities of a majority of city people at least.

The Methodist Council.

Forty-five million Methodists will be represented in the Ecumenical council that is to convene in Washington from Oct. 7 to 20. It will be the second such great council in the history of the church, the first having been held in London ten years ago. At the coming one in Washington 500 delegates will be present, both from America, and from the rest of the world. This proportion represents the relative numbers of adherents of the church of John Wesley in the eastern and western worlds.

The great council that is to meet is in no sense authoritative, but deliberative. The power that it wields will be a moral power, but it will be none the less felt.

The council has lined up for itself a larger pyramid of work than is usually laid before a congress of the United States. It will endeavor to discuss and make recommendations on all the general leading questions of the day and those of the Methodist church in particular. Among these burning topics, so to speak, are the Woman Question; the Labor and Capital Subject; Romanism, Its Present Position as a Political and Religious Power; the Church and Temperance Reform; the Bible and Modern Criticism; Marriage and Divorce, and the Church and Scientific Thought. These are not a quarter of the topics laid out for this council to settle. If these learned and devout men succeed in disposing satisfactorily of even one or two of them, they will do more than all the rest of the world has been able to accomplish.

The United States is not only the richest nation, it is the strongest nation. Italy was obliged to recede from the position she had taken in the New Orleans riots; Spain gave us reciprocity with Cuba even to the detriment of her own farmers; France has let down the bars that kept out American pork; so has Germany. The German emperor, moreover, expresses in the most earnest manner his desire to be on friendly terms with us. If we keep on in our career, maintaining a policy of peace and justice toward foreign countries, minding our own business, developing our tremendous material resources, the star of the Twentieth century will rise over the United States as the most powerful nation history has known. It is our manifest destiny.

The Mormons have stopped their polygamous practices, "have they, and are dying out, are they? It looks like it. At this moment no less than 200 Mormon proselytizers are working in Great Britain to induce all the young women they can to come into the bosom of the Mormon church in America. Twenty young scamps came near being mobbed in a Lancashire village on account of their "saintly" doings. Oh, yes! The Mormons are dying out.

"The Sunday newspaper must presently assert itself as the most potent vehicle of contemporary English literature," say the New York Sun.

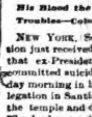
DRIVEN BY FEAR TO DIE.

Balmaceda, the Tyrant of Chili, Commits Suicide.

HE SHOOTS HIMSELF IN SANTIAGO

Unable to Escape and Surrounded by a Horde of Enemies Who Thirsted for His Blood the Ex-Dictator Ended His Troubles—Colonel North's Big Profits.

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—From information just received in this city it is known that ex-President Balmaceda, of Chili, committed suicide at 8 o'clock on Saturday morning in his room at the Argentine legation in Santiago. He shot himself in the temple and death was instantaneous. The deed was evidently inspired by dread that his enemies would find him and wreak their vengeance upon him. Balmaceda left Santiago on Aug. 29, the date of its surrender to the Congressionalists, and made several attempts to escape from Chili. All were unsuccessful, and he returned on Sept. 3 and took up his quarters in the Argentine legation. He had intended to embark on the Almirante Condell, which he expected to find awaiting him in San Antonio bay, but she had sailed before he arrived.



EX-PRES. BALMACEDA.

He Heard a Pistol Shot.

Balmaceda had a long consultation on Friday night with Senor Urriburia upon the advisability of the former's surrendering himself to the junta. At 8 in the morning Senora Urriburia heard a pistol shot in Balmaceda's room. Senor Urriburia, being notified of the fact, called in Carlos Walter Martinez, and they broke in the door of the ex president's room and discovered his late host lying on the bed undressed, with a wound in the temple and a revolver clutched in the right hand. The junta was informed at once of the occurrence and appointed a commission, which viewed the body and prepared a statement of the facts. As soon as the news spread a great excitement in the city was intense. Crowds gathered round the legation building and showed their joy at the death of their enemy by cheers and laughter.

Thought He Was Right.

Balmaceda left a letter to his mother in which he declared that during the previous eight months he had acted with the firm conviction that he was right. His generals had been false to him and he had no one in the army in whom he could trust. He had sought to save his country from foreign domination and to make Chili the first republic in America. His enemies had united in the interior; financiers had compelled him to sanction certain acts, but many bad deeds attributed to him were not known to him until they had been committed. He said that all the money he had in his possession was twenty-five dollars, which his wife gave him on Aug. 28.

Prayers for Our Minister.

He said further that the American minister, Patrick Egan, had often offered him good advice, but he did not follow it, because through the influence of the junta the influence of the junta. Egan favored peace, but Balmaceda's closest advisers always advised against it.

Santiago was brilliantly illuminated on Saturday night. Everything was quiet in that city at last reports, but the Argentine legation and the cemetery, by order of the junta, were being guarded by the troops. Balmaceda's widow was told of her husband's death by her brother, Domingo Torro.

Senor Justo R. De La Espriella, the Chilian consul, said yesterday that he had received no advices of the suicide of the ex dictator, Balmaceda. "I think, however," said he, "that the report is probably true. It is just what might have been expected under the circumstances."

Colonel North Rejoices.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—The news of Balmaceda's death made a marked impression on the general feeling in English commercial circles is one of relief and joy. While Balmaceda lived there could never be any assurance that he might not stir up another revolution, to the great detriment of the English interests in control of the nitrate traffic. Colonel North showed intense satisfaction at the news. The Congressionalists have all along been friendly to him, and there is no doubt that he advanced considerable sums of money to aid their cause in Europe. For this reason he will reap a tenfold reward, as the value of his nitrate interests will vastly improve.

WAS GERTRUDE ALARMED!

One Theory as to Why She Gave Up East for Daniels.

CHICAGO, Sept. 21.—Fear of the penitentiary is what induced Miss Gertrude Potter to discard young Rust and take in Mr. Daniels, of Newry, "for better or for worse." Saturday the ceremony was probably performed for the purpose of stopping waggling tongues and reassuring society that there was no scandal. A significant message, however, from New York to the Potters stating that Gertrude could be punished for bigamy is said to have played a most important part in bringing about the wedding.

Gertrude is the daughter of O. W. Potter, the millionaire president of the Illinois Steel company. The groom, Clarke Daniels, of New York city, is twenty-three years of age, a son of George H. Daniels, general passenger and ticket agent of the New York Central railroad. The bride is twenty years of age.

Miss Potter will be remembered as the young woman whose clandestine marriage with young F. Lee Rust, son of William Rust, the millionaire lumberman of Kau Claire, Wis., on June 6 last, was privately annulled in the circuit court, in this city one day last week.

The grounds on which the annulment was decreed were that the marriage was void because Gertrude was already the wife of Daniels, whom she married under the name of Gertrude White in January, 1890. The second marriage to Daniels was performed by the Rev. Dr. Stryker, of Chicago, at the home of Miss Potter's parents, in the Virginia Hotel, in the presence of the parents and families of both of the parties Sept. 19.

Mrs. Harrison Hears Dr. Brooks.

BOSTON, Sept. 21.—Among the worshipers at Trinity church Sunday were Mrs. Harrison and Mrs. McKee. Bishop-elect Brooks preached the sermon.

ROMANCE OF THE REBELLION.

A Federal Veteran Considered Dead Twenty-nine Years Turns Up Again.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—One of the most remarkable and pathetic cases that have ever been brought to the attention of the bureau of pensions is that of William Newby, a private of Company D, Fortieth regiment Illinois volunteers. This regiment was commanded by the heroic Colonel Stephen G. Hicks, of Illinois, and was conspicuous for its gallantry at the battle of Shiloh. Newby was in this battle on the 6th of April, 1862, and was reported killed in action. It seems, however, that instead of being killed he received a severe wound of the head, was captured, imprisoned at Belle Isle and Andersonville. Newby was released in course of time, but was demented and remembered nothing about himself. He has been in poorhouses all over the country since the war.

In wandering about he finally reached the neighborhood of his old home in Illinois, where he was seen and recognized by two of his old comrades. His wife was sent for and identified him, and drove her to the asylum in a state of wandering, during which time he was believed to be dead. Newby, a wrecked, demented old man, has been restored to his family and friends. His case was reported as killed in action his wife got a pension, and she has been drawing a widow's pension from the date of his supposed death to the present time. Newby has now filed a claim for a pension and it is receiving consideration, the claim of the widow being suspended in the meantime. No discharge has ever been granted him and the consideration of the pension claim is being postponed until such time as the secretary of war shall grant the man a discharge. The new pension will no doubt soon be granted and he will receive a sufficient sum to smooth his way to the end of his life.

Hutt for National Commander.

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—The veterans of the United States regular army have selected officers as follows: National commander, W. H. Hutt, M. D., of Philadelphia; national vice commander, Thomas Smith, of Nevada; national adjutant, Joseph R. Burns, of Philadelphia; national quartermaster, George App, of New York; national inspector, John C. Kelly, of New York; national judge advocate, W. E. Morris, of New York; national chaplain, H. L. Hunsberger, of Philadelphia.

Shot by Jockey Stoval.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 21.—Alexander Robinson, a clerk in the sheriff's office, was shot and seriously injured by the well known colored jockey, Stoval, on the ferry boat from Gloucester City Saturday night. Stoval was with two white women when Robinson made some remark which the negro resented. A quarrel ensued, during which the shot was fired. The bullet struck Robinson in the left breast, inflicting a dangerous wound. Stoval was arrested.

Fully Thirty Thousand Waiting.

BETHEL, D. T., Sept. 21.—Yesterday had little substance to-day. Sunday. All day the streets were crowded with prairie schooners, carriages, horsemen and foot passengers, all jammed into a shouting, struggling, hurrying mass. At the negro settlement of Langston are 2,000 armed negroes, who are determined to have a claim or fight. On every side of the reservation the line is one continuous camp and the number of people waiting is fully 30,000.

Human Was a Deceiver.

CORTLAND, N. Y., Sept. 21.—Edward Hanson, of Homer, was to have married Minnie Johnson, of Truxton. The young man is very attentive to the bride. Everything was in readiness for the ceremony but Hanson failed to appear. The expect and bride were much mortified and shame is but since have learned that Hanson ran away to avoid marrying Miss Johnson, and that he has deceived women all over the state.

Earthquakes in Washington.

TACOMA, Wash., Sept. 21.—Within the past two weeks four distinct shocks of earthquake have been felt and in each case the range of the tremors has been while traveling from south to north. The severest shock of all occurred Sunday morning. In the larger buildings the tremblers struck terror to the inmates, and many of the ladies could hardly be persuaded to return to their rooms.

She Called Him a Bummer.

WILMINGTON, Del., Sept. 21.—Howard Cooling, thirty-five years old, a carriage finisher, while drunk killed his wife, Zella, thirty-three years old, last night. Mrs. Cooling had been a drunken fellow and he struck her with a mustard bottle. There is no evidence of this blow, but the physicians think Cooling choked her to death.

Pennsylvania Cattle Attacked, too.

HUNTINGDON, Pa., Sept. 21.—Cattle in this and adjoining counties are being attacked with a fatal and unidentified disease, which first appeared about two weeks ago. Already hundreds of cattle have perished. When attacked the animal's head falls helplessly and its legs seem unable to bear the weight of the body.

Tried to Run a Town and Died.

REDLITO, Tex., Sept. 21.—The Pate Live Chaps and Santiago Villa, two Mexicans who tried to run this town, have been shot by rangers. There are many Mexicans in Duval county, and there is trouble is feared. Duval county is the home of Catarino Garza, who is trying to start a revolution in Mexico.

A Buffalo Church Dedicated.

BUFFALO, Sept. 21.—The handsome new church of the Seven Dolores, on Genesee street, was dedicated Sunday with very imposing ceremonies. Bishop Ryan performed the dedicatory rites.

He Fasted Fifty Days.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—Alexander Jacques, the French faster, at the Westminster Aquarium has just completed a fifty days' fast.

CABLE BREVITIES.

Spain has instructed her ambassador to Chili to officially recognize the provisional government.

Two Japanese ministers are in Berlin studying the Prussian prison administration with a view to the improvement of the Japanese penal system.

Mr. Dudgeon, Dr. Cobain's solicitor, accuses the penal authorities of tampering with the jury for the purpose of obtaining evidence against his client.

It is now practically settled that Mr. Daly will have a permanent theater in London, taking the new one built for Agnes Huntington in Cranbourne street, Leicester square. It will be called, like his New York house, Daly's theater.

At Almeria, in Spain, 1,781 victims of the flood have been buried.

ABOUT ARANSAS HARBOR

A Tale from Texas Concerning Russell Harrison.

INVESTORS ILL USED, IT IS SAID.

The New York World Alleges That Mr. Harrison Was Given $500,000 Worth of Stock for the Use of His Name. Seven Congressmen in the Scheme.

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—A special to The World from Aransas Harbor, Tex., says: "This pretty little city, thirty miles from Corpus Christi, is soon to be the center of interest in the United States, because of an effort to indict Russell Harrison. He is at the head of the Aransas Harbor and Land Improvement company, which sold many hundred thousand dollars' worth of land here on the promise that within one year they would obtain deep water in Aransas pass, and so make a harbor rivaling any on the Gulf coast.

The People Must Pay.

"On Saturday, Sept. 12, about $100,000 in notes given for the purchase of these lots by local and state settlers fell due. In the meantime the year within which the company promised to have deep water in the pass has about elapsed and nothing has been done. As the company has failed to keep its promise the purchasers of lots have refused to meet their notes. They invested here because of the distinguished names associated with the project. Ex-Lieutenant Governor Wheeler and Russell B. Harrison stand at the head.

"Mr. Wheeler says the people must pay. He has been in communication with Mr. Harrison and others within a few days and has received orders to push the payments. A flood of suits will be brought by Harrison and Wheeler, and probably a thousand Texans will be made defendants.

Say They Have Been Swindled.

"On the other hand these sturdy Texas settlers claim that they have been swindled. They say the company has thrived by a system of misrepresentation, and Mr. F. H. Tansey, of Aransas Harbor, is preparing a case for the grand jury with a view to indicting all the principals.

"It will be a bitter fight. The local papers are full of references to the pending trouble, and facts are being brought to light daily which are alleged to be not creditable to Mr. Russell Harrison. Not content with inducing Texas to invest in his enterprise, he organized a special expedition into the state from New York and visited Aransas Harbor with a full retinue of artists and writers for Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper and other publications. Then was issued the special Texas edition of October, 1889, with illuminated cover, in which two pages were devoted exclusively to the wonders of Aransas pass. So people in the east were induced to invest on the strength of the fine promises held out, and it is supposed the company took in several hundred thousand dollars at the headquarters on Fifth avenue, New York.

Description of the Harbor.

"For more than fifty years there has been a great effort on the part of the people for a deep water port upon the Texas coast, capable of accommodating ocean going vessels. Aransas pass is situated between Rockport and Corpus Christi, and is an opening from the Gulf of Mexico into the bays on which the two towns named are built. Inside this pass there is a splendid harbor with a depth of thirty feet deep, perfectly land locked and capable of affording all the necessary anchorage and dockage.

"The pass is about 2,600 feet in width. All that is needed to make a great port at this point is to deepen the pass and remove the sand bar which now separates the gulf proper from the inner harbor.

History of the Alleged Scheme.

"During the year 1885 the San Antonio and Aransas Pass railway line was built from San Antonio to Rockport. The president of the road, Colonel Uriah Lott, saw the value of the harbor if the bar could be removed, and immediately took steps to get control of the entrance.

"The land upon which the so called City of Aransas Harbor now stands was the property of Lott, who laid out Aransas Harbor City and Improvement company. Senator Maxey, of Texas, was employed to go to Washington for the purchase of the land. Among these men was T. B. Wheeler, then lieutenant governor of Texas.

"Wheeler enlisted the services of B. H. Wilson, of Monette, Mo., and with the assistance of others, sufficient funds to complete the purchase were secured. With $80,000 12,000 acres of land were ostensibly purchased and a town site was laid out.

Russell Harrison as President.

"It was this land, never before occupied except by a few fishermen, which constituted the basis of a high sounding corporation advertising itself as having a 'paid up capital of $1,000,000.' Russell B. Harrison has been in it from the start, but has not visited the place only once—when the transfer of the property took place."

The World's correspondent then says that Harrison has boomed the scheme through the press, and was given a block of stock valued at $500,000 for the use of his name as president of the company. The World adds:

"The man gement studiously avoided giving to the purchasers abstracts of title. Of all the property sold and bought in Aransas Harbor there has never been an abstract of title furnished by the company. They have many times promised to do so, and up to this hour they have utterly failed."

Were the Promises Broken?

The World says that at the first sale of lots Sept. 13 and 13, 1890, Gregorio Wheeler stated that great things would be done in a year. The following promises made by him to investors have not been kept:

The great commercial city has not been built.

The best men in the country have failed to materialize.

The $6,000,000 of paid up capital was bogus.

The railroads had nothing whatever to do with the scheme.

There was no written contract as represented.

The town was not and is not any terminal railway company.

The town company did not control and does not control Harbor Island, and although a year has passed little has been done toward making the deep water channel.

The World says that seven congressmen were in the scheme.

Many Records Broken.

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—At the Manhattan Athletic club grounds Luther Carr covered 100 yards in 9 4-5, but, as usual when Carr makes a great run, the timekeeper made a break, so that no record can be claimed. W. C. Bolton equaled the world's record in the half mile. T. P. Conneff broke the mile American record, George Gray broke the world's sixteen pound shot record.

Allerton Is King Again.

INDEPENDENCE, Ia., Sept. 21.—Allerton has lowered the stallion record three-quarters of a minute. He trotted the first quarter in 32½, the half in 1:05¼, the three quarters in 1:37½ and the mile in 2:09¾. This is three-quarters of a second better than the recent 2:10 mile of Nelson.

Nancy Hanks May Meet Allerton.

CHICAGO, Sept. 21.—Budd Doble has notified the Lexington (Ky.) Trotting association that he will trot Nancy Hanks against Allerton if that association will offer a purse of $6,000, without entrance, with an inside stake of $2,000 each, making a purse and stake of $10,000.

McCusker Out with a Challenge.

BOSTON, Sept. 21.—James L. McCusker, of Lowell, champion swimmer, of America, challenges any man in the world to a swimming race of from one to five miles for $1,000 to $5,000 a side. A. J. Kenney, of Australia, and Joey Nuttall, of England, are preferred.

Tenny Defeats Kingston.

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—There were fully 8,000 persons at the Brooklyn Jockey club's course to see Tenny and Kingston measure strides in the special. Tenny won easily by four lengths.

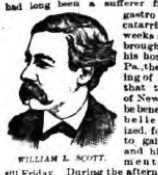
WILLIAM L. SCOTT DEAD

Heart Failure Closed a Brilliant Man's Career.

HE PROSPERED IN MANY PURSUITS.

His Achievements as a Millionaire Miner, Railroad Magnate, Politician and Patron of the Turf—Once a Page in Congress and Later a Representative.

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 21.—Ex-Congressman W. L. Scott is dead. His demise was very sudden and occurred shortly before midnight Saturday night. Mr. Scott had long been a sufferer from acute gastro-intestinal catarrh, and two weeks ago he was brought here from his home in Erie, Pa., the doctors being of the opinion that the climate of Newport would be beneficial. This belief was realized, for he began to gain at once and his improvement continued till Friday. During the afternoon of that day he had an attack of heart failure and another on Saturday, rallying quite easily the first time, but with more difficulty on the second occasion.



WILLIAM L. SCOTT.

Another attack occurred at 11 o'clock Saturday night, from which he could not be revived, and death finally ensued. The family left with the remains this morning for Erie, Pa.

William L. Scott's Career.

William L. Scott was born in Washington July 2, 1828. He was the son of Robert Scott, a colonel in the regular army, a Virginian by birth and education. Both Colonel Scott and his wife died while their son was yet a mere lad. They were in poor circumstances, and the boy was turned out into the world to shift for himself. The first of his numerous occupations that he could remember was when, early in his teens, he found himself a page in the house of representatives. General Charles M. Reed, who then represented the Erie district of Pennsylvania in the house, took great interest in the bright little fellow, and toward the end of the session he asked him if he wouldn't like to go home with him. Having nowhere else to go when congress adjourned Scott complied, and was put to work as a shipping clerk on the wharves of his employer.

How He Became Rich.

For the next few years the lad worked at a number of things, and he sailed fish and tramped. At last he returned to Erie and in 1850, when he was but twenty-three years old, he embarked in the coal and shipping business, and prospered and pushing several ships on the great lakes. Soon afterward he married a sister of the late Frank D. Tracy, who was at one time very prominent in the New York Stock exchange, and who at the time of his death was president of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific railroad. By the marriage Mr. Scott got considerable property and an introduction to the stock exchange. There he became acquainted with Samuel J. Tilden. Mr. Vanderbilt, the elder, and other wealthy magnates. They were quick to recognize his ability as a financier and manager, and from this time his upward progress was rapid. He owned coal mines in his own state and bituminous mines in West Virginia, and, as either president or director, he controlled over 9,000 miles of railroad.

His Political Life.

Mr. Scott was always a vigorous and aggressive Democrat—a war Democrat, however, for he gave liberally for the cause of the north. He served in the state senate of Erie and was one of the original Grover Cleveland men at Chicago. He was elected to the forty-ninth congress from the Twenty-fifth district, the same which General Reed represented in the twenty-ninth congress. He represented the state of Pennsylvania on the Democratic national committee from 1876 to 1884, and was reappointed four years later. Although a Pennsylvanian, a manufacturer of iron and a producer of coal, Mr. Scott was an active supporter of the Mills bill in the fiftieth congress for the reduction of the tariff. He declined a renomination in 1888 and 1890.

A Man of Few Words.

In Washington Mr. Scott occupied the middle house of the three erected by Governor Shepherd. Mr. Scott gave some of the best dinners in Washington. Sometimes he superintended the preparation of a dinner himself, and he was counted one of the best amateur cooks among the public men in Washington. Mr. Scott was a man of few words, but of quick action. As a business man he drove a close bargain and expected the person with whom he was dealing to do the same thing. Mr. Scott and his wife were favorites in the social circles of Washington. The eldest daughter, Mrs. Townsend, of Philadelphia, frequently assisted her mother in entertaining guests. She was assisted by Mrs. Charles H. Strong, of Erie, the second and only other child of the millionaire.

As a Turf Patron.

Though Mr. Scott was an Episcopalian, the charitable organizations of Erie of all denominations were annually indebted to him for considerable sums of money. Mr. Scott was an extensive farmer, owning one of the largest and best equipped stock farms in Pennsylvania. His horses were his especial pride, the list being headed by the famous Rayon d'Or, imported from Normandy at a cost of $85,000. He was a patron of race courses, and a few years ago his connection with the turf turned out somewhat disastrously for him.

Made $2,000,000 by the Rise.

He was a director in the Union Pacific, the Lake Shore, the Northwestern, the Canada Southern and several lesser railroads. *A few years ago he built the hand*some residence in Erie, briefst a cost of $150,000. He also owned a daily paper, the Erie Evening Herald. He was an active and successful speculator on the New York Stock exchange, and was popularly credited with having on one occasion made a profit of $2,000,000 by a rise in railroad shares. He gave evidence at the time of the panic of a level head and steady hand. He came out with unweakened credit, though his brother-in-law, J. F. Tracy, supposed to have been worth $10,000,000, Milton Courtright and the banking house of Kenyon, Cox & Co., in which he was interested, were all badly crippled. He was one of the first investors in the New York elevated railroad enterprises, making in 1876 a single subscription of $1,000,000 to the stock of one of them.

ACCUSED BY REV. GLEASON.

Dr. Pomeroy Has Retorted by a Suit for Alleged Slander.

LANCASTER, N. H., Sept. 21.—The singular and sensational divorce suit brought by Rev. Charles H. Gleason, of Somers, Conn., in which Dr. H. L. Pomeroy, a prominent Boston gynecologist, is named as co-respondent, came to the front again through a filing in this county of a suit by Dr. Pomeroy against Mr. Gleason, claiming heavy damages for alleged libel and slander.

*The suit is based on Mr. Gleason's alle*gation in his divorce libel, filed in Tolland county, Conn., that in the spring of 1890 Mrs. Gleason and Dr. Pomeroy were criminally intimate in Boston.

Dr. Pomeroy, when the allegation was first made public said both to reporters who called upon him and to his fellow members of his church that the charge was absolutely without foundation, and that he could only account for the clergyman's action on the ground of insanity caused by overwork.

Now he has determined to vindicate his character in a court of law. The clergyman was served with the papers in a suit for $10,000 on Friday, and is now here. The case promises to be one of great interest inasmuch as all the parties concerned are well known in Massachusetts and Connecticut. Dr. Pomeroy is a prominent practitioner in Boston, having an office at 158 Newbury street. The defendant has had charge of the Congregational church at Somers, Conn., for nearly nineteen years.

BABETTE AND THE COUNT.

Millionaire Fleischmann's Daughter to Love with Her Fencing Teacher.

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—Miss Babette Fleischmann, the seventeen-year-old daughter of Charles Fleischmann, the million aire yeast manufacturer and baker, is going to marry an alleged count, according to the gossip of the Rue de la Paix with her fencing master and means to marry him despite her parents' objections.

The lucky man in the case is Louis Logevitch or Count Logerotz as he calls himself. He came to this country about three years ago to give fencing lessons, and about two years ago he entered the service of Mr. Fleischmann to teach Miss Babette the use of foils. He taught her only too well, and now, despite the continued opposition of Mr. and Mrs. Fleischmann, the young couple are engaged to be married.

GARZA STRUNG UP.

The Mexican Revolutionist's Career Ended by Rifle and Rope.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Sept. 21.—Juan Macorita, who has arrived from Nier, Mexico, says that Mexican revolutionists were overtaken north of that place by government troops and that a battle ensued in which several on both sides were killed and wounded.

Caterina Garza, the leader of the revolution, was seriously shot and then hanged to a tree. General Sandoval, General Garza's chief lieutenant, escaped to the mountains with a few followers. He is being pursued and will be captured.

Rescued Alive After Four Hours.

GREENSBURG, Pa., Sept. 21.—A bad freight wreck occurred two miles east of here on the Pennsylvania road at 1 a. m., in which Fireman Rogers, Engineer Crawford and Brakeman Stanley were severely hurt, and forty cars and an engine demolished. The wreck was caused by the breaking in two of a westbound freight train on a steep down grade and the two parts of the train coming together again with a terrible force. At this moment an eastbound freight train crashed into the wrecked westbound train. Fireman Rogers went down the embankment under the hands of wreckage, but after four hours' hard work he was rescued from the huge mass of debris, badly cut and bruised, but not fatally hurt.

Tascott Among the Redmen.

CHICAGO, Sept. 21.—A report was received here last night from what is considered as a good source to the effect that Tascott, the alleged murderer of millionaire Snell, is desirous of getting back to Chicago and that negotiations to that effect are in progress. The report states that Tascott is now with the Turtle Mountain Indians.

They Will Release the Convicts.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Sept. 21.—The statement is positively made by citizens of Coal Creek and Briceville that the convicts in that region will be released as surely as the legislature adjourns without taking some steps looking to a final removal of the convicts.

The Funerals of the Schalks.

CHICAGO, Sept. 21.—Two, thousand persons crowded into the great St. Michael's Catholic church in the afternoon at the services over the remains of Gottlieb Schalk, his wife and four children, who were suffocated in their home on Selgwick street.

A Hebrew Lawyer Sues a Hotel.

CAMDEN, N. J., Sept. 21.—Emanuel Firth, the well known Hebrew lawyer of Philadelphia, has sued Mrs. Caroline Chambers and Mrs. Emma Hoopes, proprietors of the Irving hotel, for refusing to give him accommodations during the season just past.

TO THE PUBLIC!
This is to notify the public that I have purchased and will continue the business at
No: 94 Somerset street
formerly kept by Newton B. Smalley. I will keep a first-class market and sell for cash only, and as reasonably as first-class meat can be sold, but will have no bookkeeping nor will open accounts. I will spare no pains to suit customers, but credit don't pay, poor pay kills business. Orders will be delivered to all parts of the city free of charge.

THE NAME "CRANK."

One Version of How This Much Abused Term Originated.

It is claimed by one authority that the first "crank" was Morse, the inventor of the telegraph. According to the popular story when Morse had finished his first experiments in Washington and when congress met he was on hand to try and secure an appropriation of $17,000 to build an experimental telegraph line from Washington to Baltimore. He brought along with him his wires, instruments and electrical generator. The former he stretched in and around the Capitol building, with instruments here and there, and the generator, which was operated with a crank, he placed in a convenient location and secured the services of a man to do the generating.

The experiment created intense interest among the members of congress, and especially among the northern members of the senate. They became so absorbed in Mr. Morse and his experiment, and they negotiated other business in the senate to such an extent, that that body was frequently without a quorum. The center of their interest was the crank machine turned by the man in his operation of generating the electric current for the wires. The interest but increased as Mr. Morse each day more clearly demonstrated the practicability of his invention, and the senate's business in the senate suffered accordingly.

Finally, Senator Benton's patience became exhausted at the want of a quorum, and, rising in the senate one morning, he said:

"Mr. President, it is quite evident to my mind that we will never be able to proceed with business till this crank man and his bill is disposed of, and, with the object of hastening him to fold up his crank and get away from the Capitol so we may have the attention of the senators, I move that the bill appropriating $17,000 to construct a line between this city and Baltimore be put upon its passage."

As soon as word went out that the bill had been called up, the northern senators flocked in from all sides, and in a few minutes Mr. Morse was made happy over the passage of his bill. But from that time on he was known as "Morse, the Crank."

A Model of Italian Matrons.

Vittoria Colonna, the Italian poetess of the Fifteenth century and a model of Italian matronage, as she was styled, was born in 1490, the daughter of Fabrizio Colonna, great constable of the kingdom of Naples, and of Anna, the daughter of Federico di Montefeltro, duke of Urbino. Vittoria belonged to one of the oldest and most illustrious families of Italy, who, in the Eleventh century, became possessed of the feudal estate of La Colonna in the Tusculan hills, and made themselves famous as soldiers and priests. At the age of seventeen Vittoria married Francis Davalos, son of the marquis of Pescara, who served with distinction in the armies of Charles V., and to whom most of the honors he had received in the battle of Pavia, where, as commander of the imperial army, he greatly contributed to the glorious victory over the French. Vittoria Colonna, who was inconsolable for the death of her husband, determined on spending the remainder of her life in religious seclusion, although various proposals of a second marriage were made to her. His contemporaries, among them Michael Angelo and Ariosto, extolled her beauty, her talents and her virtues, and her poems, entitled "Rime dalle divine," or Rime Colonnesi (Poems of the Colonna), were greatly admired, and have often been reprinted. Vittoria Colonna died at Rome in 1547, and her poems were collected and published as "Rime Spirituali di Vittoria Colonna," was published at Venice in 1548.

The Screech Owl.

Few cries of birds are more melancholy than that of the screech owl, a sound which has long been regarded as the depths of superstitious dread of the cry of the owl is found in the forest lands of the far west. The redskin listens with alarm to the dismal screeching of the owl, firmly believing that its wild cries portend some impending calamity. Wilson, the ornithologist, in describing the cry of these owls, says: "This ghostly watchman has frequently warned me of the approach of morning, sweeping down and around my fires, uttering a loud and sudden 'Waugh Ot waugh!' Or sufficient to have alarmed a whole garrison. He has other nocturnal solos, one of which very strikingly resembles the half suppressed scream of a person suffocating or throttled." Sir John Richardson narrates the circumstance of a party of Scottish Highlanders who passed a long winter's night of intense fear in the depths of an American pine forest. They had made their bivouac fire from wood taken from an Indian tomb, all night long the shrieks and screeching of the owl, firmly believing that its wild cries portend some impending calamity. Wilson, the ornithologist, in describing the cry of these owls, says: "This ghostly watchman has frequently warned me of the approach of morning, sweeping down and around my fires, uttering a loud and sudden 'Waugh Ot waugh!' Or sufficient to have alarmed a whole garrison. He has other nocturnal solos, one of which very strikingly resembles the half suppressed scream of a person suffocating or throttled." Sir John Richardson narrates the circumstance of a party of Scottish Highlanders who passed a long winter's night of intense fear in the depths of an American pine forest. They had made their bivouac fire from wood taken from an Indian tomb; all night long the shrieks and screeching of the owl, firmly believing that its wild cries portend some impending calamity, cries which they at once judged came from the spirits of the old warrior bemoaning his desecrated resting place.

A Story of Fayn, the Novelist.

James Payn, the English novelist, is the author of this short but interesting story: "When I was a small boy I was taken to call upon a most excellent clergyman, who had a missionary box upon his drawing room table. I was too small to be interested in the conversation, and so after looking at the pictures and out of the window, I amused myself with trying whether a five shilling piece—all the money I had in the world, invested in that gigantic coin for safety—would go into the slit in the box. It was a close fit, but unfortunately it did go and slipped out of my fingers. There was a terrible metallic crash—a rock of silver falling into a sea of copper—and then, as the novelists say, 'I knew no more.' When I came to myself I found my family and the clergyman in raptures over my charitable act. I have given considerable money to the missionary cause since then, but never a sum with such ill grace or one that bankrupted me more completely."

Marriage Customs in Brittany.

In Brittany, if the wife seeks to rule, she must take care that the ring is not placed on her finger, shall slip at once to its place, instead of allowing it to stop at the first joint. The bride who lost her ring lost her appetite, and to break it pretended death. Attention is also paid in this province to the altar candles. If they burn brightly throughout the mass the couple will live harmoniously. The candle which first burns with the brightest flame will live longest. If one goes out, then its donor will die that year.

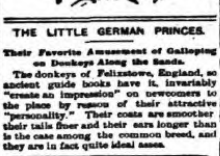
The Swedish bride tries to see the groom before he sees her, to gain the mastery. She places her foot before his during the ceremony and sits to the bridal chair first. She must stand near the groom, so that no one can come between them.

Cozy Corner Folks

THE LITTLE GERMAN PRINCES.

Their Favorite Amusement of Galloping on Donkeys Along the Sands.

The donkeys of Felixstowe, England, so ancient guide books have it, invariably "breed an impression" by reviewers to the pleas by reason of their attractive "personality." Their coats are smoother their tails finer and their ears longer than is the case among the common breed, and they are in fact quite ideal asses.



DONKEY RIDING ON THE BEACH.

During their recent stay at this place, the little German princes, from the delicate looking crown prince down to sturdy little Prince Oskar, fell at once under the spell of the asses, and one of their chief pleasures from the very day of their arrival was to canter gallantly along the sandy beach, as depicted in our illustration, or to gallop (as far as that is possible with such steeds) along the South cliff, where a wary donkey driver with a drove of five animals, the "fairest of the fair," made it his daily duty to be in attendance, even at the early hours when the young Hohenzollerns are accustomed to take their morning walk.

A Wishing Well.

A decided attraction at bazaars and fairs is a wishing well. This can be readily managed by young folk if assisted a little by their elders in getting things ready. The following letter from a schoolgirl tells how one wishing well was erected and operated with success. She says:

My sister and I hired a crank, with a small bucket attached, and managed to erect it at one corner of the room. With some painted canvas to resemble stones, many ferns and moss and turf, we contrived a most presentable foundation. There was space at the back for one of us to stand, and we made a roof over our heads with a canopy of striped red and ecru holland. We were dressed as gypsies, in red, brown and yellow, with yellow handkerchiefs knotted about our heads. We provided ourselves with a large number of illuminated scrolls, on thick parchment paper, which related to wishes, darkly hinting whether or not the wisher would gain what was wanted. Every one who tried the dictates of fate paid ten cents, and then the bucket was drawn up. We covered it with paper adorned with cabalistic signs, leaving only an aperture at the top large enough for the hand to pass through, and the wisher thus, without seeing, brought out an answer to the wish which he or she were requested to be wishing hard all through the process. We made quite twenty dollars for our labor in a large country town.

A Little Monarch's Displeasure.

Among the many stories told of the sayings and doings of the small king of Spain, the following is one of the latest. The other day he was taken to church as usual, and was surprised to see a new priest in the pulpit in place of the usual preacher. He was a subject "on account of sickness," and he turned out to be very eloquent and fervid, preaching an impassioned sermon. This did not suit the fancy of the little monarch. He frowned several times, and finally rose and said to his mother with great emphasis: "Don't you think I ought to make him stop? I never heard any one about as in my presence before!"

Early Autumn Dresses, Wraps, Etc.

Some country dresses for early autumn are in plain serge, says a writer in Harper's Bazar. With underskirts of blue or red cloth—red under gray or beige and blue under white. Over this passage is worn a sleeveless basket of the color of the under skirt, with a sleashed coat skirt, and having a V of the lighter fabric in the front and back. The coat is finished and bordered with gilt nail heads confines the jacket at the waist.

Wraps preparing for the first cool days are short capes of Pyrenean cloth trimmed with braid, and others of pretty snowflake tricot, attached to a yoke, with a ruche at the throat and on the shoulders. These small capes extend only about a hand's depth below the waist, are light, yet sufficiently warm, and easily doffed and donned.

A pretty early autumn hat is the Watteau hat of black crin (horse hair), with a brim of medium width turned up at the back. The low crown is encircled by a tulle ruche traversed by a ribbon. A tuft of flowers or feathers ornaments the back.

Sleeves That Are Admirable.

The most picturesque sleeve of today, and yet the one which seems to have found the fewest number of admirers, is the per fect Valois sleeve, as Miss Mantalini in The Pall Mall Budget. Sarah Bernhardt appreciates its beauty; so does Mrs. Langtry. It is slightly full on the shoulders, though not to any very little shape in at the elbow; fits the arm quite closely, but easily, comes down in a point over the hand, the end of the point being just where the dimples are.

A long sleeve makes the hand look tiny, an elbow sleeve cuts off the best part of a woman's arm, shows that which is usually the worst, and certainly does not decrease the size of the hand, the short puff sleeve that permits the shoulders to show above it is for a most undesirable style, whether the arm be a plump or a slender one. If the arm is slender the glove can be worn to cover the elbow and then the plump part of the arm would be visible. But happy is the woman who has arms like Mrs. Kendal—white, firm, and shaped like those that might have belonged to Venus.

Parlor Bravery.

"Yes," said Tommy, "I should admire to be a soldier, to carry a gun and sword and lead my men through fastnesses in the mountains where the enemy lie concealed thought to our one, and we would die like heroes with our boots on."

"Tommy," said his mother, "go into the woodshed and bring me an armful of kindling."

"Will you hold the light, mamma?"

"What do you want of a light?" inquired his mother.

GOOD HEALTH

SEASICKNESS.

Facts and Theories of Interest to Travelers About Its Cause and Cure.

Seasickness is one of the minor miseries for which there appears to be no cure, to thousands of returning travelers this season will testify. Professor Rosenbach, of Breslau, has made a ten years' study of this sickness and some of the results of his scious interesting facts and theories about it, among them the following:

1. The malady commences as soon as the vessel pitches; that is, rotates on its transverse axis. 2. The rolling, that is, rotation on its long axis, is less severe, but the combination of the two is very unfavorable. 3. The phenomena appear more quickly and are more severe the farther the patient is from the middle of the ship. Persons sleeping are attacked, also small children and animals. 4. A moderate amount of food in the stomach and a small quantity of alcohol is more likely to act as a preventive than an empty stomach. 5. The horizontal position on the deck acts in some degree as a preventive. 6. Anxiety and apprehension precede sickness; a certain edification of energy and resolution may in short voyages and with slight vessel motion control the tendency to sickness. Soft winds (for example, sirocco), strong heats, etc., are unfavorable. 7. There are two categories of the affection dependent on individual predisposition: in one the head, in the other the abdomen is principally affected. Cases where both are affected are common.

As to the cause of seasickness Professor Rosenbach accepts the theory of "the disturbed equilibrium," according to which the permanent disturbances of equilibrium act as painful irritations to the contents of the skull and of the abdomen, and are thus the causes of the phenomena. The author thinks that he has discovered a new explanation of the action of external movement impulse by the phenomena observed in rapid elevators. It is found that in ascending with the eyes closed, no noise being heard, there is experienced a peculiar feeling at the epigastrium which goes off during the rise, say, of four or five floors, but reappears the moment the elevator stops. The same thing occurs when the elevator moves downward. There occurs a sudden movement and sudden arrest of the movement, and the effect of this in producing the epigastric disturbance is held to be analogous to the effect of the motion in the vessel at sea.

The immediate transition from one movement to another movement in a different direction is assumed to be the cause of the disturbances experienced. Thus the painful sensations in seasickness, in the act of swinging, in the oscillation liable to occur in rapid railway journeys, agree in this, that the peculiar symptoms of irritation, the distressing feeling at the epigastrium, the cold sweats, the general feeling of illness and the headache, appear at the moment when the direction of the movement changes.

The author considers that the only real cure is "custom." He speaks favorably of certain medicines for very short sea voyages—quinine, antipyrine, bromide salts, cocaine, morphine, chloral and other anæsthetics. He advises that the horizontal position at middeck should be taken before the voyage begins, and that a bandage should be tightly placed over the liver, whereby the intensity of the motion is diminished and a certain degree of fixation of the abdominal contents promoted.

A Simple Cure for Mosquito Bites.

A German scientist is credited with saying that of the various remedies recommended for mosquito bites, such as gammonia, oil of cloves, chloroform, carbolized glycerin, etc., none is better than cold water. He is an ardent naturalist and on his frequent excursions in the country he invariably carries a small piece of soap, with a few drops of it bite he makes a lather all over the affected part and allows it to dry on. He almost invariably finds that the relief is instantaneous, and that all pain soon ceases. Should it continue, however, as sometimes happens, it is only necessary to repeat the application.

MANNERS AND CUSTOMS.

Useful Points for a Variety of Occasions, as Given by Harper's Bazar.

The groom at a morning wedding may wear a cutaway coat, but the frock coat is preferred. His light suit for traveling is correct. The ushers enter the church first, followed by the bridesmaids. The maid of honor precedes the bride. This order is reversed when leaving the church. At the reception, the bridesmaids stand on each side near the bride, and the ushers receive the guests and present them to the bride and groom.

Tea gowns are worn in one's own home when receiving a few friends, or when staying in the country house of an intimate friend. They are not worn when giving a formal reception.

Serve coffee in large cups for high tea, but do not make another service of it later. Coffee at dinner is, of course, only served after dessert, and always in small cups. Inclose the engraved card of your guest with your own; or, if you are writing your invitations, simply invite your friends "to meet Miss Smith."

Have the calling card for the young girl a trifle smaller than that of her mother; it should read simply, "Miss Smith." The young man's card is quite small, long and narrow, and should bear his entire name, prefaced by "Mr." You, of course, send in your cards by the servant; on finding the person "not at home," leave them with the servant.

Let the lady precede you in being shown to your seats by an usher. Precede the lady going up stairs, or in any place where there is the possibility of meeting annoyance or inconvenience.

It is correct to write out the date and place it at the end of a formal letter. A first call should be returned within a week or ten days.

Shell or string the beans and cut them into small pieces; cut the green corn from the cob, using one-third more corn than beans. Boil the beans for twenty minutes, then drain and mix with the corn. Cover them both with boiling water, add sufficient salt; stew for thirty minutes, stirring frequently, then pour off the water and season with milk, adding butter, pepper and salt to taste, and cook for ten minutes more and serve very hot.

PLAINFIELD EVENING NEWS.

ESTABLISHED 1884. PLAINFIELD, N. J., "THE COLORADO OF THE EAST," TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 22, 1891. PRICE TWO CENTS.

TALK OF THE TOWN

—A number of Plainfielders visited Waverly fair to-day.

—The September term of the Somerset county courts began to-day.

—The dealers in flour and feed propose to charge, after a certain date, for the bags used.

—It is rumored that a prize fight will take place in this vicinity some evening this week.

—The members of St. Mary's church are arranging for a grand fair to be held next month.

—The Plainfield Reform Club will hold its regular mid-week meeting Thursday at eight o'clock.

—Within five weeks the borough of North Plainfield will have a water supply for fire purposes.

—The City Common Councilmen did not hold a special meeting last night. It was reported that they would.

—The Exempt Firemen's Association advertise a delightful excursion to Atlantic City. Read their advertisement.

—Carpets made and laid free of charge, and dress linings given in with each dress pattern made at the special offering for a short time, now at Edsall's.

—To-morrow will be Governor's Day at the Waverly fair. Governor Abbett could not attend Thursday and that is the reason the day has been changed.

—It was reported last evening that a tank caved in on Washington street and injured an Italian who was working nearby. The rumor cannot be verified.

—In another column the Central Railroad Company advertise an excursion to West Point. The price of tickets from this city have been placed at one dollar.

—The Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of the Warren Mission changed will hold a meeting in the parlors of the chapel this evening at eight o'clock.

—A branch a foot long, broken from a quince tree in the garden of Theodore B. Field, of Lambertville, was found to contain not less than a thousand army worms.

—Early this morning two young men were arrested for fast driving through the streets of this city. They are to have a trial before City Judge Codington this evening at seven o'clock.

—There are two agents on the Central who have been in the places they now hold for a third of a century. John Heim, of Lebanon, has dealt out tickets at that station for 33 years, and William D. Wyckoff, of Raritan, has worn the thumb entirely off his right hand by piying the date stamp since July, 1860, when he went there to stay a few days.

—Under section law of this State, section 47, very plainly states that the voter must have his ballot in the official envelope, "unsealed, but with the flap thereof turned down so as to conceal the ballot," while section 69, with equal particularity, puts a penalty of $25 upon any voter who shall "vote or offer to vote any ballot except an official ballot inclosed and sealed in an official envelope.

—Trinity Reformed church of Plainfield will be inclined to think that, in some features at least, marriage is a failure. An old bachelor marks a will leaving this church $50,000. He subsequently married, made a new will, died and left this church not a penny.—Elizabeth Journal. This has been going the rounds of the papers, but an officer of the church who saw the will says the sum was $5,000, not $50,000.

—Mrs. Peter Brunn called at THE NEWS office this morning in company with Chief Carey respecting the card published by her husband in yesterday's edition wherein the husband states that his wife had left his home and bed, and forbids anybody trusting her on his account. The woman shows that she had good reason to leave her husband's bed and board, and Chief Carey desires that that this statement be made on his authority as a member of the police force. The woman, whom he considers has been deeply wronged, and whom he proposes to see righted.

—The man, woman or child who can get out of doors during this magnificent weather, and who does not take advantage of the privilege, does an injustice to health, to good spirits, and to a kind Providence. There is no season of the year more pleasant for out-door exercise and for invigorating in its influences. The freshness and coolness of the air, the beauty of the scenery, the serene and satisfying aspect of nature, all conspire to invest it with a charm that is unsurpassed. Walking, riding, or healthful exercise of any kind in the open air are keenly enjoyed at this season, and every day of it should be made use of, as this superb weather cannot last long.

—Thirty odd new subscribers were added to THE NEWS in one day last week. While not coming daily in such large numbers, the average number is most gratifying, and shows that the public appreciate an enterprising newspaper, which does not devote its space to blatant self-praise, but gives the public the current news and other matters of interest. A glance at our advertisement columns shall will show very few outside advertisements; our home-merchants, finding THE NEWS such a valuable medium that they occupy almost all the space not devoted to the legitimate news of the day. In the teeth of the "combine's" gales and other baleful influences, THE NEWS sails grandly and successfully ever onward on a sea of prosperity.

A BURGLAR CAUGHT.

Charles Elston Arrested for Robbing Mr. Dunham's Store.

The "gents'" furnishing store on West Front street, of which Mr. O. M. Dunham is the proprietor, was robbed last night of about $200 worth of jewelry. At about one o'clock Charles Elston boarded a freight train in this city and rode to Bound Brook. On the way there he gave one of the brakemen a ring, at the same time displaying several others.

The brakeman was rather suspicious and so informed the yard-master at Bound Brook. The latter called Constable Sebring and had Elston arrested on the cars.

When they took him to the station-house and searched him they found six gold watches, about thirty rings, watch charms, etc. The authorities of Bound Brook telegraphed to this city and Policeman Lynch in company with Mr. Dunham went to Bound Brook this morning. In the meantime Elston had been committed to the county jail at Somerville on the charge of trespassing on the cars.

Mr. Dunham identified the property found on Elston as belonging to him and Mr. Lynch brought it back to this city and now has it in his possession.

Elston's father is the proprietor of a five and ten cent store and does business in the same building with Mr. Dunham. Young Elston was a clerk in his father's store and frequently visited Mr. Dunham's store for the purpose of chatting. In that way he became familiar with the premises.

Elston effected an entrance to the store by breaking the shutter and cutting out one of the panes of glass in the rear.

A GOLD-MINE FOR THIEVES.

How They Purloin From Uncle Sam.

Said a well-known cashier of a Plainfield bank, as he fingered a "plugged" half-dollar. "Now that will bring us 35 cents. We set them aside until a quantity have collected. "It is curious" he continued, "how some men will work to steal. The well-known method is to get gold pieces and by delicate machinery or the skillful manipulation of hand tools bore a hole, or holes, in the side of the coin, take out some of the gold, and fill the cavity with other and of course, baser metal. Sometimes it is so skillfully "plugged" that detection is difficult."

The Red Men to Celebrate.

The various Societies of the Improved Order of Red Men of New Jersey and Pennsylvania will celebrate the four hundreth anniversary of the discovery of America at Philadelphia on October 12th. Red Men from all parts of both States will participate in the festivities which will last three days. The members of Metahtonomo Tribe of this city have significant intention of taking part in the celebration.

Capillaire.

Capillaire makes a most refreshing beverage, and can be obtained from the chemist. Infuse two ounces of capillaire in one pint of boiling water for half an hour; strain and boil with two and a half pounds of sugar. When this is dissolved, remove the syrup from the fire, and, when nearly cold, stir in three ounces of orange-flower water.—Ex.

Stole Shoes.

During last evening some thief as yet unknown stole a pair of shoes from in front of Berkaw's shoe store on West Front street. The shoes with several other pair were hanging outside the store at the time that they were stolen. The police think they have a clue to the identity of the culprit.

The Fair Ended.

The fair for the benefit of St. Joseph's Catholic church which has been in progress in the hall of the Plainfield Opera House Building since the last ten days was concluded Saturday evening. It is said to have been very successful and that the church treasury will be enriched thereby.

Robbed the Chinamen.

It is reported that some men thief visited the Chinese Laundry on North avenue Saturday evening and deliberately stole $18 from the cash drawer. The Celestials are said to have caught him in the act, and that a tussle ensued but that the fellow finally escaped with his booty.

The Westfield Nine Won.

The New Brunswick and Westfield base ball mines played the second game of their series at the Westfield's grounds Saturday. The game was won by the Westfields by the score of 9 to 1. The Westfield nine has played twenty-seven games and won eighteen.

A BRUTAL HUSBAND.

A Fanwood Man Beats His Helpless Wife Into Insensibility.

A farm hand in the employ of Douglas Darby, of Fanwood, gave his wife a terrible beating Sunday night. He used a heavy harness strap. He struck the wife repeatedly on the head while the helpless woman lay upon the floor. He did not stop beating her until she became insensible. More than an hour passed before she regained consciousness.

Neighbors summoned Dr. Wescott, the County Physician, who resides in Scotch Plains, about a mile from the scene of the outrage. He found the woman in spasms, but by the use of restoratives she was soon able to converse a little. Yesterday she was much better.

The man has frequently beaten his wife, the neighbors say. No arrest has been made.

The neighbors are indignant at the brutal husband, and they declare that if he beats his wife again they will give him a sound thrashing.

THAT NEW STREET.

Its Need Made Daily Apparent.

Somerset street, the main thoroughfare of North Plainfield was, as usual, this morning almost blockaded. Farmers, grocers, butchers, bakers, stone and the miscellanious wagons and carriages which traverse the street daily were all driving in the morning, especially on that portion of the street between Jackson and Linden avenues, where wagons line the curbs and leave small space for other vehicles to pass.

The need of the proposed new street is evident. The public feeling is unanimously for it. The committee are energetically at work and will doubtless soon have the beautiful thoroughfare proposed, started.

Look Out for Him.

Yesterday a circular was received at this office offering one thousand dollars reward for the arrest and detention of Frederick Carlton Fitzsimmons, alias Ambrose G. Budd, alias Anderson, alias Yellick, alias A. B. Charles, who escaped from Allegheny county jail on night of September 14th, 1891, and who is indicted by the Grand Jury for the murder of Detective D. H. Gilkinson. The circular is signed by the sheriff of Allegheny county, the superintendent of police and the Board of County Commissioners. It describes Fitzsimmons as follows: Thirty-six years old, five feet six or seven inches high; weighs 135 pounds, slender build, dark complexion, dark eyes, dark hair mixed with gray, beard if any, dark mixed with gray, dark stubby mustache, looks older than he really is, looks like a Jew but is not, had no beard when he left here, has extra large feet, wore a neat dark blue suit of clothes with a cutaway coat, white shirt and standing collar; speaks several languages, has traveled extensively, is a desperated man and will kill rather than be taken; has very sharp looking eyes, is intelligent and very active.

The Peach Crop.

The great peach crop is now about gathered, only a few late varieties being left in the orchards to come. Nearly 2,000 loads have passed through Philadelphia from the Delaware and Maryland orchards to various markets North and West. These cars contained 2,500,000 baskets of fruit. This but half of the crop, as fully 2,500,000 have been shipped by rail South, and by boats to Philadelphia, Baltimore and New York. This is the largest crop of peaches ever grown on the Delaware and Maryland peninsula, except that of 1875. New Jersey has grown about 2,500,000 baskets of peaches most of which found their way to New York and New England cities.

The crop has netted the Delaware and Maryland farmers about $1,250,000, and the New Jersey growers about $800,000. Consumers paid about $4,000,000 for this fruit.

Denounced an Athletic Club.

Father Carroll, of St. Mary's church, Elizabeth, created a profound sensation among his parishioners Sunday by denouncing in strong language one of the Athletic associations of Elizabeth, among the members of which are many of his congregation.

He accuses them of using their club rooms for the sale of liquor on Sundays, and at all hours of the night as a gambling place. It was a common occurrence, he said, for him to meet some of the members in a state of intoxication, and he warned them that he would endeavor to close their den of vice.

St. Mary's church is the largest Catholic parish in the city. The club members, who number over a hundred, are very indignant.

A Practical Joke.

Some practical joker played a joke on Prince Brown, a Somerset street black, smith this morning. Mr. Brown went to his shop and found started up his fire. In order to do so he was compelled to use a bellows. In the meantime the joker had hid two large firecrackers in the soft coal. The fuse on the crackers was lighted and when a minute a loud explosion followed. The fire in the furnace was scattered all around the shop and Mr. Brown, thinking that his time, had come ran into the street. A bystander said that his hair fairly stood on ends and that he was as white as a ghost. The explosion could be heard several blocks distant.

I have recommended Dr. David Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" to many in Shelton and Birmingham, and I have yet to find one who has not been benefited by it.—C. L. Sawyer, Birmingham, Conn.—Abv.

RAHWAY'S AQUATIC CARNIVAL.

Many Gaily Decked Boats and a Brilliantly Illuminated River.

A number of residents of this city went to Rahway on Saturday evening to witness the aquatic carnival. Mayor Rankin very properly headed the Elizabeth delegation, and there were a number of prominent men who were the special guests of the carnival committee.

The event was a complete success. The perfectly clear night greatly added to the success of the affair. Probably never in the history of nearly 300 years has the city been more aroused. All the stores in Cherry, Main and many other of the principal streets were decorated with flags, bunting and hundreds of Chinese lanterns. Along the river, which winds for nearly a mile through this city, the banks were brilliant with thousands of lanterns, which lighted up the flags and colored bunting and cast a glow over the river on which the carnival pageant passed.

There were about 100 boats of every description in line, from the modest bateau to the elegant steam yacht, each decorated with lanterns, flags, original designs, many humorous ones being among them. The Union County Roadsters had a handsomely decorated boat. Commodore Luttgen, in his steam yacht Amelia Victoria, with four floats containing beautiful young women in costume, led the parade. Then followed various crafts representing gondolas, the occupants being young women representing different characters of history, song, &c. Mayor Chamberlain's large schooner was utilized as the headquarters for the committee and invited guests. It was lavishly decorated and filled with several hundred guests, and presented an animated scene. Music was furnished by Drake's Zouave Band and the Rahway Cornet Band. A detachment from the gun squad of the Third Regiment, N. S. G. of New Jersey, fired a salute from the river bank near Milton avenue.

The aquatic fireworks called forth great enthusiasm. The number of visitors from other places was large. Gov. Abbett was unexpectedly detained, but sent his launch New Jersey, in charge of Leon Abbett, Jr. Among the guests were Mayor VanCleef, of New Brunswick; the Mayor and Common Council of Perth Amboy, and other prominent residents from Plainfield, Westfield, Woodbridge and other cities. Stands were erected along the river banks, the seats of which were sold for the benefit of the Children's Home.

STATE NEWS

David Hill, a Warren county snake charmer, captured alive a yellow rattlesnake which had seventeen rattles.

Gabriel Post, of Hibernia, Morris county, has a featherless duck, and he does not know whether to kill it or preserve it as a curiosity. He thinks of doing both. Winter as a curiosity. The duck, while small, ran through a bonfire in the yard, scorching its feathers. They all came out, and no new ones took their place.

Salem Sunbeam:—A new milch cow belonging to John Waters of Lower Alloway suddenly and mysteriously failed in her milk. A watch was kept when it was discovered that she was being systematically relieved of the lacteal fluid by a hog that ran with her in the pasture field.

Mrs. John S. Risley of Pleasantville, had an encounter on Saturday with a black snake measuring over nine feet. She was in the back yard, when she nearly stepped on the reptile. Mrs. Risley grabbed up a pitchfork and for ten minutes fought the snake, and finally managed to kill it.

John Lamb, once a wealthy resident of Elizabeth and a prosperous business man, is lying in the county jail a victim of strong drink, and his death is likely to occur from delirium tremens. About twenty years ago he was estimated to be worth $40,000. He came from a good family, and his father made all his money in the lightning-rod business.

On Monday evening between seven and eight o'clock fire burst from the dine situated on the mountain between Washington and Asbury, was destroyed by fire. The contents, besides an adjoining building. Two horses and two sheds were burned, as was the entire crop of hay, wheat and oats, including seed wheat and all machinery. The loss is probably $3,000. We understand there was an insurance of $1,200 on barn and contents. It is thought that the fire was started by a tramp who had an hour before refused the privilege of staying there all night. He used some very offensive language before leaving. The building was fired in three places.

They Can Afford It.

All the employes of the United States Express company will be uniformed at the expense of the company by October 1st. The uniform consists of a double-breasted coat of dark navy blue, with brass buttons containing the monogram "U. S. E." On the lapel of the coat will be worn the trade mark of the company, a sorrel and fireproof safe with eagle wings extending therefrom. Judging from the excessive charges made by the Express Companies in carrying small parcels, we take it that they can not only afford to uniform their employes but hire a brass band for each office as well. Thirty-five cents to carry a basket of peaches from Flemington to Trenton! Jerusalem crickets!—Hunterdon County Democrat.

SOCIAL & PERSONAL

Mr. Frank Smith has returned to his home on New street from a visit to friends in Rhode Island.

TWO TRAINS COLLIDE.

"Jack" Murphy Fatally Injured, Another Brakeman Lost a Leg.

MERCERVILLE, N. J., Sept. 22. (Special.)—Two freight trains on the Lehigh Valley Railroad collided near here at 7:30 o'clock this morning. Both engines were demolished. A brakeman named "Jack" Murphy, a resident of Perth Amboy, was badly injured and may die. Another brakeman, whose name is unknown, had one of his legs cut off. Travel was delayed for some time.

FREAK CHICKENS.

Feathered Nondescripts Creating Great Excitement in Hammonton.

Washington Pressey is one of the prominent citizens of Hammonton, New Jersey. He holds the responsible position of Justice of the Peace of that town, but his prominence is also, in a measure, due to his corpulency, he stands six feet high and weighs about 300 pounds.

Justice Pressey is recognized as a genius by his fellow citizens, for he has, during the fifty odd years of his life, invented a stump puller, a turnip crusher, a newfangled bee hive, and a double back action, self-cocking incubator.

This incubator is, of all the other of his inventions, the one dear to Justice Pressey's heart. Year after year as the moons have waxed and waned since the completion of the wonderful machine, his two estimable daughters have at regular intervals filled the incubator to the brim, and in the natural course of events it has hatched out brood after brood of healthy young chicks, which have flourished and grown to maturity and proudly cackled on the barnyard fence.

Suddenly this incubator causes consternation and excitement at Justice Pressey's home. About a week ago the two Misses Pressey filled the machine with the choicest of hen fruit, started the motor, apparently in the due course of its mission of usefulness. It has yielded results, and such results were never before vouchsafed to any of artificial incubation.

When the Misses Pressey opened the incubator yesterday morning they gazed at one another in blank astonishment. Mixed with the shells which were strewn among the broken egg shells were eight little chicks, with web feet like ducks, and on the back of each of ducks and the balance of their physical construction the counterpart of chickens. One had a duck's bill cut out and in the place of its head, which was cobless. Two had two heads set on two different necks, which forked about one-third of an inch above the maw. They were perfect in form and in a healthy and sound condition, while yet another had its legs set in its body backwards, while its head was close to its tail. The latter, it will be, in consequence thereof, compelled to perform its peregrinations through life with its body and its tail in front of it.

Of course the girls called their father, the owner of the hen fruit, to witness the freaks. He in turn called in a crowd of the neighbors. Then followed discussions and conjectures of the most long, loud and vigorous. Justice Pressey himself did not say much, but he gently shook his head and walked towards the house and thought deeply. He cried suddenly to one of his daughters: "Clear out, I put some sour milk in the infernal thing and see what kind of cheese cakes it'll hatch out."—Ex.

An Apology to Dr. Lewis.

During the absence of the editor of THE NEWS on important business out of town yesterday matter was brought to this office by Rev. Dr. Lewis for publication. In his hurry the editor said nothing to give any intimation that the matter was intended as other than a communication, and the head of the item was necessary, but the person whose business *it was to edit copy under the circum*stances, exceptionable construction seems to have misunderstood the doctor's object, and inserted it as a communication. The editor was made aware of such error, and upon the first opportunity did not the editor of THE NEWS, instead of his own people as he did. Of course we apologize for the blunder, but this recurrence of the matter was not the matter right in justice to all concerned. Dr. Lewis has been requested by us to supply items of interest to the public, and we wish to say to our readers and has occasionally very kindly done so, but has never done anything so indiscreet as the matter referred to made him appear to do. He is never given to such puerile conceits as the one signature on all questions relating to public morals, and THE NEWS can only express sentiments in admiration for his course generally. All of which makes the slip exceedingly the more annoying to say the least. However we trust this will make sufficient amends.

Another matter in this connection: When the Knights of Pythias were in town celebrating, last Wednesday, we were told that we would be given special welcome in these columns, with which all do not appear pleased, although our limitations used to please all.

The next day a letter of thanks was sent from the Grand Chancellor, which was addressed to the editor by name. We according to custom, regarding it a public matter, omitted the name and inserted the title commonly used, and made such eliminations as we deemed advisable in editing, and now we learn that what was written was not intended for publication. Of course this was not known to us at the time.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

It is proposed to build a second Canadian Pacific road from Hudson bay to Alaska. Do let us have one. Three months in the year it can be used, and its freight will be ice and mosquitoes.

The steamer Dandelaam was disabled and came near being lost on the voyage from Liverpool to New York. She was a new vessel, and this was only her second trip. The only wonder is that she ever made a single voyage in safety with such a name as that.

The craze for clubs among women has found its culmination in Massachusetts, where the female convicts in the Women's reformatory at Sherborn have started a club of their own. The organization meets on Monday evenings and these women in prison have the same classes and exercises as their wealthy and aristocratic sisters in the outside world.

A republic for 600 years. That is what the recording clerk of time has set down for Switzerland. In New York city alone there are 25,000 Swiss who celebrated the day in remembrance of their native land. Will the American republic last 600 years? Of course it will. But when its 600th birthday comes will there be 25,000 Americans in any one foreign city to celebrate it? Hardly. The United States is so much more prosperous than any other country that its citizens will never leave it because they can better their fortunes elsewhere.

Melon Day at Rocky Ford.

One of Colorado's local holidays furnishes a noble object lesson to other neighborhoods and other states. Ten years ago there were no melons to speak of in the vicinity of Rocky Ford. One ranchman, G. W. Swank, had faith and began raising them by irrigation. The idea grew and the melon patch grew until at length 100 acres was not enough to supply the demand. Then other people began to cultivate the colored brother's favorite fruit, too, with good returns.

One result of this thriving and pleasant industry is the annual melon picnic at Rocky Ford. The dawn of that day recently saw 3,000 luscious watermelons arranged in a gigantic pyramid inside of a low wooden pen. At intervals around the edge of the great pyramid were smaller ones of pale, creamy canteloupes. All the country round about took part in this unique and delightful outing. The only regulation enforced was that the eaters should leave their melon rinds upon the tables like decent human beings, and not throw them upon the ground.

It should be mentioned that irrigation has produced all this wonderful crop of melons. The possibilities of irrigation are as yet only dimly understood, and agriculture in the older states, where rain has hitherto been depended on, is pointing in this direction.

"The Gospel of Good Roads."

Mr. Isaac B. Potter, chairman of the New York State Road Improvement association, begs the pardon of the rural community for saying that the farmer is not the only honest man in the world. Then he proceeds to give his farmer fellow citizens such a sermon on good roads as they never got before, and one that will remind them of an exhortation about the need of repentance.

Mr. Potter's little pamphlet is published by the New York State Road Improvement association. It is to be hoped it will be distributed throughout the length and breadth of this land of poor roads. The style is that of a familiar forceful talk. Farmers are first of all shown how much they lose in pocket every year through our wretched road system. In France the government superintends the public highways and spends $18,000,000 a year to keep them up, and the territory is only four times as large as the state of New York. But in France, on the smooth, hard roads, one horse can trot along merrily and drag after him a weight of a ton and a third, while in the United States two horses frequently break down under a scant half ton load. The extra wagon repair, extra horses, the agriculturist must keep, extra vexation, delay and loss will amount to six times the cost of a good road every year.

Mr. Potter appeals to the American desire for gain directly at every point. He shows how good roads bring up the value of land every time. Near Orange N. J., the land has increased in value from $1,300 an acre to $2,000, simply because of new roads. In Union county N. J. a few years ago the people waked up and put in sixty miles of Telford road. From $50 and $75 an acre farm lands at once gave a great jump upward to $200 an acre. Mr. Potter recommends always the Telford road, with its firm foundation of large solid stones at the bottom of all.

Greatly destructive to a road is the narrow tire under a heavy weight, and in Europe the width of the wagon tire is regulated by law. For instance a two wheel wagon for two horses must have a 4-inch tire, while a two wheel cart drawn by three or four horses must have a tire six inches wide. The four wheel wagon drawn by three or four horses must have a tire four inches wide. "Water," says the writer, "has no place on any road, good or bad. It is more hurtful than any other agent of destruction."

LIKE OKLAHOMA'S RUSH.

Thirty Thousand Boomers in a Mad Stampede.

A BLOODY RACE WAR IS PROBABLE.

Cowboys and Indians Will Both Oppose the Influx of Negroes and Wild Scenes Are Expected at Langston City, the New Settlement of Colored People.

GUTHRIE, O. T., Sept. 22.—At noon today the grand rush for lots on the Cherokee strip began. Thirty thousand people were ranged along the border line of the Indian reservations waiting for the signal to permit them to pass over into the "promised land" which has been opened up to them by the president's proclamation, and when the signal was at last given the stampede was simply terrific. It was the old Oklahoma rush over again with some modifications. There were not as many boomers and a smaller number of them were in wagons.

A Motley Crew.

It was indeed a motley crew. Cowboys on fleet steeds were mixed up with settlers' wagons and anxious homesteaders on foot. Men, women, boys and girls were scrambling together. Old gray headed boomers with their single blanket and frying pan, jostle along with prospective bankers, pulling the reins over spirited teams. The race was fully as exciting as the famous English derby or the American futurity. It was a race for all and black, white and Indians participated. Winchesters and six shooters were in every male hand and will be used if occasion requires.

Several Shooting Scrapes.

Several men have already been shot in quarrels over claims, and still scenes will doubtless occur before nightfall or before the new towns are laid out and every man supplied with a claim.

Description of the Lands.

The lands opened for settlement aggregate in all 1,101,350 acres. Some is adapted for raising the crops, and some of it would afford excellent pasturage for goats. The Indians do not lose all their land. Each buck gets a quarter section, and not only that, but he is a lawful "boomer," and has already picked out the prize spots.

He cannot sell his land for twenty-five years, but during that time he does not have to pay any taxes.

After the Indian lands and the lands held for school purposes have been deducted about 900,000 acres will be open for actual settlement. This makes about 50,000 homesteads, and about twenty men for every homestead are on the ground.

Chandler and Ferguson.

Lieutenant Governor Martin left at 7 o'clock for the county seat named Chandler. Governor Steele goes to the county seat named Ferguson. Chandler is named for the assistant secretary of the interior, H. D. Baker, of Oklahoma City, has already been appointed postmaster of the town of Chandler. Ferguson, it is said, will be in the Pottawattomie country, forty miles from Guthrie. Chandler will be in the Sac and Fox country, forty miles from Guthrie.

The government surveyors are not through with their work on the town sites and the president has announced that the sites shall not be taken up until the survey is finished. No attention will be paid to this, however, and the force of soldiers on the border will be too large enough to keep them off. The threatened trouble over the town sites at Chandler overshadows even the expected disturbance at Langston or even the negroes and cowboys. Governor Steele has determined to suspend the president's proclamation so far as it might be construed to relate to the town sites, and will not permit entry upon them until after he has approved the surveys and place.

A Race War Probable.

At the negro settlement of Langston there is a prospect of a bloody race war being precipitated when the attempt is made to secure the lands. Two thousand negroes, all armed, are on the road with numberless women and children. These negroes say they are determined to have their farms, while the cowboys of course they are just as determined that they shall not. It is doubtful if a desperate fight between these two factions can be averted today.

The Indians are also hostile to the negroes, claiming that they especially stipulated when ceding the land that none but white settlers would be allowed to enter. The negroes, however, are determined to have their portion of the acres to be opened, and rushed into the new lands, guns in hand, and singing the old jubilee melody, "For Wess A-gwine to Occupy de Lan."

Eloped with a Servant Girl.

BROOKLYN, Sept. 22.—Dr. Francis A. Schlitz, a wealthy practitioner in Brooklyn, who lived with his wife and only child, a girl twelve years old, in a handsome brown stone house, at No. 811 Willoughby avenue, Brooklyn, is missing. He is believed to have eloped with twenty-three-year-old Rosie Gobel, a former servant in his family.

Odd Fellows at St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 22.—The sovereign grand lodge of Odd Fellows met at St. Louis. The visitors number 30,000. The number of Odd Fellows initiated last year was 68,000; net increase in the United States and Canada, 37,000; total membership, 672,334. The revenue for 1890-1 is $7,344,227. The pecuniary benevolence distributed was $4,000,000.

The Jews For Violence.

MILLVILLE, N. J., Sept. 22.—The excitement over the tending boys' strike at the glass works of Whitall, Tatum & Co. has taken a serious aspect, as the firm have locked out every employee who refused to work with fourteen Russian Jews. The Jews fear violence.

A Harrisburg Man Killed.

JERSEY CITY, Sept. 22.—G. W. Cressler, of Harrisburg, Pa., a carpenter, while at work on the temporary dining room of the Pennsylvania railroad station in this city, fell from a scaffold and was killed.

Gould said He Got $40,000.

BUFFALO, Sept. 22.—At the Gould trial here today the cashier of the robbed bank at Albany testified that William Gould admitted to him that he had overdrawn his account $40,000.

Bill Nye as a Playwright.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—Bill Nye's new comedy "Our Cook," was presented here last evening by Thomas Q. Seabrooke. It is a very funny and delighted a large audience.

THE WORLD OF POLITICS.

They Mostly Say, "We Are Going to Support Harrison."

CLEVELAND, Sept. 22.—Judge J. W. Jones, the well known Republican jurist of this city, has just returned from a six weeks' trip to the Pacific slope. He says: "Everything on the Pacific coast is Blaine. During his tour President Harrison made a good impression, was pleasant and made good speeches. But everybody I met's are for Blaine. This feeling extends east to Colorado and other interior states. It makes no difference to these people whether or not Blaine is a candidate. They merely say, 'We are going to nominate Blaine.'"

Socialist De Leon Talks.

ALBANY, Sept. 22.—Daniel De Leon, the socialistic nominee for governor, addressed a large assemblage last night on "Why American Workingmen Should Be Social ists." He said that the socialistic nominee for governor last year obtained 14,000 votes and that he thought the vote would be increased at least 6,000 this year. He spoke highly both of the nominees for governor and gave Governor Hill a hard drive. He said that the Farmers' Alliance would not co-operate with the Labor party until they can frame a platform and a stand for themselves. This he urged the Labor party to do.

Mr. Jones Declined.

ALBANY, Sept. 22.—The Citizens' Alliance of this county, which held its barbecue, expected to give Lieutenant Governor Jones an independent nomination for governor, but he refused to have it. He wrote the delegates a letter regretting that another engagement kept him from meeting them but assured them he was "in full accord with any movement that sincerely attempts to secure to every human being his rights."

Cleveland and Mills.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—Mr. Mills' speech at Mansfield, O., in which he swept aside the silver question as one of no importance compared with the question of tariff taxation, has commanded a good deal of attention from the Washington politicians. They say that the attitude of Mr. Mills indicates an alliance of the friends of Mills with the friends of Mr. Cleveland.

A Local Fight at Newark.

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 22.—There is a Democratic split in this city. Mayor Joseph Haynes, regular Democratic candidate for mayor, will be opposed by ex-Assemblyman J. Kalisch, who will be the Republican candidate. About 200 seceding Democrats are with him.

Republican Clubs to Meet.

SCRANTON, Pa., Sept. 22.—The convention of the state league of Republican clubs is to be held here on Wednesday. Robinson, Dalzell, Mayor Stuart, of Philadelphia, and secretary Lindey, of Pittsburg, are here. Lindey is in favor of Dalzell for chief officer of the league.

Ready for Business.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—The Republican state committee has established elaborate campaign headquarters at the Fifth Avenue hotel, and everything is ready for business.

NEWS OF THE CHURCHES.

The Great Convention of Methodists at Washington in October.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—Preparations for the great Ecumenical Conference of Methodism, which is to open here on Oct. 7, are rapidly approaching completion, and all indications point to the greatest gathering of religious brain force ever seen in this or any other country. Hundreds of delegates will be in attendance and will be present. The conference will last from the 7th to the 20th of October, and in the discussion of seven living questions given by the foremost minds of the day bids fair to hold for a time the attention of the religious world.

German Catholics at Buffalo.

BUFFALO, Sept. 22.—The fifth annual convention of the German-American Catholic congress has opened here. It is estimated that nearly 15,000 strangers are in the city. The object of the convention is to keep alive the interest of all German-American Catholics in religious affairs. A most interesting feature of the convention was the monster torchlight procession last evening. About 10,000 men were in the line.

Unitarians at Saratoga.

SARATOGA, Sept. 22.—The national conference of Unitarians is being held here with a large attendance, representing nearly every state east of the Mississippi. The sessions will continue three days.

Colonel McClure Welcomed Them.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 22.—The sixth annual convention of the Switchmen's Mutual Aid society is being held in Industrial Hall. About 200 delegates are present. As effort will be made to take in the switchtenders and yard masters and make the association broader in its views. Colonel A. K. McClure, editor of The Times, delivered an address of welcome.

Work on Grant's Monument.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—The executive committee of the Grant Monument association met and decided that work should be at once begun on the monument. The present temporary tomb will be removed inside the north end of the main building, where the foundation is already laid. The amount of money on hand is $151,213.69.

Trouble Threatened at Brieeville.

NASHVILLE, Sept. 22.—In view of the failure of the legislature to settle the convict question serious trouble is feared at Brieeville. Superintendent of Prisons Wade anticipates a riot. He says: "I am firmly of the opinion that the state will have to send troops and by a decisive action suppress the miners."

Killed by a Whale.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Sept. 22.—Captain Howland, of the whaling bark Canton, of this port, writes from Arana bay, on Japan, that the fourth mate, Mr. Amado, was struck and killed by a whale. The blow from the leviathan's tail knocked him from the boat into the water and he immediately sank.

Terribly Bitten by a Dog.

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 22.—Alice Moore, sixteen years old, residing at 169 Broad street, was terribly bitten by a big black mongrel dog in Bedell street yesterday afternoon. Bergen, Huff killed the brute. Miss Moore was removed to her home, where the wounds were cauterized.

Rose Coghlan's Divorced Husband.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—The marriage of Clinton P. Edgerly, the divorced husband of Rose Coghlan, to Miss Barker, was opposed by her father, George W. Barker, but approved by his wife. As a result of this disagreement Mr. and Mrs. Barker have separated.

OVER A MILLION GONE.

A Gigantic Bank Robbery Reported in London.

HUNTING FOR THE SNEAK THIEVES

The Officials Are Turning Heaven and Earth Almost to Apprehend the Daring Burglars and Recover the Plunder. The Amount May Be $1,250,000.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—An important bank robbery has taken place in the city. The police and other officials are trying to keep the matter as private as possible, so that the entire facts in the case are not obtainable at present. It is known, however, that the institution that has suffered is the London and Westminster bank (limited) 41 Lothbury, E. C., an important establishment, having over fifteen branch houses in this city.

It Was Easy to Enter.

The money stolen, it would appear, consisted of a large parcel of bills remitted from the country banks to the London and Westminster bank. The thief or thieves must have gained access to an apartment near the main entrance to the bank. This apartment was easy to enter from the street, and the parcel of bills is supposed to have been stolen while the bank officials were busily engaged in another apartment.

Over a Million Gone.

Both Mr. William Astle, the town manager of the bank, and Mr. H. F. Billinghurst, the country manager, decline to make any statement for publication as to the actual loss incurred by the London and Westminster bank, but it is currently reported that the amount stolen is not less than £250,000 and that it may amount to as much as £1,000,000.

Turning Heaven and Earth.

The bank officers, the city police authorities and the criminal investigation department of Scotland Yard are putting forth the utmost exertions in order to effect the capture of the thieves. Notice of the robbery has been sent to the police stations throughout the British isles and on the continent.

Notice of the robbery has also been sent to all the banks upon which the bills were drawn, but the police theory is that no attempt will be made to change the bills in this country but that the thieves will have recourse to the continent, where the presence of so many strangers from England and the United States makes such transactions easier than in this country.

A BODY IN THE POND.

Mysterious Murder of W. J. Lucas at Danbury, Conn.

DANBURY, Sept. 22.—The body of W. J. Lucas, of Brooklyn, has been found in Ball's pond. The body was badly bruised and there was a deep cut in his scalp which was probably caused by a bullet. Lucas, who was formerly an official in the New York custom house, had been spending the summer with his sister, Mrs. A. B. Wilkinson, who lives on the shore of the pond.

Last Thursday night Lucas went to a ball at William Ball's, on the opposite shore, rowing across in a boat. About midnight he started to return and several companions went down to the pond with him. Shortly afterward Mr. Lucas remained at Durgy's head shouts and a pistol shot, but thought nothing of it. It is now believed that Lucas was murdered by those who accompanied him to the pond.

"I Am Going to Die," She Said.

DENVER, Sept. 22.—Mrs. Margaret Mater, aged twenty-seven years, wife of Samuel Mater, committed suicide at her home by taking nearly a dram of morphine. Shortly after supper Mrs. Mater requested her husband to take her in his arms, saying, "I am going to die in a few minutes." At the same time she threw herself in his arms and died.

Five Poles Drowned.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Sept. 22.—Five persons—three men, one woman and a little girl—were drowned in the Hudson river, opposite New Paltz Points, twelve miles north of this city, Monday afternoon. They were all Poles. They hired a boat at Hampton to row across the river to Low Point. The boat overturned and all sank immediately.

Mrs. Fitzsimmons on Trial.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 22.—The trial of Mrs. Mary Fitzsimmons in the celebrated murder case in which she with her husband, Frank C. Fitzsimmons (who escaped from jail here last Monday), killed Detective Gilchinson March 24, has begun in the criminal court here.

Politician Hibbard Dead.

PUTNAM, Conn., Sept. 22.—John F. Hibbard, the well known politician who shot Capt. 11 by the two sons of Frank Ide, to whose wife Hibbard had been too attentive, is dead, blood poisoning having set in. The Ides will be arrested for causing his death.

The Barnaby Mills Strike.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Sept. 22.—Messrs. Harry and Duval, of the state board of arbitration, are here endeavoring to settle the strike of the Barnaby Mills people. Agent Ashley declined positively to restore old wages as asked for by the employes.

They Hanged Him in the Park.

DARLINGTON, Wis., Sept. 22.—Anton Siebold, who pounded James Maighan to death last Wednesday, was taken from the jail here by a mob and hanged to a tree in the park until dead. He was cool and adjusted the rope about his neck.

Canadian Lumbermen Alarmed.

OTTAWA, Sept. 22.—It is reported that the government intends to reimpose the duty on sawn lumber. A deputation of lumbermen will urge the government that this step be not taken, as it would imperil the trade.

Three Miners Killed.

SCRANTON, Pa., Sept. 22.—A great mass of falling roof caught Joseph Horm, a miner, and his two Hungarian laborers while they were loading cars in the Cayuga colliery. When taken out they were dead.

The Case of the Ituna.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—Attorney General Miller says that the court at Los Angeles has fixed the trial for condemnation against the Ituna for Oct. 26, and that the trial for libel will follow immediately.

Stole $33,000 Worth of Bonds.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—It was announced yesterday that $33,000 in Atchison railroad bonds have been stolen from the office of Auel & Co., brokers, 55 Exchange place.

WOMAN AT THE WORLD'S FAIR.

What the Building Devoted to the Fair Sex Will Contain.

CHICAGO, Sept. 22.—The board of lady managers of the World's fair has decided upon the general nature of the contents of the woman's building. Adjoining the main entrance will be a bureau of information where women interpreters and guides will be employed. In the main gallery will be a special exhibit of the most brilliant things women have done. Whenever it can be done duplicates of especially fine work by women shown in the main building will be secured for the woman's building. The Bellevue hospital, of New York, will have charge of the trained nurses' department.

Model kindergartens will be a conspicuous feature, and it was proposed that the Chicago and Illinois schools have the management of this, since it is imperative that trained pupils should be in attendance and it would be difficult to bring them from a distance. Another room will show the history of lace making. There will be in another room a collection of quaint fabrics and rare old laces. A model kitchen will give valuable practical illustrations of culinary methods and the newest appliances. In the second story will be a large assembly hall, which will be the scene of many meetings of importance to women. Here will also be a clubroom for woman journalists.

The first foreign flag has been raised on the World's fair grounds. It is that of Turkey, and was displayed on the site appropriated for the Constantinople exhibition. The Turkish consul led the ceremonies.

Only the Cousens Will Get $23.42.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—A voucher for $23.42 in favor of Phoebe Cousens for salary from April 1 to April 15 as secretary of the board of lady managers of the World's fair has been received at the treasury department. This will be paid and will close Miss Couzens' connection with the fair.

A MOST DARING ROBBERY.

Three Men Hold Up the Clerk at St. Joseph's Leading Hotel.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Sept. 22.—At 12:30 a. m. three strangers, with heavy silk handkerchiefs over their faces, walked into the office of the Pacific House, the leading hotel of St. Joseph and situated in the very heart of the city, and deliberately robbed the clerk of over $800 in cash and valuables. The men drew large revolvers and ordered the clerk to throw up his hands.

A number of guests and men in the office were marched to chairs, where they were guarded by one of the men, who covered them with two revolvers. The clerk was made to unlock the safe and two boxes containing cash and valuables were taken. Then the three men coolly walked out and disappeared. The robbery is thought to be the work of an organized gang.

Ostrander Goes to Jail.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Sept. 22.—James E. Ostrander, the defaulting treasurer of the Ulster County Savings institution, charged with forgery in the first degree, was arraigned. He declined to make any statement and was committed to jail to await the action of the grand jury. The run on the bank is practically over, with two receivers. The clerk was made to unlock the safe and two boxes containing cash and valuables were taken. Then the three men coolly walked out and disappeared. The robbery is thought to be the work of an organized gang.

Business Booming on the Lakes.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 22.—The steamer E. C. Pope is now bound down from Chicago with a cargo of 100,000 bushels of corn, the largest cargo ever carried on the lakes. The immense grain crop is giving the lake fleet all it can do, and carrying rates have not been so high for the season so early in the season so three and three-quarters cents a bushel on wheat from Chicago to Buffalo.

Bigger Warships for Canada.

HALIFAX, N. S., Sept. 22.—The admiralty has decided to relieve six warships now serving on this station, and they will be replaced on the expiration of their commission by more powerful vessels and modern ships. When the change is effected the North American squadron will be able to cope with anything on this side of the Atlantic.

Mother and Child Drowned.

MIDDLEBURY, Vt., Sept. 22.—Mrs. Isaac Wimette, of Salisbury, and her twelve-year-old boy were carried into the river by a frightened horse attached to their carriage and drowned.

The Pope's New Congress.

ROME, Sept. 22.—The pope is organizing an international congress to be held in 1892 at Fribourg, Switzerland, for the purpose of organizing a European Catholic Democratic union.

AN IDYL OF THE ST. CLAIR FLATS.

They were seated together at twilight,
As the gloaming began to gloam:
He told of his castle in England,
She of her girlhood's home.

'Twas a night of quiet beauty,
And of peeping stars above,
The waves of the flowing river
Spoke words of unutterable love.

For hours they sat and whispered,
The hour that never grows old,
He murmured, "Marry me, darling,"
And she—well, she wasn't cold.

Blue eyes were big and tender,
Love's soft warm glance gathered her in,
He swore by his wealth of affection
She was all the world to him.

There's a sigh of sweet contentment,
There's a lily white hand on his heart,
Two lips are upturned moonward,
A long kiss ere they part.

She gently draws herself from him
With a "Percival, I love you so,"
While the moonlight freszoes his necktie
Like a billboard of Barnum's show.

His heart was fluttering wildly
As he pocketed the conventional ring,
But she gazed on that necktie enraptured,
Quite "stuck" on the lovely thing.

"Oh, Walter," at last she sobbed,
"Give me that lovely tie—
A souvenir of you, my hero,
Something to remember you by."

With a look of far awayness,
He said, "Yes, it's a lovely thing;
It's going to be popular this summer,
Here, ca-ash: did you hear me ring?"

Then the night grew dark and awful;
On his brow the dew fell fast,
He gasped at the fatal forgetfulness—
"She's discovered all at last."

The tender eyes grew blacker,
And sent out a fiery dash:
She spoke: "I'm not on your mister;
I'm onto the accent on cash.

"You giddy, cruel deceiver,
I would scorn to be your mate;
You're getting it dead straight, young feller;
I'm a gurl, but I'm up to date.

"So you take that castle in England.
With your title of English earl,
And you chase yourself a way down the board walk"—
And the winds through his whiskers whirl.

In his eye was a pensive sadness,
On the necktie the dampness grew,
"Skip, ere I break that pietresque face!"
And he skipped through the foggy dew.

Didn't "Queer" the Preacher.

A clergyman well known to Buffalo people says that when the Lord made him he forgot to put any pegs in his mind on which to hang the names of acquaintances. He can remember faces, but not names. He became pastor of a large church a few months ago, and after discharging his duties long enough to know his sheep by sight, he was visited one evening by a lady whom he knew well, but whose name he could not, for the life of him, recall. Wishing to be reminded of it without exposing his ignorance, he said:

"Let me see, ah—how do you spell your name?"

To which she replied, with reproachful dignity:

"S-m-i-t-h."

For a moment the clergyman was floored, but he recalled quickly and escaped rebuke by rejoining:

"Oh: then you don't spell it with a y?"—Buffalo Courier.

A Comparison.

TWO SWEPT OUT TO SEA

Thrilling Story of a Missing Brooklyn Couple.

FROM CONEY ISLAND TO FLORIDA.

They Say They Were Carried Out by the Tide While Bathing. Picked Up by a Ship and Landed Near Jacksonville. Both Given Up as Dead.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Sept. 20.—On Thursday afternoon, Aug. 27, two bathers, Samuel W. Thornton and Eva Jewell, the sister-in-law, engaged rooms at a bathing pavilion at Coney Island. When the pavilion closed at night two locked rooms were found. On being unlocked clothes were discovered in each apartment. There was a complete suit of male wearing apparel in one and all the clothes worn by a woman in the other. This couple have just arrived here, and they tell a long and interesting story of being washed out to sea, saved by a schooner, brought southward, transferred to another schooner and finally landed on the Florida coast.

Thornton's Remarkable Story.

According to Thornton's story they left his house, 377 Cumberland street, Brooklyn, at noon on that day and went to Coney Island. At 2 p.m. they went in bathing. After half an hour in the surf, and while out some distance from shore, a huge wave came in and the undertow washed them away.

Strangled and frightened nearly to death, he had presence of mind enough to plunge forward and seize Eva's dress and keep her up, all the while shouting for help. No one seemed to hear them and they floated out fast.

A Log Saved Them.

A big log soon floated by. He seized it, and by its aid was enabled to keep their heads above water. The tide rapidly carried them out to sea. Eva soon grew faint and Thornton became nearly exhausted by his struggles. Time passed rapidly and soon it began to grow dark. Just after sundown a schooner came near, Thornton shrieked for aid. The lookout heard him, the sails were dropped and soon a boat, manned by two sailors, rescued them and carried them to the vessel. Sympathetic hands received them and soon Eva was under the motherly care of the captain's wife, while Thornton was rubbed and brought to by the sailors. To his surprise and consternation no one on board could speak English.

Eva Began to Rave.

Eva was insensible when rescued, and it was many hours before she recovered her senses. She began to rave, and for several days afterward was nearly crazy, repeating in her delirium the terrible experiences she had had. When Thornton fully recovered his senses the next forenoon they were out of sight of land and going southward, bound for some port in South America. To his appeals to be set on shore the captain shook his head, but promised to signal the first vessel that came along. But no vessel would stop until they had been on board the schooner for thirteen days. Then one day a vessel stopped and they were removed to it.

Thought He Would Go Mad.

But Thornton soon found that they were no better off, as this craft was Spanish, the same as the first one, and was bound, at best but for Progreso, in Yucatan, going through Florida straits. Captain and sailors were very kind to the castaways and gave them the best of treatment, good food and clothes. Thornton says that when he thought of the terrible distress his wife would experience at their disappearance he thought he would certainly go crazy.

But They Walked In.

Eva was given the cook's galley and every one treated her with great kindness. Ten days of life on the schooner the captain one day told them by signs to get ready to land. The sailors got up a purse of $20 for them and gave them several articles of clothing. Early last Sunday morning the vessel came in near shore, lowered a boat and landed the two unfortunates on the Florida coast in a strange locality and with only one small fisherman's hut in sight. They got information as best they could and started on foot for this city, and after walking several miles were met by a team and hired the driver to bring them here, where they arrived footsore and weary in the afternoon.

Thornton is a straightforward story, but cannot tell the names of the schooners, nor the names of their captains, nor can he give any other information except as to their general course. Miss Eva is twenty-three, is of prepossessing appearance, slight build, black or very dark hair, and dark brown eyes. She has two front upper teeth filled. She corroborates Thornton's story. She is dressed in a fantastic manner, having only the dress given her by the captain of the first vessel that rescued them. The sailors' fund purchased clothes for Thornton. They are at a boarding house here waiting for funds.

Thornton's Brother Suspicious.

BROOKLYN, Sept. 20.—William Thornton, the brother of the missing man, who lives at 377 Cumberland street, this city, was a very much surprised man when he received this dispatch:

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Sept. 21.—Both safe. Had narrow escape. Were carried out to sea. Want money to get clothes and return. Send fifty dollars. SAMUEL W. THORNTON.

The dispatch had not been prepaid and Mr. Thornton paid for it and then sat down to think. He showed the dispatch to Mrs. S. W. Thornton, who had mourned her husband as dead for nearly a month. Everything at the time was accepted as proof that the couple had been drowned, and the suggestion made at the time that they had eloped was dismissed as beyond belief. Thornton and Claud Stiles have sent the following telegram:

BROOKLYN, Sept. 21.

Samuel W. Thornton:

Is that you, Sam, really? If so, relate some incident that occurred at my house and give combination of your store safe. CLAUD.

Wanting for Fifty Dollars.

No reply had been received by William Thornton up to a late hour, and he said: "There are too many discrepancies in the telegram from Florida for me to believe that it is from my missing brother, of whose death I am satisfied. I think that some one down there is trying to work me for fifty dollars. We never believed that Sam and Eva had eloped. If they were picked up by a coasting schooner, why have they not notified me before? If the telegram is legitimate they can have all the money they want."

Killed by an Elevator.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 21.—John O'Brien was instantly killed by an elevator in Gilo Fros.' warehouse falling down two floors. John Roach was badly injured.

Hanlan Couldn't Catch McLean.

NEW WESTMINSTER, B. C., Sept. 22.—A unique aquatic contest took place here between Ned Hanlan, the ex-champion oarsman of the world, and Alexander McLean, champion oarsman of British Columbia. McLean, who rowed in a lap-strake skiff, was given 500 yards start, while Hanlan used a racing shell. The race was for $200 a side, and the distance was three miles with a turn. Hanlan did splendidly, in the race, but could not catch McLean, who won easily by three lengths. McLean's time was 19m. 20s., while Hanlan covered the distance in 20m. 32 1-2s., which is half a second better than his best record.

"Pitt" Broke Into the Ring.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 22.—At the Pacific Athletic club last night occurred the finish fight between the heavyweights, Jack Davis, of Omaha, and Billy Woods, of Denver, for a purse of $3,000. In the thirteenth round Woods sent Davis to the floor and when he came to his feet smashed him until he was helpless. Bob Fitzsimmons at this stage jumped into the ring to interfere. Woods turned his attention to the New Zealander, and both were fighting each other hotly when the police interfered. All the contestants were separated and Referee Dempsey declared Woods the winner.

GERMS OF DISEASE.

The Microbes of Tuberculosis, Cholera, Typhoid Fever and Diphtheria.

The theory of the bacterial origin of certain diseases has come into general acceptance among physicians within the past few years, and there can be no doubt that micro-organisms of a perfectly definite and specific form and character are found in the secretions or excretions of the bodies of persons suffering from particular diseases. Koch's microbe in the sputum, in cases where consumption is suspected, is now considered one of the most reliable diagnostic signs that can be obtained, according to Popular Science News, which describes as follows some photographs of these microbes, which were originally engraved for La Nature:

In Fig. 1 in the first cut the small rod like bacilli of consumption, above referred to, are shown, and the few blood corpuscles also represented serve to indicate their comparative size. Fig. 2 is the celebrated "comma" bacillus of Asiatic cholera, which was also discovered by Dr. Koch while on an expedition to India for the purpose of studying the disease in its original locality.

Fig. 1 in the second cut shows the characteristic microbe of typhoid fever, which has so often been detected in polluted water from which persons have contracted the disease, and, perhaps, the most dreaded microbe of all—that found in the membrane formed in the throat of persons suffering with diphtheria—is shown in Fig. 2. These last named micro-organisms are often extremely tenacious of life, and an instance is reported where a prolonged soaking in the strongest carbolic acid failed to destroy their vitality. This tenacity of life may explain the sometimes malignant character of the disease and the unsatisfactory results of the usual methods of treatment.

Such immense advances have been made in the field of bacteriology during the past few years, and the results of the investigations have been of such pre-eminent value to medical and surgical science, that we may hope that some method may be found of absolutely controlling those diseases which are connected with the existence of bacteria in the organism.

A Fireproof Joist.

Professor Goodman is reported by The Builder as stating in a lecture on fire prevention that, generally speaking, wooden joists are better for buildings than steel or iron joists. The two latter materials, he explained, lose their strength as a rule very high temperature, whereas wood would sustain a heavy strain for a much longer period when exposed to great heat. Besides, when wood has once been charred it does not burn any readily again. Iron and steel soon expand under the influence of heat. Brick and stone do objectionable the former becomes fused under great heat, and the latter is liable to crack or fly when suddenly cooled after heating. The draw back to tiles is that when fire plays upon the joists of floors fitted with them the joists expand and allow the tiles to play upon the joists through the tiles. Portland cement is objectionable, as it flakes off when heated, but if wire netting or bars are imbedded in concrete this defect is remedied. A joist padded with silicate of cotton and incased in salamander plaster (a mixture of silicate, cotton and plaster of paris), the professor holds, is a splendid fireproofing material. Such a material is not only a non-conductor, but it is elastic and would yield with the joist. In an experiment undertaken by Professor Good man it was found that a joist of this kind withstood very fierce heat for eight to nine hours without sustaining any serious damage.

A New Use for Broken Glass.

Some ingenious Frenchman has found a new use for broken glass. The Manufacturer tells that in Paris fragments of broken glass of various colors are mixed together, after having been broken to a suitable size; they are then placed in molds lined with silica, talc or some other resisting material and fired. A coherent mass is produced which can be dressed and cut into blocks which are, of course, irregularly colored. Such blocks may be used as artificial marbles. The blocks are usually rough on one side, owing, perhaps, to incomplete fusion; this gives a surface which is admirably adapted for causing them, especially if they are slablike in form, to adhere to walls with the addition of a little mortar. Fine decorative effects can thus be produced. Designs in relief can be obtained by pressure while the block or slab is still plastic.

The Nature of a Cyclone.

The cyclone is a broad disturbance, having a diameter of from 300 to 600 miles and sometimes 1,000 miles. It is a vast eddy in the atmosphere, and moves along in that medium very much as the eddies in a stream of water. The air does not have an actual circular motion at any place within the disturbed area, but only a tendency to spiral movement.

Relative Cost of Gas and Electricity.

A report from the chief electrician of the London postoffice, as to the relative cost of gas and electricity as illuminants, shows that gas the equivalent of 4,000 candle power would cost twenty-five cents, while an arc light of the same power would be but sixteen cents, but incandescent light to that extent would cost fifty cents.

A Mountain of Iron.

A mountain of iron ore has just been discovered eight miles east of Moscow, Idaho Territory, which assays sixty-five per cent, and goes $7 per cent. in magnetic iron and the ledge is inexhaustible. It was found only a few feet below the surface lying beneath a stratum of genuine fire clay.

The tube rose comes from India and Ceylon. Everybody will recall the fragrance, as of love tinged with death, that lies heavy in its heart.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY.

HOW WOMEN MAY LOOK YOUNG WHEN THEY ARE GROWING OLD.

Precautions Which Will Insure the Preservation of the Complexion—Excellent Advice for Girls Who Are in Society.

Flowers to Avoid.

How to maintain health and youth is the great point with women. Men hardly have time to think about the matter, which is probably one of the reasons why, on an average, they retain both much longer. The eating of fruit abundantly is recommended by all who have studied the means of retaining health; and fruit should be eaten in season. This seems like an Irish bull, but there are people who relish fruit only when it is out of date, that is, when the growth is forced, and when the price prompts the host to exclaim, "It comes high, but we must have it."

Strawberries are said to be wholesome, they have salutary effects on the blood and liver, and may cure rheumatism and gout if their good effect is aided by a vigorous regimen. They have also a happy effect on the mind, they and cherries ought to be consumed in quantities by those who are affected with the blues. Peaches are good for stomach troubles and the apple is said to be the most wholesome of all fruit, but oranges are particularly recommended.

A well-bred beauty who reigned over French hearts at the same time that Louis Philippe reigned over the French, and who at eighty still had the fresh complexion and bright liquid eye of a young girl, made most of her meals on oranges. For forty years she ate a dozen of oranges for breakfast, a dozen toward the middle of day, and a dozen with a piece of bread and a glass of Bordeaux for her dinner. She must have been extraordinarily fond of the golden apple, or the regimen must have been a hard one.

But it is a fact that the women celebrated for their beauty have all been most sober and abstemious at the table. All those who are noted for their good complexions eat only vegetables and fruit. But that regimen cannot be infallible, for I have known women in America who were vegetarians and had complexions which could not have been poorer and muddier if they had partaken of meat three times a day.

Abstinence in spring contributes much to clearing the complexion and keeping it healthy for the year. It is that probably more than solicitude to keep the laws of the church which causes society women to strictly attend to fasting during Lent. Many in France are not satisfied with the fasting of forty days. They continue abstinence for two weeks after Easter.

AN OLD WOMAN'S ADVICE.

A charitable old woman, who has a bevy of young girls were coaxing to give them her secrets for remaining young, said:

"Sleep in the open air every night, and also sleeping too long affect the complexion. Go to bed early, rise early, and you will not grow old and you will retain your beauty. But circumstances have compel you to go much into society, you must observe the following rules. Take a nap in the afternoon of the day in which you expect to retire late. When you return at night, before going to bed take a plunge, remain only a few minutes, in a hot bath; then take a cup of bouillon and a wine glass of Malaga. You will then allow yourself to sleep until nature awakes you, even if it be until 10 in the morning. When you rise take a sponge bath of cold water and breakfast on a simple cup of coffee and toast with butter."

You see how much time, wear and tear society causes; how much of life is lost before, during and after a life devoted wholly to the world. Daily constitutionals are good for the complexion. But there are sports of which one must avoid the abuse. Complexion inevitably suffers if a part of the day is spent in violent outdoor exercises, and in her own turn. Be very careful and wear the right clothes for the right temperature.

Be sure to keep the spinal column warm in winter. It is more important to keep that part of the body warm than the chest. If you have a delicate chest, and you do not wish to wear flannel, cover the spinal column with a band of flannel; have it attached to a ribbon tied around the neck and have the band extend to the small of the back. Every time to time, in the morning, take a glass of some saline mineral water, sedlitz, epsom or Janaz. If your complexion becomes muddy, for three consecutive evenings, before going to bed, take a teaspoonful of powdered charcoal mixed with honey; then take a glass of saline mineral water on the fourth day. All ferruginous medicines and quinine have a disastrous effect on the complexion.

SENSIBLE EXERCISE.

Alkalines on the contrary have a very favorable one. Always pay great attention to mental improvement; read good, beneficial books, take a lively interest in all the beauties of nature. Activity of body and mind conduce to health. If you wish to keep a good complexion in old age, never make up your face when young, and when you get your first gray hair, do not pull it out. The practice of gymnastics at the present day is carried to excess. It is well for children and girls up to a certain age of woman hood. But after twenty-five it is much more becoming and just as beneficial for a woman to take her exercise in attending household duties than filling her hands with dumbbells.

Dusting, brushing, sweeping and cleaning is much more dignified, whatever has been said and written about exercises, than the series of wonderful movements which have been introduced from northern European countries. Take healthful exercise, move your limbs, but above all be cheerful and court contentment. A generous spirit, peace of mind, the search of pleasures appreciable to ace contribute more to health and staying the ravages of time than all bodily movements.

Stay youthful in loving to be with the young. I have found that to be chief secret of those who have conquered years.—Emma Bullet in Brooklyn Eagle.

A Woman Preacher's Queer Designation.

The Rev. Alice H. Shaw, who has made a national reputation as a speaker, is a graduate of the Theological school of Boston university, where, it may be set down not in malice, she was generally known as "that Miss Shaw with the hat," owing to some peculiarities of headgear. The Methodist church refused to ordain her, though it has many women to lay preachers, and she applied accordingly to the Protestant Methodists, who received her, but have never since ordained a second woman.—Chicago Tribune.

THE HOUSEHOLD

FASHIONABLE FURNITURE.

The Latest Dining Tables and Bedroom Sets—Favorite Woods and New Shapes.

The latest ebbtom made dining tables have circular or oval tops instead of the square or oblong shapes that have held the floor so long. This departure is a very sensible revival of an old and good fashion. In a square table one has always the awkward corners to dispose of, the legs being often a serious obstruction to the comfort of the unfortunate seated in proximity thereto. For real downright comfort such a thing can equal the old "pedestal" or "pillar and claw" table.

Bedroom sets in birdseye maple seem to meet the prevailing demand for something light and brightsome. In rooms decorated in light and cheerful colors nothing can be more charming.

Mexican mahogany of handsomely marked grain, finished light, divides the honors with the maple. The newest patterns will be in the Adam style, extremely neat and chaste in design, with carving in very low relief, and panels bordered with small classic beading. The taste is becoming more decided for little quiet carving nicely executed, rather than a mass of coarsely executed so called "antique" decorations.

For those who do not require to study the "economics," some sets in white and cream and gold will find appreciation. These are in the style of Louis XIV and XV, modified somewhat to conform with present requirements.

Decorator and Furnisher tells, besides the forewoing, of a very handsome set, consisting of bedstead, chiffonier, dressing table, writing table and screen, now being made in Louis Quatorze style, in cream enamel and gold, with panels of painted tapestry in the head and footboards.

Help for the Tired.

With such a simple arrangement fo the kitchen as the following, illustrated and described in Rural New Yorker, the tired wife may have all the water she wants at a moment's notice, without the necessity of going out of doors or any overexertion by carrying it.

A zinc lined box is mounted on heavy brackets at the top of the kitchen, or, still better, on the floor of the attic. The heavy pipe shown leads from a spring or well into it, or it may be made very large in the attic and supplied from the eaves. If the well be depended upon a force pump will be needed. When water has risen in the box to a certain level it flows out of the surplus pipe shown. The pipe running to the sink comes out of the bottom of the box, and can drain off all the water it holds when it will as once fill again.

On a large scale, supplying the whole house, the plan is an excellent but costly one. To fix for the kitchen alone is simple and attended with little expense. A five gallon can in which castor oil came can be bought at a drug store for ten cents. The housewife will gladly wash it clean. Then a little work, a few feet of galvanised pipe and joints and a borrowed pipe wrench will complete a job which may save a doctor's or an undertaker's bill and the most precious member of any American home.

Tomato Pickle and Sauce.

Sweet Tomato Pickle—Peel and slice seven pounds of ripe tomatoes, with three and one-half pounds of sugar, one ounce of cinnamon and mace, one ounce of cloves and one quart of vinegar, and stew all together for one hour.

French Pickle—Mix one peck of green tomatoes, sliced, with six large onions, sliced, throw over them one teacupful of salt and let them stand a night. Drain them the next day and boil in one quart of vinegar and two quarts of water for fifteen minutes, then drain. Take four quarts of vinegar, two pounds of brown sugar, one half pound white mustard seed, two tablespoonfuls each of ground allspice, cinnamon, cloves, ginger and ground mustard; mix all together and boil fifteen minutes.

Chili Sauce—Cook together the following ingredients for three hours, then bottle it like catsup: Eighteen ripe tomatoes, three green peppers, one cupful of sugar, two teaspoonfuls of salt, one teaspoonful each of several kinds of spices, two and one-half cupfuls of vinegar. It makes a very nice sauce.

Watering Hanging Baskets.

Whether in the conservatory, greenhouse or open piazza, hanging baskets will be found to take a considerable supply of water where a good growth has been made. Nonattention to this is a frequent source of failure, the plants, whatever they may be, assuming a sickly appearance if not regularly attended to. In the case of any which are found to dry up rapidly it is a good plan to water them in the evening and then again in the morning. If the soil has been partly washed away, a slight top dressing would be a considerable assistance. All decaying foliage and flowers should be kept removed, the position occupied by the flowers being one where such things are brought into prominent notice. Syringing the under sides of the basket is a good plan to follow in hot weather

Arrowroot and Almond Pudding.

Blanch and pound one ounce of sweet almonds with six or seven bitter ones, and when it is a smooth paste put them to a saucepan with half a pint of new milk and bring it slowly to the boil. Mix two tablespoonfuls of best arrowroot smoothly with a wineglassful of cold milk, and on this pour the boiling milk, stirring it sharply till thoroughly mixed, then add two ounces fresh butter and two well beaten eggs and stir till the mixture is quite cool. Put in a slightly oiled mold and serve with brandy sauce.

In Austria it has been found that the slanting postures in writing causes curvature of the spine, due to the position maintained at the table or desk, and a supreme council has recommended that upright letters be cultivated in schooling.

A Remarkable Pig.

A newly married lady who recently graduated from Vassar college is not well posted about household matters. She said to her grocer not long since:

"I bought three or four hams here a couple of months ago, and they were very fine. Have you any more like them?"

"Yes, ma'am," said the grocer, "there are ten of those hams hanging up there."

"Are you sure they are all off the same pig?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"Then I'll take three of them."—Texas Siftings.

PLAINFIELD EVENING NEWS.

ESTABLISHED 1884. PLAINFIELD, N. J., "THE COLORADO OF THE EAST," WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 23, 1891 PRICE TWO CENTS.

TALK OF THE TOWN

—William Simmonds of Stony Hill was badly gored by a cow last Sunday evening.

—The Plainfield Reform Club will hold its regular mid-week meeting to-morrow evening at eight o'clock.

—U and T is to be the next attraction at Music Hall as may be seen by glancing at our advertising columns.

—Several Plainfield young men left their homes yesterday for Princeton to attend the University, the Fall term opening to-day.

—The Plainfield Camera Club held a regular meeting last evening at eight o'clock. Business of a routine nature only was transacted.

—A number of the former members of the defunct Middlesex Gun Club are to hold a live pigeon shoot on the outskirts of this city to-morrow.

—The Crescent ball players will have their benefit game one week from next Saturday. The New Brunswick team will be their opponents.

—A young man named Charles Wilson, a resident of West Front street, accidentally shot himself in the right hand yesterday afternoon, by the premature discharge of a revolver.

—The managers of the Crescents and the managers of the West End ball teams have not as yet decided when they will play the seventh game of the series to decide the championship.

—The regular business meeting of the Woman's Temperance Aid Society, will be held in Reform Hall on Thursday, 24th inst at 3.30 o'clock. A large, prompt at, tendance is very desirable.

—The two young men who were arrested early yesterday morning for fast driving appeared before City Judge Codington last evening. One of the parties was fined one dollar.

—The actual cost of the programme of entertainment at Atlantic City will be $7,000. Wednesday and Thursday of next will be the best days. See advertisement for cheap excursion rates.

—The windows of Mr. I. H. Boehm's dry and fancy goods store are resplendent with neatly trimmed hats, the occasion being the Fall and Winter opening of his millinery department.

—Harry Cherry street, Elizabeth, flagged an eastbn express last night, thinking it stopped at Roselle, and finding it did not, he jumped, getting his clothing all torn and being cut and bruised severely about the head.

—The celebrated Gormans of New York are to play the Crescents this week in a game of base ball next Saturday afternoon. Williams, the well-known colored "coacher" will accompany them.

—A new feature has just been introduced in the New England Magazine. It is, "In a Corner at Dodsley's," a gossipon writers and books by Walter Blackburn Harte, which is frank and unconventional in tone as any of the political articles from his pen that have made his name familiar.

—Frank Fetcheough, a Russian, aged twenty-six, was fatally injured last night at Heidritter's lumber yard, Elizabeth port, by falling off a lumber pile. His skull was fractured and he sustained severe bruises about the body. He was removed to the Elizabeth Hospital, where the physicians could give no hope of his recovery.

—Considerable activity in Grand Army circles already manifests itself as to the successor of the present Department Commander. It can only be accounted for by the action of the last national encampment locating the holding of the next one in the city of Washington, and the desire of the Department to send a large majority of the Department of New Jersey as participants in uniform. Col. R. A. Donnelly, Post Commander of Aaron Wilkes' Post, No. 23, of Trenton, is prominently mentioned for the position.

Elston Still in Somerville Jail.

Charles Elston, the young man who was yesterday arrested on the charge of burglarizing the store of Mr. O. M. Dunham on West Front street and on which about $300 worth of jewelry was found, is serving out a five days' sentence in the Somerset county jail on the charge of trespassing on the cars. Policeman Lynch will bring him to this city Saturday, and he will be given a hearing before Justice Nash. It is said that Elston has on several other occasions been arrested on the same charge. A resident of Scotch Plains who claims to be familiar with Elston's history informed a NEWS reporter yesterday that Elston on a number of occasions stole live chickens from a butcher, took them home, killed and dressed them and then took them back to the butcher and sold them to him.

I. O. O. F. No Longer Under the Ban.

It is said the Catholic Council of Baltimore has raised the ban against the Order of Odd Fellows. Archbishop Corrigan, from whom the information is said to have come, is away, but Father Lavelle, his secretary, said yesterday that he did not know the Archbishop's position in the matter, but he believed that the Church was no longer opposed to the Order.

An Insolent Tramp.

An insolent tramp has been annoying the residents of Manning avenue for the past two days. He visits a house and demands food or clothing. If he is denied either he abuses the woman who opened the door in answer to his knock. The marshal should look out for the fellow.

A MUSTANG'S PRANKS.

HE JUMPS INTO AN AREA-WAY AND KICKS OUT A SHOW WINDOW.

History of His Career, and Something About Mustangs Generally. —The Wild Jacks Always Killed on Sight in Arizona.

Last night about ten o'clock a runaway mustang jumped into the area-way of Miss C. E. Clarke's store, located in the basement of the First National Bank. The mustang fell on his side, and while in that position kicked one of the large plate-glass windows into atoms, causing damage in a few moments which it may cost several hundred dollars to repair.

The mustang is owned by Mr. John Emmons, the grader, and when the runaway occurred was in charge of Mr. Grader's son, Charley, who was thrown out of the cart, but escaped serious injury. The mustang started some where on Park avenue, and soon kicked himself out of the harness, and plunged head-foremost into the area-way. He managed to get on his feet after doing the damage stated, and was seized at the head by Policeman Frederickson and led down Park avenue. Some one said the policeman was arresting the animal, for the damage he had done, but as the station house was not big enough to hold him, he was turned over to the owner.

The mustang is one of a wild herd brought here fresh from Texas plains some four years ago, and was purchased by Mr. George W. Moore, of West Front street, for $47. Mr. Moore, being a large strong man with plenty of horse sense, thought he had secured a prize and could make the mare valuable. He is wiser now, but it cost him several hundred dollars to get the knowledge of the mustang he now has, and he finalivsold the mare, cart and harness for $60, and was glad enough to get rid of her even at that.

Mr. Moore said to a News' reporter today: "She was good enough in the stable, and sometimes on the street, but she would be one day good and the next day utterly unmanageable. It was useless to fight with her, and she could not be coaxed, when she got on one of her streaks of devilishness. If I could attend to her myself I think I could eventually make something of her. Even as she is she can go a mile on the road in four minutes. She is a beauty, but a devil."

Mr. H. J. Messenger of Arizona who deals in mustangs, mules and ponies, recently visited THE NEWS' office, and speaking of the wild mustangs on the planes told a News' reporter some things about them not generally known.

Said Mr. Messenger: "There are good and bad among them, and they get much of their viciousness through constantly fighting each other themselves in their wild state and by rough and care*less handling after being captured.*

"I was one day out riding on the plains and heard some pawing over a hill. I rode cautiously and saw a herd of wild ponies in a hollow. That is a depression where the ponies get water by pawing away the earth. It was a very fine sight to see them in their wild state, at this work. All would paw the earth, vigorously snapping and biting to drive each other away, especially as soon as water was obtained. I shot and killed the stallion of the herd. The herd immediately fled and soon disappeared.

We call the stallions jacks, and kill every chance we get. They enter our mares from our ranches. And will sometimes cause a stampede which results in great loss to us. That is why we always kill them on sight."

Mr. Wm. C. Smith of North Plainfield has a couple of mustangs, one of which he bought at the same time Mr. Moore bought the vicious one above referred to, and the other at a later sale. These have been very carefully handled, and are now very fine horses, gentle and yet fast. There are forty or fifty mustangs about Plainfield, most of which have been captured in Texas, the others are veritable devils on hoofs.

A GHASTLY FIND.

A Body Floating in the River at Sayreville.

Yesterday at noon two fishermen rowing in the Raritan river oppose Sayreville found the body of an unknown man floating with the tide. They towed the body to one of the docks at Sayreville and made it fast.

They then telephoned from Sayre & Fisher's store to New Brunswick for the coroner or county physician, but as neither of them could be found, Justice Everett Smith was notified and viewed the body, which has the appearance of having been in the water for several days. So far it has not been identified.

A Remarkable Ball Game.

A remarkable game of base ball was played at Boynton Beach on Saturday, the closing of the season there. The contesting teams were composed of young men from Somerville and Plainfield. Only two innings were played as both the batters and pitchers were tired out. The score at the end of the second inning stood 30 to 28 in favor of Somerville—New Brunswick Fredonian.

Mr. Titus Lost His Memory.

Mahlon Titus, the man who was so seriously injured by falling from a wagon, near Scotch Plains, several weeks ago, and who was confined in the Muhlenberg Hospital, is no far recovered from his injuries as to be able to go home. The matron says, however, that he has lost his memory, but thinks he will fully recover it in the course of time.

—Remember the one dollar excursion up-the-Hudson to-morrow, advertised elsewhere.

STATE NEWS

A twenty per cent. reduction was made in all branches at the Trenton Watch Company's factory last Saturday. Some of the employes were dissatisfied with the reduction and left.

The Grand Jury at New Brunswick adjourned yesterday after considering 350 cases. Among the indictments found was one against the Port Reading Railroad Company for obstructing and taking part of North Clinfield avenue, a public thoroughfare in Raritan township.

There was a big washout at Outcalt's mills at Spotswood. Middlesex county, yesterday, and a thousand loads of sand were washed from underneath the hominy mills. Part of the flooring fell, and but for the staunchness of the four piers which support the building the mill would have became a complete wreck.

Hickson Kline, a son of a wealthy farmer at Harmony, a small village near Belvidere, committed suicide Sunday night by first cutting his throat and then shooting himself in the head. The deed was committed at his father's house and he died within an hour. It is said that young Kline was recently disappointed in love and that this made him temporarily insane and led to the suicide.

The discovery of her hat floating in the canal at Greenville has aroused fears that a young Slavonian servant girl in the employ of Frank Rooting has also committed suicide. She had been haunted oy fear that her employer contemplated discharging her. Early Sunday morning she left home before any one was astir and has not since been seen. Two weeks ago while out rowing she tried to drown herself, but friends who were with her prevented her.

The Peace-Maker was Fined Also.

Friday night William Conway and a Swiss named Alfred Durenmatt were settling a dispute in fisticuffs on a vacant lot in North Plainfield. Durenmatt was the stronger and Conway is said to have been the aggressor. Several of the latter's cronies were looking on but not interfering.

Durenmatt's brother, Commodore, was in the Saengar and Turner Hall dancing and was told that his brother was being beaten by a crowd of toughs. He rushed out and hastened to the scene of the fracas.

He found that it was "only one against one and instead of pitching in tried to separate them."

Marshal Rutledge appeared. The three young men were arrested and last evening were tried. Alfred and Commodore Durenmatt were each fined $8. Conway escaped with a $2 fine.

SOCIAL & PERSONAL

Mr. Joseph A. Haynes, the station agent, is enjoying a ten days' vacation.

Mrs. J. T. Viegard of West Third street is on a visit to friends at Worcester, Mass.

Miss Mary Martin has returned to her home on Park avenue from a two weeks' stay at Asbury Park.

Mr. George Sumner of West Front street will start to-morrow for New York where he will engage in business.

Mr. Daniel Niles, who has been seriously ill at Muhlenberg Hospital for several weeks past, is slowly recovering.

Mr. and Mrs. John Bunting of California are visiting Mr. Bunting's mother, Mrs. John Bunting of Mercer avenue.

The Misses Mary and Lizzie Kraus have returned to their home at Glen Garden from a pleasant visit to the Misses Sheppard of Manning avenue, North Plainfield.

Mr. L. R. Blackford of North Plainfield is the foreman of the Somerset County Grand Jury at the present term of court. The other members of the jury from North Plainfield is Mr. R. G. Cadmus.

Plainfield has many crack tennis players, so has North Plainfield. Among the number are Messrs. McCutchen and VanDeventer. These gentlemen are members of the Dunellen lawn tennis Club and practice almost daily on the fine club court. Mr. McCutchen, whose activity when a member of the Young Men's Christian Association's base ball team is well known, it is said, keeps himself in tennis form in Winter by practicing on the courts in New York.

L. O. Grenelle spent a week in the vicinity of Plainfield and improved his time in going over the miles of good roads in Union county, with trips to Orange, Summit and other towns. Mr. Latham, with a friend, he alighted from a local train at Elizabeth and started to beat the train to Cranford, which they did, the distance in a hurry and were at the station at Cranford to meet their party when the train arrived. Mr. Grenelle says its easier to travel thirty miles over such roads than five miles over the south county's highways. Its a wheelman's paradise—Asbury Park Journal.

Major-General James R. Carnahan, the Commander-in-Chief of the Uniform Rank, was born in Tippecanoe county, Indiana, in 1841. He worked his way through college, and at the breaking out of the war in 1861, enlisted as a private in the 11th Regiment, Indiana Volunteers, in which company he was transferred to the 36th and remained with that regiment until the close of the war, returning as Colonel. He declined a position in the regular army, and on his return began the law, graduating in 1867, and was appointed Judge in 1874. He became a member of the Order in 1874, Grand Vice Chancellor in 1879, Grand Chancellor in 1880, Supreme Representative in 1881, first appearing in the Supreme Lodge at Detroit in 1882. General Carnahan received his commission of Major-General of the Uniform Rank in 1884, at New Orleans, and history from that time is the history of the Uniform Rank. He was reappointed by Supreme Chancellor Douglas as Major-General of the Uniform Rank in 1888, for a term of four years. He was present in this city during the Knights of Pythias parade, and expressed himself as delighted with the city, and said it was one of the prettiest places he had ever seen.

Involved Through Dealings With Hardy.

When Justice Hardy of shady notoriety left Plainfield for the good of the locality, he left worthy merchants with claims which because of their conflicting nature have involved them in vexatious litigation. Among his largest creditors were Cook Brothers, the lumber merchants who to try and protect themselves, took a second mortgage on Hardy's home on Duer street for $1,500, subject to a first mortgage of $2,500, and also subject to a mechanic's lien of A. M. Griffen for $215, less credit of $55 paid on account, leav*ing a balance of $160, which Cook* Brothers are unwilling to pay. Mr. Griffen was thus compelled to bring suit. The case was heard in the Somerset County Courts yesterday before a jury, Judge Magie presiding. It was warmly contested by both sides, Messrs. Jackson & Codington representing plaintiff and Mr. Charles A. Reed defendants, and it was given to the jury about 3:30 p. m. After an hour's deliberation the jury returned a verdict in favor of Mr. Griffen for $144, deducting an offset of $16 claimed by defendants. The defendants must pay costs, and the building and land are liable for the amount.

To Withhold Veteran's Pensions.

The Board of Managers of the Soldiers' Home in Kearny will meet in a few days to discuss the matter of retaining a portion of the pensions of the inmates of the Home. The matter had been brought up before, but was postponed upon the advice of Gen. Donnelly until Minister Grubb's return. The majority of the board at present appear to favor the retention of 90 per cent. of the pension. This amount is to be expended by the board to the best interests of the veterans in the Home, or is to be placed to their credit in a separate fund. The inmates believe that the 20 per cent. now retained is sufficient, and think they ought to control their own money.

He Stole a Razor.

Yesterday afternoon Policeman Giese arrested a man named Edward Daly, a musician, for stealing a razor from a barber named Charles Kaeding. The man was intoxicated at the time and when arrested he was flourishing the razor and threatened to cut his own throat and the throat of anyone who happened to pass. When the officer approached the fellow attempted to close the razor handily and in so doing badly cut one of his hands. When arraigned in court this morning he pleaded guilty to being drunk and disorderly and City Judge Codington fined him five dollars.

A Fire at Laing's Hotel.

During yesterday morning the kitchen, which is in the rear of the annex to Laing's Hotel, caught fire. Messrs. George and Wallace V. Miller, the proprietors of the hotel, succeeded in extinguished the flames before any serious damage resulted. At one time the woodwork in the building was burning fiercely.

I have recommended Dr. David Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" to many in Shelton and Birmingham, and I have yet to find one who has not been benefited by it.—C. L. Seaver, Birmingham, Conn.—ADV.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

PRESIDENT HARRISON APPOINTS ESTEE.

The California Man Will Probably be Attorney-General.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 23. (Special.)—President Harrison has appointed M. M. Estee of California to a Cabinet position. He will either be Secretary of The Interior or Attorney-General, probably the latter.

ALCOHOLISM CAUSED HIS DEATH.

A Prominent Man Found Dead in His Bed.

NEW YORK, Sept. 23, (Special)—Thomas Sands, a prominent restaurant keeper of Hoboken, was found dead in bed at his home on Washington street this morning. Alcoholism is said to be the cause of death.

AN EMBEZZLER RETURNS.

Taking Advantage of His Wife's Leniency.

WARREN, Mass., Sept. 23, (Special)—C. W. Gilbert, who stole $22,000 from his wife and mother-in-law, and then fled has returned. His wife went after him, and after she promised not to prosecute him he came back with her.

DRANK PASSAIC WATER.

And Now Lies Fatally Ill at Her Home With Typhoid Fever.

Esper, aged twelve, the eldest daughter of Judge McCormick of Elizabeth, is lying very low with typhoid fever, which she contracted in Newark by drinking Passaic water. The child was there for two weeks recently on a visit to her grandfather, Mr. Lindsley, the well-known spring manufacturer. She was taken ill about nine days ago and brought home. The crisis in her disease has now been reached. Dr. James S. Green, who is attending the patient, says her illness was undoubtedly caused by drinking polluted water. It is doubtful if she will recover.

New Jersey C. E. Convention.

The following convention circular will be sent within a few days to every Christian Endeavor Society in New Jersey the address of whose corresponding secretary is in possession of the State Committee. The convention this year promises to be of more than ordinary interest and the attendance will unquestionable be very large. Every society in this vicinity ought to be represented by as many members as possible.

BOONTON, N. J., Sept. 15, 1891.

DEAR FRIENDS:—Our New Jersey State Christian Endeavor Convention will be held in the First Presbyterian church, Newark, October 23d, 24th and 25th. The first session on Friday evening, October 23d, and closing Sunday night.

We hope for large delegations from every quarter in the State, as by this means only can the Convention accomplish the good desired. We trust your society will take immediate action, whereby this matter will be brought before its members and a large delegation secured.

We want the Convention to be interesting, helpful, enthusiastic, and in making up the programme we have endeavored to include as many helpful and practical subjects as possible.

There will be addresses by General Secretary J. W. Baer of the United Society and other well-known speakers and workers.

Saturday and Sunday morning there will be Junior Rally and Consecration.

There will be three-quarters of an hour conferences on the work of nearly all the Committees, also on such topics as Junior Work, led by Mrs. Scudder; Our Pledge, Business Meetings, Evangelistic Work, the Committee of One. The work of the Junior Society will also be given a place on the programme other than Conference. An hour will be devoted to a Free Parliament. A half-hour to echoes from Minneapolis. Dr. Taylor, the Bible will also have half an hour. Temperance and Missions will both be given a place on the programme.

It is expected on Saturday afternoon, October 24, from five to seven, that a reception will be tendered the delegates by the Essex County Union. The programme for Saturday will include a number of short practical addresses. Come prepared to remain during the entire Convention. You cannot afford to miss a single session.

A reduced rate of fare over all the principal railroads of the State has been secured. The rate is two cents per mile traveled on "card orders" or full fare going and one-third fare returning on "certificates." A circular fully explaining both card orders and certificates and giving all needed information as to transportation, will be sent to each society that mails us a postal card in charge of Rev. Wm. Hoppaugh, Springfield, N. J.

Do not miss a boarding place during the Convention? The plan is to place delegates in private families. Board about $1 per day. Have hotel accommodations for a few. Write to John Monteith, 764 Broad street, Newark, Chairman Entertainment Committee and secure your place as soon as possible. We will soon give you particulars and answer any questions regarding entertainment.

Yours in Christian Endeavor,
HALSEY HAMMOND, Sec'y.

Episcopalian Convocation.

By appointment of the Bishop, the Convocation of the New Brunswick Diocese of the Protestant Episcopal church was held yesterday in St. Luke's church, Roselle. The topic for discussion was "Prayers for the Departed," and was opened by Rev. E. M. Rodman. Holy Communion was observed at the morning service and a missionary meeting was held in the evening, in which Revs. Robert MacKellar and H. McKim took part.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Peary Expedition.

If the reader will turn to the map of Greenland and follow the northwestern coast with his finger till he comes to a point 77 degs. 43 min. north latitude he will be at the exact spot in Pendlow Land where Lieutenant Peary, with his broken ship, his wife and a few devoted followers, will spend the months of long arctic darkness waiting for the break of day next spring. Then in April or May Peary will attempt by sledging through Greenland to approach as near as possible to the north pole next summer by land. This is a way which has never been tried yet, although in 1888 the lieutenant made such an exploring trip 100 miles into the interior of Greenland. He believes, however, that the north coast of that country reaches in its extreme limit no farther than to 85 degs. If he reaches this limit he will then be within less than 350 miles of the north pole itself. In 1881 Lockwood and Brainard, of the Greely expedition, gained a point of latitude 85 degs. 24 min. north, near the same northern coast for which Peary will aim.

Peary expects to make depots of provisions along the route as he goes northward. Himself and the two members of his party who come out in the best shape in the spring will make the trip northward, carrying surveying materials and provisions on small sledges that will be dragged by the explorers themselves, probably. Peary doubting the utility of taking dogs.

Will their fellow-countrymen ever see Lieutenant Peary and his plucky wife again? Some of the party who came back in the Kite when it steamed out of McCormick bay, on the north shore of Murchison sound, through Baffin's bay southward and home again, are of opinion that the explorers will add their names to those of the victims of the frozen, cruel north. For one thing, Peary's plan of return is pronounced by experienced whalers to be utter madness. The lieutenant expects that passing whalers will bring his party back next summer. Failing in this, he will make for Upernavik, 500 miles south, through snow, fog and ice, in the whaleboats he has with him. This attempt, whalers declare, will be certain destruction. It looks now as though the American people will "board" the Peary party another winter, and sumhver over the track pursued by the Kite, have it reach Camp Peary in time to come away before the ice closes in in 1892, and bring off the intrepid explorer. This of course will be gladly done.

Great Day in Great Britain.

British school children this September went from the first day in their lives to a free school. Never until this year of grace, 1891, has the Briton known the meaning of a true public school, although he might have learned all about it from America long ago if he had only been willing to acknowledge that he did not know everything already. It is to be noted particularly, too, that this gift comes from a Tory government instead of a Liberal one. Perhaps the future this fact of giving free schools to the British public will constitute the finest feather in the cap of the Salisbury government.

Yet, like all great days, that which began the new educational era in Great Britain was a little disappointing. The very thing which showed how sorely such schools were needed was the fact that only a few of the parents even knew that the schools were to be free hereafter. Therefore of the young ones entered the school doors with the usual fees in their hands and there was scarcely any increase of attendance at all. Plainly, the masses of the English people do not read the papers. The fact had been published far and wide for months that school fees were abolished, but only the fewest number of parents knew of it. Imagine such a state of affairs in America. Well, let us hope free schools will produce a nation of newspaper readers in Great Britain.

If you were a photographer and lived in Germany and should make and exhibit a picture of the emperor with his beard half grown and stubby, and unhandsome, you would be visited by the police, frightened within an inch of your life and your pictures confiscated and destroyed. For his mighty littleness, Emperor William has issued an edict that no portrait shall be made of him till the beard he is trying to grow is matured. Imagine President Harrison shaving off his beard, then sending forth to the minions over whom he rules an order that no photographer shall catch him till it grows out again.

One feature of working girls' picnics and outings is always the dancing, which they seem to enjoy as well without as with men. The last thing a party of men would think of on an outing would be dancing. This shows a radical difference in the sexes that the psychologists have not taken sufficient cognizance of. Perhaps in the coming race dancing will be given over to girls altogether, as it is in the oriental nations.

If every traveler on a southwestern railway carried a loaded revolver, knew how to use it and would use it in the nick of time, how the countenance of anybody who molested him in a car there in would be improvable for his masked men to capture a whole train.

CASHIER LIVESEY IS OUT

His Resignation in Treasurer Boyer's Hands.

THE McCAMANT-BARDSLEY LETTERS

They Are Said to Indicate That There Was Collusion Between Bardsley, McCamant and Livesey—No Mention of "Sockties and Handkerchiefs."

HARRISBURG, Sept. 23.—State Treasurer Boyer on his return to the capital found the resignation of Cashier Livesey awaiting him. It was mailed at Milwaukee, Wis., on Aug. 26. Domestic circumstances are given as the cause.

Bardsley and McCamant.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 23.—District Attorney Graham has given out to the newspapers the much talked of correspondence between Auditor General McCamant and Cashier Livsey on the one side and John Bardsley on the other, which it is contended, only needed the corroborative evidence of Bardsley himself to enable Mr. Graham to frame a criminal indictment against Mr. McCamant.

The letters are, in general, an acknowledgment of favors much more valuable than any before referred to in print, and there is an entire lack of any mention of the "sockties and handkerchiefs" which Mr. McCamant testified Bardsley had bought for him and by which he explained his thanks to Bardsley for favors.

An Arrangement Between Them.

The letters, the authorities think, plainly show that there was collusion between McCamant and Bardsley in procuring rebates from certain newspapers for advertising. This also shows an arrangement between Bardsley and Livesey, by which the public funds were permitted to remain unlawfully in Bardsley's hands until the interest accounts in the depositories could be closed.

Accompanying the correspondence is a list of newspapers in both cities, showing the supposed connection between certain letters from Harrisburg and postal orders or checks sent thither.

Bardsley Sends and Thanks.

The brief shows that Bardsley drew a check April 1, 1890, for $500 to McCamant's order and that there is a postoffice receipt for a registered letter dated April 2, signed by McCamant and Livesey. May 1, 1890, a check for $666 was sent, and in the correspondence is a letter from McCamant dated May 5, saying:

"Please accept my thanks for favors received this morning."

Numerous other checks for amounts varying from $375 to $1,000 are compared with similar letters from McCamant on following days, acknowledged with thanks "for favors received."

Sundry letters from Livesey read: "Compliments of yesterday received; accept thanks for same."

All of the checks and letters, the district attorney argues, indicate that "both Livesey and McCamant, then in control of the auditor general's office and state treasurer's office, in the interest of the state of Bardsley in the use of the state's money at interest, which led ultimately to the loss of $2,000,000 of the city and state funds, and in forcing rebates from publishers in the printing of the advertisers' lists."

When the disclosures, which finally came in full force, became alarming, the auditor general wrote as follows:

DEAR BARDSLEY: Hurry up with your pay lists that are now in charge signal will be hoisted. Yours, truly,

THE FOLLOWING letter is one of the lot.

MY DEAR BARDSLEY: I have seen Livesey, who tells me that Boyer will take the school warrants to you in your New York.

P. S. Burn this letter. T. McCAMANT.

Two Years for Appraiser Dunlap.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 23.—F. W. Dunlap, a delinquent deputy mercantile tax appraiser, pleaded guilty to conspiracy to defraud the city and was sentenced by Judge Reed to two years in the eastern penitentiary.

Standard Oil in Germany.

BERLIN, Sept. 23.—In a report made at the request of Minister Phelps, Mr. Libby, the Standard Oil company's European agent, says: "We seek to discourage all speculation in our products. The company has no agreement of any nature with the Rothschilds, Nobels, any Russian interest, or any combination to exact an artificial price. That would be in conflict with the history and policy of the company at home and abroad."

More Trouble in China.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 23.—The situation here is much worse. Disorders are increasing at Ichang. The valley of the Yang-tse-Kiang is in rebellion. Great excitement prevails. Many families are fleeing from Shanghai, but measures of defense are being taken. Three ships of war are at Wuchang and the fleets are concentrating at Shanghai.

Murder Is Suspected.

HUNTINGDON, Pa., Sept. 23.—William Webster Trimble, of Camden, N. J., a civil engineer employed by the Pennsylvania railroad, was killed on a railroad near this city. The body was terribly mangled and thrown sixty feet into the river. Murder is suspected.

Princeton's New Year.

PRINCETON, N. J., Sept. 23.—President Patton formally opened the academic year at Princeton college today by an address in Marquand chapel at 9 o'clock.

A German officer, assigned by his government, has reported in high terms of praise on the recent French maneuvers and the skill of General Saussier.

Quite a stir has been created in Holland by the prospect of a compulsory military system from which the country has heretofore enjoyed immunity.

The civil marriage of Miss Jeanie Urquhart, sleuse of Mrs. James Brown-Potter, to M. Rene Duval, was celebrated in Paris.

Political Notes.

The Prohibition party of Hudson county, N. J., nominated the following ticket: For senator, Stephen B. Ransom. Kelly Hester, of Hoboken, was nominated for surrogate without opposition. Theodore Free was nominated for coroner. Nominations for assembly were made in some of the districts. J. D. Dorr was nominated for the Second district, H. L. Brown in the Third, I. N. Quimby, M. D., in the Fifth, George A. Morrison in the Eighth and the Rev. Robert Gaskell in the Eleventh.

Lieutenant Governor Jones is in New York for a brief visit. He is mum on the political situation for the present, but hints at effective ammunition in his private safe as the cause.

It is said that the Independent convention that was to have been held in Albany Saturday is to take place Friday. It is alleged that five distinct farmer and labor organizations will be represented by delegates.

At Saratoga the Democratic convention of the Fourth judicial district indorsed the Republican nominations of Martin I. Stover, of Amsterdam, and Leslie W. Russell, of Canton, for justices of the supreme court.

At Utica Republicans nominated T. Solomon Griffiths for member of assembly.

Edward C. Lathan was nominated by the Republicans of the Third assembly district of Onondaga county at Fayetteville, N. Y.

Democrats at New Haven.

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 23.—The Connecticut State Democratic club held its semi-annual banquet here last evening. Professor Simeon E. Baldwin, of the Yale Law school, presided.

The present condition of the state government was discussed, and the meeting was unanimous in urging that the Democratic state central committee should call a state convention of the party during the coming winter to make a declaration of principles.

The club will urge the state committee to at once begin a thorough and systematic agitation of the question of revising the constitution.

Blaine May Not Run.

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—The Mail and Express' Washington special says that James G. Blaine will, soon after the first of the new year, notify his friends and admirers who are now urging his nomination for the presidency that under no circumstances could he accept such an honor, and that he is for the renomination and re-election of Benjamin Harrison. The situation as here given has been known to the president for some time.

Colonel Polk Denies Some Reports.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—President Polk, of the National Farmers' Alliance, denies the reports that he was threatened with violence by ex-Union soldiers while in Wichita, Kan., that he had entreated Union prisoners under his charge during the war, that he ever had charge of a prisoner or prison, and that he apologized in his house to Jefferson Davis for having gone into the Confederate army.

THE COUPLE HOMEWARD BOUND.

A Conductor Says Thornton and Eva Boarded His Train at New Orleans.

LAWRENCEVILLE, Ga., Sept. 23.—Samuel W. Thornton, who was supposed to have been drowned at Coney Island a month ago, was arrested here yesterday, and he received a telegraphic order for fifty dollars from his brother, William J. Thornton, of 277 Cumberland street, Brooklyn. He paid his board bill, May Belle Thornton, Eva Jewett, and also two second class tickets for New York via the Savannah steamship line.

A conductor on a Pullman car from New Orleans said that Thornton and his companion came through from New Orleans with him, leaving New Orleans Friday night and arriving here at 8:30 Saturday morning. Thornton and his companion (according to his own version of the story) were on a Spanish vessel in the Atlantic ocean on that day. Both deny the conductor's story. The pair took the 1:10 p. m. train for Savannah and will reach New York by steamer Tuesday noon. They are beyond doubt S. W. Thornton and Eva Jewett, who disappeared from Brooklyn nearly four weeks ago.

Think They Eloped.

BROOKLYN, Sept. 23.—The suspicion is very strongly developed here that Samuel Thornton and Eva Jewell, the missing couple, eloped instead of being washed out to sea at Coney Island.

The Kaiser's Intimate Talks War.

BERLIN, Sept. 23.—The near relationship of the Grand Duke of Baden to the kaiser has given marked importance to the warlike utterances of the grand duke at the recent reviews. The statement of the grand duke to the troops that war is imminent has almost the same force as if uttered by the kaiser. The duke said: "The time is near when Germany must again unsheath her sword against an enemy who has not learned prudence by bloody defeat. It will be the duty of Baden to support the first onset."

Five Boomers Are Dead.

GUTHRIE, O. T., Sept. 23.—Two negroes killed in a fight at Langston, the shooting of a woman who attempted to cross the border before the allotted time and the drowning of two men in the Cimarron river were the principal events reported in the grand rush for the Oklahoma lands. The population of Oklahoma increased 20,000 yesterday.

The Bank Failed, but Is Still Open.

BUTLER, Pa., Sept. 23.—The Butler County bank, of Millerstown, owned by J. Hoyt, suspended payment a week ago, but has not closed its doors. The deposits aggregate only $36,450, and Mr. Hoyt says that his assets amount to $30,000, and that if he can obtain assistance for a few days he will be able to pull through.

A Burglar at the Blaine Mansion.

AUGUSTA, Me., Sept. 23.—A burglar made an attempt Sunday night to break into the Blaine mansion on State street. He had broken a square of glass and was climbing into the window when the neighbors were aroused and the man fled. The Blaines will arrive here this week.

Reciprocity with Mexico.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—Jose Ives Limantour, who has been appointed by Mexico to negotiate a reciprocity treaty with the United States, will visit Washington during the early winter for the purpose of conferring directly with the secretary of state.

Mayor Cleveland Ill.

JERSEY CITY, Sept. 23.—Mayor Cleveland, of Jersey City, is confined to his house with gastric trouble.

THE WORLD OF POLITICS

The Republicans Ratify Their Ticket at New York.

MANY CLUBS MEET AT SCRANTON.

The Fight for the Presidency of the Republican League Between Robinson and Dalzell—A Report That Blaine Will Not Run in 1892.

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—The Republicans of this city held a meeting last night in Carnegie's new music hall and formally ratified the action of the Republican convention at Rochester. The hall was filled. Many ladies were present, conspicuous among them being Mrs. J. Sloat Fassett, who occupied a box. John S. Smith, chairman of the campaign committee of the Republican club, called the vast assemblage to order at 8:15 o'clock. He read a letter from Andrew D. White regretting his inability to be present, expressing hearty sympathy with the meeting and predicting the triumph of the Republican party under the leadership of Mr. Fassett in November. After reading the letter the chairman introduced Mr. Fassett, who was vociferously cheered.

Mr. Fassett's Speech.

Mr. Fassett said he believed there were some good men in the Democratic party, that they were even in the majority, but that they were an apathetic majority. He continued:

The Republican party is willing to appeal to the record. There is, for example, the public verdict of a Democratic governor and the journals of the assembly and senate which are perishable records. The party will find not the one incident of the life of a candidate, one act in the history of a party, but has been exceptionally free from the charge of reprehensible, but if you find that the general tenor and tendency of one party is toward the upbuilding and encouragement of every industrial pursuit and enterprise and results in better order and government and lower taxes, and that of the other party the reverse in trend.

Now what is the situation today? The armies are in array, the battle is set, the litigants are in court. And who are they? On the one side the Republican party, on the other side—not the Democratic party, not the County Democracy, not the Irving Democracy, but Tammany Hall. The issue is as sharply divided as that aside division in the hall. Tammany Hall against the state. It is now a matter of recorded history that for the present and for the future, until the party is purged of its vicious element, no Democrat has any power or privilege or right, either in the preliminary meetings or ultimate conventions of the party, unless Tammany Hall sets the seal of its approval upon his forehead.

Tammany Hall and Cleveland.

Mr. Fassett said there was nothing in the Democratic platform about Grover Cleveland. Tammany Hall never liked Grover Cleveland, nor anything about any soldiers or sailors in the platform at Saratoga, and yet Edward F. Jones was a soldier and a brave man in 1863.

Mr. Fassett did not believe that Governor Hill was defeated at Saratoga. If it were so, he said, then even Hilliam wasn't bad enough for them to stand, and they dared to put their foot on the neck of the young hero who led them to victory for nine years. If they did neglect him they were guilty of casting aside their political savior.

When reference was made to Blaine's reciprocity treaty the speaker was interrupted by wild cheers for Blaine. Mr. Fassett then proposed three cheers for President Harrison and Mr. Blaine, and they were given with a will.

Concerning the World's Fair.

Concerning the World's fair Mr. Fassett said:

I want to say to you that if it were to be done over again tomorrow I should repeat act for act and vote for vote the record of the whole history so far as my own connection with it is concerned. I deemed it important that you should have a world's fair in New York, but not a Tammany fair.

The Ohio Campaign.

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 23.—Two thousand people met at the state house steps last night and heard Roger Q. Mills and Congressman Outhwaite—both of whom want to be the next speaker—talk tariff from the same platform. Governor Campbell sat between the two congressmen and also acted as master of ceremonies.

Campbell and McKinley.

Introducing Mr. Mills, the governor said:

His name is a household word wherever the people are oppressed by an unjust and vexatious tariff, and he has stood with a full passed by the representatives of the people and defeated by the representatives of monopoly in the senate, which, had it become a law, would have taken off some of the burdens which have been grievously laid upon the people by the bill of a gentleman who will never be governor of Ohio. Modesty prevents me from mentioning the name of the bill.

Mills and Outhwaite Speak.

Mr. Mills was in good spirits and apparently on his mettle. He varied his regular tariff speech with quaint Texas remarks which kept the audience in a roar, as when he said of the alleged benefit of the tariff to the workingman, "The tariff helps the laborer? Why, gentlemen, the manufacturer, he gets it in his pocket, but the laborer he gets it in the neck." Mr. Outhwaite spoke briefly after Mr. Mills was through, and did not attempt to rival the Texan either in logic or wit.

Foster and Abbott Will Talk.

Secretary Foster is coming home to say good words for McKinley, beginning probably at Toledo some day next week. Governor Abbott, of New Jersey, is expected to make his first speech in the state on Oct. 6 in Columbus. A joint debate has been arranged between McKinley and Campbell for Oct. 8, but it is doubtful if it ever takes place, as the Republican state committee has already begun to raise difficulties over it. There are eight days during the rest of the campaign on which neither candidate for governor has yet been assigned to speak. The Democratic committee has offered to let the Republicans arrange a series of joint debates to cover all of those dates.

Republican Clubs at Scranton.

SCRANTON, Pa., Sept. 24.—The executive committee of the Pennsylvania League of Republican Clubs met Tuesday afternoon and rejected the application of all clubs for membership which had not been in existence on July 16. This seems to indicate that Senator Dalzell will be re-elected president of the club at the session today.

Mr. McCandless, of Pittsburg, made a gallant effort to amend the resolution by extending the date to Sept. 1, but he was not successful. Just before the committee met Mr. Dalzell informed a reporter that if the committee threw out all clubs organized after July 16 Mr. Robinson must win as a matter of course. That is just what the committee has done.

The state convention opened at the armory today. One hundred and eighty-six clubs are represented in the convention, and of these, it is said, Robinson has 128. He says he is certain of election on the first ballot.

Political Notes.

The Prohibition party of Hudson county, N. J., nominated the following ticket: For senator, Stephen B. Ransom. Kelly Hester, of Hoboken, was nominated for surrogate without opposition. Theodore Free was nominated for coroner. Nominations for assembly were made in some of the districts. J. D. Dorr was nominated for the Second district, H. L. Brown in the Third, I. N. Quimby, M. DEACON WHITE'S CRASH.

His Tried to Corner the Corn Market and Failed.

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—S. V. White & Co., of New York, the heavy bulls on the grain market yesterday, went under because they tried to corner the country's supply of the grain for September and October delivery and failed. Wall Street's verdict, after having digested all the news it could get about the smash, was that Mr. White, when he went into an ambitious grain deal, tackled something he knew nothing about. As a manipulator of stocks in New York he was a success, but when he tried to control the corn market in Chicago he locked horns against such wily veteran grain specialists of the Windy City as Armour, Schwartz, McCormick, Counselman and Dupree that unsophisticated Wall street man found himself in the hands of the Philistines.

The firm owes about $2,000,000, mostly to banks and money lenders. Against this, as assets, it has about $1,000,000 bushels of corn, held by White & Co. in Chicago and the west. The average price at which the corn is believed to have been purchased was 60 cents a bushel. For some of it as high as 70 cents was paid. It had been going down almost ever since Mr. White began his deal, and the price yesterday was 49, there having been a decline of 17 cents in three weeks. This enormous drop would have required the resources of a millionaire to stand by, and during speculator's failure was inevitable.

The Chicago House.

CHICAGO, Sept. 23.—The failure of S. V. White & Co.'s branch house here created a good deal of excitement for a short time. The failure was a complete surprise to the men in Chicago, who looked upon the house as one of the strongest.

The Chicago house was opened about three years ago by W. A. Allen, a nephew of S. V. White. Minnie Redman of Fox, sold 1,000,000 bushels of corn on the Chicago market for account of whom it may concern, which, of course, for account of S. V. White & Co.

Rea Brothers & Co. Fail Too.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 23.—Owing to the failure of S. V. White & Co. the well known banking and brokerage house of Rea Brothers & Co. has been closed. They had $75,000 in cash in White's hands.

Robber Garza Surrounded.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Sept. 23.—General Stanley has telegrams from General Lazereus, commander of the fourth military zone of Mexico, stating that the invasion of Garza and his band has ended. They were twenty-seven miles from Reynosa Monday and are scattered in order to run and cross the Rio Grande into Texas. A thousand mounted Mexican troops have them almost surrounded and American troops are on this side waiting to intercept any of the band who may attempt to cross. General Lazereus says that the object of the band was robbery and that the raid had no political significance.

Postmaster General Haggart Accused.

OTTAWA, Sept. 23.—In the house of commons today Mr. Mulock, for West Lambton, gave notice that he will at once make an impeachment of Hon J. C. Haggart, postmaster general. The charge will be that while a member of parliament Mr. Haggart was interested in the contract given by the government for the construction of the Pacific railway which runs between Keewatin and Eagle river. This is the sensation of the day.

A LEAP YEAR'S MARRIAGE.

Searles Says Mrs. Hopkins Did the Proposing.

HE MARRIED FOR LOVE AND MONEY.

But Love, He Says, Was the Principal Reason Why He Wedded a Woman Who Was a Score of Years His Senior—The Contest Commenced.

SALEM, Mass., Sept. 23.—Timothy Hopkins, of San Francisco, the adopted son of Mrs. M. F. S. Hopkins Searles, sat among half a dozen noted lawyers in the probate court yesterday. He was ready to contest the wealthy woman's will without regard to cost. He had refused, it is said, to compromise the case for $2,500,000. The lawyers who were gathered about him were Joseph H. Choate, of New York; ex-Judge William C. Endicott, of Salem; E. T. Burley, of Lawrence; R. J. Wilson and ex-Judge J. H. Boalt, of San Francisco. Besides Timothy Hopkins this grand array of legal talent represented various other contestants—the Hubbards, of Bridgeport; Mrs. Annie C. Severance, of Los Angeles, and the Sherwoods, of New York.

Searles Was on Hand.

Edward F. Searles, of Methuen, who married the widow of Mark Hopkins, and to whom the $30,000,000 or more of her property was left, to the expressed seclusion of Timothy Hopkins, was on hand to stand by the will. He had several prominent lawyers to aid him also. They were William Allen Butler, Wilhelmus Mynderse Geurnal T. H. Hubbard and Thomas E. Stillman, of New York; Colonel Solomon Lincoln, of Boston, and Richard Dodge, of Cambridge. Judge Rollin E. Harmon sat on the bench when the court opened. The witnesses to the will, Messrs. Dodge, Thornton and Norris, were called to the stand by Colonel Lincoln.

The Widower Test fies.

"Was Mrs. Searles of sound and disposing mind, Mr. Dodge?" asked Colonel Lincoln.

Before the witness could answer, Mr. Burley, counsel for Timothy Hopkins, called for the will made prior to the one in dispute and dated Nov. 8, 1887. Counsel for Searles objected, but Judge Harmon ordered it produced. It was made on the date of the marriage of Mr. Searles and Mrs. Hopkins, and gave half of Mrs. Searles' estate to her husband and the other half to Timothy Hopkins. Mr. Searles was then put upon the stand. He told his life history, which has a tinge of romance. He was born in Methuen, Mass., fifty years before July 4 last. He lived there off and on until 1881.

She Proposed to Him.

In the spring of 1883 he met Mrs. Hopkins in San Francisco. He went to her with a letter of introduction, asking permission to view her house. On numerous occasions thereafter he met her in the east and west by invitation.

Mrs. Hopkins had told him that she was twenty years his senior. When the marriage was proposed Mrs. Hopkins consulted her adopted son. Mr. Searles did not know what Timothy said, but he objected.

"What was the proposition of marriage first made?"

"In the autumn of 1883, but not by me."

"She proposed to you, then, did she?"

"She did."

"When did you make the propodition to her?"

"In 1884. The marriage was agreed upon in September of 1887, in the early part of the month, at New York."

Love and for Money.

"Will you tell me why you entered into a marriage contract with a woman twenty-one years older than yourself?"

"I married for all that she was, love—love and money both."

"What was the stronger motive, love or money?"

"I don't believe I am obliged to answer that question."

Judge Harmon ruled that the question was competent, and Mr. Searles answered, "Love."

"Did you have any talk about the disposition of her property prior to marriage?"

"No, sir."

He Gave Her Three Years to Think.

In the course of his testimony Mr. Searles said that while in California he went on several excursions into the country with Mrs. Hopkins and her daughter-in-law. He did not assent to Mrs. Hopkins' proposal of marriage for three years, in order to give her a chance to be sure that she would be satisfied. He had never previously proposed marriage to any one.

In the spring of 1886 he went to Florida as the guest of Mrs. Hopkins in her private car. He was accompanied by Miss Case, of Great Barrington. From 1883 to 1887 he was superintending the building of Mrs. Hopkins' house at Great Barrington. He did not know of the will made on the day of the marriage, Nov. 8, 1887, until after her death, but did not think it was made intentionally behind his back.

The Marriage Contract.

A marriage contract made at the same time was also put in by counsel, conveying by Mrs. Hopkins to T. K. Stillman as trustee for the benefit of Edward F. Searles after the marriage the mansion in San Fradcisco; improved and unimproved land in Sacramento; mountain lands in Summit, Soda Springs, Cal.; redwood and timber lands on the coast range; two parcels of quarry lands; the Great Barrington property, and four lots in North street, New York. This contract was cancelled June 16, 1888.

Ostrander Out on Bail.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Sept. 23.—James E. Ostrander, the defaulting bank treasurer, has been admitted to bail in the sum of $20,000. His wife, son-in-law, Egbert Kiersted, and nephew, Abram Hasbrouck, president of the Rondout National bank, are his sureties.

Uncle Sam Will Give Up $8,000,000.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—The government has taken steps to compromise the last trimmings cases. It is roughly estimated that by this action, which is in the nature of a compromise, the government will refund to importers about $8,000,000.

He Fired Her Clothing.

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 23.—William A. Higgins was held in the criminal court for murder for causing the death of "Aunt Tillie" Hunter, an aged negress, by firing her clothes with a lighted match in a saloon on Sunday night, Sept. 12.

The Itata Case Still Alive.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—Despite reports to the contrary the libel against the Itata and the indictment of Trumbull will be pushed by the government. The case will be heard Oct. 20.

A Tender or Friendship.

"Carry, I want you to be one of my bridesmaids."

"You are my dearest friend, Sally, but you are asking too much."

"Too much! Why?"

"I've just become engaged to your fiance."—Life.

RUSSELL HARRISON'S REPLY.

He Says the Aransas City Scheme Is a Legitimate Enterprise.

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—Russell B. Harrison, when asked in reference to the World's report regarding the Aransas Harbor City and Improvement company, of which he is the president, said:

"Any fair minded man can see that this story owes its origin to malice and political prejudice. I was in Texas a year ago last June with Frank Leslie's Weekly party, which went down there to illustrate and write up the state. During our trip we visited Aransas Pass and I did not then have any interest in the Aransas Harbor company or expect to have any. On our return, through Lieutenant Governor Wheeler, of Texas, a man of the highest character and standing, I was led to inquire into the merits of the Aransas Harbor City and Improvement company and became interested in it.

"Five or six different cities in Texas on the gulf coast are endeavoring to obtain deep water harbors. Galveston has just secured a $6,000,000 appropriation from congress, and at other points private enterprise is at work to secure deeper water. I was assured when I went into the company that Mr. Lott, of the San Antonio and Aransas Pass railroad, which has its terminus at Aransas Pass, would be able to carry out a project authorized by congress to secure deep water through Aransas Pass, but his railroad went into the hands of a receiver, and that fact naturally retarded operations.

"Before I became identified with the company a large number of men prominent in public and business life had become interested in it. The managers, who are all honorable and reputable men, assure me there has been no misrepresentation in the company's transactions. For myself I need only say that I entered into this company in good faith as a legitimate business enterprise, and it is being conducted on that basis. I do not own, and therefore I could not have been given, as alleged, a half million of the company's stock. All the moneys received by the company have been spent in developing the property, and stockholders have received no returns and do not expect any until the work laid out has been well accomplished."

She Fell and Broke Her Neck.

CORTLAND, N. Y., Sept. 23.—Mrs. Frank McCormick, aged twenty-five, the wife of a prominent merchant at Homer, while crossing the room stumbled and fell. Her head struck an open door, breaking her neck. She also has a beautiful child which she was carrying was badly injured.

An Embezzler's Suicide.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Sept. 23.—Herman C. Rice, collector for Klinde Brothers, shot himself dead in a field here. The firm say there is a shortage in his accounts. Rice leaves a widow and four children. He was prominent in several societies.

Sarah Ann In a Rage.

Upon the kitchen table, with her work unfinished yet,
Sat Sarah Ann, intent upon a thrilling novel-ette.

The butcher and the groceryman knocked loudly, but in vain;
Then kicked the paint all off the door, and went away again.

The fire went out, the light grew dim, but Sarah Ann read on,
Intent upon the fortunes of Lord Algernon Fitzjohn.

Whose proud and wealthy father designed his
For the beauty of the season, the Lady Maud de Vere.

She loved him, but Lord Algernon, much to his pa's distress,
Disliked the Lady Maud and loved a modest governess.

She came to where the beauty accidentally
This willful lord proposing to the governess, who fears

She's unworthy of the honor, but she loves him as her life,
And will do her very best to make a true and worthy wife.

She still reads on, and as she neared the bottom of the page,
She learned how Lady Maud became convulsed with jealous rage.

Forgot herself, and maddened by the sounds of rapturous kissing,
Sprang forward—Sarah turned the leaf, the other page was missing!

—Harper's Bazaar in New York Sun.

Parental Hopes Shattered.

The noise that came from the nursery was terrific. High above the stamping of feet, the clapping of hands, the yells and cat-calls of the neighborhood boys in general convention assembled, and the agonized howling of a terrified dog that wanted to get out and couldn't, the father could hear the voice of his firstborn son, William, the pride of his household and the joy of his heart.

"Now, mark me this, my friends! The time is coming (loud applause) when this country of ours, the land of the free (frantic howl from the dog), the home of the brave (tremendous howling), shall rise in its majesty, my friends (deafening uproar), and then, my friends (yells, whistles and general pandemonium), you shall!"

"Heaven help me!" groaned the stricken father, alone in his library, "that boy of mine is going to be a lecturer!"—Chicago Tribune.

Only One Thing to Do.

A young lawyer, who had recently been admitted to the bar of New York, came to Judge Gowing for advice.

"I want to ask your advice, judge, about a very important matter."

"Well, what is it?"

"Lawyer Hall has been telling everybody that I am a donkey. Don't you think I ought to fight him or sue him for damages?"

"You say he called you a donkey?"

"Yes."

"Then fight him by all means. If you sue him he will prove it on you."—Texas Siftings.

HOW?

How to Oil a Harness.

Take a harness to a room where you can unbuckle it and separate the parts completely. Wash each part well in lukewarm water to which has been added a little potash. Scrub well with brush until all grease and dust have been removed. Wash the pieces well under the hand until they become supple. It won't do to oil until the harness becomes so. Let the parts dry in a place where they will do so slowly. When just moist, oil. For this purpose use codliver oil, as it is the best for the purpose. Besides, if you use neatsfoot, the rats and mice are your enemies at once, while they will not touch a harness oiled with codliver oil. Give a good dose of oil to all parts, then hang up to dry. When dry rub well with a soft rag.

How to Make a Dainty Letter Opener.

Cut two pieces of sheet celluloid in dagger shape with carved blades. The white ab old not be more than three or four inches long. The two may be glued together and some tiny design of flower or leaf sketched in sepia on the polished surface of the celluloid.

How to Polish Shells.

When shells become dry they often lose their luster. To restore it wash them in water in which a little gum arabic has been dissolved, or with the white of an egg. If the shells have a dull, thick skin, it can be removed by soaking in warm water and rubbing with a brush, or, if very adhesive, by the use of a little nitric acid in the water. Use the latter with care, as it may destroy the luster of the shell under the skin.

How to Arrange Peacock Feathers.

Peacock feathers in a vase are the despair of the uninitiated, for they will fall over or slide into any position but where you placed them. Try partially filling your vase or jar with sand or sawdust, and see if the peacock feather stems will not "stay put." Easy enough, isn't it, when you know how?

How to Test Honey.

If adulterated with molasses, the dark color will indicate it, and many can detect it by the taste. If with potato sugar syrup, that will be shown by boiling a sample for a short time in water containing 2 or 3 per cent. of caustic potassa. If the liquid remains colorless the honey is pure, but if it turns brown it contains the potato sugar syrup. If there is great flour in the honey (and it is sometimes used to increase the amount), it will become very liquid when heated and solid and tough on cooling.

How to Cure Chapped Hands.

Mix one ounce of glycerin, one ounce of rosewater and ten drops of carbolic acid. Bathe the chapped parts occasionally, especially at night. It will cure and prevent chapping and whiten the skin.

How to Remove Old Wall Paper.

Fasten the doors and windows closely and set a large vessel of hot water in the room for a few minutes. In a large room it is well to add boiling water two or three times. The paper will be moistened and come off much easier and more evenly. The woodwork can also be cleaned much more easily while damp.

How to Make Chewing Gum.

Take of prepared balsam of tolu two ounces, white sugar one ounce and oatmeal three ounces. Soften the gum in a water bath till it is workable, then work in the other ingredients and roll in finely powdered sugar in sticks to suit.

How to Make Cheap and Quick Kindling.

Dip cornobs for about one minute in a mixture of sixty parts resin and forty parts tar, melted together. Dry in hot sunshine or oven.

How to Tell Fresh Eggs.

To ascertain whether an egg is good or bad hold it up to the light. If it is good it is transparent; if bad, opaque.

How to Pickle Meat Red.

Mix brown sugar, bay salt and common salt each two pounds; saltpeter, eight ounces, and water, two gallons. This pickle gives meat a fine red color, while the sugar improves the flavor.

How to Keep Fish Fresh.

A method practiced in Europe is to clean the fish and sprinkle the interior with sugar, keeping the fish in a horizontal position so that the sugar may penetrate as much as possible. A tablespoonful of sugar is sufficient for a three pound fish. The flavor is thus preserved a long time and fish treated in this way before salting and smoking have a fine flavor.

How to Clean Jewelry Easily.

Every piece of plain jewelry, except a watch, can be cleaned by a simple washing with soap and warm water. They can be dried and brightened on a piece of chamois skin, or by being laid in a box of jeweler's sawdust. Pearls and turquoises cannot, of course, be treated in this way.

How to Clean Vessels Used to Hold Kerosene.

Wash the vessel with thin milk of lime, which forms a new compound with the kerosene and removes every trace of it. By a second application, adding a little chloride of lime and allowing the mixture to stand in the vessel an hour, every trace of the kerosene odor will be removed.

How to Bleach Wax.

Slice ordinary beeswax into thin flakes, lay them on sacking of coarse cloth and in sunshine, turn occasionally and sprinkle with soft water unless there is dew enough. In four weeks it will be pure white.

HIS MISTAKE.

There Is Such a Thing as a Funny Man Being Too Funny.

The early riser was out watering his grass when the funny man came along and stepped on the hose.

The early riser turned around to see what had shut off the water so suddenly, and the funny man laughed at him.

"Get off that hose!" exclaimed the early riser.

"Oh, don't mind me," said the funny man. "Go on and water your grass."

Then he noticed that the nozzle was carelessly pointed in his direction.

"Here! Point that the other way!" he cried.

The early riser glanced down at the hose in his face lit up with pleasure.

"Amusing to shut off a man's water, isn't it?" he asked.

"But, my dear sir," expostulated the funny man, "I didn't——"

"It's intensely funny," said the early riser; "you'd better get off that hose."

"But I can't," said the funny man. "Don't you see the nozzle's pointed right at me, and if I do"——

"Oh, well, I'm in no hurry," interrupted the early riser. "If you enjoy it I don't know that I have any reason to object."

He sat down on the railing surrounding his grass plat and rested the nozzle on his knee, still keeping it pointed toward the funny man.

"I say," said the latter, "if you'll turn that the other way I'll get off."

"Oh, I wouldn't put you to so much trouble," said the early riser. "Enjoy yourself."

The early riser held the nozzle between his knees while he took out a cigar and lit it. The funny man watched him puff it for a moment. Then he said:

"See here, old man, my leg's getting stiff."

"Why don't you shift legs?" asked the early riser disinterestedly.

The funny man tried it, made a slip, and the stream almost reached him before he could get his foot on the hose again. The early riser chuckled.

"Say, I'll break your head!" cried the funny man excitedly.

"All right," returned the early riser carelessly. "But be careful or you may slip off the hose again."

The funny man glared at the early riser a moment and then said:

"If I were as mean as you are I'd go into the pawnbrokers' business."

"If I were as funny as you are," said the early riser as he leisurely puffed his cigar, "I'd hire out to a burlesque company."

The funny man tried to walk along the hose to get farther away from the nozzle, but the water spurted out a little with each step and he stopped. Then he got desperate, stepped off, and started to run. The stream caught him in the middle of the back.

When he got out of range he turned and shook his fist at the impassive early riser and made some terrible threats.

And the early riser muttered as he began watering the grass again:

"Funny that a funny man can't take a joke on himself."—Chicago Tribune.

That Was All.

It seems that the word "gentleman" is subject, in one country at least, to the misconceptions so frequently attendant on the hardly used term "lady." The author of "A Colonial Tramp" gives the following instance of such an absurd and mistaken phrasing:

When we were at Port Said, in passing from one of the side streets we missed our little guide for a moment, and as he had our parcels we looked around to see if he had not run off with them. Upon that we became aware of a dark, evil looking and dirty half caste of some kind, chatting in about as an alley corner. He turned to give assistance to our little friend, and the ugly left off and shuffled once more into shadow.

"Is that your father?" I asked, guessing at the fact for the reason that the boy had not resisted very much, and now shook himself together without offering any explanation.

"My father? No, sar," with great scorn. "He one dirty thief gentleman wanting the parcels, that's all."

"Oh, that's all, is it?"

"Yes, sar, he gentleman who waits at dark corners when Englishman pass at night and stab."—Youth's Companion.

William Hollered.

A woman with a bundle in a shawl strap accosted a policeman in Union Square park the other day with the announcement that her husband was lost. They were coming down town from the depot and had got off at Fourteenth street by mistake, and while he was looking around for his bearings he had wandered away. The officer suggested that she go to a hotel, but after thinking it over for awhile she replied:

"No, I guess I'll stay right here for awhile longer. I'm expecting to hear him holler every minit."

"Will he call to you?"

"I think he will. There he goes now; that's William's bazoo."

Down toward Fifth avenue was heard a noise which seemed to be a sort of combination of fog horn and boiler explosion, and the woman picked up her bundle and continued:

"That's William, and I can go straight to him. That's the way he stands in our back door and calls up the hired man from the back lot, only he's a little scart and ain't half as loud as that. He's as loud as usual."—New York Evening World.

Not Exactly Approachable.

"Do you know General Jenkins?" said one newspaper man to another.

"Oh, yes."

"Is he an easy man to approach?"

"Well, I should say not. He lives about six miles out of the city and one of the worst roads you ever saw."—Washington Star.

The First Message from Mars.

Snodgrass—Our experimenters have at last succeeded in attracting the attention of the people inhabiting Mars.

Snively—Indeed? Has any message passed between that planet and the earth?

Snodgrass—Yes; they wanted to know what the score was.—New York Sun.

Follows Naturally.

"How does it happen," inquired the stranger, "that all the impassive early risers being made on this one street?"

"It doesn't happen at all, sir," replied the citizen, who was showing him about the village, majestically. "This is the street I live on. I am president of the town board, sir."—Chicago Tribune.

Not Exactly So.

"Could I get a night's lodging here, mum?" asked the tramp.

"I don't like to turn anybody away, my good man, but you are an entire stranger."

"Not an entire one, mum. I've lost two fingers and three toes."—Detroit Free Press.

McCarthy Whips Warren.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 23.—Though numerous obstacles were placed in the way of the management of the Cal McCarthy and Tommy Warren glove contest the affair came off last night. Contrary to expectation McCarthy won handily and proved himself an excellent boxer and as cool and clever a ring general as ever donned the gloves. Throughout the twenty-one rounds of the fight he had a shade the best of it. About $20,000 changed hands on the result, and as the outcome of the contest was contrary to general expectations the "talent" lost heavily. Both men weighed in at 118 pounds. The fight was for a purse of $1,500—$1,200 to the winner and $300 to the defeated man.

Hoey Outshoots Davenport.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Sept. 23.—At Long Branch the pigeon match between Louis I. Davenport, of New York, and Frederick Hoey, son of the president of the Adams Express company, was won by Hoey, who killed eighty-five birds to Davenport's eighty-four. The match was for $1,000 a side.

Allerton to Meet Nelson.

INDEPENDENCE, Ind., Sept. 23.—One of the greatest races in the history of the trotting turf will occur here between Oct. 19 and Nov. 14. Nelson, 2:10; Allerton, 2:09¾, the greatest trotting stallions on earth, and Nancy Hanks, the wonderful Kentucky mare, will meet for a purse of $10,000 on the kite shaped track.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF.

The acting secretary of war has awarded to John Moore, of Syracuse, N. Y., the contract for constructing a steel armory gymnasium building at the West Point Military academy. The contract price was $45,000.

At Sheboygan, Wis., James H. Mead, a well known banker, fell dead from heart disease while walking on the street.

The body of Mary Lovinsky, who disappeared from 119 Old Bergen road, Jersey City, was found in the Morris canal.

Robert Garrett Must Now Defend.

TRENTON, Sept. 23.—Judge Green, in the United States circuit court, rendered an opinion against Robert Garrett, of Baltimore. His counsel moved to have the summons served upon him in a $5,000,000 suit set aside, but the court declined to do so. William A. Jewett contracted with Garrett to connect the Baltimore and Ohio telegraph company with a cable he was laying from England. Jewett could not complete his work because Garrett backed out. He brings suit for $5,000,000. A sharp deputy marshal caught Garrett in Jersey City as he was boarding his private car and made service, which Garrett's counsel unsuccessfully tried to have dismissed, because it was not the intention of the law to track and waylay a man to make service.

Governor Abbett at the Fair.

WAVERLY, N. J., Sept. 23.—A great throng of people attended the fair of the New Jersey Agricultural societies at Waverly yesterday. Entries numbered 2,500, or 900 more than were ever before exhibited at the state fair. Today the cottage of the State Woman's Christian Temperance union was dedicated and Governor Abbett and his staff visited the fair

A New Pennsylvania Railroad.

HARRISBURG, Sept. 23.—The state department has granted a charter to the Susquehanna and Buffalo Railroad company for a line of fifteen miles long from Cook's river, Clinton county, on the Philadelphia and Reading railroad, to Trout river, same county. John T. Hyde, of Williamsport, Pa., is president, and the capital stock is $180,000.

1889—Odicio, father of Panama, burned; swarms of robbers took possession; troops called out and many robbers shot down.

The Unexpected.

Come listen, little boys and girls,
While I a tale relate
About a little boy named Tom,
Whose age was almost eight.

Tom was a headstrong kind of boy,
Who thought it silly fun
To scare his mother half to death
By blowing in a gun.

One day a stranger came that way,
As strangers oft had done;
But this one left behind the door,
A double barreled gun.

"Ha, ha," quoth Tom, the naughty boy,
"I never saw one such;
If single barrels make so much sport,
This should make twice as much."

So Tommie took the double gun
Straight to his mother fast.
It isn't loaded, ma," he yelled,
And blew a mighty blast.

* * * * * * *

And Tommie? Where is Tommie now?
A halo 'round his head?
Not much. It wasn't loaded; just
As little Tommie said.
—W. J. Lampton in Detroit Free Press.

Sweets to the Sweet.

"You don't mean to say she threw you over and took up with a candy maker, do you?" inquired his bosom friend.

"Yes," answered the disconsolate youth. "I didn't stand any chance at all. He seemed to have more of a—er—pull, you know."—Chicago Tribune.

TALK OF THE TOWN

—"U and I" at Music Hall to-night.

—The caterpillar eats three or four times its own weight every day.

—The Melopoia Society will resume its rehearsals Tuesday evening, Oct. 8th.

—The Plainfield Reform Club will hold its regular mid-week this evening at eight o'clock.

—The milk train which is due in this city at 9:28 p. m. was nearly two hours late last evening.

—A number of people from this city went on the Central Railroad excursion up the Hudson this morning.

—The Crescent bowling team was defeated by the Echos of Brooklyn on the latter's alleys Tuesday evening.

—A fruit peddler was badly bitten by a dog at Scotch Plains last Friday. A physician cauterized his wounds.

—The Phenix Club of New York will invite the Crescent League bowling team to open their new club house within a few weeks.

—The celebrated Gorhams of New York are to cross bats with the Crescents in a game of base ball next Saturday afternoon.

—The farmers of the country look upon this hot weather as worth about $25,000,000 per day to the country in perfecting the corn crop.

—Gov. Abbett and staff will be Gov. Hill's guests at the review of the First Division of the New York State National Guard, which occurs next month.

—The September term of the U. S. Circuit Court began at Trenton yesterday. The case of Alden Vanboven v. the Leading Rd. Co. is on the calender. Clark & Reed represent the plaintiff.

—Mechanical drawing, shorthand, bookkeeping and penmanship classes will be re-organized at the Y. M. C. A. very soon. All interested should apply for membership without delay.

—Tuesday morning Officer Sebring of Bound Brook brought from the Kings County (L. I.) Penitentiary an alleged horse thief who will be tried for the transgressions in Somerset county.

—The tax rate for Morris Township this year is $1.11 on $100, as against $1.10 last year. It is divided as follows: County and Township tax, 52; State school, 28; road, 14; Special school, 17.

—In referring to Edsall's making and laying carpets free of charge, he says he will guarantee the goods to be from the very best mills and that the prices in many instances are lower than in New York.

—Uncurrent fractional silver coin to the amount of $4,000,000 is being recoined into quarter dollars and dimes. The recoinage into standard silver dollars of the $5,000,000 (in round numbers) of trade dollar bullion, which the last Congress authorized, is also in progress, and will be completed in the next two months.

—The "Harvest Moon" is the full moon that comes nearest the Autumnal equinox which occurs on Sept. 21st. At that season the moon, when nearly full, rises at about the same hour for several nights, and because of the additional light it affords the farmer in securing his crops it is called the "Harvest Moon."
—New Brunswick Home News.

—Several petitions are in circulation and will be presented to Supt. W. H. Peddie, of the Central Railroad, asking him to continue through the Winter two of the trains now run on the High Bridge branch, as without them residents along the line will be unable to reach Dover, a principal selling point, without devoting a whole day to the trip.

—A runaway occurred on Sunday, near Bound Brook. As a young man named McNail and his friend from New Brunswick were driving over the crossing at Bound Brook, the horse became unmanageable and ran away. The young men were thrown out and the wagon was wrecked. The horse, which was pretty well bruised, ran to Somerville and was stopped by George Cathers, who saw the animal running up Main street.

—The 206th regular encampment of Winfield Scott Post, No. 76, G. A. R., was held in the Post room at Plainfield last evening. Among the members present, were Past Senior Vice-Department Commander Atwood of Trenton, who entertained the Post with a characteristic address. The reading of general orders disclosed the fact that the Adjutant of the Post, Comrade Geo. W. Moore had been honored by an appointment as aide-de-camp on the staff of the Commander in Chief. Senior Vice-Commander Reese was in attendance from Westfield—Westfield Leader.

A SERIOUS ACCIDENT.

Mrs. Rogers Fell Downstairs—Her Ankle Sprained and Leg Fractured.

Mrs. Rogers of Waterville, Maine, wife of Professor W. A. Rogers, of one of the leading New England Colleges, while visiting her father Mr. I. D. Titsworth of Dunellen, some two weeks slipped as she was descending the stairs, and fell heavily to the bottom.

Her right ankle was sprained and the leg fractured.

Mrs. Rogers brother, Dr. Titsworth, was summoned and her injuries attended to.

It will be some weeks before she can leave her bed.

TWO SUDDEN DEATHS.

Mrs. Wright and Mr. Truman Expire Suddenly.

Two sudden deaths occurred in this city last evening. The first was Mrs. Mary Wright, who died at her home during the afternoon. Previous to her death she appeared to be in the best of health. Heart failure is assigned as the cause of death. Deceased was fifty-six years of age. The funeral will take place at the residence of her son-in-law, Mr. David Bowden, No. 228 West Fourth street, Saturday afternoon at two o'clock.

Mumford M. Truman, aged forty-three years, died very suddenly at his home corner of Putnam avenue and Richmond street last evening. County Physician Wescott of Scotch Plains was summoned and he assigned heart failure as the cause of death.

A FINGER AMPUTATED.

Mr. Robinson's Painful Accident Yesterday Afternoon.

William Robinson, an employe of the Pond Machine Tool Works while engaged at work there yesterday afternoon had the index finger of his right hand amputated by accidentally catching it in some of the machinery. About a year ago Mr. Robinson had one of his eyes put out while working in the same shop.

State Y. P. S. C. E.

The State Christian Endeavorer convention will be held in the First Presbyterian Church at Newark, on Oct. 23, 24 and 25, and first session beginning on Friday evening, and the meetings close Sunday night.

It is expected it will be the largest gathering of Christian workers ever held in this state. The addresses will be by General Secretary J. W. Baer of the United Society and other speakers and workers. On Saturday and Sunday morning there will be half-past six prayer-meetings.

On Saturday a reception will be tendered the delegates by the Essex County Union.

"U and I" To-Night.

"U and I" the latest laughing success direct from its run of fifty nights at the Standard Theatre, New York, will form the attraction for the opening of the new Music Hall this evening.

"U and I" is a satire on the apartment house system of New York and deals with the dispositions of many nationalities.

It fairly bristles with wit.

Laughable situations follow each other with such rapidity that the auditors attention is diverted from one piece of nonsense only to enjoy another.

Fatal Runaway.

On Monday, at midnight, as Peter Vanarsdale and his wife, from Pluckamin, were on their way home, from the farm of Jno. Allen a bolt broke, and while Mr. VanArsdale was trying to find it the horse became restive. He called to his wife to jump, and, in doing so, she struck upon her head, killing herself instantly. The body was taken to their home. Deceased was a daughter of Israel Whitlock of Bound Brook and formerly resided in this city.

Surrendered by His Bondsman.

John Reedy, of Bound Brook, who was shot in the leg while resisting an officer *at that place and who was recently dis*charged from Muhlenberg Hospital where he was treated, was placed under $300 bail to await the action of the Grand Jury. One day last week he skipped to Philadelphia. Officer Sebring got on his trail and brought him back Sunday night and his bondsman, J. S. Cawley, surrendered him, and he was taken to Somerville.

Burglars at Westfield.

Some thief effected an entrance into the livery stable and so into the office of W. H. Barton at Westfield on Monday night. $7.65 was stolen from the cloth*ing of the colored man sleeping in the* room, and other money was taken sufficient to make the amount stolen about $10. The robbery was not discovered till early next morning, and no clue has yet been obtained as to the thief.

Mr. Jones Injured.

Mr. Cadwallader Jones, a special police man, in this city, met with a painful accident yesterday. He was working in the cellar of the Albion, and was attempting to lift a ham from a meat hook, when he slipped and the hook caught the right hand badly lacerating the flesh between the third and fourth fingers. A physician dressed the wound.

Let G. A. R Men Read.

General Order, No. 13, forbids that dropped members wear the official button on the regular G. A. R. badge. There is a heavy fine and penalty attached to such members wearing them. Comrades of Posts will report any and all such to the Commander of any Post.

A District Convention.

The convention of the Epworth League of the Trenton District of the New Jersey M. E. Conference will be held in the State street M. E. church, Trenton, during month of November. Efforts are being made to make this the most successful convention yet held.

Surveying for a Railroad.

It is reported that surveyors are engaged surveying the land at the foot of the mountains for a company who propose to build a railroad. The surveying is being done at night.

CONCERT SALOONS.

THE AMENDMENT TO REPRESS THEM SIGNED BY MAYOR GILBERT.

The Abolishment of One of the Many Evils Resulting From Combine Rule Due to THE NEWS, and the Saloon-Keepers.

The following is the amendment to the ordinances which is intended to abolish concert saloons:

Section 1. That no person licensed under the ordinance to which this is an amendment, shall suffer or permit in his or her bar room, or room in which spirituous or fermented liquors are customarily sold, or in any room in the same building wherein spirituous or fermented liquors are dispensed or drunk, any musical performance of any kind, vocal or instrumental, or both, or any mechanical music, or any acting, dancing, juggling, sleight of hand, boxing, wrestling, or any similar performance, show or exhibition.

Section 2. Every person licensed under the ordinance to which this is an amendment, to sell spirituous or fermented liquors shall so arrange the doors, windows and partitions of his or her bar room or saloon, that a full and unobstructed view of the interior thereof, including the bar, may be had from the street through the doors or windows or both, be*tween the hours of 12 p. m. each and every* Saturday and 6 a. m. the following Monday. And no window, blind, screen, partition, curtain or other article shall be so left or placed as to prevent between the hours named the full and unobstructed view from the street of the interior of any saloon or bar room licensed under the ordinance to which this is an amendment.

Section 3 No person licensed under the ordinance to which this is an amendment, shall at any time sell or dispose spirituous or fermented liquors from any bar that cannot, between the hours named in Section 2, be plainly seen from the street.

Section 4. A violation of any of the pro*visions of this ordinance shall be punished by* a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars or by imprisonment not exceeding sixty days, or both, at the discretion of the court.

It will strike most people as singular that any such amendment should pass the present Council with the combine in control. Some will be thankful, however, regardless of the real motives.

That the amendment has passed and finally become a law is due to a combination of circumstances, and we suppose THE NEWS can modestly claim a share of the credit.

THE NEWS alone called attention to the apparent utter disregard of the ordinances in the case of Joseph B. Miller, the saloon organ not only suppressing the facts because he was an advertiser, but actually attempting to whitewash him in an article, pretending to explain away his offense. His offense was having his place open on Sunday. The saloon organ said he was having it cleaned out, as it was too crowded the night before to do it then. The paper was so brazen-lent that even Mr. Miller was nauseated. Later because he ordered his advertisement discontinued, the paper proceeded by blackmailing in a series of false and malicious articles of an extremely libelous character, to try to bring him. Mr. Miller had those who run the concern arrested twice, and has a third action which he proposes to bring against them for an item which is just as malicious and libelous as those previously published. The paper has the temerity-ing insinuations to an item that one of Mr. Miller's checks had been returned marked "N. G.," something which might happen to any man through failure inadvertently to leave a sufficient balance in bank. Mr. Miller is neither better nor worse in our judgment than others in the same business. And whatever else may be his shortcomings it would not be wise for any one to pick him up for a fool, as those served to many years by their betters before he is through with them. He was born into the rum business and never followed and does not know any other. His most dangerous enemies at present are those in the same business with himself, many of whose trade he has taken away from them by providing superior attractions for those who frequent such places, including one of the publishers of the very paper which now so flauntedly denounces him, and members of the very combine which has passed the amendment to stop the "fun" they so often with others of their tastes enjoyed. So much to show their hypocrisy.

But perhaps the most potent influences after THE NEWS started the ball rolling was the continued power of the saloon keepers, who were most hurt by the innovation, and hadn't the room to put in the same attractions themselves. Their business has been so badly damaged that they would probably be compelled to retire another year or have the li*cense fee reduced.* Those that had the room provided attractions of the same character as Mr. Miller, and found that it helped their business. They did just what every sensible business man in his own line would do. The young and old frequenters liked music and singing and dancing of the concert saloon order, and were willing to favor with their patronage the places which provided these things. That is the case in a nutshell. While the people elect men to make laws allowing such things we must submit, whether we like the laws or not. It is foolish to contend against the inevitable. But it is a matter of record that THE NEWS first and alone took up the work which has resulted in the present amendment. We did it because the ordinances were not being respected as they should be. Mr. Miller's case was simply one conspicuous instance. THE NEWS was prompted in its action has been in every good newspaper work for the past seven years of its existence, and as it will always aim to be, but in a spirit of fairness to all men, and never from a spirit of personal animosity, such as actuates our silly contemporary.

People will have more respect for men like Mr. Miller who does not pretend to be what he is not than for the organ which daily assails him, from only the basest of motives, characteristic of the concern.

Yes; the ordinance is a good one, if it can be and is enforced in letter and spirit.

THE PUPS WERE DEAD.

But This Did Not Prevent a Journey After Their Bodies.

A cruel joke was played on Asst Leverich, of Nelson street, by George Craig, of Plainfield, last week. Craig is possessed of a valuable setter, which is being trained by Patrick Campbell, of Perth Amboy. The setter gave birth to two well-bred pups, but owing to distemper both died.

Craig told Leverich that the pups were his if he, Leverich, would drive with Amboy and get them. He forgot, (of course intentionally,) to say that the brutes were dead, and give a note to Leverich for Campbell to give the bearer the pups.

Leverich paid $3 for the rig, paid a colored man to go with him, visited several bonifaces, bought two $1 chains from a hardware store, to chain the dogs up, and when he arrived at Campbell's two dead dogs met his gaze.

He said nothing, but on the way home he seemed to take grim satisfaction in dealing out long oats to the horse. He says he will get even with Craig if it takes ten years to do it.—New Brunswick Fredonian.

SOCIAL & PERSONAL

Mr. Edward Hooly of West Seventh street is convalescent from his recent illness.

The family of Mr. E. Woltmann have returned to their home in this city after Summering in Europe.

Mr. Ferdinand Ruttman of this city sailed for Europe Saturday per the steamer "Spaarndam."

Dr. Frank L. Wells of West Fourth street is expected home to-morrow on the steamer "Britannic" from a trip to Europe.

Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Penton and family of Rockview avenue started to-day for Tarrytown, N. Y. They will be gone about two weeks.

Mr. Jacobus and family and Miss Patterson have given up their residence on East Front street and have removed to Boston, where they will hereafter reside.

John C. Emery (now of Arkansas Harbor, Texas) and Miss Mary Vieth Henderson of Albion, Nebraska, were married at Plainfield last week. — Somerville Messenger.

Mrs. Albert Williams, wife of Mr. Albert Williams of Somerset street, North Plainfield, died in New York Monday after a short illness with pneumonia. The funeral took place to-day.

Miss May Ackerman, daughter of Mrs. Harry Ackerman of West Seventh street, entertained about seventy-five of her friends Tuesday evening. Dancing was one of the features of the evening's entertainment.

A pretty home wedding took place at the residence of the bride in New Haven, Conn., last evening, when Mr. Joseph C. Allen, one of our popular Plainfield merchants and Miss Edith A. Redcliffe were united in marriage. After their wedding tour Mr. and Mrs. Allen will reside in North Plainfield.

REALLY!—HOW SURPRISING.

What a "Social Favorite, etc.," Elston Was?

A New York paper of this date, proba*bly the victim of a nimble witted cor*respondent, has a vividly unreal account of the robbery of Mr. O. M. Dunham's store, the real facts of which, Plainfield residents, through THE NEWS, are, of course, familiar with.

The article mentioned contains paragraphs like this:

The arrest of Elston has caused tremendous excitement in the dull little village of Plainfield. It is the sensation of a decade. Elston is a member of the well W. W. Elston & Son, No. 44 West Front street, house furnishers, and one of the brilliant luminaries of the town. His sister was the bride of Chandler Dunham and was, owing to Elston's knowledge of the locality, easy of access, and also like this.

Elston was taken into partnership by his father, W. W. Elston, a wealthy farmer of Ten Mile Run, a few months ago. He has been very popular and an esteemed member of the community. Bright, witty and entertaining, he easily took front rank in the social coterie which dominated "the select" circles of Plainfield.

How regrettable it is that the "dull little village" of Plainfield did not appreciate this—nouenity.

How to Handle a Gun.

1. Empty or loaded, never point a gun toward yourself or any other person.

2. When about to carry your gun at the half-cock. If in cover, let your hand shield the hammer from whipping twigs.

3. When riding from one shooting ground to another, or whenever you have your gun in any conveyance, remove the cartridges, if a breech-loader it being so easy to replace them. If a muzzle-loader remove the caps, brush off the nipples and place a wad on nipple, letting down the hammer on wads.

4. Never draw a gun toward you by the barrels.

5. More care is necessary in the use of a gun in a boat than elsewhere.

6. Always clean your gun thoroughly as soon as you return from a day's sport.

—The Reception Committee of the Y. M. C. A. will meet this evening at eight o'clock. A full attendance is desired.

I have recommended Dr. David Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" to many in Shelton and Birmingham, and I have yet to find one who has not been benefited by it.—C. L. Sawyer, Birmingham, Conn.—ADV.

TWO TRAINS COLLIDED.

No One Injured But Travel Considerably Delayed.

NEW YORK, Sept. 24th (Special.)—A collision between a passenger and freight train on the Montclair and Watsessing Railroad occurred this morning. No one was injured but travel was considerably delayed. The passenger train was running very slow at the time.

A PRISONER SUICIDES.

Arrested for Intoxication John Doe Hangs Himself in his Cell.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Sept. 24, (Special.)—Yesterday afternoon a man who gave his name as John Doe was arrested by the police for intoxication.

He was taken to a cell. This morning he was found hanging by a silk handkerchief from the cell-door. He was dead.

TRAINS IN COLLISION.

Six Men Killed and Seven Seriously Injured.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Sept. 24th. (Special.)—In a collison on the Pittsburg and Western Railroad this morning six men were instantly killed, and seven seriously injured.

THE USE OF PILLOWS.

Why it is Necessary and How it Should be Done.

[From Youth's Companion.]

No mere matter of habit is the use of a pillow. It has a physiological basis. We sleep, for the most part, on the side, and without a pillow the head would be uncomfortable and harmfully lower than the body. It will be remembered that Jacob, when fleeing from Esau, took a stone for a pillow. He needed something for the purpose, and nothing better than a stone presented itself. Such practices are common in Africa at the present day.

Some people rest the neck instead of *the head on hard pillows. In African ex*traordinary headgears make this practice necessary, and many a civilized woman has been compelled by a somewhat similar coiffure to forego both the pillow and the resultant posture.

THEIR PROPER THICKNESS.

A consideration of the physiological reason for pillows will suggest their proper thickness. They should merely bring the head to the natural level. Some pillows are much too thick. By bending the neck unduly, they interfere with the outflow of the venous blood from the head. The pillow that just fills up the space above shoulder best suits its end.

Again, pillows of down are objectionable. While they furnish the needed support for the head, they are too heating, as they have a remarkable capacity for holding and accumulating heat.

In should be remembered that more blood, and a more free blood, goes to the head than to any other part of the body. Head-heating pillows are against the wholesome principle that "keep the feet warm, but the head cool." There is nothing better than the hair pillow.

Further, the pillow is for the head, not for the shoulders. To rest the shoulders on the pillow defeats the very end for which it is used.

Finally, special care should be taken of infants in this matter. We have seen their heads sunken deep in the softest and thickest of pillows, and their faces, as a natural consequence, covered with great beads of perspiration. It is no wonder that children so treated die.

Special Trains and Reduced Rates to the Interstate Fair at Trenton via Pennsylvania Railroad.

The great Interstate Fair will be held at Trenton, N. J., on September 28th, 29th, 30th, October 1st and 2d. There will be special trains, at reduced rates, each day after such a phenomenal year, and all that pertains to art and ingenuity, for which $30,000 in cash premiums are offered. The races and speed contests for liberal purses will also draw a large attendance. The Pennsylvania Railroad will sell reduced-rate tickets from all stations on the united railroads of New Jersey Division, including coupon of admission, and in addition to regular trains will run special trains to the fair grounds. Notice of special train time from various stations will be given in a day or two.

Officers Elected.

At the annual meeting of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union the following officers were elected:

President—Mrs. M. D. Tomlinson.

EDITORIAL NOTES

At an ax contention in Japan a sign was posted up for the benefit of English visitors, which read, "No visitor who is mad or intoxicated is allowed to enter in." The Japs are right. It is a good plan not to allow anybody who is mad to get into a shop.

In case of war between Russia and England not a little of the conflict would probably be transferred to the region opposite Alaska, on the northwest coast of America. Already in the collision that has taken place between seal poachers from Victoria and a Russian man-of-war one of the Canadians was killed, while another sea poaching schooner was captured boldly. The crew of the schooner had fired on the Russians.

The Mexican congress opened on the birthday of President Diaz, and the double occasion was celebrated by a sumptuous banquet, at which the nicknames of many of the Mexican cities were present. Interest was heightened by the fact that many of these names are Indians of the blue blood and had never before sat at a table or used knife and fork. They were likewise unacquainted with the white man's trousers and shoes. Instead they appeared in sandals and white drawers, in which long they must have been extremely comfortable, at least.

Now for the Long Walks.

"There is no exercise like walking, and I attribute my present health and vigor to the walking I have done," says Weston, the long-distance pedestrian.

It is now the glorious American autumn. The air is waxing, without being either hot or cold. The sweltering days, that make you curse the fate which forces you to do anything but lie in a hammock and drink lemonade; the bitter, biting days, when you want to do nothing but sit by the fire and pity everybody who cannot do the same, are alike absent. It is midway between them.

Now is the time for the walking clubs. They ought to be in existence in every city, town and neighborhood. Membership ought to be open to both sexes, and the only conditions necessary to join them should be good morals, good manners and good legs. Walks of thirty miles should be nothing, though it is well to begin with three to five miles for those unaccustomed to the exercise. Members of one pedestrian club some time ago walked the whole distance from New York to Philadelphia.

In planning excursions places of interest, historic and natural, ought to be made objective points. One or two or three days' journeys can be laid out. Those whose occupation keeps them in doors most of the time will derive great benefit from spending part of Sunday in the walking trip. The walker can study both natural history and human nature. He will learn for the first time how much fun there is in the world.

Theosophy.

Thus Mr. St. Chad Boscowen, the Assyriologist, characterizes theosophy: "This miserable creed without hope, this bottomless pit of platitudes, which is so well fitted to be the propaganda of a charlatan and the soporific consolation of a terrified skeptic." Again it is printed repeatedly that theosophy is dying out, and if it isn't, nobody goes in for it but fools and a few knaves, who, for private gain, gull the fools. But in one form or another theosophy gets soundly kicked constantly, and derided and scorned and spit upon.

Now, it is certain that the great majority of mankind care nothing at all about theosophy, not even enough to ask what it is, but if a few more St. Chad Boscowens and other eminent and wise gentlemen continue to curse it as they are doing at present, people will presently begin to think it is something very bad, and as a consequence will begin to inquire, What is theosophy, anyhow?

Then they will find out that the word theosophy means "divine wisdom." After grubbing down through an amazing lot of rubbish and humbug they will find further that about 1875 a society was organized by the late Mme. Blavatsky with three aims: To promote universal brotherhood; to investigate the hidden powers and possibilities of the human mind, such as hypnotism, thought transference, spiritualism, etc., and finally to encourage the study of ancient Aryan literature. Around this foundation grew up all that is now called so to theosophy.

Whether it is all that is bad, worthless and fraudulent is nothing to the point. We have no concern with what it is or is not. But we wish to say just this: If the writers and thinkers who declare it to be the propaganda of a charlatan wish to make a great tidal wave of theosophy roll over civilization, let them go on and abuse it exactly as they are doing. If they want it to die out let them drop it, say nothing about it. Just as theosophy is abused, so was spiritualism abused, yet it now numbers millions of adherents. So was woman suffrage, so were the abolitionists abused. Nay, to go to the highest and greatest example of all, so was Christianity itself derided and scorned. The Christians excited so much contempt that at last people began to inquire what their doctrine was.

Mem—If you want a doctrine to go, set in and abuse it with all your might.

ROBINSON WON THE DAY!

Chosen President of Pennsylvania's Republican League.

GOVERNOR HILL AT POUGHKEEPSIE

He Pays His Respects to the McKinley Tariff Bill, Talks About World's Fair Matters and Says the New York Democrats Are Confident of Victory.

SCRANTON, Pa., Sept. 24.—The election of Hon. John B. Robinson, of Delaware county, as president of the Republican state league by an overwhelming vote was the climax of the convention in the Scranton armory. The rigid application of the rule excluding all clubs organized since July 16 reduced the representation to 198 clubs with three delegates each. Of this number Robinson received the votes of 141 clubs, Dalzell 42, and Major Warren 13 clubs. The real fight of the convention was in the committee on resolutions, which consisted of nine Robinson delegates and eight Dalzell men.

Chris Magee Protested.

Ex-Chief Justice Gordon demanded admission for forty-five clubs classed by the executive committee as irregular, and after wrestling with the subject several hours the committee decided to submit it to the convention for decision. Mr. Detweiler, of Dauphin county, promptly moved to lay it on the table. Chris Magee protested against such "gag law." The resolution was tabled, however, and then began the nomination of candidates for president of the league. Hon. William C. Moreland, of Allegheny, nominated John Dalzell, of Pittsburg, in an able speech. William Schaeffer, of Delaware county, nominated Hon. John B. Robinson. General Gobin, of Lebanon, nominated Major Everett Warren, of Scranton, and when the election of Robinson was announced on the first ballot there was great enthusiasm.

They Made It Unanimous.

Congressman Dalzell immediately moved to make Robinson's election unanimous, and this was seconded by Major Warren and carried with a hurrah.

Mr. Dalzell then made a ringing speech, in which he accepted the result, scored the Democratic party, praised the McKinley bill and urged Republicans to stand by their ticket. His speech caused much surprise, as it was only last evening that he predicted the defeat of Gregg and Morrison as the result of Senator Quay's alleged despotic treatment of the clubs. Robinson also spoke and praised Dalzell to the skies. The convention then elected three vice presidents—namely, F. J. R. Jones (colored), Philadelphia; W. D. Wallace, of Lawrence, and John C. Carter, of Lancaster. E. H. Randolph, of Pittsburg, was chosen secretary, and Malcom D. Young, of Philadelphia, treasurer. General Beeber, chairman of the committee on platform, submitted the following, which was adopted by the convention:

The Platform of the League.

We most cordially indorse the principles of the Republican party as enunciated in the platform of 1888. We approve of the work of the state convention of the Republican party and indorse the platform formulated thereby on the 18th day of August at the Harrisburg convention. We commend the work of the national administration and the pure, patriotic and able manner in which the foreign affairs of the brilliant foreign policy of that great leader, the secretary of state, Hon. James G. Blaine. His brilliant treatment of the affairs of that department have made the uplifted power and the unequaled prestige of the republic a synonym for strength and stability in all the corners of the world.

Praise for Gregg and Morrison.

In the candidates presented by the Republican party in state convention assembled, we recognize the cavalry leader of the field of Gettysburg, General D. McM. Gregg, of Berks county, and that veteran soldier, Captain John W. Morrison of Allegheny. Their names on the Republican state ticket are assurance that neither the party nor the Republic is ungrateful to the brave men and boys who wore the Union blue in the days when imminent relation threatened the integrity of the nation, and we do hereby pledge them the active and ardent support of the Republican League of Clubs and the assurance that every member does today will redound to his credit and give zealous, unremitting and efficient service for the success of the ticket.

Williamsport has been chosen as the place for holding next year's convention of the league. The convention then adjourned.

Governor Hill Speaks.

POUGHKEEPSIE, Sept. 24.—Governor Hill delivered an agricultural address Wednesday afternoon before 30,000 people at the Dutchess County Agricultural Society's grounds, and last evening he spoke to a large crowd at the Dutchess club. He said, in opening, that he would not open the campaign with a speech, as he had originally intended, but styled his remarks a "political shot or two." He said that the Democratic party was confident of victory this year. It had not been the state but once in nine or ten years on state issues, and the old issue—tariff reform—was the issue today. The speaker denounced the McKinley bill, which he said was framed to take money from the people and to aid monopolies, and which, while it had not ruined the country, had not benefited it. Continuing he said:

Concerning the McKinley Bill.

It has not raised wages and the country is made to suffer from taxation under this very taxation. The Democratic party believes the place for the surplus to be in the pockets of the people, not in the government treasury. [Applause.] The Republicans said a year ago that we could not secure control of the legislature. The result was a Democratic legislature on joint ballot which gave the lowest tax levy in thirty-six years and gave also the shortest legislative session, in seventeen years.

The governor condemned the Republican senate for not passing the bill to redistrict the state after the last census. He pronounced the Republican platform on high license a "delusion and a snare." While the platform declared in favor of local option, the Republican senate at Albany failed two years ago to pass the bill in accordance with their platform. He charged New York's loss of the World's fair to the interference of a faction in the Republican senate with the appointment of the commission by Mayor Grant. "The chief consideration," he said, "was the fear of Hill and his candidate for governor, J. Sloat Fassett, and the candidate cannot escape the responsibility of his act."

The names of Flower and Sheehan were vociferously applauded when mentioned by the governor.

Because His Wife Got a Warrant.

JERSEY CITY, Sept. 24.—John Schneider, aged forty-seven years, a mason, 24 Passaic avenue, had been on a drinking spell for some days, and his wife secured a warrant for his arrest. When she told him that he must go to the police court he hanged himself with a piece of old rope.

WILLIAM L. SCOTT'S FUNERAL.

Thousands of Ex-Congressman Glasgow at His Home.

ERIE, Pa., Sept. 24.—Thousands of people attended the public funeral services late this afternoon of ex-Congressman William L. Scott. Among the well known people present were Governor Pattison and other state officials; President George H. Roberts, Vice President John P. Green, General Manager E. Frank of the Pennsylvania railroad, and President A. J. Cassatt, of the New York, Philadelphia and Norfolk railroad.

Over six thousand men and women viewed the remains last evening as they lay in the old homestead. All classes came to pay a last tribute of respect to the distinguished citizen.

Illness Kept Cleveland Away.

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—Ex-President Cleveland arrived at his town home, 816 Madison avenue, from Buzzard's Bay on Tuesday morning. Since his return to the city Mr. Cleveland has suffered from at attack of rheumatism. His indisposition will prevent his being present today at the funeral of his trusted friend, the late Congressman William L. Scott.

YOUNG SIGEL GOES FREE.

The Famous General's Erring Son Pardoned by the President.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—The president has pardoned Robert Sigel, son of General Franz Sigel, who was sentenced on March 21, 1888, to six years' imprisonment for forging pension certificates. The failing health of the prisoner, who is now confined in the Kings county penitentiary, was the ground for the pardon.

The news of young Sigel's pardon was no surprise, as it was known that a very numerously signed petition for it was sent to the president some months ago, and that it had been favorably considered. The friends of the young man's brave father left nothing undone to secure his release. It is not believed that young Sigel will live long. General Sigel declines to speak about the matter.

A Woman's Tragic Death.

TOTTENVILLE, S. I., Sept. 24.—Mrs. Catherine Herrill and her husband left their home to drive to Bethel cemetery. Mrs. Herrill remained in the buggy while her husband visited the grave of a friend. The horse ran away, throwing Mrs. Herrill out on her head, killing her instantly.

More Rioting in China.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 24.—The steamer Empress of China, which has arrived at Vancouver, brings news of riots at Tchang Sept. 2 and 3. The mission and all foreign property were burned, but no lives were lost. Admiral Belknap immediately sent the Alliance to Tchang.

Garrett After More Delay.

TRENTON, Sept. 24.—Counsel for Robert Garrett has filed pleadings questioning the right of William E. Jewett, the plaintiff in the $3,000,000 suit against Garrett, to bring such suit in a New Jersey court on the ground that Jewett does not reside in New Jersey.

DEAD BY HIS OWN HAND.

Suicide of Ex-Governor Moorehouse, of Missouri.

OUT HIS THROAT WITH A PENKNIFE

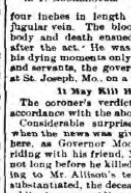
Found Lying in a Pool of Blood Upon the Floor of His Room—He Was Probably Out of His Head When He Committed the Rash Deed.

MARTINVILLE, Mo., Sept. 24.—Ex-Governor A. P. Moorehouse committed suicide here at 9 a. m. Just before the rash deed he was out driving with a friend and displaying considerable nervousness. On returning to his home he retired, but friends who were with him, thinking him ill, placed watchers at his bedside. The watchers left the room for a moment and were in an adjoining room, when they were startled by a gurgling sound issuing from the room occupied by the governor. Rushing into the room they found Governor Moorehouse lying in a pool of blood on the floor, with the blood still spurting from a four inch gash in his throat, inflicted with a penknife, which was clinched in his hand. Medical aid was summoned, but he expired shortly afterward. No cause, as yet, is assigned for the suicide.

Sorrow Throughout the State.

The ex-governor's unhappy end has caused a feeling of profound sorrow and regret, not only in this section, but throughout the whole state. His name was prominently connected with the next governorship of Missouri, and he would undoubtedly have been called on to fill that office had he lived.

The particulars of the suicide, as developed at the coroner's inquest, are substantially as follows: A few days ago ex-Governor Moorehouse, while on one of his farms twelve miles from here, suffered a slight sunstroke. His system was impregnated with malaria and susceptible to fever. He was brought home when symptoms of typhoid malaria developed. He was at times delirious, and while in one of these spells arose from his bed, placed his coat and vest on the floor for a head rest and inserted a penknife into his neck, tearing a gash four inches in length and severing the jugular vein. The blood had covered his body and death ensued in a few minutes after the act. He was attended during his dying moments only by the neighbors and servants, the governor's family being at St. Joseph, Mo., on a visit.



A. P. MOOREHOUSE.

It May Kill His Wife.

The coroner's verdict was rendered in accordance with the above.

Considerable surprise was manifested when the news was given to the public here, as Governor Moorehouse was outriding with his friend, Mr. W. C. Allison, not long before he killed himself. According to Mr. Allison's testimony,which is substantiated, the deceased nearly fainted while in the carriage. He was driven to his residence in all haste and restoratives administered. When his wife and daughter left St. Joseph for their home, accompanied by friends, they had not the slightest idea of the sorrow that awaited them. Mrs. Moorehouse is in poor health and it is feared the sad news may prostrate her beyond recovery.

The Deceased's Career.

Albert P. Moorehouse was born July 11, 1838, in the county of Delaware, O. In 1856 he removed to Nodaway county, Mo. He was a delegate from Missouri to the National Democratic convention at Baltimore in 1872, and at St. Louis in 1876, and was selected a representative to the legislature from Nodaway county in 1876 and 1882. At the general election of 1884 he was elected lieutenant governor. In 1862 he married Miss McFadden, of Lexington, Mo. Upon the death of Governor Marmaduke he became governor, and was sworn into office on Dec. 29, 1887.

The deceased leaves three children living, two daughters and a son. Up to his death he was actively interested in real estate and farming interests, and was connected with every public enterprise in the county since his arrival in Maryville. He was a man of executive ability and great firmness of character and distinguished for his social qualities.

Banqueting the Grant Triplets.

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 24.—Chief Justice C. B. Andrews, of the Connecticut supreme court, presided over a banquet at Torrington last night, given in honor of Matthew, Daniel and William Grant, triplets, born in Torrington seventy years ago. The Grants are cousins of the late General U. S. Grant.

Many Students at Princeton.

PRINCETON, N. J., Sept. 24.—The freshman fall examinations at Princeton college were concluded yesterday. The class will number about 325 men, the largest on record in the history of the college. Including the theological men, the total membership of students will reach 1,000.

Against the Prohibitionists.

JERSEY CITY, Sept. 24.—The decision in the case brought by the Prohibitionists to test the constitutionality of the new ballot reform law will be rendered against them. Judge McGrath will formally give his decision Friday. He has already announced, however, how he will decide.

Boxer Haley Dead.

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—James Haley, the lightweight boxer, died at his home, the Long Island hotel, on Front street, from blood poisoning, induced by contact of his fist with the teeth of an unknown stranger who insulted Haley's wife on the night of Sept. 12.

Young Mitchell Wins.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 24.—"Young Mitchell" (Peter Herget) and "Reddy" Gallagher, of Cleveland, fought to a finish under Marquis of Queensberry rules at the Occidental Athletic club last evening for $5,000, $750 of which went to the defeated man. Mitchell won in the thirteenth round. His blows on Gallagher's head did the business. Gallagher was knocked out. His face was badly disfigured at the end of the fight, while Mitchell was scarcely bruised.

English Cricketers Arrive.

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—The amateur cricket team, better known as the "Gentlemen of England," arrived yesterday on the City of New York. They were received by a delegation of American cricketers at the pier. The team is managed by Lord Hawke. The first games which they will play will be with Philadelphia amateurs on Sept. 25, 26 and 28.

THE SEARLES STRUGGLE.

Widow Hopkins' Little $7,500,000 Gift to Her Lover.

MILLIONS BEFORE THE MARRIAGE.

Edward F. Searles Had the Most of Her Money in His Hands Before the Minister Was Called In—Spiritualistic Manifestations for Amusement Only.

SALEM, Mass., Sept. 24.—Two important points were brought out in the Searles will contest during the day. They were, first, the formation of a corporation or a trust whereby the control of the Southern Pacific railway was to be retained in the possession of the present interests, and second, as bearing upon the question of Searles' alleged undue influence over his aged wife, the fact that table tipping, Christian science and similar aids to credulity were introduced into the household soon after the marriage. To say that these developments caused a sensation in the crowded courtroom would be a very conservative statement. It was also evident that Mr. Searles, who was on the stand all day, was disconcerted and depressed.

Searles on the Stand.

From the beginning to the end of the session he was subjected to a merciless lot of questions. Mr. Searles' counsel, Colonel Solomon Lincoln, began proceedings by asking that the most important part of the marriage contract, the annulment, be read to the court. He said that had been omitted. Mr. Burley then read it and it appeared that the the contract was annulled by mutual consent on July 16, 1890, less than a year after its signature, but on the same date as the execution of the will now in dispute.

Their Wedding Journey.

Mr Searles resumed the stand and was questioned about his wedding trip. He said he and his wife went to Europe Nov. 29, 1887, on a wedding tour. Previous to starting on the wedding tour Mrs. Searles secured the funds, about $100,000. The trip was for six months and included witness, his wife, a lady's maid, Martha Epling, and Rev. Dr. Clapp, his wife and daughter. Then Lawyer Burley sprung the names of Spiritualist Dr. Slade and Christian Scientist Bolles upon the witness, and asked if these gentlemen accompanied him on his wedding journey.

"No," said the witness, "we did not meet any clairvoyants on our trip nor after our trip, nor did we meet a Dr. Bolles on that trip, but later I think he called himself a Christian scientist. I don't think he pretends a skill in curing diseases. I met him at Great Barrington, where he made a social call."

Spiritualistic Manifestations.

"Do you recollect any spiritualist sittings by Mr. Bolles or his wife, or both of them?"

"No, sir, I do not. There was a suggestion, I recollect, by some one of trying to tip the tables. I don't recollect at whose suggestion. It was tried a few times as a matter of amusement only.

Searles' Alleged Scheming.

The counsel for the disinherited son then directed their energies to showing that even before the widow of Mark Hopkins married the decorator of her house he was intriguing to get control of New York lands who are executors of her will, Thomas E. Stillman and Thomas H. Hubbard, whose business it was to secure from her a power of attorney giving them control of her vast estates and that this authority was used while she was lying on her deathbed and within forty-eight hours of her death to dispose of her property, so that there would be no possibility of conveying it to her son.

The Copartnership Affair.

Mr. Burley asked: "Do you claim any title to any property of Mrs. Hopkins except under the will now before the court for probate?"

Witness replied: "I suppose my interest in the copartnership would antedate the will. After my marriage to Mrs. Hopkins several tracts of lands were transferred to me by my wife. The property included the estate and palace in Great Barrington and the Hopkins mansion and land in San Francisco." Witness said that he understood that the marriage contract gave him the property named, as well as other valuable interests. The suggestion of a marriage contract was made by Mrs. Hopkins.

The details of the Searles, Stillman and Hubbard copartnership proved a very interesting feature, especially when it was admitted by Searles that he had the handling of over $500,000 a year to do with as he pleased. The assets of the copartnership must be divided so that Mr. and Mrs. Searles received each 45 per cent., and Stillman and Hubbard each 5 per cent. It was estimated that the first two should every year receive $202,000 each, and the other two $22,000 each. Whenever the assets did not amount to so much sums property should be sold, so as to make up the amount. Mr. and Mrs. Searles were not to spend any time on the business, but Hubbard and Stillman should, if necessary, spend all their time on the work of the copartnership. All the property of Mrs. Searles was turned over to the copartnership.

Searles Handled the Cash.

Searles admitted that he did as he liked with both his own and his wife's share of the copartnership profits, which amounted to nearly $500,000. He refused to produce his check books, and Burley accused him of trying to suppress the truth. Just before the court adjourned the most interesting feature was developed. A document was unearthed showing that Mrs. Hopkins had been led to turn over $15,000,000 worth of securities to, the new copartnership concern, and it was the income from these securities which supplied Mr. Searles with more than $500,000 per annum, and gave $25,000 annually to Messrs. Stillman & Hubbard.

Gave Him $7,500,000 Before Marriage.

Searles said he did not remember when his wife executed the document. It was also shown that before she married him Mrs. Hopkins turned over to Searles $7,500,000 as a gift. Searles testified that he thought she was giving him half her estate.

"Did you ever tell it where it was liable to reach the ears of Mr. Timothy Hopkins?" he was asked.

"I don't think that I did."

"He was there at Methuen and you never told him that his mother had been giving you millions of her property?"

"No, sir," with emphasis.

Mr. Searles had no excuse to offer for his neglect to inform young Mr. Hopkins.

Bridgeport's Police Fight.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Sept. 24.—The police department is in a state of demoralization. Captain Pinkerman, who has been ordered to take command of the force, was ejected from the chief's chair by Chief Rylands. The common council recently abolished the office of chief of police, but Rylands will not surrender the office. Patrolmen have been ordered by one of the police board not to obey Rylands. Excitement is high, but thus far no violence has been offered against the old chief.

Editor Watterson's Father Dying.

LOUISVILLE, Sept. 24.—Harvey Watterson, the venerable father of the editor of The Courier-Journal, is lying at the point of death in this city. He is the sole survivor of the Twenty-sixth congress and the last of the close personal friends of General Jackson, who was his godfather. During the days of sectional conflict he was a strong advocate of the Union.

President Diaz's Shrewd Move.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Sept. 24.—A large quantity of five pesos is being rushed through here for Mexico before the new Mexican tariff goes into operation Nov. 1. The new tariff practically bars out American meats. It is considered a shrewd move of President Diaz to give the Mexican reciprocity commission vantage ground in its dealings with the United States.

A Chinaman Attempts Suicide.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 24.—Lee Bo, a Chinaman, aged forty, attempted suicide by cutting his throat with a razor at his laundry. He will die. This is said to be the first case of a Chinaman attempting to kill himself in this country. Lee Bo has been very melancholy because he could not get his wife here, and was unable to go to her in China.

WOMAN'S HOME.

CHILDREN'S TEETH.

Cleanliness Should Be Inculcated as Soon as the Teeth Appear.

"Let good digestion wait on appetite and health on both," says Shakespeare. Health will fail to "wait" on either if parents allow their own and their children's teeth "to become a mass of decay" at an early age.

There is no fine point on which people are so careless as the proper care of children's first teeth, and those of the second set that erupt between the fifth and seventh years of age.

There is no one condition that tends in a greater degree to produce good health and vigorous growth of the body than a good second set of teeth.

People do not relish the idea of being told they are careless or worse, but it would seem that a subject of such vital importance would receive the most careful attention.

Incalculable harm is done to both the health of a child and to the integrity of the second set of teeth, in allowing the temporary teeth to become decayed and abscessed, carrying daily needless suffering and frequently indigestion and all its accumulated evils.

The number of children who have decayed teeth, and in many cases a part of the first set gone and the second set badly broken down, is too great.

"Neglect is the mental enemy of the teeth." If the first set of teeth is lost before the proper time the second set suffers much from their loss, and in some cases does not erupt at all. If decayed, the first should be filled with plastic filling material and let remain until their places are ready to be taken by the second teeth.

But a great deal of this could be accomplished by keeping the teeth brushed and cleaned. The patient should be taught to brush his own teeth and use the pick after every meal. It will do the parent no harm to practice the lesson occasionally himself.

In this manner one can save more teeth, using no instrument but the brush and pick (and, by the way, one should use nothing but a quill toothpick) and silk thread, than all the dentists can by performing their usual dental operations.

It must not be inferred that we can, by any means, always or in every case avoid the necessity of filling children's teeth. But when cared for properly, the defect would be detected at so early a stage that the operation for repair (filling) would be painless, not tedious, involving but little expense, and its durability beyond question.

If not filled then, while decaying, the mouth will be foul and unhealthy, the lips and tongue will be irritated, often severely, by the rough and ragged edge presented. The decay will be likely to reach the pulp, causing excruciating pain, the death and premature loss of the tooth, and lasting injury to the jaws and position of the incoming set.

The child will not and cannot chew on sore gums and teeth. The food will be put down and out of the way as soon as possible without the proper preparation of it for the stomach, and the result is early dyspepsia with its train of horrors. The one point of paramount importance which I wish to urge is, that the teeth should be kept clean from their first appearance through the gums, no matter how young the child may be, even if born with teeth as some are.

They should be kept as scrupulously clean as the child's eyes or the ears, for they will suffer more from neglect, even though milk be the only food for the younger years. The brush is the only thing that will accomplish this.—Healthy Home.

Women Who Should Be Pitied.

How can a woman make herself over so as not to take things hard? I don't refer to the easy going women, who come into life well buttered, like hot biscuit, and with a dab of honey to help 'em along. I refer to nervous, eager, impulsive women, whose blood has pepper in it, and whom floating nerves with mustard and caper sauce instead of honey. How can such a woman train herself to a serene poise of mind wherein the besetting cares of life affect her not, and shadows affect the hills over which they fly? There's many and many a woman today whom her neighbors call a scold or a slattern, or all sorts of names, whose life has gone to wreck on the rocks just through her fatal facility to take things hard.

The frets and worriments of life are the snags in the channel that make dreary wreck of peace and comfort. From the time of teeth cutting, when no other baby ever had so perilous a time, down to the welcome hour when death stands knocking at the outer gate, these women always have a hard time of it. A disappointment that to a less sensitive nature seems but a transient pang, to them brings hopeless despair. A domestic tiff means eternal disruption. An ordinary headache is congestion; a summer shower brings the deluge and every cloud foretells a tempest. These unfortunates find no rest and yield none. They are always vibrating like the chords of a harp rudely smitten. They are stabbed a dozen times a day by idle words that were not meant to wound.

They are slighted and insulted and snubbed, according to their morbid notion, when nobody ever intended to molest them. They go through life like lobster without its shell. Their skin is thinner than rice paper; their heart is pinned upon their sleeve. Every breeze buffets them, every task drives them with a whip of many thongs, every vulture of care has its beak in their heart, and, I think, at last the cool touch of death upon their brow must be like the soft hand of a mother upon the fevered forehead that finds no surcease from pain's delirium.—Chicago Herald.

Hysterics.

Hysterics are, fortunately, not in the least fashionable. A young lady who so far forgets herself as to sob unctuously in public is by no means an "interesting object," as she might have been considered in a more sentimental age. Still, if any one is so misguided as to succumb to a nervous attack, it is well for bystanders to remember that only heroic remedies will be of use.

A company of young people were one evening trying a foolish game of "mesmerism," endeavoring to influence one another to do stated things, when an excitable girl suddenly began to laugh and cry in rather an alarming manner. Her companions, quite distracted, were calmly trying to convince her that, when the influence of the mesmerist is at an end, no one is compelled to do anything, and of course performed a demonstration.

"Letting she said sternly to the weeping girl, "stop that noise this minute, and tell me what you mean by stopping on mesmerized people and spoiling my carpet."

The girl stopped crying at once, and stooping in confusion began removing the bits of candy from the floor. A new direction had been given to her thoughts, and in a few minutes she was calm enough to smile at the severity with which she had been treated.

On another occasion, a little girl incessantly applied the same sort of remedy. Her aunt, who was recovering from a long illness, one day became hysterical, and the child, dancing into the room, stopped, amazed at her excitement. In another minute she saw a far more interesting sight.

"Oh, auntie," she cried, "Jip has got your pretty lace handkerchief under the sofa, and he's chewed it and chewed it!"

"Get it from him!" cried the sufferer, forgetting to weep. "Crawl under and drag the little rascal out!" And, in bemoaning the wreck and lecturing Jip she became once more a rational being.

Hysterics are not shams, and yet they are largely under the control of the will.—Youth's Companion.

Young Girls on Horseback.

We can look upon the declaration of Young America for sport with pride and gratification, as it argues well for the generation to come, but we should not lose sight of the fact that its benefits may be more than counterbalanced by injudiciously forcing these tastes. That there is danger of this is shown by the tendency to put girls on horseback at an age much too tender to have other than harmful results. It is marvelous that a mother who is usually most careful in guarding her child's safety should allow her little one to incur the risks attendant upon riding (which are great enough for a person endowed with strength, judgment and decision) without thought of the dangers she is exposed to at the time or what may be the evil effects in the future.

Surely parents do not realize what the results may be, or they would never trust a girl of eight years or thereabout to the mercy of a horse, and at his mercy she is bound to be. No child of that age or several years older has strength sufficient even to manage an unruly pony, which, having once discovered his power, is pretty sure to take advantage of it at every opportunity. Even if no accidents occur, the knowledge of her helplessness may so frighten the child that she will never recover from her timidity. It is nonsense to say she will outgrow it; early impressions are never entirely eradicated, and should she in after life appear to regain her courage, at a critical moment it will desert her, and early recollections reassert themselves.—Harper's Bazar

The Millionaire's Daughter at School.

Even in schools that refuse to accept girls unless there is a reasonable chance of their getting through the year, it is not unusual for one-third to be entered by their parents with the warning that their daughters are delicate and will need special nursing and watching—a warning in all probability followed by the request that they shall not be "bothered with mathematics." These weakly ones, if their mothers leave them alone, and if they themselves become interested in their work, by dint of three or four extra hours for rest and exercise, manage to hold out through the year, and frequently end it in long health. But, unless these two conditions are fulfilled they often fall by the way.

Hereditary tendencies, unknown both of sensible generally follow soon upon the realization that school means work. A hard lesson to be mastered lays a girl low with a headache or dissolves her in floods of tears. Sometimes indeed, during the first part of the year, are of daily down fall. Tears fasten knotty problems, tears press the refusal to allow bones of easily learn their declensions, tears overthrow are insisted upon and short fur capes are declared insufficient covering for sure weather. Moreover, the fun runs a bit too high, or a mischievous boy tap on the window in the evening, or a mouse suddenly appear, and only a dose of plain English and the valerian bottle prevents an epidemic of hysterics.—Charlotte W Porter in Forum.

A Radical Woman Doctor.

Dr. Gertrude B. Kelly is one of the radicals of New York. Though of the same name, she is not related to the Pennsylvania congressman's daughter, with whose she differs in opinion as widely as both do from their conventional sisters. Dr. Kelly's shingle hangs out at 226 East Seventeenth street. She is physician to the Working Girls' clubs and the Working Girls' Benevolent society. Her house is filled with rare engravings and books of history and political economy. To look at this sweet faced, blue eyed little body, with soft, curly brown hair, drawn loosely back from a low, broad forehead, no one would dream of her extreme ideas. A little club of Russians and Germans meet in her parlors each Wednesday evening in summer and each Sunday in winter. Dr. Kelly was born in Tipperary, Ireland, less than thirty years ago. Her parents were both school teachers. They came to this country when she was quite young. She received her early education in New York and was graduated from the Woman's Medical college of the New York infirmary.—New York World.

The Dog versus Baby.

The meanest and the smallest cur stands no chance with an infant, to which all womankind seems to respond. But, strangely enough, a new mother who is expected to be, and has a right to be, silly about her child, is far less silly than she would have been in maidenhood if she had run to poodles and the like. She would not so foolie the dearest baby in public, would not so babble delightful nonsense in its attentive ear, as she would have done with the canine glamour in her eyes, and the canine mania in her brain.

A mother feels, despite her absorbing love in and consecration to her babe, that she should soothe her raptures to the household, to the private circle, and not bore and annoy unsympathetic strangers with them. Not so the dog worshiper. She flaunts her disorder in everybody's face; forces it on universal attention. Is not this the best evidence that her worship is a species of disease? Unless it were so, would or could sympathy with the brute outweigh and outdo sympathy with human?—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A Cause of Bad Air in Houses.

A few of the causes which contribute to cold and uncomfortable houses is the imperfect arrest of dampness from the soil. The only way of securing a healthful house is to cut it off as much as possible from the soil on which it stands. Ideally, one may imagine a house standing on scilts or piers, having a free current of air under and all round, so that the floor, but this would be inadmissible in ordinary building arrangements.

The next best thing is to obtain a well drained site, that is, where the soil is good, a sufficient air space between the ground and the floor, this space being well ventilated and the ground covered with concrete or asphalt. Many houses have no such precautions, and the floors are laid below the floor, but it is generally a rough and unlevelled surface of rubbish, with air passages so scantily introduced, and often clogged up, that the air is in a state of stagnation, and the emanations from the soil are sucked up into the house by the warmth and floor, particularly if hot air furnaces are used.

The moisture in the soil may bring a great deal of impure air into the house, for ground air is not nearly so pure as the air above the ground. To prevent the ingress of this ground air a perfect asphalt pavement on the cellar bottom is often resorted to with success.—Sanitary News.

The Successful Woman.

The woman who succeeds is the popular woman—the woman who has hosts of acquaintances and who does not hesitate to ask a favor of them or to do one. She cultivates her friends; she is always glad to see them, and has a pleasant smile and something particularly nice to say to each one. The popular woman never says disagreeable things of or to anybody, no matter how strong the temptation may be. If she has occasion to censure she keeps quiet. She repeats to her friends all the nice things she has heard of them; the disagreeable stories are left in oblivion.

The successful woman is always thoughtful of others. She likes to enjoy herself and wants every one else to do the same; therefore, if is in her power to bring about this desired result she does so. This is the woman that is invited everywhere. If a social gathering is lacking in one member, she is the one that is always thought of to fill the vacant place in preference to some one who is, perhaps, far more brilliant or beautiful. The women like her; the men admire her, and her chances of success in any undertaking are tenfold better than those of a more quiet, thoughtful woman of much greater force of character and more real sterling worth.—New York Advertiser.

A Traveling Satchel.

A woman, who has evidently traveled and understands how inconvenient are the valises which jumble up everything and leave one's belongings in a general state of mix, has thought of a kind of traveling satchel which is large enough to hold every imaginable toilet requisite, besides writing materials, a sewing basket and a jewel case. In the center there is a good, square space for clothes. All of the things mentioned are simply provided with small compartments, each one made expressly for some individual use. Brushes, ink bottle, matches and even the curling tongs heater have their appropriate places.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Good Disinfectant.

Great need is often felt of a good, reliable disinfectant in such quantities that the amount of the purchase money precludes its use. A can of permanganate of potash, which may be obtained of any drug gist, will make a bucketful of as good a deodorizer and disinfectant as can be obtained. It only needs to be dissolved in water, and can be kept in crystals until it be needed. This solution is sold in bottles at a large price in England under a registered name, and has an enviable and well merited reputation.—New York Recorder.

Baked Potatoes.

The baked potato is more easily digested than the boiled, because the starch is partly converted into dextrine by the high heat of the oven. The sweetness of the baked potato is an evidence of this. If, however, baked too long, or allowed to stand after it is done till cool, the starch becomes waxy and loses its delicious quality. The invalid and the dyspeptic should eat baked potatoes rather than those prepared in any other way.—Herald of Health.

Courtship.

A lover should be treated with the same gentleness as a new glove. The young lady should pull on with the utmost tenderness at first, only making the smallest advance at a time, till she gradually gains upon him and twists him ultimately round her little finger, whereas the young lady who is hasty and in too great a hurry will never get a lover to take her hand, but be left with nothing but her finger ends.—New York Ledger.

The Need of a Book on Sickness.

Some time in life it happens to most women to be brought face to face with sickness, and often with little of that knowledge at such a time so important and necessary. The skilled doctor and his valuable assistant, the trained nurse, may for various reasons not be at hand, and then it is that some standard work on nursing becomes the most helpful and interesting book in one's library.—New York Post.

To Clean Paint.

To clean paint, some housekeepers smear a piece of flannel in common whiting mixed to the consistency of paste in warm water, and with this they rub the surface to be cleaned, going over it briskly and washing off with pure soft water. It is claimed that grease spots will in this way be almost instantly removed, while the paint will retain its brilliancy and beauty unimpaired.—Detroit Free Press.

Mrs. Cruger (Julien Gordon), of New York, is described as "the conventional woman of high society." She is a woman of aristocratic beauty, with a languid manner and an apparent disposition to take life easily. Nevertheless, she accomplishes a great deal of hard literary work in a short time when the spirit moves.

Sweden boasts but one woman physician, who, however, enjoys a large practice in Stockholm. It takes nine years to qualify, which may account for the small advantage taken of the right to practice, granted nearly twenty years ago.

Do not fill lamps to the top, and do not burn them until they are entirely empty, for fear of an explosion. Do not keep them on the chimney-piece or in a very warm place, lest the gas expand with heat and thus cause explosion.

When whalebones have become bent, they may be used again by first soaking them in tepid water for a few hours and then drying them.

When washing fine white flannels add a tablespoonful of pulverized borax to a pailful of water. This will keep them soft and white.

For a simple tea, jam sandwiches, thin, dainty and devoid of crust, piled lightly on a plate, with a spread napkin, are a relished sweet.

STYLES FOR ELDERLY LADIES.

How to Be Well Dressed, Though Middle Aged and Even Obese.

When figure have lost their youth and graceful lines, and silver threads appear among the tresses, it is a mistake to adapt styles designed for the young to those of riper years. The best plan is to select from among the fashions those which meet the difficulty best, and to reconstruct on the necessary grounds. Black is always safe, but there are many colors which are becoming to skins and colorings of middle life. Most reds suit fair women as well as brunettes past their prime, but reseda and greens generally are only suited to the latter. The present deep, full grass green now worn in velvet may safely be chosen by almost any complexion, and elderly women should bear in mind that rich materials are suited to them; that velvets, plain and brocaded, silks of the best texture, lend dignity to age, and that in mantles as well as dresses splendor of detail should not be ignored.

Colored Mendacity.

There was a large boiler of scalding water over a fire in the yard and several black imps playing near it. Suddenly a shrill voice was heard from inside the shanty:

"You George Washington, keep away from dat ar biler. D'rectly you is gwine ter upset de biler an' scald yo' se'f to def, an' w'en you is, you'll be de last one for to say, 'Twasn't me, mammy.'"—Texas Siftings.

"The dickens has ordered my little girl pure fresh milk. What do you charge a quart?"

Farmer—Ten cents.

"Very well. I'll bring her here every day so she can get it just from the cow."

"Oh, in that case it will be twenty cents a quart."—Philadelphia Times.

TALK OF THE TOWN

—The South Plainfield Gun Club enjoyed a "shoot" on their grounds at that place last Wednesday.

—"C. A. L" at Music Hall last night had a large audience, and was just what it was represented to be—a variety show, very witty and very laughable, and apparently very much enjoyed by all.

—A number of the members of the defunct Middlesex Gun Club are holding a "shoot" this afternoon in the vicinity of Mt. Pleasant. Mr. John Rothaker of Philadelphia, who is an expert "shot" arrived here this morning and will be entertained by Messrs. Chas. Smith and Thos. H. Keller. Mr. Rothaker will, it is thought carry off the honors of the day as far as good shooting is concerned.

—The Music Hall management announce as the attraction for next Thursday night the great dramatic queen, Janauschek, a very strong company of artists, in James M. Martin's new play, "The Harvest Moon," written expressly for her. A dissertation on the great actress' talents is almost superfluous. She has always been a great favorite, and her new departure will only tend to increase the public's desire to see her. The role of Mrs. Oakley affords a great opportunity to exhibit those talents that have placed her in the front rank of English and German stage. The play is a beautiful romantic drama and has achieved success wherever she has produced it. It abounds in pathos and comedy, and the parts are well distributed. No theatregoer should fail to see her and she should be welcomed by a large audience.

—In its November number the Cosmopolitan will publish a series of letters written by Gen. W. T. Sherman to one of his young daughters, between the years 1860 and 1865 and covering most of the important events of the war of secession. These letters present graphic pictures of a great soldier amid some of the stirring scenes in which he was a giant figure, and in them the patriotic spirit of the Federal general is seen to have been most attractively tempered by a strong affection for the Southern people. The fraternal feeling which grows in these letters is in refreshing contrast to the sectional bitterness which characterized the period, and they will constitute an interesting and important contribution to the literature of the war.

Another Will Contest.

This morning another Plainfield will contest was begun before Surrogate Judge Barlow and Judges Jamison and TenEyck at Somerville. The will was that of Archibald Coddington, deceased. It was offered for probate by the executors who are John W. Coddington, Cornelius J. Ackerman and Moor Coddington who were appointed by Craig A. Marsh. The contestant is Hanison Coddington, who is represented by Chas. A. Reed. Hanison receives a smaller share than the others and contests the will on the grounds of alleged undue influence and want of testamentary capacity. The three witnesses to the original will and two witnesses to the codicil were examined when the court adjourned further hearing until next Thursday. Archibald Coddington was the well-known mill owner of North Plainfield who died last Summer at an advanced age. The amount involved is estimated at something less than $10,000.

From Slavery to Ministry.

Mr. Jacob Stryper, of Oberlin College, is in Plainfield. He was born a slave, his 43d year, who is, by his own energy, getting a thorough theological education preparatory to work among his people in the South. He has written a book entitled "From Slavery to Ministry" and by its sale hopes to complete his studies. He is in the last year of the Seminary course. His book cost but 25 cents and is well worth buying. It is a simple, readable production, and shows what education will do for the race. Mr. Stryper is convincing in his city and will probably be around to see you.

As Ungrateful Wretch.

On last Wednesday night a man came to the residence of J. G. Drake, at New Centre, Branchburgh township, and asked for work. He was about 30 years of age and had a light mustache and was crosseyed. He was put to work in the field next morning. Mr. and Mrs. Drake had occasion to go away that day and when they returned they found the fellow gone and also a revolver, a pair of boots and three dollars in money.

A Constable Arrested.

Robert Westrop, of Lyons Farms, the constable who was with the gang that made a raid on Daly's farm, in Linden Township, was arrested yesterday at his home and taken before Justice Rogers who held him to await the action of the Grand Jury. Westrop protested that he had nothing to do with the brutalities that characterized the raid. He secured a bondsman and was released.

To Initiate New Members.

Wetumpka Lodge, 3401, Knights of Honor, will meet Monday evening, Sept. 28, for the purpose of initiating new members. Representatives to the Grand Lodge, and Past Dictators will receive their certificate of good standing.

THE DUCKWORTH CHILDREN.

Mr. Andrews no Longer Guardian. The Surrogate's Order is Reversed.

The guardianship of the Duckworth children was supposed to have been settled when the Somerset County Surrogate, at the instance of counsel for the Knights of Pythias, appointed Mr. Amos Andrews guardian.

Mrs. Keating of Elizabeth, the aunt of the children, however, insisted upon asserting her right to be appointed guardian and took an appeal from the Surrogate. That appeal was argued before the Orphans Court at Somerville, Craig A. Marsh for the aunt claiming that the Somerset Surrogate had no jurisdiction over the children whose legal residence he maintained was in Union county, where the father died, Jackson & Codington argued the case for the Knights and insisted that as the children were in the Children's Home in North Plainfield when the father died, that gave the Somerset Surrogate jurisdiction. Today the Appellate Court sustains the view advocated by Mr. Marsh and reverses the whole proceeding before the Surrogate with costs.

SOCIAL & PERSONAL

Miss Bessie Cain of Grandview avenue is visiting friends in Newark and Waverly Park.

Messrs. Wm. Mullen and John Thrusher of Newark were the guests of Mr. W. V. Miller of West Front street yesterday.

Messrs. Wesley Seabury and George Dennis of Newark were visiting friends and relatives on Jackson avenue, North Plainfield, and in this city, yesterday.

Past Commander Charles R. Stephens of Winfield Scott Post No. 75, G. A. R. has been confined to his home on West Second street for some time past by illness.

Mr. A. H. Dudenhousen of Somerset street, North Plainfield, has been sadly afflicted by the death of his wife whose funeral took place in New York yesterday. Mr. Dudenhousen has the sympathy of a large circle of friends and acquaintances both in this city and New York.

Mr. and Mrs. D. N. Groendyke, and Mrs. J. G. Foster of North Plainfield, Miss Jennie G. Foster, of New York, are spending a few days at Lake Mopacong, after having driven across the country and stopping at Lake Hopatcong, Greenwood Lake and other prominent resorts of northern New Jersey and New York. They will return by easy stages along the Hudson.

Mr. George Wilson and his daughter, Miss Carrie Wilson, of Falling Water, Hamilton county, Tennessee, left this city last evening on the 4.14 Royal Blue Line train for their home after a six weeks' visit with Mr. and Mrs. John C. Gulick of Somerville, North Plainfield. He being a brother to Mrs. Carrie Gulick and Mrs. George O. Baker of Jackson avenue, their names being Carrie and Amelia A. Wilson respectively before marriage. This is the second time only that Mr. Wilson has been North since he enlisted in Company F, 30th Regiment, New Jersey Volunteers, in the late war. While visiting here he attended the Reunion of the 30th Regiment at Somerville, Sept. 3d. The first time he visited here was in 1867, when he made an extended stay with relatives among whom were his father and mother Mr. and Mrs. Joel Wilson of Bound Brook, both of whom have since died. Mr. Wilson seems very much impressed with Plainfield and especially with its delightfully recuperating atmosphere. He will visit here again with his fair daughter in the near future.

In republishing a pleasant notice of Gen. Stirling taken recently from an exchange, The News prefaced it with further information concerning the old friend of his, who has known him for many years. Gen. Stirling has given further information on the subject to a Times reporter, which is intended to correct the information of his friend. "I was appointed an aide-de-camp on Gov. McClellan's staff," said he, "with the rank of Colonel. A little later the Governor appointed me Inspector General of the National Guard and General Inspector of Rifle Practice with the rank of Brigadier-General, and I was so commissioned. That is why I happened to be dubbed General. I was also made Inspector of Cattle under a special act, which act has not been repealed though its duties have been transferred to the State Board of Health which now operates under the act. During the war I was a member of General Canby's staff with the rank of Captain, the General being in command of the division of the West Mississippi. I was not in the Quartermaster's department. My father never was a merchant in Pittsburg or anywhere else." The General further insists that he is not conspicuous in local Democratic politics. We don't wonder that he does not wish to be so considered. His name has been used by Democratic posters as if he were, and judging by some manly utterances we recently heard as emanating from him, we think it would have been better for that party had he been so, during the past two years at least.

He Abused the Horse.

THE NEWS of Monday published an account of the manner in which a colored man from Trenton abused a horse, belonging to a livery man, which he was driving along Front street in the vicinity of Grant avenue Sunday night about eleven o'clock. Policeman Flanagan succeeded in capturing the man and he will be given a trial before City Judge Codington this evening.

ELSTON'S PAST HISTORY

INVESTIGATION THEREOF PROVES INTERESTING.

A Wagon, Chickens, Robe, and General Miscellaneous Thief — Stole Chickens, Cleaned Them and then Sold Them to the Owner.

About two months ago Charles Elston, in company with another young man visited the residence of Mr. John A. Benner, the vender, at Netherwood exchanged wagons with him, Mr. Benner giving Elston two-and-one-half dollars besides another wagon. Mr. Benner used the wagon for several weeks and then disposed of it to Mr. John Mannion of Bound Brook. Yesterday Mr. Mannion hitched one of his horses to the vehicle and drove to the city while passing along Front street he was hailed by a pedestrian who claimed that the vehicle belonged to him. Mr. Mannion explained how he came in possession of it and it has since been learned that the wagon was stolen by Elston and his unknown friend. Elston is the young man who was recently arrested at Bound Brook on the charge of robbing Mr. O. M. Dunham's store. It will be remembered that about $200 worth of jewelry was found in his possession, and that Mr. Dunham identified it as his property. Elston was committed to the county jail at Somerville for five days on the charge of disorderly conduct on cars. Acting Captain of Police Lynch will bring him to this city to-morrow and he will be given a hearing before Justice Nash.

Since Elston's arrest his past history has been freely discussed by people acquainted with it. It appears that he has served a term in the Reform School and that since his release from that institution he has continued his thieving. On one occasion it is alleged that he stole twenty dollars and a gold watch from a man whose home he entered while the inmate was asleep. On another occasion it is said that he stole chickens from a butcher at Scotch Plains, took them home, dressed them and then took them back to the butcher from whom he stole them and sold them to him. He is also charged with kicking robes out of the stage which runs between this city and Scotch Plains and after the stage had proceeded some distance he would go back and get the robes and dispose of them to some person at a sacrifice.

The police think that Elston is the person who has been committing the burglaries in this vicinity of late. Much sympathy is expressed for his wife and family.

STATE NEWS

The Bridgeton Y. M. C. A. has called K. C. Seip, Assistant Secretary of the Newark Association, to be General Secretaryship.

The Burlington county Grand Jury ignored the bill against Mrs. Sarah J. Willard of Beverly Beach, who was charged with malpractice.

Dr. Caspar Wistar Hodge, Professor of New Testament Literature and Exegesis in Princeton Theological Seminary, is dying of cancer in the throat.

John Schneider, 46 years old, of Jersey City, committed suicide yesterday morning by hanging himself. He performed death to appearing before a justice of the peace on a charge of beating his wife.

No trace has yet been found of little Annie Johnson of Newark, who was lately abducted by her mother and two men on Tuesday while on her way to school. Mr. Johnson, the father, went to Brooklyn recently in the hope of finding his daughter, to whom he is deeply attached.

The Presbytery of West Jersey will hold its regular annual meeting in the West Church, Bridgeton, commencing Tuesday evening, September 29. There is considerable business of importance to transact, including the election of Trustees for the West Jersey Academy.

The strike of the glass factory boys at Millville ended yesterday, when work was fully resumed in all the glass factories of Whitall, Tatum & Co. at South Millville and Glasstown.

The trial of John Boyce at Mount Holly for the murder of Mrs. Charles Burlington has been set down for October 5. This murder occurred on a Sunday night, Mrs. Charles Burlington, it is said, gave cigarettes, when, it is alleged, he struck her in the head, death resulting a short time afterward.

Margaret MacCormack was found dead on the floor of her apartments in a tenement house, Bloomfield avenue, Bloomfield, yesterday. "Aunt Peggy," as she was familiarly called, it is said, was the oldest woman in the township and was aged 90 years.

The Somerset County Bible Society held its seventy-fourth annual meeting at Pluckemin on Tuesday. The following officers were elected: President, Rev. John F. Hanlin; Vice-Presidents, Rev. J. L. McNair; Treasurer, Rev. J. F. Searle; Corresponding Secretary, John Perrinbuyzen; Depository, James Gaston.

In the test case brought by the Prohibition party through S. B. Dorsey to test the constitutionality of the new Ballot Reform law, Judge McGrath in Jersey City yesterday sustained the act. Mr. Ransom purposely violated a provision of the act and then had suit brought against himself to cover the question. The trial was in the District Court only, and Judge McGrath's ruling will be appealed from.

The First Assembly District Republican Committee of Hudson county, comprising Bayonne and several Jersey City precincts, completed its organization Tuesday night in Bayonne. Two leading committees were appointed, composed of the following: Executive, C. H. Hosford, chairman; Schmidt, C. Magee, J. J. W. Simonson, G. Dick; finance, H. C. Petty, chairman; F. J. Schmidt, J. Farradine, E. E. Stinson, L. Schaffer. Both parties are expected to concede the nomination for Assemblyman to Bayonne. The district is Democratic since it was redistricted.

—The Gormans of New York and the Crokers of this city will cross bats in a game of ball to-morrow afternoon.

EX-PRISONERS OF WAR MEET.

The Annual Convention of the New Jersey Association at Morristown.

The Northern New Jersey Union ex-Prisoners of War Association held its annual meeting at Morristown yesterday. Among the notable members of the organization present were Gen. Hays, of Glen Ridge; Gen. J. Madison Drake, of Elizabeth; Capt. S. M. Long, of East Orange, President of the National Association; Capt. Van Bareiom, of Newton; Sergt.-Mayor Riker, of Englewood; Col. E. Sill, of Newark; Capt. Ackerson, of Burlington; and Lieut. Peloubet, of Bloomfield.

Gen. Hays, president of the association, called the meeting to order. About twenty members of the ninety-one answered to their names. Thirteen new members were admitted. The constitution and by-laws were slightly amended, and upon recommendation the name of Northern New Jersey was dropped and the name of New Jersey Association substituted, thereby making it a thorough State organization. Three delegates to the next National Convention, to be held during the Grand Army Encampment, at Washington, were appointed: Col. Sill, Major Riker, Capt. Ackerson, Lieut. Peloubet and Comrades Shaw and Hopkins.

A banquet was afterwards held in the rooms of Torbet Post, on Washington street. The association was cordially received by the Ladies' Loyal Legion, who had provided the temptations. The Rev. Mr. Eldman, of the South street Presbyterian church, delivered the address of welcome. After dinner speeches were made by Dr. Piersons, Commander of the local Post; Col. Sill, the Rev. Mr. Eldman, Gen. Drake, Capt. Van Bareiom, and Major Riker. These officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Gen. Hays: Vice-President, Gen. Drake; Treasurer, S. M. Long; Secretary, Mr. Peloubet; Corresponding Secretary, Major Riker; Chaplain, Col. Sill. Comrades Doty of Morristown, and Crawford, of Montclair, were added to the Executive Committee.

HIS LEG CUT OFF.

Within a week's time, two persons who were reckless enough to attempt to steal rides on passing trains, have paid a severe penalty for their acts.

About one o'clock yesterday afternoon "Wessel" Driscoll, a young man about twenty years of age, who lives at Elizabeth, in company with two other young men one of whom is named Dunham and resides here, attempted to board a coal train passing through Elizabeth. Driscoll caught hold of the car but slipped and fell, and the cars rolled over his right hand, crushing it and cutting off the little finger, and over his right leg, severing it just below the knee. He was picked up and put on another train and taken to Elizabeth and placed in the baggage room at the depot, and the ambulance sent for. The hospital surgeon arrived and attended the injured man till he was taken to the hospital. Driscoll is no novice at stealing rides on cars, having done so ever since a small boy, but he has always been so lively that his companions nicknamed him "weasel." His two comrades were unhurt.

A New Hotel.

By next Summer there will be a large hotel on the summit of the mountain back of Bound Brook, approached by Mountain avenue. Some time since Joseph T. Vail, a real estate man in Plainfield purchased a large amount of property near the top of the mountain and running for about half a mile along the road, the continuation of Mountain avenue. He has had a large number of men at work clearing off the timber and brush and improving the road. At the most commanding point will be erected a large Summer hotel. R. Fosgate, an architect in Plainfield, is about completing the plans and the estimated cost will exceed twenty-five thousand dollars. It will be fitted up with all the modern improvements and complete in every respect. The remaining portion of the land will be sold off in building lots for the erection of Summer residences. The hotel will be about twenty minute's drive to the station at Bound Brook.

Short Hand at the Y. M. C. A.

Among the advantages which the Young Men's Christian Association offers to the young men of Plainfield in its educational department and to which it would call particular attention, is the short-hand class. So many have taken advantage of this class in the past that the Association has determined on organizing it again. It will be open some time between the first and middle of October, and will be taught by Mr. J. A. Robinson. Any young men wishing to join should communicate with the General Secretary at the rooms.

Space and Population.

A statistician says: "Few are aware of the vast number of people that can be placed on a small tract of ground. When we speak of millions of men we are apt to picture ourselves an almost boundless mass of humanity; yet 1,000,000 men standing close together, each not occupying more than four square feet, could be placed on a patch but little more than a third of a mile square. A square mile will accommodate 7,965,000. The whole population of the world could stand on two townships."

I have recommended Dr. David Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" to many in Shelton and Birmingham, and I have yet to find one who has not been benefited by it.—C. L. Sawyer, Birmingham, Conn.—Adv.

THE DOLLS THAT TALK.

A TRIP THROUGH THE CASTLE OF THE MANIKIN-MAKER.

How a Doll is Made to Sing.—A Chapter That Ought to be of Prime Interest to the Young Readers.

Better than a trip up a beech-walk, says Zella Milham, in the American Agriculturist, is a visit to Mr. Edison's manufactory, next where thousands of German bisque heads and tons of American arms and legs go in to be united together, and to come out as the daintiest of dollies, radiant in silk and satin, with high treble voices, and what is more, whole verses of "Mother Goose's Melodies" stored away in their tin backs, if not in their curly pates.

Some recite "Bas, Bas, Black Sheep," others the familiar history of "Mary's Little Lamb," or the first two or three sentences, like the one who cried: "I want my mamma !" and so started the Gospel of Mrs. Doll. These tiny elocutionists are named, too, according to their complexions and accomplishments, as "brown hair," "black hair," "little boy blue" dolls, "blue eyes, yellow hair," "Sing a song o' sixpence" dolls, etc.

Oh, what a busy spot that workshop is! In one apartment men in aprons are steam hammers are heaving and pounding all day long, cutting big sheets of shining tin into proper sizes, to be put away these pieces go to the "soldering room," where they are put together to form the body. Another helps to affix the back through which a small phonograph may be easily put in or taken out, for it is to an electric talking machine that these chatty manikins owe their conversational powers, for from the mouth of each comes the tin is perforated to let out the sound.

Now a "bow, sweet voice" is an excellent thing in a doll, and well it is a woman, and the speaker, as she repeats a stanza of the dear old nursery songs into the big "whisper-phone" tube above and had a "frog in her throat," or "Pollywog" in her throat, instead of a musically tuneful utterance, no more unsuperly trained child would ever think of doing.

For every wave of sound as it proceeds from the girl's mouth makes a slight indentation on the revolving cylinder, and these indentations, as many as in a sneeze—will be recorded as correctly as the desired quotation. When a cylinder has received its message a sharp click, click warns her of the fact, and she goes on to the next and so down the row.

For this work eighteen young women are taught and trained to pitch their voices to certain tones, and to keep just such a length; while as soon as one is the least tired she stops and another takes her place.

In other large chambers the brass cylinders are stamped out; the steel needles and pinions made, the hard rubber fashioned and all polished by machinery as bright as a nickel fresh from the mint.

But the most interesting department is the "talking room," and this is divided into six apartments, in each of which stand a great machine resembling the ordinary phonograph. Inside of each of these, operated by motor power, is a steel rod on which are strung fifty tiny cylinders, and before it sits a girl who is to teach the machine its lesson.

After all the fifty cylinders within the instruments have had verses cut upon them they are taken out and given to a skilled machinist, who puts the phonographs together, fits them in the dolls and sets them over for inspection.

Yes, indeed! Each talking lady must have a certificate of graduation as though she were about to graduate.

Base Ball.

[From the Somerville Unionist-Gazette.]

The Plainfield flaunters of Mohammed's emblem have a splendid red flag with a crescent and two stars. The West Ends beat them on their own grounds by a handsome score of 8 to 5 and thus was the great series tied. The West Ends set before Plainfield's celebrated dish of beans but they had ever tasted. History has only repeated itself. Once before the Plainfields celebrated the same dish of beans before were the Somerville boys forced on the field shorthanded. Last year O'Rourke was missing, and this time it was Farrell. A suspicion did not rest across a Somerville mind of any foul play as been certain Plainfield sports offered big wagers at Force's Hotel prior to the game. But nevertheless the fact became apparent when Farrell failed to appear.

The West Ends could do nothing but bat out the best of Plainfield and that man was Harvey Line-em-out Major. Had the game been played anywhere south of the Mason and Dixon line he would have been created a Captain after his first base hit, would have been made a Colonel immediately after the second drive, and would have ended up his career for the day as a Brigadier General on the strength of his two-bagger. As it was, he merely made himself the idol of his fellow townsmen. Carbonell repeated himself three times over. Twas in the first inning that he started to play the game for his life and kept it up. His performance duplicated in the third and in his succeeding times at the bat he reflected success. In the fifth inning the little clown came in and covered second, gobbled in a wild throw and threw his man out at third base. In the seventh inning Plainfield had men on second and third and Carbonell the next hitter was at the bat felt confident of at least tieing the score. Keeler hit a short liner over the second base of the Carbonell made a grand catch, throwing to second in time to complete a double play. Morsches and Connell were both conspicuous by their brilliant playing, but Beiser who had been placed at short made a sorry botch of it.

Harkins, like good wine, seems to grow better with age, and in the eight innings consecutive game that he has pitched for West Ends against Plainfield recently has struck out twenty-six batters, and showing speed and curves without parallelled. Kennedy's catching was not to the front to-day, but he has set for himself, but as the captaining of the team had been forced upon him and he had the good sense to do unnecessary kicking on himself he was exonerated.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The cleanest city and the crankiest in this Union is Boston.

That fine and growing city, Augusta, Ga., is to hold an exposition worth seeing this fall. It begins Nov. 23 and ends Nov. 28. Manufacturing men and merchants from the eastern states are preparing to make a handsome display.

One case of leprosy in New Orleans, three in New York. The recommendation of the New York health officer that there be established a lazaretto for lepers on the Atlantic coast should be heeded. It seems as if we were to have this plague in the United States. Most we look forward to a leper colony in this republic, such a one as Canada has already? Most of the lepers that are discovered in the United States are Chinese.

Disgrace is added to horror in the matter of the New York Park place disaster. The testimony went to show that some of the official inspectors of building jobs were as corrupt as men could be although they held in their hands practically the lives and safety of the whole city. It was testified that for a few rascally bribes one might put cheap material into his house and violate the safety laws with impunity. On the other hand, if an honest man wished to put some repairs on a structure already erected, he must pass through tedious and costly delays, unless he was first willing to "see" the inspector of the district.

There can be a time when it is a positive disadvantage to be rich enough to take the trip to Europe in the summer. One of those occasions came when the boom began in business at home this fall. Merchants, brokers, ranchmen, manufacturers and others were pinned fast in London and Liverpool simply because they all wanted to come back at the same time and there was not ship room enough to bring them. In some cases $200 premium was offered for a ship's berth by business men who wanted to be in at the good times. Millionaires were wild to go in the steerage only that their families could not. Here would have been a good opportunity for the owners of small steamers to get another month of Europe, by selling his berth to some of those who were so crazy to get back.

Put Him in a Glass Case.

His name was Johnson. Most people are born with a fate of some kind hanging over them, which makes or mars their fortunes all their lives. So with Johnson. His fate was that women fell in love with him. He couldn't help it seemingly, and didn't appear to like it always, but that made no difference. They just dropped into love with him and carried him off with them, with his consent or without it.

Early in the present year Johnson went to Passaic, N. J. New Jersey is a bad sort of state for men and women to cut capers in, but not even that made any difference. The women, the moment they caught sight of Johnson, fell at his feet in rows. He had a way with him, they say. Worst of all, it was married women, not single ones, who were attracted to Johnson. If they had been single, it would not have been so unfortunate but being married, and having stirred up the shortcomings of their own respective spouses, the ladies knew when they saw a man without such shortcomings, and by unanimous consent they pitched upon Johnson. It might perhaps have been prophesied that the husbands did not like it.

Johnson went to live with a lady who kept boarders at Passaic. She fell in love with him of course. So, of course, did one of her married lady boarders. The other's husband found it out, and gave his wife a good pounding and vanished with her from the scene, and from this history. Then the landlady persisted in making love so to poor Johnson that he had to run away with her in sheer self defense. Her husband declares, however, that she did not elope with Johnson, but with another fellow. But the neighbors say she did, and the neighbors always know.

Shortly, however, the handsome fellow came back without the lady. He and the husband talked things over and went and took a drink together friendly like. Then Johnson went to board somewhere else. There the man put him out because he did not like his actions. Brute force was applied to such an extent that Johnson fell down stairs and landed opposite another flat, where the lady took pity on him and took him in as a boarder. The usual result. The lady ran away from her husband with Johnson. Johnson came back after a few days and got the lady's clothes and trunk. He said she had his money, and he could not get it unless he ran away with her, and that was how it happened. Other counties are said to hear from.

Here is a fine opportunity for a money making speculation. Two young men of a thousand charms should be engaged to live in a glass case where we local dames could gaze upon him, but not get at him. Then he might be carted through the land from dime museum to dime museum, stopping only long enough for the married ladies of each city to gaze at a safe distance into the thrilling depths of his soulful eyes, but no more, nowhere.

A MATTER OF MILLIONS.

But Searles Forgot All About the Transactions.

HIS HOSTILITY TO TIM HOPKINS.

The Contestant's Attorneys Attempt to Show That This Enmity Caused Searles to Use Undue Influence in Getting His Wife to Disinherit Her Adopted Son.

SALEM, Mass., Sept. 25.—At the Searles will contest Mr. Searles resumed his seat on the witness stand. He was looking less buoyant than on the previous day. His face wore something of an anxious look, for counsel had been pressing him hard, and his voice was more subdued and faltering.

Mr. Searles testified that the mansion at Great Barrington was deeded to him Feb. 23, 1888, although the deed had never been recorded.

Mr. Burley asked if the Hopkins palace in San Francisco had been transferred to witness, and Searles replied that he had no recollection that the palace had ever passed out of her hands.

Mr. Burley remarked, "Well, I guess I can refresh your memory," and at once submitted a deed of the property in San Francisco, dated May 24, 1888, transferring it to the witness.

He Had Forgotten It.

"I had forgotten that deed," said Mr. Searles. He had forgotten to say that he did not recall several deeds which were there produced. He remembered signing a lot of deeds and papers, but could not recall their contents.

Mr. Burley then asked witness if he knew that one of the transfers of property included the cemetery in which the remains of Mark Hopkins, Mrs. Searles' first husband, were interred. Searles replied that he did not. He believed the transfers were being prepared by Mrs. Searles' attorney and could not tell why the deeds named above were not recorded. Mr. Burley then inquired if all the unrecorded transactions made during the absence of Searles and his wife in Europe were not the basis of consultation with Stillman on their return to America, and Mr. Searles replied that such was the case.

Why They Were Not Recorded.

"Did you not," said Mr. Burley impressively, as he turned half around to look significantly at the judge, "did you not understand that the object of leaving the transactions unrecorded was for the purpose of keeping Timothy Hopkins and Mrs. Searles' kin in ignorance of the immense property that you were acquiring?"

"Certainly not," replied Mr. Searles quietly.

Then Mr. Burley whirled around and read the following telegram, which was sent by Mrs. Hopkins three days before the marriage was celebrated:

NEW YORK, Nov. 5, 1887.

To Timothy Hopkins:

DEAR SIR—The marriage proposed and refused four years ago consummated at 11 a. m. Nov. 8. If possible, let E. F. Searles and the bride receive your congratulations. I do not sail before the 9th. M. HOPKINS.

The Undue Influence Charge.

Now we come to getting to the point where there were to be revelations concerning Timothy Hopkins' opposition to the marriage. The point of undue influence hinges right here. It is admitted that Timothy opposed the marriage, and opposed it bitterly, and the claim is that Searles so resented this action of Timothy that he persuaded Mrs. Hopkins Searles to disinherit the son. Under the searching questioning Mr. Searles went on to say he remembered to have heard his wife read a letter which she sent to Tim in which she said that she believed that Edward F. Searles and Stillman & Hubbard were his (Tim's) friends.

He had heard before his marriage that Mrs. Hopkins that Tim had detectives on his track. He did not like to learn such a fact, yet he entertained and ill feeling against Tim. He believed the story and subsequently had a talk with Timothy in the presence of the latter's footmen other. Tim stated that he never employed detectives in any capacity, but that he was anxious to ascertain the character of the man who was to marry his mother. Searles told Tim that he had no objection for any one to fully investigate his character; in fact, deemed it perfectly proper for Tim to do so.

Hopkins Was Remembered.

A will of Mary F. S. Searles, dated Nov. 22, 1887, with a codicil dated June 10, 1888, was produced. Witness knew of the will, but did not know of its contents until since his wife's death.

This will gave $10,000 to John Harwood, a former coachman, and the residue was left in trust to Edward F. Searles, Timothy Hopkins and Thomas E. Stillman, to pay the income in equal shares to Edward F. Searles and Timothy Hopkins during their lifetime, and on their death to whomsoever they might designate by will. Witness had heard Mrs. Searles say that before her marriage she had made previous wills. She had never told witness that she had promised her first husband to hold her entire property in trust for Timothy; nor that she had promised Timothy's own mother that if she would consent to the adoption he should have all her property; never heard Mr. Stillman say when she first saw her little granddaughter, "Here comes the little heiress."

Indifference to Millions.

The sensation of the day was this witness' apparent indifference to the transfer of millions of property to him by his generous bride, through the intervention of the accomplished Mr. Stillman. Not a murmurs of surprise could be heard when he said that he had forgotten about the existence of the unrecorded deeds in his favor. It was only after a most searching questioning by Mr. Burley that he admitted that it was not his understanding, for the generous bestowal of Mrs. Searles, that the property should pass to him till the deeds were recorded.

An Element of Suspicion.

Another element of suspicion was that the deeds were all dated before the parties were on their wedding tour in Europe by Mr. Stillman, and were signed and executed in a foreign country before an American consul. The only excuse offered for these acts of munificence was that Mr. Stillman, acting as Mrs. Searles' attorney, and in view of the approaching marriage, thought it advisable that she should convey all her property to her husband, who was Mr. Stillman's off confidential friend and his partner, in the combination of experience and capital, in which the lawyers and intended husband furnished the experience and Mark Hopkins' widow the capital. All that she had to leave her heirs at her death. It now appears was the experience contributed by her partner.

ELEVEN FIREMEN INJURED.

Thrilling Escapes at a Big Elevator Blaze—The Loss $200,000.

MINNEAPOLIS, Sept. 25.—The Flour City had a narrow escape from a terrible conflagration last night. It threatened and to her floor mills. A fierce fire and a strong wind were the two elements of danger. The flames broke out with incredible rapidity in the Moore Carving Machine company's five story brick structure. The workmen had barely time to scramble down the stairways without coats, hats or pails. Next to the factory stood the huge elevator C of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul road with its large annex. Here were stored 61,000 bushels of wheat and there was soon food for the flames. By this time the entire fire department was on the ground.

Chief Lunge, perceiving that the flames were in the high tower of the elevator, sent nearly a score of his men up on the roof of the annex with lines of hose. Apparently there was no danger to them there, but suddenly there came a loud explosion and a great stream of fire burst from one end of the annex. Another stream broke forth to the left of the first. An involuntary groan escaped from the watching throng as the smoke and flames shut the little band of firemen from view.

"They've fallen through," was the cry on many a lip, but a break in the cloud of smoke suddenly disclosed them to view, making a wild rush for the three ladders. Many reached them, but a groan went up as one, two, three, four, five of the men fell or jumped from their narrow footing. Again the smoke lifted and there, on the very edge, stood a fireman, apparently dazed and not knowing what to do.

"Slide down the hose," yelled the crowd. The man heard, and grabbing the big hose at his feet, he shot down through the flames and reached the ground without dropping. The work of rescuing the firemen was a matter of necessity. They were taken in the patrol wagon to St. Barnaby's hospital. The list is as follows: Assistant Chief Cadwallader, leg broken, badly burned and internally injured; Captain Lent, badly burned; Charles Mitchell, probably fatally injured; John Guise, badly injured; William Cole, Captain Foster and Captain William Malone, badly injured; Captain Pierce, bones broken; Nicholas Love, badly hurt; Captain Hanley, leg broken; John Kelley, severely bruised. After a hard fight the firemen succeeded in subduing the flames. Several small stores and residences went up in smoke along with the elevator and machine works. The total loss is in the neighborhood of $200,000.

FASHIONS

STYLES FOR ELDERLY LADIES.

How to Be Well Dressed, Though Middle Aged and Even Obese.

Care must be taken in choosing the patterns of the materials worn by stout figures. Horizontal lines must be most carefully avoided; long straight panels diminish the appearance size, and great care must be taken in hanging the skirt, especially if it be a plain one. Long shallow plaits ought to be inserted at the back of the hips, and it should be managed that a few soft horizontal folds fall about a quarter of a yard below the waist in front, to break the outlines of the figure. The present style of cutting the skirt on the cross is a help in this class of dressmaking, but striped materials must not be chosen, and on this account must the fabric be fitted to the waist without plaits, as now worn by young people. The cross cut materials are generally more elastic.

The best way of trimming a bodice is to have either braces or long revers on either side, narrowing at the waist, meeting the front darts. A stripe down the center hiding the fastenings is also good. Long graceful lines must be chosen in the arrangement of any drapery on the bodice, and short sleeveless jackets are to be avoided. Polonaises skillfully managed diminish the apparent size.

The proper style of wearing chiffon on the front of the bodices enhances the charms of middle age, and often it is an advantage to trim one side and then carry the folds across. The waist frills of lace now worn can be used with good effect if they are made to end at the left and not carried in front, but it must be borne in mind if the hips be big everything must be done to lessen their apparent size, and any extra trimming on the hips is calculated to enlarge the figure. For tea gowns the long, pendant sleeves are desirable. In mantles long sides prove to be a great help to short, stout figures.

With hats and bonnets much must be left to the individual. It is, however, advisable to disguise the nape of the neck and the lines which will come beneath the chin. This will make it necessary for a bonnet to be continued low down in the neck, and strings made of black lace or chiffon should be tied beneath the chin. It is only old ladies who will reconcile themselves to wearing strings to caps, but the same result may be produced by encircling the throat with soft diaphanous materials. Middle age should always be considered. In the first cut is illustrated a bonnet which, while quite dressy, is appropriate to middle age. The crown is drawn over wraps with jet bands; black velvet tulips are placed in front and at the side. The strings are of lace, as is the bow tied under the chin. In the second cut is shown a stylish mantle well suited to conceal undue embonpoint. It is in black lace with a yoke of black silk. The trimmings consist of jet passementerie.

To Elevate Their Tracks.

NEWARK, N. J. Sept. 25.—In pursuance of an order of the street commissioners of Newark, the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad will, as soon as practicable, begin to elevate their tracks through the city.

Minister Egan Not Recalled.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—Assistant Secretary Wharton denies the report that Minister Egan in Chili has been recalled. Mr. Wharton said that no steps whatever looking to such action have been taken.

LIVE POLITICAL GOSSIP.

Lieutenant Governor Jones' Refusal to Run.

NEBRASKA MEN WILD FOR BLAINE.

The Republicans of That State Boom the Man from Maine for the Presidency in 1892 in an Enthusiastic Way. Cleveland and Hill Write Letters.

ALBANY, Sept. 25.—Lieutenant Governor Jones is here, but his convention, which it was announced would take place at the Globe hotel today, has not sent out a very strong advance guard. At all the hotels it was said that no rooms had as yet been engaged. Still one of the promoters of the scheme says that the convention will be held. He added: "It will be held whether Mr. Jones says so or not. We would like to nominate him, but if he won't take it we will still hold our convention."

Concerning the Convention.

So far as can be learned the facts concerning the convention are these, told by one of the nominees of this section for member of assembly: It was thought that the various labor organizations and Farmers' clubs should demonstrate their strength this fall, and a call was issued to delegates representing 75,000 people for a convention.

It was proposed to nominate Lieutenant Governor Jones for governor, and on Saturday last a committee, including Secretary Spalding, John Marlow and F. B. Murphy, waited upon Mr. Jones. According to individuals on that committee Mr. Jones made this statement:

Not a Candidate, He Said.

"I decline to be a candidate. I can best show my strength and influence by remaining out of the fray. These people who would support me if I ran will not vote for Flower any way, so nothing would be gained by my running."

After making this remarkable assertion the lieutenant governor declined to allow his name to be used and declined to further discuss the matter. He was asked if he had made any such statement about Mr. Flower, but said tersely, "I am not talking to newspaper men; good-by."

What Jones Will They Indorse?

The secretary of the league, Mr. Spalding, says the convention will be held, and will pick out certain names on the two tickets for indorsement, provided that they will pledge themselves to support farmers and laborers' plans for the betterment of their condition. A platform with a special taxation plank will be formulated. The parties who are talking up the convention claim to have 75,000 votes among them.

Fassett at the Union League Club.

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—The Union League club gave ex-Senator Fassett a reception last evening, and "reform in the politics of the Empire state" had a hearty indorsement, with, incidentally, considerable severe criticism of Governor David B. Hill and Tammany Hall thrown in. The affair was the outcome of a reception to Mr. Fassett and his colleagues on the ticket nominated at Rochester.

President Depew in presenting Mr. Fassett said that the wisdom of the Union League club in electing Mr. Fassett to membership had been ratified by the entire Republican party, which had elected him to be the next governor of the state. [Applause.] There was more applause when Mr. Depew said: "Now we know no reform, no reformers within our organization. It was different three years ago, when we had with us Warner Miller." [Faint applause.]

Depew and Governor Hill.

There was laughter when Mr. Depew, referring to Governor Hill's speech at Poughkeepsie, said: "It is quite evident the governor is not a candidate this fall."

Mr. Depew then praised the Republican party, and abused the governor as an adroit politician, who still controlled the state committee while apparently a defeated man. Referring to the World's fair, he said: "My friends, the enemy [laughter] have a failing for post mortems, and I hope they will not betray holding a inquest on the World's fair. I propose to testify on that point right here."

World's Fair Matters.

The speaker described his efforts to have the fair located in New York, and said that the west was too strong and wrested it from the grasp of New York. He praised Mr. Flower as a good business man, and said the only thing wrong about him was his politics.

Mr. Fassett's Speech.

Ex-Senator Fassett was received with three cheers and a tiger. Mr. Fassett summoned Lieutenant Governor Jones, the Kings county Democrats and the County Democracy to support him in his statements that Tammany Hall ought to be defeated, and paid his respects to Governor Hill in vigorous terms.

"The people, the real people," said Mr. Fassett in conclusion, "is, will you trust Tammany Hall with the power to govern the Empire state? Now is the time to reply. Tammany Hall knows by experience that power is wealth." [Cheers and applause.]

Short addresses were made by John W. Vrooman and Messrs. O'Connor, Wade, Colvin and Van Santvoord.

Nebraska Wants Blaine.

LINCOLN, Neb., Sept. 25.—The Republican State convention met at 10:15 in Funke's opera house. "If the signs are true," said Chairman Watson, "the Republican National convention at Omaha in 1892—[cheers]—will nominate the next president of the United States; and that man will be the glorious captain of the gallant ship of state, the skillful navigator, the fearless leader, the bright, the brilliant, the intelligent, James G. Blaine."

As Mr. Watson mentioned the name of the secretary of state a portrait of the statesman was unveiled, and as if by magic the 300 delegates were on their feet in an instant and cheer after cheer resounded the hall, lasting several minutes.

Blaine and the Silver Question.

The plank in the platform adopted referring to Mr. Blaine and the silver question are as follows:

We rejoice in the restoration of dignity and statesmanship in the conduct of our foreign affairs under the guidance of America's favorite son, James G. Blaine. We approve of the silver coinage act of the present administration by which the entire product of the silver mines of the United States is added to the currency of the people. But we denounce the Democratic doctrine of the free and unlimited coinage of silver as a financial policy liable to precipitate the people of the country into a profound and disastrous depression and delay the revival of business enterprise and prosperity so ardently desired and now apparently so near. We are in favor of having every dollar as good as another.

A. M. Post, of Columbus, was nominated for governor.

Mr. Cleveland's Best Wishes.

SPOKANE, Wash., Sept. 25.—President Drum, of the Democratic committee, has received the following dispatch:

NEW YORK, Sept. 24, 1891.

To Henry Drum, President:

DEAR SIR—Please tender my congratulations and best wishes to the workers in the Democratic cause who meet today in your state. I hope their faith in the intelligence of their countrymen will induce them to rest their hopes of success upon the advocacy of wholesome principles and measures of reform. The Democratic as well as upon the thorough party organization which their association of Democratic ideas is so well calculated to subserve. The vindication of our principles can safely be left to the plain people of the land when they are accessed to thoughtfulness and patriotic action. GROVER CLEVELAND.

What Governor Hill Wrote.

Governor Hill, of New York, among other things, says: "The Republican party is frightened by the emphatic protest of the people last November against high tariff, and subsidies, and force bills, and extravagant appropriations, and desires a new issue in 1892. It is vainly seeking to divide the eastern Democracy from the western Democracy by false and hypocritical professions in behalf of 'honest currency, blindly trusting that it can deceive by its professions, while by its acts it continues to favor a bank currency and keeps part of our currency and refuses to take a manly stand in favor of the only honest currency—the currency of our fathers and of the constitution."

Governor Hill at Malone.

MALONE, N. Y., Sept. 25.—Governor Hill spoke Thursday afternoon at the Franklin county fair. He advocated at length a reduction of the legal rate of interest, and said that a bill he had approved of had been killed by New York bankers, who claimed a panic would be brought on by a change, but Mr. Charles Smith, the president of the New York chamber of commerce, who antagonized the bill mentioned, had two months before at Washington that "we have the easiest money market that the United States has ever had and it is likely to so continue," and that "there was hardly a demand for over 3 per cent. The governor believed that the legal rates of interest should be reduced to 5 per cent. He said:

"Whenever a lower legal rate of interest is advocated, its advocates are often accused of being demagogues, with sympathizing only with the debtor class of the community and not having at heart the best interests of the whole state. In this so called debtor class at which they sneer is every merchant who has his notes discounted, and he who has and every laborer who is striving to build a home for his family, and who therefore are interested equally with the farmer who seeks to mortgage his farm—all these people, comprising a majority of the population, are equally interested in being able to borrow money at a lower rate of interest."

FIFTEEN WERE KILLED.

Many Madrid Notables Killed in a Horrible Railway Collision in Spain.

MADRID, Sept. 25.—An express train between Burgos and Valladolid has collided with a passenger train. Fifteen persons were killed and thirty injured. Among the killed was one Englishman. The wife of Admiral Lobards, including several notables of Madrid.

The injured include Artists Lucus and Long. The accident was caused by the telegraphic operator falling asleep as the line was clear. The stationmaster at Burgos has attempted to commit suicide.

Officers of the Catholic Congress.

BUFFALO, Sept. 25.—The Catholic congress elected the following officers: President, the Rev. Mr. Machilepen, vicar-general, St. Louis, Mo.; vice president, the Rev. H. Meissner, Peru, Ind.; corresponding secretary, the Rev. William Faerber, St. Louis, Mo.; recording secretary, the Rev. J. N. Enalberger, Pinpolis, Ills.; treasurer, the Rev. W. Duttner, Pittsburg, Pa.; commissarius, the Rev. George Hornemann, Keating, Pa.; fire commissarius, the Rev. William Nettstrater, Wilmette, Ills. The matter of choosing a place for the next congress was left to the commissarius to select.

Wall Street Felt Panicky.

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—There was a panicky feeling on the stock market yesterday, and Jay Gould was the cause of it. The day was the twenty-second anniversary of Black Friday. There was a very bitter feeling against him on Wall street. He was said to be responsible for a big break in the stock market. Gould's notes were said to be short, and he passed a Missouri Pacific dividend to help them out.

Mrs. Fitzsimmons Convicted.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 25.—The jury in the case of Mrs. Lucy R. Fitzsimmons, charged with the murder of Detective Gilkinson, brought in a verdict of guilty of murder in the second degree. The maximum penalty is fourteen years. Mrs. Fitzsimmons' face never changed a muscle as she heard the verdict that will send her to the penitentiary.

Gone, but Not Forgotten.

KEYPORT, N. J., Sept. 25.—John F. Kelly, who conducted extensive grocery stores at this place, Freehold, and Perth Amboy, has disappeared owing $25,000. He disposed of his Keyport and Freehold stores just before leaving. The sheriff is hunting for the fugitive. Kelly's absence crept secretly married a wealthy Cuban woman.

The Schuenkefelders Celebrate.

CLAYTON, Pa., Sept. 25.—The religious sect of Schuenkefelders celebrated at Clayton, yesterday, the 137th anniversary of the landing of their forefathers in this country. Besides the congregation located in Clayton are only four in the country, and all were in attendance.

A Bank Backed by $500,000,000.

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—The Plaza bank, at the Plaza hotel, will open for business Oct. 15. The combined wealth of the men backing the new bank is probably $500,000,000. The wealthiest of its stockholders are William Rockefeller, C. P. Huntington and John J. Aster.

Presidential Postmasters.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—Presidential postmasters have been appointed as follows: Joseph G. Hyatt, Westport, Conn.; S. E. Walker, East Northfield, Mass.; Jennie M. Van Arsdale, Arlington, N. J.; G. Elwood, Nunda, N. Y.

Civil Engineer's Suicide.

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—Ormsley W. Blunt, a civil engineer, well known in the upper part of the state, committed suicide by hanging at his boarding house, 695 Pacific street, Brooklyn.

Mr. Kenyon Kemp, of Kemp's Balsam, has our thanks for a generous remittance and acknowledgment. Kemp's Balsam is worthy of all that can be said of it for disorders of that kind.—Nellie A. McQuade, 250 Main street, Amsterdam, N. Y.—ADV.

BY A BURSTING BOMB.

Four Killed and Many Injured at Newark, N. J.

ONE BOY'S BODY CLEFT IN TWAIN.

The Flying Debris Swept the Crowd Like a Volley of Grape and Canister, Mowing Down and Mangling the Multitude—List of the Dead and Injured.

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 25.—By the bursting of a bomb at an Italian celebration at Boyden and Nassau streets, Newark, last night, four persons were killed and about thirty injured. The dead are;

Horace Buchman, thirty years of age.

John Carlin, twelve years old, of Seventh avenue.

Michael O'Neil, ten years old, of 19 Colden street.

The Injured.

Among those injured were the following Gaetano Anzelone, painful injuries, August Bodwin, ten years old, of Seventh avenue; leg broken. James Bowe, a policeman, head shattered. George Brown, six teen years old, of 65 Stone street; right arm shattered. Harry Burgesser, fourteen years old, of Seventh avenue; arm broken. Brandino Castala, painful injuries. David Chesney seventeen years old, of 11 Cittenden street; groin injured. Antonio Chieffi, Brooklyn musician; painful injuries Ruthenia Codas, fortyfive years old, of Drift street; injured in groin. John Costell, twelve years old, of 229 Central avenue; arm blown off Pasquale Dietzero, thirty-five years old, of Factory street; stomach and groin torn. Horace Duchemin; painful injuries. Annie Duffy, thirteen years old; cut in the head. Joseph Fennelly, fifteen years old struck by a screw in the face. Angelo Maria Fiesla; painful injuries. Antonio Franchi; painful injuries. James Gallagher, 2 Stone street; skull and arm fractured. Ornea Giffor, musician, of this city; arm and leg fractured. Max Thum, thirteen years old, 73 Newark street; foot torn off. Fred W. Wiese, twelve years old; cut about the body.

How It Happened.

Alphonse Ilerio, who is known in the Italian colony as King Alphonse, keeps a saloon and boarding house at 31 Boyden street. Yesterday was the feast of St. Rocco, and Ilerio had invited a number of his countrymen to assemble at his place and enjoy the entertainment that he had prepared in honor of the event. The festivities passed off smoothly until between 11 and 11 o'clock. By this time between 2,000 and 3,000 persons were in the immediate vicinity. Rockets and Roman candles and other small pyrotechnics were discharged, and then an Italian placed in position a bomb.

It was a copper tube two and a half feet long and nine inches in diameter, and was loaded with several pounds of powder. The fuse was lighted, and a few seconds later came a terrific explosion.

Like Grape and Canister.

More than a hundred persons were thrown to the ground and as many more were flung back as if they had been struck by a catapult. The crowd was pelted with deadly missiles, which cut through the mass of humanity like grape and canister.

Captain Herman Beyer, who was present with the patrolmen, was struck in the back of the head with a piece of the bomb and nearly prostrated. He recovered quickly and directed his men to begin a search for the dead and injured. He examined the bomb and found that only a small piece of it remained. The rest had been shattered into a thousand pieces.

Literally Cut in Half.

The boy Murray was picked up in the gutter dead. He had been literally cut in two by a fragment of the bomb. The boy's body was removed to the residence of his parents.

The O'Neill boy was found writhing in agony in the street. The right side of his face was blown off and his skull was fractured. He died shortly before midnight. Carlin was disemboweled. Buchman was thrown violently against the curbstone. His skull was fractured and he died in a few minutes. Henry Burgesser was sitting on the top of a six foot post when the explosion came, and the shock caused him to lose his hold. He was picked up with a broken arm. There were many affecting scenes, for the story of the calamity had spread quickly, and fathers and mothers came from every direction in search of their children.

The Grip Again at New York.

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—The health authorities are of the opinion that before the end of the week the people of this city will awaken to the fact that the grip is here again. So far this week an increase of forty-nine deaths has been reported over the corresponding week last year from respiratory diseases. President Wilson, of the board of health, is one of the grip's victims.

Ex-Governor Moorehouse's Funeral.

MARYVILLE, Mo., Sept. 25.—The funeral of ex-Governor Moorehouse took place this afternoon and was attended by Governor Francis and staff. Mrs. Moorehouse has not yet been told of the tragic death of her husband. Suspicion and anxiety, however, have prostrated her, and the confirmation of her suspicion will undoubtedly cause her death.

CABLE BREVITIES.

Eighty grain vessels are waiting at Hamburg for an opportunity to discharge their cargoes.

Mr. and Mrs. Kendal say that they expect to make $100,000 by their coming tour of the United States.

The Grand Duchess Paul, wife of Grand Duke Paul Alexandrovitch, youngest brother of the czar, is dead.

The Bank of England's discount rate, which since July 2 has been 2½ per cent., has been raised to 3 per cent.

Abundant harvests are reported from most of the Turkish provinces, while the prospects for winter crops in Russia are discouraging.

Mark Twain is making a tour of the French rivers in a canoe.

In a note to the powers the porte says Russia broke no treaty in the recent passage of one of her vessels through the Dardanelles.

China assures the western nations that she will protect foreigners within her borders.

Doubts as to the stability of the new Chilian government are expressed by refugees in Peru. Ovalle Vicuna and others escaped from Valparaiso to Lima on the United States steamer San Francisco.

SEVEN ARE DEAD.

The Wreck on the Pittsburg and Western a Disastrous One.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 25.—The following is a correct list of the killed in the wreck on the Pittsburg and Western road at McKim's: John Houghton, married, leaves a widow and three children; J. Ripenish, M. Gertisch, John Wenner, John Osaick, John Burke, John Solroy. Twelve Hungarian workmen who were injured in the collision were brought to this city for medical attendance.

The wreck train running as first section No. 36, started from North Sewickley, forty-three miles from Pittsburg, to go to McKim's to do grading. About twenty-five laborers, in charge of Foreman, were on board. An unusually dense fog obscured all view of the tracks. Regular No. 36, Engineer Willard, following the work train as second section No. 36, overtook and ran into the rear of the work train with terrible force. The work train was swept from the track and the laborers and trainmen were crushed in the wreck.

Damon Has Married Ella.

CORTLAND, N. Y., Sept. 25.—Edward Damon, who ran away on the eve of his contemplated marriage to Ella Martin, has at last married the girl. Young Damon returned, and calling on the young lady he renewed his vows of constancy and asked that she marry him at once. Miss Martin consented, and the couple proceeded to the residence of the Rev. Mr. Hamilton, who refused to perform the ceremony unless Damon's parents consented. Damon returned with his parents and the ceremony was performed.

England and Germany Want Ten Acres.

CHICAGO, Sept. 25.—England and Germany have each applied for about five acres of space in the World's fair buildings for their exhibits. The requests staggered the World's officials. They expected that England and Germany would be largely represented at the fair, but the thought never occurred to them that these two powers would ask for ten acres of space.

It Was Politicians' Day.

WAVERLY, N. J., Sept. 25.—Yesterday was politicians' day at the New Jersey state fair at Waverly, and many noted state politicians met and discussed the situation. Forty thousand people attended. The races were spirited, and again attracted great attention.

Governor Abbett Attended.

JERSEY CITY, Sept. 25.—The Dennis McLaughlin association, of Jersey City, the strongest Democratic association in the state, had an outing yesterday. Governor Abbett, Senators Adrian and Werts, congressmen and all of Jersey City's office holders attended.

Shot a Convict in the Cheek.

SNAKE HILL, N. J., Sept. 25.—James McGibbon, a prisoner at the Hudson County penitentiary, made a break for liberty. He jumped into the river, when Keeper O'Neill opened fire. Several bullets went wild, but when one grazed his cheek he surrendered.

Chief Arthur Will Be There.

JERSEY CITY, Sept. 25.—The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers will hold a reunion at Mullone's new Opera House, this city, next week. Grand Chief P. M. Arthur and other prominent members of the order will address the meeting.

White May Resume Business.

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—It is believed that S. V. White & Co. may resume business and that Mr. White may save a few dollars out of the wreck. Not one of the banks or trust companies which had the loans will lose a penny.

Poisoned Grapes Seized.

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—Chemist Lederle, of the board of health, reports that much of the present grape crop is poisoned by metallic powder, employed by growers as a preventive of the black rot. Many baskets of grapes have been seized.

A Combination Sure to Win.

When the three men met on the street corner it was unanimously decided that something should be done to "raise the wind," and the tall man thought he had the proper plan.

"You've got a good pair of lungs," he said to the brawny set man.

"I can make myself heard a mile," said the brawny set man proudly.

"Good! And you," to the little thin dyspeptic, "have a strong imagination."

"Worse than any opium smoker's," replied the little dyspeptic.

"Good again!" exclaimed the tall man. "I've got an old press and a font of type and that's all we need. We'll set to work now, and next Sunday afternoon we'll get out an extra Howler or Bazoo or some thing similar with a full account of the triple murder, the death of Queen Victoria, and the shooting of the czar of Russia. An' imagination to concoct the story, t press to print it and lungs to sell it! Gen lemen, the combination can't be beaten." —Chicago Tribune.

In Marriage a Failure.

Thomas Snickers, colored, has only been married a few months, but he, nevertheless, is already disgusted with matrimony. He applied to Rev. Whaddidoodly Baxter to have the sacred tie untied, but was told that "dem whom de Lord has joined together no man kin put asunder."

"Don't you lub her no mosh?" queried Whaddidoodle.

"Yah, yah, yarus bimuss, dis hash tender pashtu," replied Thomas. "When I first married dat ar gal I felt mos' like eatin her up, but 'fore I was married to her a week I was sad at myself for not doin it."—Texas Siftings.

NOT WHOLLY CRUSHED.

He Was Hard on Him, but Others Won't Suffer.

The angry waves of Lake Michigan lashed the shore and their roaring, grumbling formed a background, as it were, to the solemn stillness that crowded, so to speak, up and down the little book parlor where two young people sat holding each other.

"Flora Bunkerill, may I ask you a question?"

"Mr. Lesser, it would be better, perhaps, if you did not."

The solemn stillness had set in immediately after this brief conversation and was reverberating yet.

Upon his face Jenkinson Lesser wore the aspect of a man who had set on the wrong horse, but who was used to it and had a few shekels and a round trip ticket left. Whatever might have been the emotions that surged and circumgyrated in his bosom they were not allowed to parade themselves in his impassive features.

"It isn't exactly what I had counted on," he said at last, following with his eye the pattern of wall paper on the opposite side of the room. "And it doesn't seem to me you are giving me a fair shake."

"I am not conscious of having treated you unfairly, Mr. Lesser."

"Then the cream season is about over, of course," pursued the young man contemplatively, "but the oyster season is just beginning, and it's going to be a long time before West Side fly-up-the-creek, with bangs and dyed whiskers, has been waltzing over here and!"——

"Sir!"

"Flora Bunkerill," said the young man, "will you marry me?"

"No!"

"Beg pardon?"

"I said no!"

"Um—well, that seems to settle it," he said. "It wouldn't be worth while, I reckon, to argue the matter?"

"No, sir."

"Well, I must be going," he said, rising. "It's getting late anyhow."

"Good night, Mr. Lesser."

"In a minute. Before I take my leave, Miss Bunkerill, you'll excuse me for saying it may be a long time before you get another offer such as I have made you this evening."

She laughed scornfully.

"You may laugh," he continued, putting on his overcoat and taking his hat, "but I know what I'm talking about. Good night."

Jenkinson Lesser went out into the hall, out through the front door, down the steps and out at the front gate, where he stopped. Then, looking steadily about him so be sure he was unobserved, he took from his pocket a short steel awl with a blunt handle, and deeply cut the wood of the gate post he scratched this legend:

Which means, as every young man knows:

Flirt. Eats onions. Wears false hair. Stay away.—Chicago Tribune.

Strange but True.

Nancy Hanks' Record Now 2:09 1-4.

CAMBRIDGE CITY, Ind., Sept. 25.—Nancy Hanks has lowered her record of 2:12 to 2:09¼, the mile by quarters being 32½, 1:04, 1:36, 2:09¼. She was going better than a 2:08 clip to the half when her running mate fell, breaking his neck, but not hurting the driver seriously. Budd Doble, the driver of Nancy Hanks, says but for the unfortunate accident he is confident that a 2:08½ mark would have been made. Doble received a tremendous ovation.

Allerton Will Trot Nelson.

INDEPENDENCE, Ia., Sept. 25.—C. W. Williams has wired an acceptance of Don J. Leather's proposition to match Allerton and Nelson for a purse of $10,000, the winner to take the whole amount and the race to occur Oct. 6 at Grand Rapids.

For Allerton and Nancy Hanks.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Sept. 25.—The Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders' association will give $8,000 for a race between Nancy Hanks and Allerton, to take place at its coming meeting next month. The winner to get all the money.

O'Connor Defeats Hanlan.

NEW WESTMINSTER, B. C., Sept. 25.—O'Connor won the great single scull race here. Hanlan was second, and the Australians, Dutch and Stevenson, finished third and fourth respectively.

Metcalfe Won the Race.

READING, Pa., Sept. 25.—The twenty-one mile road bicycle race from Myerstown to this city was won by E. A. McDuffee, of Lynn, Mass. Time, 1h. 16m. 1 1-5s.

The Thistles Won.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Sept. 25.—The Thistles, of Chicago, defeated the Rovers, of this city, at football by a score of 6 to 5.

TELEGRAPHIC BREVITIES.

Chief of Police Murphy, of Jersey City, has directed his men to visit all the fruit stands in the city and examine any grapes they find for evidences of Paris green or other poisonous substances.

Thieves robbed the house of Robert W. Knowles, Newark, securing $100 in cash and $400 worth of jewelry and other property.

At Portsmouth, N. H., William Henry Hackett, United States commissioner and clerk of the United States court, died, aged sixty-three.

The will of the late Allen Thorndike Rice, of The North American Review, is to be contested.

The Waltham Watch company has reduced wages from 5 to 20 per cent. to enable it to carry on its war against J. C. Dueberg.

The Philadelphia Democratic city convention has nominated W. Redwood Wright for city treasurer and Theodore F. Jenkins for register of wills.

The sovereign grand lodge of Odd Fellows, in session at St. Louis, settled the celebrated Crabb case by confirming Grand Sire Underwood's action.

New Democrats renominated Mayor Joseph E. Haynes for a fifth term. Republicans nominated ex-Congressman Lehlbach.

The Bad Water Denounced.

JERSEY CITY, Sept. 25.—The people of West Bergen, a suburb of Jersey City, held an indignation meeting last night to protest against the foul water supplied by the Jersey City water works. Resolutions were adopted demanding that the city authorities take steps at once to get a supply of pure water.

Still Hope.

"Alas, we have lost all," said the Boston merchant, "all; the firm has failed."

"No, not all," replied the prudent and dutiful daughter, "remember that you have me, father."

"Ah, my child," he said with a sad smile as he looked at the $85.67 edition of Browning on the center table, "but what can you do?"

And the maiden, with the true faith of the power that was within her shining through her eyeglasses, replied softly, "I can start a new dress reform movement, you know."—Colorado Sun.

MR. AND MRS. BOWSER.

It Makes Quite a Difference Which One of the Two Is Sick.

When Mr. Bowser comes home and finds his wife lying down with her head tied up, he is real sorry for her, of course—just as sorry as any husband could be. And, like any other husband, he stands and surveys her for a moment and then bluntly says:

"I expected it! Finally got flat down, eh?"

"It's nothing," she faintly replies.

"Oh! It isn't! Nothing for a wife to flop down and have the whole house, I suppose! Well, I've been looking for it the last three months, and so I'm not much surprised. Mrs. Bowser, it's a wonder to me that you or any other woman in New York is out of her coffin!"

"It's only—only a headache, dear."

"Yes, only a headache; but what do headaches lead to? If you've not a dead woman before Saturday night you may consider yourself lucky. Didn't I warn you not to sit in a draft, not to wear thin shoes, not to eat too much ice cream, not to—"

"You can't help ailing occasionally," she replied, as she got up to wet the bandage around her head.

"Mrs. Bowser, look at me!" he said, as he struck an attitude and held one hand aloft. "When am I ever ailing? When do you hear me complain? Never! And why is it? Because, Mrs. Bowser—because I don't cram my stomach with watermelon, buttermilk, grindrops, custard pie, sweet cake, ginger ale, and all that! Because I don't go around with my feet sopping wet! Because I know enough to come in when it rains! Because I exercise a little common sense in taking care of myself!"

"Your dinner is ready."

"And I'm ready for dinner. A healthy, happy person is always ready for his meals. You won't try to get up, I suppose?"

"Not now."

"Well, you have only yourself to blame. You may learn in time, but I doubt it. I'd like to find one woman with about two ounces of horse sense in her head before I die, but I don't expect to do it. Well, it can't be helped, I suppose. The Lord made you that way, and it's no use to argue."

Mr. Bowser eats his dinner, smokes his cigar and sings and whistles as if the slightest noise didn't go through her aching head like a bullet. It never occurs to him to fan her with the bandage or ask if she can't sip a cup of tea. It does occur to him, however, to say, about bedtime:

"I'm sorry, of course, but then you must have known the sense I'll get to bed and you can come when you get ready. If you are going to kick around much, you'd better sleep in the spare room."

Now and then the tables are turned. Mr. Bowser comes home to lunch, dragging his legs after him and looking pale and sorrowful.

"What's the matter?" asked Mrs. Bowser, as soon as he steps into the house.

"Got a sore throat and I feel feverish. I—I think I'm going to be sick!"

She doesn't call out that it's just as she expected and declare that no husband in New York has sense enough to look out for his health. She doesn't say he was out in a draft in his shirt sleeves, but she doesn't even mention it. On the contrary, she remarks:

"Try and eat a little something and then lie down. You'd better gargle your throat and then tie it up."

"You people think its anything serious!" he whispers, as he grows paler.

"I hope not, but it's best to be on the safe side. You are subject to quinsy, you know, and spinal meningitis begins just this way."

"I believe I'm going to die," gasps Mr. Bowser, as he grows so weak that she has to take off his boots and vest and get him on the lounge. Everything about the house is ordered to go on tiptoe, and even the cat is put out and the clock stopped. After his throat has been tied up, his shoes taken off and a quilt thrown over him Mr. Bowser plaintively inquires:

"Don't you think you'd better send for a doctor?"

"Not just yet, dear. I don't think it's very serious."

"Mrs. Bowser, I believe I'm already struck with death!"

"Nonsense! You've just got a little inflammation of the tonsils."

"I've felt for some days as if a great calamity hung over this household. Hadn't we better have two doctors?"

"Just try and get to sleep, Mr. Bowser, and I'll warrant you'll feel better by night."

"Ah! how I suffer," he groans. "You may be a widow before the week is out. I hope you will always be kind to our child. I have tried to be a good husband, and—and"——

Mrs. Bowser lays her hand on his forehead tenderly, and she comes to his eyes and he suddenly becomes a great big booby. She has to hold his hand to get him to sleep, and when he wakes up he wants tea and toast and jelly and he is as petulant as a sick baby until finally put to bed. He is a new man when he awakes in the morning, and when she asks after his throat he replies:

"Throat—humph. Mrs. Bowser, for about five hours yesterday I was hovering between life and death. Had it been you and I'd have died in ten times over, but grit pulled me through."

"Grit!"

"Yes. Grit—sand—pluck—Spartan courage and fortitude. I let none of you know how bad I actually was, but just shut my teeth and determined to live and here is the result of it. Ah! Mrs. Bowser, if you only had a hundredth part of my courage and will power you'd be a far different woman from what you are now—a far different woman!"—M. Quad in New York World.

Didn't Come Around.

"See here, waiter," said a guest at a hotel in a new and struggling town, "haven't you got any milk for this coffee?"

"No, sir," replied the waiter affably, "the milkman didn't come around this morning."

"I don't see any bread."

"No, the bread man didn't come around."

"Can't you give me some iced tea?"

"Well, no; the fact is the ice man didn't come around.

"I don't see any meat on the table; nothing but fried catfish."

"No; catfish is the best we can do. The meat man didn't come around."

"Well, who in thunder did come around? There isn't enough to eat on this table to banquet a squirrel."

"There was a cabbage man around yesterday, and if you can wait I'll try and fix you up some cold slaw, or if not I'll get some tierce in some dried beef down in the cellar in a nail keg."—Texas Siftings.

Put Down as a Hosier.

James Whitcomb Riley went abroad recently, and on the vessel coming back volunteered for the regular ship's concert for the benefit of destitute mariners. He read a number of poems, which were rapturously received by everybody present with the exception of two very stolid English men in the front row. The following conversation ensued between them later on in the smoking room:

"I say, Arthur, what was that chap's name who read the verses?"

"Ah, that's Wilcox Riley—he's quite a clever tradesman."

"Bless me, who'd 'a' thought it! I heard he was a literary chap and all that sort of thing."

"No, I'm told he's a hosier."

"You don't say so! Really, now, what a pity it is that a man like him should be tied down to a shop."

And this is what it is to be the Hoosier poet.—Chicago Tribune.

Qualified Affection.

Genuine sorrow is sometimes expressed so strangely that the listener finds it hard not to smile. A case in point is mentioned by a clergyman.

While passing a summer vacation in a thinly settled portion of Maine, he was called upon to officiate at the funeral of a farmer, who had died leaving a widow with whom he had lived in wedlock for nearly half a century.

After the service the widow came to the side of the coffin for a last look at the face of the departed, and as she stood there she bowed a deep sigh, and turned to the clergyman to say, with perfect simplicity:

"Why, yes, ma; how did you know?"

"And the hotel band was playing a delightful waltz by Strauss."

"Why, yes. Who told you?"

"And you two were in the arbor on the lawn."

"Yes."

"And the fountain sparkled in the moon light, and made music which seemed like a fairy echo to the sweet melody which floated out from the distant orchestra."

"Yes. How?"——

"And the lake with its reflection of pretty boats gliding about the softly illuminated waters seemed like a bit of lovely Venice dreaming at your feet."

"Yes, yes. But how did you know all this?"

Fully Equal to the Task.

The young man felt that he was in love, and like a wise young man had decided to consult his father in the matter.

"She's beautiful, of course," said the old gentleman, after hearing the confession.

"Oh, father, she's——"

"Never mind that," interrupted the old gentleman. I know it all. Good family?"

"One of the best in the city," exclaimed the young man. "Why, her father, when he was alive, was"——

"Father dead?" interrupted the old gentleman again.

"Yes. She's an orphan."

"Um—well, that's no fault of hers. Have you stopped to think how you will take care of her?"

"Oh, but she's rich, father!" exclaimed the young man, joyfully. "She's worth $300,000 in her own right."

The old gentleman shook his head doubtfully.

"Never marry a girl for money, my boy," he said. "Never marry a girl for money. You'll regret it if you do."

"But, father"——

"Never marry a girl for money," repeated the old gentleman meditatively. "It makes more trouble in the world than any other one thing. But," he added, suddenly straightening up, "if you can love a girl who has money for heaven's sake do it."

"I can, father! I can!" exclaimed the young man.

"My blessing, my boy. I am proud of you."—Chicago Tribune.

It is said. Prizes are given to successful contestants.

—W. H. Rogers, of North Plainfield, exhibited a basket of Rural New Yorker potatoes at the fair last week which were a sight to behold. They were the largest we have seen. File the Names of the Nominees.

Election this year comes on the third of November. Nominations must be certified to the County Clerks at least twenty days before that time, the latest date being October 14. Probably all nominations will be made before the ending of the previous week, October 10, so as to give time to secure the written acceptance of candidates and for the filing of the certificates of nomination.

Mayor Gilbert Notifies the Saloon Keepers.

The following notice speaks for itself:

THE MAYOR'S OFFICE, {
PLAINFIELD, N. J., Sept. 25, 1891.

Dear Sir:

On and after Monday, the 28th inst., the following ordinance, which was adopted by the Common Council on the 14th inst. will be operative, and a violation of any of its provisions, will upon conviction subject the party violating it, not only to the penalty provided therein, but also to a revocation of his license as provided in the "Ordinance to license inns and taverns, and to regulate the sale of spirituous and fermented liquors."

I earnestly request you as a law-abiding citizen to co-operate with the enforcement of this law.

Very respectfully,
A. GILBERT, Mayor.

AN ORDINANCE

to amend an ordinance entitled "An ordinance to license inns and taverns and to regulate and prohibit the sale of spirituous and fermented liquors," approved February 3, 1875, re-adopted March 8, 1875, notwithstanding the objections of the Mayor, amended by ordinances approved February 3, 1879, December 7, 1881, December 19, 1882, January 30, 1883, November 10, 1884, December 31, 1887, February 7, 1888, and two ordinances approved February 5, 1889.

The Inhabitants of the city of Plainfield by their Common Council do enact as follows:

Sec. 1. That no person licensed under the ordinance to which this is an amendment, shall suffer or permit in his or her bar-room or room in which spirituous or fermented liquors are customarily sold, or in any room in the same building wherein spirituous or fermented liquors are dispensed or drunk, any musical performance of any kind, vocal or instrumental, or both, or any mechanical music, or any acting, dancing, juggling, sleight of hand, boxing, wrestling or any similar performance, show or exhibition.

Sec. 2. Every person licensed under the ordinance to which this is an amendment, to sell spirituous or fermented liquors, shall so arrange the doors, windows and partitions of his or her bar-room or saloon, that a full and unobstructed view of the interior thereof, including the bar, may be had from the street through the doors or windows, or both, between the hours of 12 p. m. each and every Saturday at 6 a. m. the following Monday. And no window, blind, screen, partition, curtain, or other article shall be so left or placed as to prevent between the hours named the full and unobstructed view from the street of the interior of any saloon or bar-room licensed under the ordinance to which this is an amendment.

Sec. 3. No person licensed under the ordinance to which this is an amendment, shall at any time sell or dispose spirituous or fermented liquors from any bar that cannot between the hours named in Section 2, be plainly seen from the street.

Sec. 4. That a copy of any of the provisions of this ordinance shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars or by imprisonment not exceeding thirty days, or both, at the discretion of the court.

More School Houses.

State Superintendent of Public Instruction E. O. Chapman says there will be in the neighborhood of 100 new school houses erected in the State this year. This just about comes up to the usual standard as far as number is concerned. The cities, however, are making a big spurt this year and many large and very handsome structures are being erected. Mr. Chapman thinks that the State will do more towards providing the proper accommodations for its school children than it has in ten years.

Base Ball.

Belligerent words from the West Enders.

[From the Somerville Democrat.]

CRESCENTS CRAWL.

To the editor of the Somerset Democrat:

The above is rather a broad statement, but true nevertheless. The Crescents are afraid to play off the seventh game with the West Ends, as they know only too well that they are outclassed and would be ashamed of sight. That they won any of the six games is all a mistake as it was not good ball playing, it was simply luck and that alone. What a sportsman-like spirit this growelling Plainfield Club shows! The high sense of honor is shown by those managers who represent, or rather misrepresent, the Crescent League. Their high sense of honor in shewing to play off the tie, in case it should occur, on Saturday, September 26th, provided the Crescent Athletic Club, of Brooklyn, was unable to play then, one of the managers in the coolest possible manner informed Mr. Mack, "We don't care for any honor or glory, we can make more money playing the niggers than you." So they refused to play a game with the Gorhams for the 26th. Does this look as though they were afraid of playing or not? We will leave it to all fair-minded people to decide the question in their own minds. The Crescent League people are like the proverbial balloon, plenty of gas, but very little sand. No wonder the management are so much condemned by everyone in Plainfield. The idea when they could on next Saturday draw a big crowd to witness the playing us, they arrange a game with a coon nine and that on they will have a larger crowd. But the question is can grey crawl into their holes and die? We, the rest of the world forgive them this matter, or will they dare meet us on equal terms and play to see who in reality are the champions of Union county. The Crescents take this, or if the people of Plainfield allow them to take it, the town might as well stop shaking a base ball for the next few years. We will wait and see. WEST ENDER.

AMID SILENT COMPANIONS.

A Plainfielder's Disquisition on Poets and Poetry.

With what sublime encouragement did Hugo exclaim, "O poets! the first rank is ever free!" With what courage did he place poetry more supreme than love, love that passeth all understanding. As each star is distinct and yet a part of the firmament, so is each great poet dis. tinct and yet a part of the great art of poesy. When we consider that genius may penetrate into the most secret places of the soul, it is not strange that a superhuman poem occasionally showers its new light upon the world and finally becomes an everlasting power; such as the Song of Solomon, the Divine Comedy, Faust, Hamlet, Lear, Paradise Lost. Such poets we marvel at and study and cannot say enough to elevate them, and yet we speak of the dearth of poetry. There is no dearth of poetry, for we have the great epics and odes and songs and tragedies of the past. What we lack is a reigning master of song. Say what we may, "the first rank is ever free." How gladly would the world welcome a new genius, yet Dante was an exile, Milton was ill-thought of, and Shakespeare's plays were forbidden after his death.

With such thoughts in the mind, the place of poetry must not be misunderstood. It is not now on Rubicville beginning for aims; though it is strange that the Civil War should bring forth no more great poets and poems than it did. In the progress of American literature the Rebellion did little for poetry. Whittier is the only distant outcome of it, for Lowell was a poet in himself, and seemed the moment to produce his poems of the soul and of mankind. Whittier endows his war and slavery poems almost solely with religious feeling; Lowell brought to his, notions of broad life and exultant learning for which gives him precedence in our literature of that time.

The poetry which arose from the French Revolution, the poetry of Keats, of Shelley, of Wordsworth, of Coleridge, combines all the phases of sensuality and locality and passion (Byron being the most sensuous and passionate of the group), but it lacked the sublimity of being allied with humanity, with the human soul in its highest aspirations and noblest deeds. Wordsworth is the least visionary of the group; Keats is the most poetic—classically poetic. The poetry which arose from the Civil War possesses the fervor of a noble principle, the principle of freedom from bondage; but there is the chance for ranting thought into more liberal truths, it failed to change more than a few truths, inasmuch as eloquence was wasted in appealing narrowly to a majority. It was a great principle that was battled for, but it could not be indulged save by a few, the poets remaining curiously in silence, such is the outcome of the Rebellion. Thirty years have produced none other than the New England group of the generations of that may yet be in store for us the Muses alone can tell.

The portion of America in the annals of English song is notable. Our great poets have been in all cases men of intense life-feeling, whose intellectual charm has not been their least part of renown. The New England group have been men of learning, all descended from sturdy English stock with many in the calling of ministers as ancestry. This is not sufficient cause for obliging the Muses to bow their heads in shame because their truest lovers in America have passed away. The poetic art is now only eclipsed by the prose era: it is neither disfigured nor disarmed: it is merely dormant until the ebbing tide washes the wreck-beatrewn shore once again.

The place of poetry is in unison with love, neither of them worth following without an ideal passionate voice of beauty. It is not a matter of choice nor of faith, but in it there is the blind worship as of love, worship which is a power within the greater powers of love and poetry. Poetry has its best seat in the soul, for there sense is without guile, passion is devoid of evil; there simplicity is without affectation. As the soul is the seat of the conscience or visible truth, so must conscience be as much in the spirit of poetry as poetic expression is in the spirit of conscience which makes the supremacy of the soul in man and the supremacy of poetry in literature.

More poetry, then, is no longer a matter of immediate necessity, as its supremacy over other forms of thought is assured by its being linked unmistakably with the supremacy of the soul, it is certain that love and truth and conscience are the powers over life which will keep its light inexhaustably shining. Arnold and Emerson concur in attaining to the soul and all that is most rare and poetic in poetry—

"Ah! not to me those dreams belong!
A better voice peals through my song";

no, not to the poet, but to the supernatural soul, rising far above the thoughts of the day, far above the malice, far above superficial discourse, far above unmannish voices. True poetry, wherein "the first rank is ever free," bids us

"Shun passion, fold the hands of thrift,
Sit still and truth is near:
Smile only to uplift
Your eyelids to the sphere.
Wait a little, you shall see
The portraiture of things to be."

It bids us withhold our hands from wrong; it is the incentive toward that high and serious holiness which may ultimately cause its own martyrdom; it is no folly to proclaim genius in poetry; it is no folly to proclaim the office of poetry as sanctifice, for noble character is none the less beautiful after being sung by a bard of holy purpose. One of the sublimest passages in Sartor Resartus is Teuffelsdroch's belief that "there is in man a higher than Love of Happiness: he can do without Happiness and instead thereof find Blessedness." By poetry and ideals this may be wrought out: poetry of life and soul as well as poetry of literature.

Saint and holiness are words the world scoffs at and ridicules in conceited wit; it denies the right of sanctification to the sainted man. "I am holy, therefore be ye holy!" is it not the cry of genius? and is not genius the passing revelation of God through living man? Great thoughts come from greater men. It is of not well then to rate poetry as the song of the soul? the most pure songs this side of heaven? As sang Emerson, so is the hope of all poesy:—

"Teach me your mood, O patient stars!
Who climb each night the azure skies,
Leaving on space, its shade, no scars,
No trace of age, no fear to die."

FICTION VS. FACTS.

The Blood-Curdling Tale and the Basis for It.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS—The following item was clipped from the New York World yesterday:

HIS FINGER WAS CUT OFF.

ANOTHER WOMAN SAVED ROBINSON FROM THE REVOLVING KNIVES.

[Special to the World.]

PLAINFIELD, Sept. 24.—William Robinson an employe at the Pond Tool Works, was working on a huge planer yesterday, when somehow the index finger of his right hand was caught. Robinson tried to release it, but could not. He found that he was slowly drawn towards the keen-edged and swiftly revolving knives. He called for help, but the rattling of the flying cranes and shaking chains drowned his voice.

There were 300 workmen within speaking distance, but all busily and none knew their fellow-workmen was in danger.

Robinson gave another wrench, but it was useless.

His finger was within an inch of the knives when a workman happened to look towards him. He understood in an instant Robinson's situation. He leaped to the switch, turned the belt off the pulley and the machinery stopped.

Robinson's fingers had reached the knives and had been cut off. Another minute and the man would have been dragged in.

Robinson's wounded hand was dressed at Muhlenberg Hospital. He lies there completely prostrated.

Those who are interested in blood-curdling stories may not relish having the truth thus exploded by evidence of its falsity, but there are discrepancies that need correction, so that the terror inspired by reading the account of a man irresistibly drawn towards the "Swiftly revolving knives" may not resolve itself into frightful dreams. First, Robinson was not working on a planer; second, there are not 300 workmen in that part of the Pond Machine Tool Company's huge planers; third, he didn't call loudly for help finally, but when he was within speaking distance, but were scattered through a building 700 feet long; fifth, his finger was not cut off, and lastly he was 40 feet away from a planer when he was injured. Mr. Wm. Robinson, an employe of the Pond Machine Tool Company's Works met with an accident on Wednesday, which required the amputation of a part of the index finger of his right hand. He was engaged with others in lifting a heavy piece of steel by means of a hand hoist, when, owing to an unskilful hitch of the chain, the bar slipped and in falling caught the finger of Robinson in such a way as to smash the end of it. The injured man walked to the Muhlenburg Hospital where surgical aid was received.

No further serious results are expected. Mr. Robinson is very unfortunate, having lost one eye in the Pond Machine Tool Co.'s foundry about a year ago. To one who knows the facts an outrageous exaggeration like the one contained in the clipping suggests a few questions, answers to which will interest those who are unable to see the value of such false statements. What motive could the person who furnished that item have for leaving the truth so far out of sight? Does the journalistic conscience sanction such a wide deviation from facts, even though by so doing a thrilling article may be produced? Is it the custom in regard to gaining credit of the veracity of correspondents, or are statements similar to the one from the "World" accepted and printed on the basis of everything being truthful till proved to be false? These questions are put with the desire to gain information as to the principles followed by news-paper publishers to secure reliable news. The editorial in The Twos of the 10th inst., on "Newspaper Morality" was dictated by good, sound sense, and should be read by every one who is interested in having the newspaper press maintain a reputation as a medium of correct information. L. C. B.

[The local correspondents of the New York papers are paid by the column—that is by the word—and that is the more blood-curdling the tale, regardless of facts, the more easily it will go, particularly with the World, which has become so notorious for that sort of thing that people have formed the habit and will allow it in their homes. A gentleman once said to the writer people on the trains who read the World now-a-days usually are easily humbugged.

Of course the publishers do not knowingly publish falsehoods, but are imposed upon as in the above case, which is of daily occurrence. The correspondents send the same stories to all the papers, but as the others do not strain after sensational effect the fakes do not appear so conspicuous.

It is a general humbugging all around. Barnum said "the public like to be humbugged." The World seems to act on that principle. The correspondents humbug the New York papers by pretending to send the fake—of course not as a fake—to each paper exclusively. They get most money from the World because it seems most easily fooled or disposed to encourage lying. One of its most notorious correspondents had a habit of revamping stories several years old and palming them off as new, or manufacturing one like the above almost entirely from his imagination. Only for the good of the profession is it any of our funeral bo'hwer.—Ed.]

The "Sophs" and "Freshmen" of Rutger's Have a Cane Rush.—The Victorious "Sophs" Raise a Banner.—A Fierce Struggle Follows.—Exciting Times in Quiet New Brunswick.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Sept. 26th, (Special)—The Sophmores and Freshmen students of Rutger's college had a "cane-rush" last evening, which was continued this morning. The Sophmores were victorious, and this morning hung a banner across George street, which, after a fierce struggle, was torn down. A large crowd of citizens and police gathered and after another melee the students dispersed to the college where they were immediately reprimanded by the faculty and ordered to their rooms under penalty of dismissal and arrest. It was a disgraceful occurrence and many students were injured.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Post Office Banks.

Sylvester Baxter, who writes in The Arena, believes that postal savings banks will save the country. In his judgment we have outgrown the national banking system and something else is now imperatively demanded. He quotes Hon. Leo D. A. Wasson to the effect that while the national banks are in a sense under the protection of the government, interested for those who deposit money in them are inadequately guarded.

Mr. Baxter would remedy the defects in our financial system by having the government itself go into the banking business to some extent. The bill for postal savings banks already prepared by the postmaster general meets Mr. Baxter's approval in most of its provisions. All that is necessary for both the circulating medium and depositors is what is required in the perfect banking system. Government postal banks would, in the opinion of the writer, provide this. At least we ought to have the postal savings bank system, with a clearing house arrangement whereby anybody could deposit his cash at any postoffice and get it out at any other in the Union. The use of these funds would be sufficient compensation to the government in case it should do no deposit business, though very small fees and commission might be charged.

In the savings bank part of the scheme Mr. Baxter thinks the government might pay a small interest, say that proposed by Mr. Wanamaker, 2.4 per cent. What would it do with these deposits? They could be used, in erecting public buildings and in making the postal service. Money from mere depositors might be loaned on mortgages on farm lands, etc., at 2 per cent. The difference between this and the 2.4 per cent. which it pays to savings depositors is to be made up in some way which is not made very clear, though the use of the big yield of money the plan would give to the government.

The Austrian postal banking system which meets Mr. Baxter's view so exactly is as follows:

We have but to look to Austria for a most successful example of a truly national banking system, that completely meets the demand. When Austria established its postal savings bank, in 1883, a regular check and clearing system was made a feature thereof. This, offering substantially the same convenience as other systems of private or national banks in this country, together with the additional advantages of absolute security of deposits, and that of a postoffice in every village, has become enormously popular with the mercantile public, so that the regular banking department has quite overshadowed the savings department, important as the latter is.

Every postoffice in Austria, therefore, has the function of both a savings bank and a bank of deposit. A permanent deposit of 100 florins, or forty dollars, is sufficient to make a person a member of the bank, and a check for any part, not less than a florin, can be drawn for more than 1000 florins ($400). Interest is paid on deposits at a rate not exceeding 2 per cent., and the interest on savings does not exceed 3 per cent.

Compressed Air Motors.

The attention of mechanics and inventors has been awakened to the great motive possibilities that lie in compressed air. At the Franklin institute in Philadelphia Mr. Coleman Sellers said that 50,000 horse power could be conveyed in the shape of compressed air for a distance of twenty miles through two pipes, by simply utilizing some of the tremendous compressing force of the descending stream of water at Niagara Falls.

Various methods now being tried to get the pressure on the air show that it can be obtained more economically than has heretofore been supposed. As the air leaves the tubes to enter the engine it has been found that a great gain is instantly made by reference for reheating it. Only an insignificant amount of fuel is required for this. At present compressed air is used as a motor on some of the English street railroads.

In Paris the compressed aire motor is becoming exceedingly popular. It is even employed with success to drive electric dynamos. In Berlin a central compressed air plant supplies power to a number of manufacturing establishments. On the English street railways it has been found that fifty cubic feet of compressed air are all that is necessary for a car to carry.

Professor Oliver J. Lodge, of the British association, has a long tail of honorable initials to his name. He made a speech in the mathematical and physical science section of the association that is remarkable in some respects. He spoke of thought transference, so called, and said that it may be one in direction of a higher mode of communication which shall survive our temporary connection with ordinary matter." He exhorted with the utmost earnestness the trained men before him and those elsewhere to take up seriously and scientifically the investigation of thought transference and the kindred subjects denominated in the language of the time "occult." He declared there would be here the realization of a grander epoch than any science had dreamed of, and whether there was or not, the time had come when scientific men in the B. A. should investigate these things, and not leave them to outsiders.

A very good maxim for the Indiana gentlemen who have been in a quandary about the value at which to assess for taxation the $105,000,000 or Axtell would be the one long since laid down by sound political economists as follows, Never tax heavily property that can run away.

CHINA COMES TO TERMS.

She Will See That Foreigners Are Protected.

HER WARSHIPS ARE NOW AT WORK.

The Emperor Will Pay Damages to European Powers for the Loss of Caucasian Life and Property—British Subjects Supply Arms to Rioters.

LONDON, Sept. 26.—Following is a summary of the official cablegram received from Pekin by the foreign office. Specific sums of money are offered to the treaty powers to compensate for the loss of life and property at Wuhu, Wusuch, Tanyang, Wooseih and other places where the outbreaks occurred. Four leaders of the riots have been executed and twenty-one banished, and five Mandarins have been adjudged culpably remiss in having failed to deal effectively with the rioters and to take adequate measures to preserve order. They have been reported to the throne for punishment.

Recognizes Its Responsibility.

The imperial government, recognizing its entire responsibility for the preservation of order at the treaty ports and for the protection of missionaries in the interior, has ordered the viceroys of Chihli and Nanking to dispatch the northern and southern squadrons of the Chinese fleet to patrol the Yangtsen and afford protection wherever the life and property of Europeans are still apparently threatened.

Can Cope with the Rioters.

Although the rumors of further troubles still existing in certain places, the imperial government has no doubt of its ability to cope effectively with any attempts at fresh breaches of the peace, whether from the operations of secret societies or the result of local or accidental circumstances.

Secret Societies Active.

Nothing is known respecting the reports cabled to Europe of an attempt to seize the arsenal at Foochow, but undoubted evidence of the activity of secret societies has been obtained in other quarters. Thirty-five cases of foreign rifles, consigned to a British subject employed in the imperial customs service at Shanghai, Chinkeang, have been seized by customs officers at Shanghai.

Assisted by British Subjects.

The consignee was arrested and sent to Shanghai to be dealt with by the British authorities. The same man was found to be in possession of a quantity of dynamite, which he confessed was intended for use by a secret society at Chinkeang. Two other British subjects and six other foreigners, of doubtful nationality, residents of Shanghai, were found to be implicated in this transaction.

A MIDGET'S CRADLE.

The Story of a French Dwarf Who Lived in a Shoe.

There is a nursery rhyme about

An old woman who lived in a shoe,

but whether her children, who were so numerous

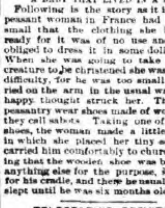
She didn't know what to do with them, lived there also, is not quite clear. Probably their beds were elsewhere. It has always appeared to us rather unlike that any lady could live in a shoe, how ever small she might be. But, if one can believe all one reads, a French dwarf certainly did live in a shoe for the first six months of his life.



A BABY THAT LIVED IN A SHOE.

Following is the story as it is told: A peasant woman in France had a baby so small that the clothing she had made ready for it was of no use and she was obliged to dress it in some doll's clothes. When she was going to take the little creature to be christened she was in a fresh difficulty, for he was too small to be carried on the arm in the usual way. But a happy thought came to her. The French peasantry wear shoes made of wood, which they call sabots. Taking one of her own shoes, the woman made a little bed in it, in which she placed her tiny son, and so carried him comfortably to church. Finding that the wooden shoe was better than anything else for the purpose, she used it for his cradle, and there he usually lay and slept until he was six months old.

REV. DR. BURCHARD DEAD.

He Was the Author of "Rum, Romanism and Rebellion."

SARATOGA, Sept. 26.—The Rev. Dr. Samuel D. Burchard died here at 4 p. m. Sept. 25. Dr. Burchard became particularly well known during the campaign in which Blaine and Cleveland were pitted against each other for the presidency. He it was who at a dinner given to Mr. Blaine made the reference to "rum, Romanism and rebellion," which was supposed by many of Mr Blaine's friends to have caused his defeat at that time.

Rev. Burchard was prostrated with lumbago on Sunday. Monday he was more comfortable and hopes were entertained of his speedy recovery, but Tuesday the case was aggravated and his recovery despaired of. Dr. Burchard was born in Steuben, Sept. 5, 1812. He was graduated from Center college, and then studied theology at Danville, Ky., and began to preach in 1838. He became pastor of a church in New York, where he remained for forty years. In 1880 he became president of Rutgers Female college. The doctor leaves one son who is a doctor and another who is a lawyer.

REV. DR. BURCHARD.

Dr. Burchard's famous utterance he delivered on Wednesday, Oct. 29, 1884, in one of the parlors of the Fifth Avenue hotel, New York. A delegation of clergymen had waited upon Mr. Blaine. Dr. Burchard was chairman, and in his remarks of welcome he said to Mr. Blaine:

"We are very happy to welcome you to this circle. You see here a representation of all the denominations of this city. You see the large majority that are represented. We are your friends, Mr. Blaine. Notwithstanding all the calumnies that have been waged in the papers against you, we stand by your side. We expect to vote for you next Tuesday. We have a high opinion, sir, which is that you will be the president of the United States and that you will do honor to our name, to the United States and to the high office you will occupy. We are Republicans and don't propose to leave our party and identify ourselves with the party whose antecedents have been rum, Romanism and rebellion. We are loyal to our flag, we are loyal to you."

The remarks were well advertised by Mr. Blaine's opponents.

WORLD'S FAIR GOSSIP.

Contract Laborers for Foreign Exhibitors May Go to Chicago.

CHICAGO, Sept. 26.—Sir Henry Ponsonby, of England's headquarters on the fair grounds has been selected by Sir Henry T. Wood and James Dredge, and was approved by the buildings and buildings committee. The grounds and buildings committe have approved the sites of Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Maine, Maryland, Michigan, New Hampshire, New Jersey, North Carolina, Ohio, Oregon, South Dakota, Vermont, West Virginia and Washington.

Tuesday night a banquet will be tendered by the citizens of Chicago to Sir Henry Trueman Wood and James Dredge, royal commissioners from England. Herr Alfermuth, imperial commissioner from Germany, and Dr. John Meyer, royal commissioner from Denmark. Invitations have been issued to about 700 of the leading citizens of Chicago. It will be the greatest banquet ever given in Chicago.

These Contract Laborers May Come.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Nettleton states that when laborers, artists or experts are in the employ of foreign exhibitors coming to the United States in connection with the foreign exhibits at the World's fair they will be freely admitted and will be subjected to no delay or hindrance of any nature.

He Got Hydrophobia from a Calf.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Sept. 26.—William B. Stout, a wealthy farmer residing at Hamilton, near here, is dying from hydrophobia. Several months ago, while doctoring a calf that had been bitten by a rabid dog the animal licked a sore on his arm. A few days ago his arm began swelling and he quickly developed the usual fatal size. Mr. Stout has shown every sign of rabies. The doctors think he will die.

Murdered and Left in the Woods.

WASHINGTON, Pa., Sept. 26.—The body of Emma Gross, who passed as the wife of Frank Caitlin, was found dead in the woods just south of McDonald, without any clothing, the face and head being horribly mashed and a bullet hole over the left eye. Caitlin and the woman quarreled on Tuesday. The police are now looking for Caitlin.

THEY ARE AFTER FACTS.

What the Senate's Tariff Committees Are Doing.

EX-SPEAKER CARLISLE EXPLAINS

The Work Is Not Confined to an Investigation of the McKinley Tariff Bill Alone but Tariff Laws Generally, and the Cost of Living Are Included Also.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—The subcommittee of the senate committee on finance, which was appointed to make an exhaustive inquiry into the workings of the tariff laws, have begun their public inquiry at the Fifth Avenue hotel. The members of the subcommittee are Senators Nelson W. Aldrich, of Rhode Island; William B. Allison, of Iowa; Frank Hiscock, of New York; Isham G. Harris, of Tennessee, and John G. Carlisle, of Kentucky. Plans of work are under discussion today.

Senator Carlisle's Statement.

Senator Carlisle has prepared a statement showing the scope and powers of the subcommittee, the nature of the work which it has thus far accomplished, what it is doing now, and what it proposes to do. He says: "It seems to be quite generally supposed that we are simply inquiring into the effects of the late tariff act commonly known as the McKinley bill, where in fact we are directed by the resolution of the senate to investigate and report upon the effects of tariffs generally without special reference to any particular measure. This of course, covers a wide field of inquiry.

"We were unanimously of the opinion that we should ascertain actual facts and not listen to mere opinions, and accordingly we have arranged hearings to parties interested, but have proceeded through our own selected agents and experts to collect such information as we desired.

Facts Are After.

"In short, we are proceeding to ascertain the facts relating to prices, wages, cost of living, etc., by the same methods that are adopted in taking a census or collecting other statistics.

"When we have got the facts we will draw our own conclusions, and then there may be wide differences of opinion among us, but up to the present time we have been unanimous in our proceedings.

"We have agreed upon a list of more than 400 articles in common use among the people, and have been getting the retail prices of those articles at about seventy representative cities in the United States from September, 1889, to September, 1891, and the wholesale prices of the same articles for the same period at six of the most important cities. This work has been done through the agents of the department of labor at Washington and is nearly completed.

The Wages of Laborers.

"The subcommittee is also procuring the wholesale prices of a great number of articles, foreign and domestic, for a period of fifty years. The wages of laborers in mining and mercantile industries and in agriculture will also be ascertained for as long a period as possible, and an effort will be made to ascertain the average annual cost of living of a great number of representative families having an income ranging from $500 to $5,000, so that we may be able to determine about how much is expended for clothing, food of different kinds, rent and other items.

The Farmer's Field.

"We propose also to ascertain the prices of agricultural products at the farms for a series of years and the cost of transportation to the markets. It is our purpose to conduct the investigation from the standpoint of the consumer as far as possible. In other words, we propose to begin the investigation at the point where what may be called the primary market and trace the articles until they reach the consumer. We want to find what prices the consumer has at different times been compelled to pay for the necessaries of life and why he has been compelled to pay those prices, whether it has been on account of tariffs or cost of transportation, or the extortion of middlemen, or other cause.

To Investigate the Tin Plate Industry.

"Special inquiries will be made in regard to the proposed manufacture of tin and terne plate in this country, and the prices at which it can now and hereafter be procured. It is said that many new companies and existing establishments are preparing to engage in this new industry, and we will endeavor to ascertain all the facts in regard to them, where their works are or will be located, precisely what they are now doing and what they propose in good faith to do hereafter. We will be able to present a report, I think, until next spring or early in the summer, as it will require a long time to collect and arrange the material."

Boomers Suffering from Thirst.

GUTHRIE, O. T., Sept. 26.—Every courier from the boomer camps is harrowing tale of sufferings for water. Fully a hundred people are more or less seriously ill. Seventy horses have died for lack of water. L. D. Woods, of this city, has been shot dead in the Sac and Fox country. A number of men from Stillwater have pounded a town in the Sac and Fox country, calling it Saclahoma, and they are already publishing a newspaper. The Saclahoma men will be compelled to leave, as a town cannot be legally laid out.

Prussia's Wheat Crop.

BERLIN, Sept. 26.—The North German Gazette publishes the official results of inquiries in regard to the wheat crop of Prussia. According to this the crop amounts to 18,848,000 double quintals, against 17,523,000 in 1890. The summer and winter wheat crops together will yield 1,000,000 double quintals over the same crops of 1890.

Painter Lucas Not Killed.

MADRID, Sept. 26.—John Seymour Lucas, A. R. A., the distinguished English painter, reported as among those killed by the railway collision between Burgos and San Sebastian, is not dead, but severely wounded.

The Delegates Joined the Rush.

OKLAHOMA CITY, O. T., Sept. 26.—Owing to the rush to the new lands only a few of the delegates to the Oklahoma statehood convention put in their appearance, and the convention was indefinitely postponed.

AUGUSTA, Me., Sept. 26.—Secretary Blaine has arrived here from Ellsworth. He looked exceedingly well.

TWELVE ARE DEAD NOW.

The Terrible Horror of the Fireworks Explosion.

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 26.—The list of deaths by the bomb explosion grows. Twelve are dead at the latest count and more certain to follow. Twelve men and women are most grievously wounded and a dozen more will carry scars through life. Truly St. Rocco's day was celebrated by Newark's Italian colony with blood and anguish and a sorry responsibility is laid on the fire superintendents for permitting an Italian to set off homemade fireworks in a crowded street. Here is the list of dead and injured, obtained from various sources:

Michael Anselone, nineteen years old, 24 Drift street, son of the fireworks man.

Henry Burgesser, thirteen years old, Clifton avenue and Seventh; disemboweled.

Charles Stewart Cornlin, twelve years old; disemboweled in a frightful manner. Died in the ambulance on the way to the City hospital.

Antonio Chieffo, 73 Tray street, Brooklyn. Member of the band.

Arthur Flynn, nine years old, 13 Stone street; abdomen torn open.

Katie Hughes, eighteen years old, corner Sixth avenue and Parker street; struck in back by flying missile.

Lizzie C. Ogden, thirteen years old, of 38 Nason street.

Michael O'Neil, thirteen years old, of 19 Colden street; skull fractured and right side torn out.

Merseppe Saranso, North Canal street.

Frederick Weiss, fifteen years old, 37 Clifton avenue.

All day yesterday frenzied relatives haunted the hospitals and vast crowds visited the scene of the explosion. All day the superintendent was trying to explain away his alleged illegal permit. It had become a custom. That was the only excuse.

GENERAL GRUBB'S MARRIAGE.

His Bride Was Violet Sopwith, the "Rose of Lismore."

LONDON, Sept. 26.—General E. Burd Grubb, of New Jersey, minister to Spain from the United States, and Miss Violet Sopwith, of Lismore, Scotland, were married here today. The bride is known as the "Rose of Lismore" and is the daughter of Hon. Thomas Sopwith, Q. C. and Miss Grubb, the general's daughter, are fast friends. The couple met at a dinner given at the British minister's, at Madrid. Hon. Thomas Sopwith has extensive interests in lead mines in Spain.

The wedding was followed by a breakfast at the town house of the family on Cromwell road. General Grubb was for a long time commander of Philadelphia's famous City Troop, and was Republican candidate for governor of New Jersey, but was defeated by the present incumbent, Governor Leon F. Abbett. This is General Grubb's second marriage. His first wife was a Miss Van Rensselaer and was in addition to being tall, stately and handsome, a very charming woman.

FOR ANOTHER'S CRIME.

Life Convict Gray May Now Be Released by Joseph Brown's Confession.

MINNEAPOLIS, Sept. 26.—For eight years Life Convict Gray has been imprisoned at Chester, Ill., for a murder which he never committed. Jacob Brown, scourged by conscience, has confessed that he committed the deed at Centralia, Ills., in 1883.

The story of the murder is a strange one. Brown, who was tramping, went into a boxcar to sleep. He stumbled over a man in the dark. The man groaned. Brown hit his assailant a death blow with an unshipping pin and fled. Shortly afterward another tramp named Gray came along and went to sleep in the same car. Next morning he had a dead man for a companion. The next morning he arose and found that his arm had lain in a pool of blood. He tore off the blood stained sleeve. This circumstance caused his arrest, conviction and sentence.

A Warrant for the Justice.

LINDEN, N. J., Sept. 26.—Robert J. Daly, a Linden farmer, obtained a warrant yesterday for the arrest of Justice Blauvelt, of Newark, on a charge of grand larceny. A few days ago Daly's farm was raided and the live stock carried off by a gang of men who are alleged to have acted under the directions of Justice Blauvelt.

They Think Anna Is Sane.

RONDOUT, N. Y., Sept. 26.—Anna Dickinson, the lecturer, who has been published broadcast as insane, remains a guest at Interpines; the home of Dr. Frederick W. Seward, near Goshen. People residing in that vicinity do not think Miss Dickinson is insane. She will take the lecture platform during the coming season.

The Fair at Waverly Over.

WAVERLY, N. J., Sept. 26.—The New Jersey state fair closed last night after the most successful exhibition on record. The removal of exhibits began yesterday afternoon and the attendance during the day did not exceed 3,000. The managers are much pleased with the results of the fair.

Big Railroads at War.

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 26.—Trouble is feared between Leavenworth Valley and Jersey Central railroad men in Lafayette, Jersey City. Gangs of laborers in the employ of the latter road are constructing new stations to lay track over disputed ground between the Erie works and their main line.

Killing Diseased Cattle.

JERSEY CITY, Sept. 26.—Twenty-four cows suffering from pleuro-pneumonia were killed in McConvill's abattoir, Jersey City, Thursday, by order of Inspector De Voe. They were owned by Dairyman Fleuberg, of Secaucus.

Train Wrecker Ramel Indicted.

CAMDEN, N. J., Sept. 26.—The grand jury of Warren county has indicted Ramel, alias Barrack, for attempting to wreck a train on the Lehigh Valley road by placing dynamite on the track.

THE ISSUE OUT IN OHIO.

Secretary Blaine Gives His Views on the Subject.

GOV. CAMPBELL TO THE FARMERS.

His Explanation of the Great Sale for Wheat Abroad This Year—Governor Will Speaks a Good Word for William F. Sheehan and Praises the Ticket.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 26.—A special to The Times from Akron, O., says: The following letter has been received by Colonel Conger, of the Republican National committee, from Secretary Blaine:

BAR HARBOR, Me., Sept. 23.

To Colonel A. L. Conger, Akron, O.:

MY DEAR SIR—Your favor received. I cannot take part in the Ohio campaign this year for many reasons which need not be given, but I hope it may be spared to elect Major McKinley. His victory at this time is very important to the country and to the party. He and Mr. Campbell represent the two most different men between the two parties. There is no dodging or evasion and the voter need not be deceived. The election of McKinley means the policy of protection and honest money. The election of Campbell means free trade and corruption of the currency. I believe that Ohio will stand by McKinley. Very sincerely yours,

JAMES G. BLAINE.

Governor Hill at Rochester.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Sept. 26.—Governor Hill arrived in the city at 10:45 last night from Albany. He was met at the Powers hotel by a delegation of citizens, among them being Mayor Carroll, who acted as spokesman and in a neat speech welcomed the governor. The governor spoke as follows:

I am not now on a political tour. Tomorrow I will assume the role of an agriculturist, a role which my good friend Senator McNaughton assumes when he goes to Delaware county. Now I am at all events interested in the success of the ticket. I am just as interested as if I were on the ticket, and wherever I can persuade a wavering Democrat to rally to the support of the ticket I mean to do so. I have no doubt about the result, if the Democrats will stand by the administration I am willing to stand upon them and I think that the Democratic party is willing to stand upon them. This campaign is one of the people against the aristocracy.

A Good Word for Sheehan.

I am pleased with the ticket, and it is one which should please all good Democrats. Mr. Flower is as good a Democrat as any in the state and his associates on the ticket are all worthy of support. Let me say a kind word for my friend, the candidate for lieutenant governor. He has rendered valuable services to the party. The prospect for victory was never brighter. Our party is united and that means success. Mr. Flower has said that the campaign is the skirmish before the battle; that as goes New York this year so goes the battle in '92. I am willing to carry the lunch. Each man must take off his coat and do his part in the canvass.

Campbell to the Farmers.

COLUMBUS, Sept. 26.—Governor Campbell addressed quite a large crowd at the Union County fair at Marysville. He sought to impress the farmers that the reason they were receiving large prices for their wheat was due to the failure of the crops abroad, and because the foreigner's wheat was needed. He said that high protective tariff prevented foreign nations from coming here for their breadstuffs, and they would be so unless compelled to, as in the present instance.

Governor Campbell called attention to the decrease of $80,000,000 in the value of agricultural lands in Ohio in the last decade. He said Mr. Porter's census showed there had been an increase in the wealth of Ohio of $240,000,000. The question to ask the farmers was, Who had obtained this increase in wealth? Certainly it was not theirs.

A New Move in Connecticut.

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 26.—State's Attorney Doolittle, ex-Governor Ingersoll and ex-Judge Stoddard appeared in the civil superior court in the morning. The former informed the court that he had issued two more writs of quo warranto in the political controversy. They are brought with the state as relator in the name of Marvin H. Sanger against E. S. Henry, state treasurer, and John J. Phelan against R. A. Walsh, the state secretary. Mr. Doolittle asked that they be made returnable Oct. 6, and it was ordered. This was a new and surprising move and was the result of a conference between counsel and the parties concerned yesterday after Judge Stoddard's return from Hartford. The Democrats are anxious to get all the cases into the supreme court by next term.

Busted on Flower.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Sept. 26.—General J. W. Husted says that the issue of the state campaign will be honest government for cities. He believes the campaign will be the hottest since the rebellion. When asked for his opinion of Roswell P. Flower he said: "He is a gentleman in every sense of the word. He is enormously wealthy and I have no doubt he is willing to make heavy financial sacrifices in this campaign. Of course, he doesn't care for the governorship. His eye is directed toward the presidency, and let me tell you, if he is elected this fall Mr. Cleveland and Mr. Hill will hear from him in 1892. I know Mr. Flower well. He has risen to wealth, position and influence from small beginnings, and he has earned his progress."

Farmers Will Take a Hand.

ALBANY, Sept. 26.—"The farmers of the state will take a hand in this campaign." This was the declaration that was made here with closed doors between delegates from the State Alliance and the two state leagues. Fifty-five counties were represented and a delegation from the Knights of Labor was admitted. It was decided to issue late to call a farmers' convention this year, but such a step will be taken next year. The farmers will, however, attempt to make their presence felt this year.

A Close Call for His Wife.

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 26.—Julius Seifert was held for trial in this city charged with attempting to to kill his wife. He was intoxicated and ordered her to cook supper for him. When she refused he placed a revolver at her head and pulled the trigger. The cartridge failed to explode.

Charles Emory Smith's Father Dead.

WILLIMANTIC, Conn., Sept. 26.—E. B. Smith, aged eighty-four years, of Mansfield, Conn., died Sept. 25. He was a prominent manufacturer, and was widely known at home and abroad. He was the father of Charles Emory Smith, editor of the Philapelphia Press.

Sir Hector Langevin Not Guilty.

OTTAWA, Sept. 26.—The adoption of the minority report of the privileges and elections committee finding ex-Minister of Public Works Sir Langevin guilty of sounidelity in dishonest practices was lost.

THE GRANT-REILLY CASE.

Dr. Bartsell and Father McGlynn Give Their Views.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Sept. 26.—The famous Grant-Reilly marriage contest, in which a decision was recently rendered by the holy see at Rome declaring legal William F. Grant's first marriage to Mary Reilly, is again the theme of discussion among Catholics. Mr. Grant has made public a number of letters, among them being one from Rev. Dr. E. R. Burtsell, of New York.

Dr. Burtsell defends Grant's course and charges Father Hughes with understanding well on the case. He believes the case may be reopened. Besides this letter, Mr. Grant has one from Dr. McGlynn, in which the priest says that he is satisfied Grant's first marriage was illegal, and that he was a free man when he was married a second time; that the former marriage had been annulled by the state, and, according to the law of the Catholic church, was never a true and binding marriage.

POMPEII.

"How recklessly they hazarded their all!"
So judged we, gazing on the fatal cone,
Mysterious, majestic and alone,
But there within the fair-famed city's wall
The city smiling still beneath its pall
Surrounded by the peerless purple zone
Of mountain, hills and bay, we murmured,
"None,
Whatever toil would have wrested what might Befall!"
Do we not live so, oft, upon the verge
Of rich-filled Life, to us veiled as a spell?
Then comes the thunder and the fiery scourge
We had not our warning, and we heeded not.
—Julia Boynton in Boston Transcript.

THE BOGUS SIR HENRY.

Of course young Lockwood had no business to fall in love with her, but he really couldn't help it.

She was very tall and very pretty, and very pleasant to talk to, and before he went home that night from the assembly he was head over heels in love.

All of events, for nothing away from the assembly resolving to see more of Miss Van Zandt.

This was not a very difficult matter. He had found that she was staying with the Aspinwall Joneses, and he had been great enough to say he might call if he liked.

Lockwood was not unfamiliar with intimate terms with the Aspinwall Joneses, and since a certain episode last summer, in which he thought one of his friends had acted hastily, his relations with Mr. and Mrs. Aspinwall Jones had been somewhat strained. However, he knew it would do the whole family no good to break down the road after all, and he was quite ready to forgive by frame of mind.

He really ought to do something. At evening dress was still the order, and Lockwood's dress suit was very far off and he really should get another. He thought of this in connection with Miss Van Zandt and the thought was a delightful one to him, for he knew Miss Van Zandt was a very rich girl.

If he married her it wouldn't be for money, of course, but then, you know, money is very convenient and not to be despised.

He found Miss Van Zandt on a piazza, and she was very glad to see him, at least she said so, and she smiled in a way that led him to believe that she meant it.

"I was afraid you wouldn't come," she said, "I'm sure you have much better things to do than to waste your time on such a stupid place as this."

"Very good of you to think of me," Lockwood replied, looking down at her in a way that he thought was very tender. "For if you know people in vitations you must know they sometimes accept after all."

Lockwood said a good many things, but he didn't seem to say anything that was taking. He lay back on his chair and watched the girl's pretty face as she talked, and said excellent things at intervals between and then turn of her head she showed her profile to the best advantage with piquancy and mobility and delightful contrast and herpaille was strong and original.

Lockwood wondered whether she was particularly nice, for she was very pleasant to him.

I am almost certain I saw you last year in London. I know you must be an Englishman."

Which was very reasonable, as Lockwood was very large, with a great deal of color in his face and he had blue eyes and very blond hair.

"Really, you are very complimentary, but I have never been abroad," he said.

She seemed so anxious to please him and find subjects that he liked to talk about that Lockwood put her down either for a girl who had been in society very little and had her head turned by the attention she received, or else a girl who merely made a business of flirting.

But he found out a good deal more about her before the summer was over. Miss Aspinwall Jones, who, by the way, did feel from her mother in many ways than one, found it easy to throw them together. It was not a difficult thing to do at all, and so, after a german which they had danced together—the last german, by the way, which was led by Archie Leland and Miss Aspinwall Jones—Miss Van Zandt burst into her friend's room and began to cry in a very self satisfied way and then smile through her tears

"I had to accept him, my dear."

And then they embraced and kissed one another and exchanged mutual confidences.

But the next day lightened complications. Mrs Aspinwall-Jones asked the door after the guests were under her training. Miss Van Zandt left to Hash flesh fails on a picnic and leaving Lockwood out.

And another that started a row between the two, and finally ended in Lockwood's going away to Newport and Miss Van Zandt's admitting herself up for a duel with Mrs. Aspinwall Jones, who emerged presently with suspicious, shining eyes and very red cheeks.

"Tell me about it, do," said Miss Aspinwall Jones.

"I won't," snapped the other, in any thing but an amiable way.

"But I'm awfully sorry."

"Yes!"

And it happened that a few days after Miss Aspinwall Jones looked very tearfully at her friend, and then both examined before agreed that men were perfectly horrid.

There was not very much joking about it, even if the men concerned were only Archie Leland and Colline Tuckerman, but young Lockwood was an altogether different sort of a man, and he inquired about the cause at Newport and smoked thunderbox cigarettes in lonely reflective platoons of the world.

He started very often to write to her and tell her that he was wrong, but it was very hard work, and the half finished notes were consigned to the waste basket or burned. On the third day he found a note at his place at the table, and he looked at the writing and then thought he recognized it.

There was no mistake, the note was from Miss Aspinwall Jones. He opened it, read and whistled.

"Dear Mr. Lockwood," ran the note, "I don't know what you will think of me for writing in this way, and, for goodness' sake, never tell Adele, but I would like very much to have you come and visit us. Mr. Aspinwall Jones has asked you to come and visit us as Lord Fitzmeadle of some thing else, and you may appear at our dance on Monday. Come down and see Adele, and judge for yourself how she takes it—you know very well what I mean. Please write me at once, and perhaps my incorrigible self will.

Lockwood whistled again and took the next train for York. Of course it was not because Lockwood knew some thing paper people intimately that the following item appeared in two of the New York evening papers:

"Sir Henry Barfordshire, of London, arrived yesterday on the Servia, and after a few days' stay at the Murray Hill hotel will proceed immediately to Lenox, where he will be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Aspinwall-Jones at their charming country house there."

Mrs. Aspinwall Jones in particular was delighted with the catch she had made. A real live English baronet, whom her daughter had met in Tuxedo last year, was coming to visit her. It was a feather in her cap, forsooth. "Sir Henry Barfordshire" made his appearance one evening in his traveling suit of tweeds, accompanied by two men servants and innumerable bags and boxes. Hundreds of very English walking sticks and two huge dogs, she was gracious personified.

She thought he was awfully nice and admired his huge pair of reddish brown whiskers, and wondered if all English baronets wore such huge blue glasses and spoke in such muffled tones. She asked him about it and he remarked:

"Aw, yaas, very gweat here, you know,—these glasses. Eyes weak and all that sort o' thing. Those American railways of yours, you know, very twying—dust and all that sort o' thing. Chawming up here, though awfully pwetty place." He had never been to Jersey Barfordshire" made his appearance one evening in his traveling suit of tweeds, accompanied by two men servants and innumerable bags and boxes. Hundreds of very English walking sticks and two huge dogs, she was gracious personified.

Chawming up here, though awfully pwetty place." He had never been to Jersey Barfordshire, but he thought it safe to say that, and he was very glad he had said it.

Lockwood's troubles had only begun though. When he went down for dinner that night he found himself seated next to Adele Van Zandt.

"How I love England," she said.

"Really," he replied in a shaky tone which was muffled and husky. He feared every moment she would recognize his voice. His eyes wandered across the table to Miss Aspinwall Jones, who was eating her salad composedly and with the most demure air in the world.

"I think I saw you there several times, although I didn't meet you."

"Yaas."

"Do you stay in England very much?" she asked.

"All the time—that is, you understand, when I'm not away. I travel many American in London when I do."

"Yaas, very charming woman, Isaid some and all that, don't you know."

"Oh, how very nice. She is in Lenox, I think, now, isn't she?" Miss Mrs. Aspinwall Jones to have her here for dinner to-morrow. Oh, come to think of it, you will be there to-night at the dance and I'll be introduced to you then. How delighted you will be to meet an old friend."

Lockwood thought he would be delighted, but he barked and said he hoped Mrs. Van Rensselaer, to be sure, and he knew her in a very clever woman.

She had known him ever since he was a small boy and probably never hoped to live her so well as these people whom he had just met that summer. And he has tened to say that after all he would quite sure, be the beastly American, and probably remember them all, and really he wouldn't care to trouble Miss Van Zandt, he thought he could get along very well without bothering her to hunt up people for him to talk to.

His long beard began to trouble him and he had narrow escapes from peering wide down his shirt front instead of his mouth, and the wires where it was fastened to his face hurt horribly. He was very hot and altogether the dinner was the longest he ever went through.

"Oh, Sir Henry," said his fair neighbor presently, "what an awful pretty ring," and she looked toward his left hand at a handsome seal.

Lockwood thought she lingered on the "Sir Henry" with tantalizing emphasis; he looked up quickly and then cursed his stupidity for having that ring on.

"I had a friend this summer who had one exactly like it. How very odd!"

"Very," he commented Lockwood, groaning inwardly. "The deuce!" he muttered. "She doesn't seem to be feeling very sadly about this matter. One would think from that letter of hers that she was nearly dead with grief. I wish I were well out of this."

He had a suspicion that one side of his beard was slipping down, and with a flimsy excuse he left the table hurriedly.

"Your Englishman is a great bear and very rude," said Miss Van Zandt to Mrs. Aspinwall Jones presently.

"You mustn't judge him too off hand," was the reply, "I have looked him up in the 'peerage,' and he comes from one of the swelled old families in England. I am very sorry that you do not like him."

That evening at the dance it was noticed that Sir Henry was not present and cared very little about meeting people, and when Miss Van Zandt brought him up to Mrs. Van Rensselaer and said she would find in him an old friend, she merely laughed and lingered the supposed Englishman off into the inclosed piazza.

"What are you trying to do, you absurd boy?" she said, tugging at his beard.

"Don't! Stop! Let me alone. What do you mean?" Lockwood was horrified.

But she said she knew him from the minute he walked across the floor, and she made him tell her the whole story and gave him some good advice, which he followed at once, for Miss Van Zandt was the only girl in the piazza in place of Mrs. Van Rensselaer.

"There were once two people who loved each other very much," he said, "but they had a foolish quarrel, at the bottom of which was a scheming woman who wanted to do the man a wrong in revenge for a wrong she thought he had done her. And the girl was very angry and listened to this woman, and the man went away and resolved to keep away. Now, suppose the man doesn't keep away, and says, what do you suppose the girl would say to him?"

It was not Sir Henry Barfordshire speaking now, but young Lockwood, and the English drawl had changed in some way to a voice Adele Van Zandt knew well and had heard before.

"If she were a very nice girl and really loved the man, I think she would tell him not to go away again, why, what are you doing? what a horrid brown, nasty false beard, and even whiskers, and—and so, you are only Mr. Lockwood, after all!"

And when Miss Aspinwall-Jones saw them and read them she smiled.—Boston Globe.

How to Set the Color in Lawns.

Dissolve a half pound of saltpeter in a pailful of water and dip the lawn in it several times before washing.

How to Make an Æolian Harp.

Take a rectangular box made of thin boards, five or six inches deep and about the same width, and of a length to extend across the window it is to be set at, so that the breeze can sweep over it. Glue a strip of wood half an inch in height at the top of each end of the box. Upon these strips stretch the strings lengthwise across the box and turn by tension pegs, as in the case of a violin. The sounds produced by the rising and falling of the wind are of a drowsy and lulling character.

How Iron Structures Become Unsafe.

By examining a worn bar or car wheel with an ordinary microscope it will be seen that the worn surface is coming off in thin flakes or scales. By applying a microscope of very high power, however, it will be seen that iron is composed of a vast number of minute flakes held together by a peculiar cement, just as very flat and long bricks might be in a wall by mortar. Long continued jarring breaks up this cement to a fine powder with no adhesiveness, and then the flakes of iron fall apart just as a brick wall would fall if the mortar should turn to dry sand. But by some law not well understood continuous motion in the same direction destroys the cement many times faster than irregular motions. Thus a regiment of soldiers keeping step weaken an iron bridge more than so many wild horses.

How to Put Away Butter.

Mix well together one ounce each of saltpeter and white sugar and two ounces of best salt, all in fine powder; give one ounce of this mixture to each pound of butter and thoroughly work them together. The butter thus prepared is then to be tightly pressed into clean, glazed earthenware vessels so as to have no vacant spaces. Butter thus put up acquires its finest flavor three weeks later and preserves it for a long time. Another method is to take fresh butter eighteen pounds, fine salt one pound, saltpeter one and a quarter ounces and honey or fine brown sugar two ounces. Work and press as above. Some fill the vessels only to within one-half or three-quarter inch of the top and fill with coarse salt.

How to Make Honey.

Take of soft water six pounds, pure honey three pounds, white sugar twenty pounds, cream of tartar eighty grains and essence of roses twenty-four drops; mix in a brass kettle and boil five minutes, taking special care not to let it get smoked. It is better to have a charcoal fire or place the kettle on hot coals. As soon as the kettle is taken off add the whites of two eggs well beaten, stirring thoroughly. Two more pounds of pure honey added at that time will increase the honey flavor. A slight decoction of slippery elm is sometimes added while cooling, but in hot weather it is liable to foam and rise to the surface.

How to Make a Cloth Waterproof.

Spread it out smoothly and rub the "wrong side" with a lump of beeswax (perfectly pure and free from grease) till the surface presents a slight but perfectly uniform white or grayish appearance. A cloth so prepared will turn water for several hours.

How to Prepare Wax for Polishing Floors.

Take twelve and one-half pounds of ordinary yellow wax, rasp it as fine as possible and stir it into a hot solution composed of six pounds of good pearlash and rain water. Boil and stir it while boiling as long as it froths, then take off and stir in at once six pounds of dry yellow ocher. It may then be poured into molds of any desired size and will harden on cooling. When wanted for use a pound of it is dissolved in five pints of boiling water and well stirred and the mixture applied while warm to the floor with a paint brush. When cool, wipe with a coarse woolen cloth. One coat of this will last six months.

How to Make Artificial Coral.

Melt together four parts of yellow resin and one of vermilion. Dip the twigs, stems, carvings, etc., in it and then dry without touching. The effect is very pretty.

How to Make Brine for Pork.

Take brown sugar, bay salt and common salt, two pounds each; saltpetre, one-half pound, and water, one gallon. Boil gently and remove the scum. Another favorite pickle is made with twelve pounds of common salt, two pounds of sugar or molasses, one-half pound of niter and water enough to dissolve it.

How to Make a New Omelet.

Parboil a lamb's or calf's kidney and cut it into small pieces, as for an ordinary kidney stew. Add an equal quantity of French mushrooms (champegnons) and stew them until they are nearly done. Then add, chopped fine, a small quantity of green pepper, seasoning with salt and black pepper as usual. When the kidney and mushrooms are cooked thoroughly place in an omelet, made in the usual way, and you have a breakfast dish fit for a king.

How to Restore White Flannels That Have Turned Yellow.

Dissolve 2½ pounds of white Marseilles soap in seventy-five pounds of soft water and add, with constant stirring, one ounce of liquor ammonia. The flannels are to be soaked in this fluid over night and afterward washed thoroughly in water.

A Society Fable.

A Horse, made restless in the night by reason of the sounds of revelry in his Master's Palatial Mansion at the other end of the lot, slipped his Halter, and in the absence of the Hostler, who was in the basement making love to the Chambermaid, he strolled leisurely out into the back yard and came to the House.

Peering into the windows, which were open for Ventilation, the Horse heard the conversation of numberless Nice Young Men present, and old ones also, and observed, too, the general style of them. The more he heard and saw, the more favorably he came impressed, and when One at a rear Window blew a cloud of Cigarette smoke into the Night Air, and Exclaimed, "Gad, the Horse boldly walked up through the portcochere and was half way into the large and elegant hall of the Mansion, when his Master, hearing the unusual disturbance came forth.

"Get out!" he exclaimed angrily, "what in Thunder are you doing here?"

"Going into Society, sir," replied the Horse in a soft, pleasant voice.

"Well, you cannot come in here. This is no place for you."

"Why not?" inquired the Horse very respectfully.

"Because it isn't. You belong in the stable!"

"Hats," answered the Horse, forgetting his training and manners; Society relegates a Horse to the Stable when it wel comes so many Donkeys to the Parlor."

His Master was so greatly shocked by this heretical utterance that he caught up a heavy Whip from the Hat rack and lashed the Horse so severely that he was really glad to get back into his Stall.

THE COMBINE BEATEN AGAIN.

Judge Van Syckel Decides That the Writ Shall Stand and Act as a Stay of Proceedings.

[Special to THE NEWS.]

During August thirteen stalwart citizens of Plainfield applied to Judge Van Syckel for a certiorari, to put a stop to the mischief of Low and the combine. The writ was granted to operate as a stay of proceedings until the twenty-first of this month, and thence until the further order of the court. This course was taken at the urgent solicitation of Chancellor Runyon (the combine's counsel), because he desired an opportunity to discuss the matter further after the return of the Corporation Counsel from Europe. The combine have been giving out that the application was in effect postponed to the twenty-first of this month, when the whole matter would be discussed and the right of the taxpayers disregarded. Accordingly on the twenty-first Chancellor Runyon together to Corporation Counsel Marsh, and Mr. Thompson of Jersey City, Special Counsel for Low, appeared before Judge Van Syckel at Trenton and moved to have the writ dismissed, or, if the court was not willing to do that, to have an order made directing that it should no longer operate as a stay of the comoines proceedings. Mr. Lindabury appeared for the fourteen taxpayers.

The argument began promptly at ten o'clock. Chancellor Runyon talked eloquently for an hour and a half; Thompson followed with an elaborate plea, and Corporation Counsel Marsh added a few remarks. Mr. Lindabury in a short address brushed their sophistry aside, and the chancellor took the floor again for a half hour or so. The lawyers kept up their discussion until about two o'clock in the afternoon, going over every phase of the case, and after a partial deliberation Judge Van Syckel has just decided to let the writ stand, and continue to operate as a stay of proceedings until the final decision of the case, which will probably be rendered either in the next February or June term of the Supreme Court. The good people of Plainfield will no doubt rejoice that another job of the combine has been frustrated.

WATER FOR THE BOROUGH.

Work Commenced on Somerset Street This Morning.

A gang of Italians, talk-active and dark skinned, employees of the Water Supply Company, which was recently granted a franchise by the Borough Council, started work on Somerset street this morning. They were digging a trench for the pipes, which will be laid on the West side of the road.

The kick kick of their picks was steady and monotonous. In a surprisingly short time a deep trench was dug along a couple of blocks.

SPORTING NEWS

A LAWN-TENNIS TOURNAMENT.

The "Racquet" Club vs. The Rockview Avenue Club's Games Last Saturday.

Some time ago it was proposed that, for the sake of having some more exciting games of tennis than were usually enjoyed, that match-games be played between the "Racquet" Club, whose court is on Washington avenue, and the Rockview avenue Club which has its grounds on the Terrace.

The tournament was not to be for prizes. The main object, as stated, was merely for the pleasure of having, what all tennis enthusiasts enjoy—especially if they win—hotly-contested games and sets.

Saturday, Sept. 19th, was the original date set, but business prevented some of the participants from attending, and the tournament was postponed until Saturday, Sept. 26th.

The tournament was held on the Rockview avenue grounds. Only gentlemen's doubles were played.

The following gentlemen represented the different clubs:

Racquet—Dr. V. W. Baker, Messrs. G. W. and H. D. Morrison, W. McClymont, Harry Patton and W. Rockwell.

Rockview—Messrs. Henry and Harry McGee, J. R. VanDeventer, S. McCutcheu, H. Townsend R. Peek and Gifford Cooley.

At about 3.15 o'clock the first doubles faced each other, after tossing racquets for "nerve" or "court," and at the word "play" the games commenced.

The following is the score:

Messrs. G. W. and H. D. Morrison beat Messrs. McGee and Peck—4-6—6-1—6-4.

Messrs. J. R. Van Deventer and G. Cooley beat Messrs. W. McClymont and W. Rockwell—6-1—6-0.

Messrs. S. McCutcheu and H. Townsend beat Messrs. G. W. and H. D. Morrison—6-2—6-4.

Messrs. J. R. Van Deventer and G. Cooley and Dr. V. W. Baker and H. Patton then started the fourth round, but after four games discontinued playing on account of darkness.

The tournament will be continued next Saturday afternoon, when singles will also be contested.

Most of the games Saturday were "deuce" and many good plays and sharp rally's were made.

BASE BALL.

The Crescents Defeated by the Gorhams.—Score 9 to 2.

The Crescents were again defeated in a game of ball Saturday afternoon, by a score of 9 to 2. Their opponents were the Gorhams, a colored team, of New York. The game was very interesting.

The colored players were experts at ball playing. Many coups were hits during the game, six off of Hammill and eight off of Tierney. In the sixth inning Tierney was substituted for Hammill, but the change did not appear to be a very wise one, as in the two innings he pitched the visitors hit the ball very hard.

In the fourth inning, Keeler, the Crescents' short stop was "spiked" by one of the runners stepping on his leg.

The "coaching" of Clarence Williams kept the audience in a continual roar of laughter. The score by innings is as follows:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
Crescents	0	1	0	0	1	0	0	1	0—3
Gorhams	0	0	0	1	3	1	3	1	0—9

THE HORSE ALMOST BLED TO DEATH.

Stepped on a Piece of Jagged Glass While Grazing.

A sorrel horse blonging to Mr. Charles Wyckoff of North Plainfield, while grazing on a field near Somerset street Sunday morning, stepped on a piece of jagged glass, which severed an artery in the animal's leg.

The blood poured out in a stream and formed a pool about its feet before the animal's plight was discovered.

A veterinary surgeon was summoned. The horse would have bled to death, however, before his arrival, but for the prompt use of an extemporized tornniquet.

A Costly Education.

$15,000,000 is a good deal to pay for a four years' course in college. And yet this is the sum which it cost the family of Col. Samuel Fowler, some years ago, to send the Hon. Samuel Fowler, of Sussex county, the present representative in Congress of the Fourth District, of which North Plainfield is a part, through Princeton. And the way of it, as runs the story, was this: The young man wanted to go to college, and though Col. Fowler had been a man of large means, his family could not afford the necessary money. There was a famous back wheat field on the Fowler farm. The late Mr. Moses Taylor offered a few thousand dollars for it. The field was sold. Mr. Fowler went to college, and Mr. Taylor presently owned one of the richest iron mines in the United States. Some expert mineralogists had reported upon it before its sale to Mr. Taylor.

A Lamp Explosion.

The exploding of a lamp in the Dunlap flats on East Sixth street near the Scott Printing press Works last evening, cause an alarm of fire to be sounded at seven o'clock. The department turned out, but the flames were extinguished before much damage resulted.

I have recommended Dr. David Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" to many in Shelton and Birmingham, and I have yet to find one who has not been benefited by it.—C. L. Sawyer, Birmingham, Conn.—Adv.

THEY WERE EATING MELON.

A Butcher's Wagon and a Buggy Collide—The Occupants Thrown Out.

On Somerset street, North Plainfield, Saturday evening at about 5:30 o'clock, two young men were driving a butcher wagon belonging to Mr. Latkins. They were driving fast. They were also deeply engaged, so an eye-witness says, in destroying the original shape of a lucious musk-mellon.

Mr. Aaron Allen, of Washingtonville, seated in a buggy, was driving in an opposite direction. Mr. Allen is an elderly man, and was not driving fast. He was wearing slippers.

Opposite the residence of Mr. Adam Fritts the two vehicles collided. Mr. Allen was thrown, headforemost, with considerable violence, to the ground. The shock rendered him senseless. His slippers flew in opposite directions, and were found later. He was carried to a near-by residence, where proper care was given him.

The young men were also thrown out but were not injured. One of the shafts of the butcher's wagon was snapped off close, and the front axle was bent. After they found they were uninjured the young men took away the wrecked wagon, attached to a horse.

After Mr. Allen was sufficiently recovered he re-entered his buggy, which was uninjured, and drove home.

Neither of the horses were hurt.

The largest and leading house engaged in this industry in the United States is the Lawrence Cement Company, manufacturers of the "Hoffman" Rosendale Cement, whose main office is located at 67 William street, this city. This company was organized in 1832, and is now officered and managed as follows, viz.: Warren Ackerman, president; T. A. Smith, secretary and treasurer; Charles Scull and Ernest H. Ackerman, general sales agents. The company operate five mills, all located in New York State, and give employment to one thousand hands. They are now producing one million barrels of cement per year, and supply a heavy and permanent demand in all parts of the United States. The "Hoffman" Cement has been before the public for more than fifty years, and its reliability and general fitness for all kinds of work cannot be questioned. When properly used the result of such using is certain. No pains have been omitted to insure the perfection of this brand, and testimonials to its superiority over all other brands are numerous and convincing. It was extensively tested by the City Engineer of Boston, during 1885, for use on the Charles River embankments, and tests have also been made by the Brooklyn Navy Yard and by the Department of Public Works. Hoffman Cement mixed to the proportions of one of cement to one of sand has supported 866 pounds before breaking. An experiment was made at the Brooklyn Navy Yard in 1892, where Hoffman cement is made the standard, by joining two bricks together, which stood a strain of 1,500 pounds without breaking. In addition to its general use by the government in all departments, Hoffman cement was used in building the following forts: Forts Delaware, Jackson, Sumter Taylor, Jefferson, Hamilton, Knox, Monroe, Adams, Trumbull, Fortress Monroe, and the forts at Governor's Island, N. Y., at Amelia Island, at Garden Keys, at Pensacola, Fla., and San Francisco, Cal., also at the Brooklyn and Norfolk Navy Yard. Twenty thousand barrels were used on the Capitol at Washington, ten thousand barrels on the Washington Water Works, and it was also used for building the Patent office, Treasury and other buildings at Washington. The company has just secured a contract with Lieutenant Colonel G. L. Gillespie, U. S. A., for 6200 barrels of cement for building fortifications at Sandy Hook. The officers of the company are well-known citizens of New York, prominent in commercial and trade circles, and of great practical experience and eminent ability in this department of commerce. —History and Commerce of New York.

Lightning Strikes the Telephones.

The lightning played havoc with the telephone system of Elizabeth during the storm Saturday night and burned out a large number of instruments. In the central office Operator Davenport got a heavy shock as he was pulling a plug out of the switchboard.

Some electric-light wires got crossed during the storm with a telephone wire and set fire to a couple of trees in the neighborhood of Union Square.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

A STRANGE BULGARIAN CUSTOM.

A NEWS' Correspondent Tells the Meaning of "Red Day."

To the Editor of The News.—My Plainfield friends will probably be interested to know through the medium of The News something of me as a newsboats. After my lectures in Plainfield, I returned to my country, and we have moved to Razgrad, to which place I was appointed by the Bishop at the last Conference. I have never been happier than during my visit in the States. You are all so pushing and full of enterprise. I shall always feel in this neglected land a dearer measure of my visit, and not among the least pleasant of my recollections will be of my visit to Plainfield.

There are no railroad locomotive puffs nor factory whistles heard here. Nature reigns in silence, and this is especially true to-day, as it is a holiday all over Bulgaria. Places of business have closed for the day and everything is at a standstill. It is celebrated as the anniversary of the supposed day when John the Baptist was beheaded by Herod.

The Bulgarians have a tradition that the beheading occurred on Sept. 10th, and they call this the "Red Day" of the year, and to do honor on that day to the memory of this grand Christian martyr abstain from anything like drinking anything of a red color. For instance, they drink no wine, eat no red grapes, red water melon, or red cabbage.

The three first-named represent the martyr's blood, and that as the head, according to tradition, was thrown away into a red-cabbage field, by the Herodias, hence no cabbage must be eaten on the anniversary of the day.

By eating either of the four articles named people fear they would renew the awful suffering of the saints. In the Greek church there is a saint to every day of the year. Each has some fable associated with it. Some of these fables are awful in their wierdness, and calculated to terrify the simple-minded peasant, and load him down with heathen superstitions which are to say the least a grievous burden. By them this naturally noble and courageous people are made afraid of their own shadows.

It begins with the mourning when they are warned to watch the stairs alcove then and count each step they take from fear of some misfortune if they do not. Of course they are kept in ignorance, and by keeping their ignorance and superstition it is very difficult to accomplish much missionary work among them.

When I first ran away from this country to became converted to Christianity and was sent a boy to New York I was full of this superstition to a most laughable degree. I had a letter of introduction to a good and wealthy Christian gentleman uptown. I had never seen a door-bell, and when I stood up the front steps and saw the bell-knob, I suspected it was some trap, and actually from fear to enter sat on the steps for several hours until the gentleman came home from his business. He led me into his parlor and pointed to a seat for me to occupy. I had seen people on the vessel sit on chairs, so knew what they were for. But these chairs were cushioned and when I sat down and the cushion yielded under me I fairly trembled with fear, and jumped off in a hurry to see what the trap to catch me was. We always sit on the hard ground in my country, and being full of heathen superstition, and suspicion common to my people, suspected every one I met.

The gentleman took me to a hotel, and had me provided with a room. The waiter poured some water into a basin on a washstand for me to wash and provided towels, but, in my country before we wash we have to be in a place where brush from running water, and facing toward the East, it being unlucky to do otherwise. When the waiter had gone I picked up the basin to see if there was any trap. I expected to find something awful, let the basin fall, and it broke on the floor. Then I expected surely to be killed. I was in such a fright they might do so, thank God they do not now would measure us for such trifles. I gathered up the pieces and hid them.

Then I examined the bed, and when I lifted it up and saw the springs, I was sure I had discovered the trap to drop me into a bottomless pit as soon as I should lie down on the bed to sleep, so I would not occupy it, but slept that night on the hard floor with some books for a pillow. I was very tired, or I doubt if my fears would have allowed me to sleep at all.

I was surprised in the morning that I was alive. When I was led to the table to eat food—although very hungry, my fear that it might be poisoned made me miserable, and I ate very sparingly. I was just the same as the average of my people, and it took me a long time to get over it in the college I was sent to.

So you will understand what a task we have before us missionaries.

We are the first missionaries in their places, and find no sympathisers. We must win them, and gather a congregation to train in the Gospel. We expect persecution, even whipping, and, possibly in the end excommunication from the city. But, come what may, the Lord's work must be done, and, if we called to do it, we must do it, trusting in him.

I expect to go to Rautschuck some time this Winter and take some pictures of peasant life that may interest your readers, when I send them to you as I will. I keep well, and feel real glad affairs in the States, and hope some day we will get started on the road to progress. Please remember me and will be for all your blessings.

Razgrad, Bulgaria, Sept. 10, 1891.

A BULGARIAN MISSIONARY.

Miss N. M. M.'s Denial.

To The Editor of The News:—I wish to have contradicted the statement published in the Press regarding David Curtis. I was the young lady that was out with him that evening. We were not far up on Front street or there was no foul act committed. David treated me as a lady in all respects. It is true that I fainted but I am subject to fainting spells, and I suppose the young gentleman thought I was dead and got excited and left town. But he will soon return again, for he has found out that I am living and am all right. And even if he did get scared it was no more than any young gentleman would do.

It makes no difference how respectable a lady or gentleman is in Plainfield that people will take a report to try and disgrace them if it can. I don't think it is right that such a thing should be tolerated by the citizens of Plainfield.

Miss N. M. M.

[The News published the facts correctly, at the time and had nothing in any manner reflecting on the character of the young lady, the matter being well understood as we stated.—Ed.]

"ELYSIUM LAKE."

Formerly the Old Runyon Farm—Now Being Cut up Into Building Lots.

Elysium Lake is seven minutes' walk from Evons station and about ten minutes' walk from the Pond Tool Works, and was formerly the old Runyon farm, which is situated directly South of the city, and which was for years a part of the inheritance of that well-known and honored family, to which ex-Chancellor Runyon and the late Judge Runyon of this city belonged.

It stretched originally from the Union county line our side and the Somerset county line on another side far toward the Middlesex county court house at New Brunswick. It occupied the greater portion of that old historic township called Piscataway. By degrees its area dwindled, as acre after acre was cut off to make room for a new cross roads, until what is said to be the finest portion of the old farm remains.

This remaining portion came into the possession of a Newark insurance company a few years ago, from whom the Real Estate Trust of this city secured it.

F. M. Bacon and ex-Postmaster Wallace Vail of the trust, in January last had an accurate map of the tract made by F. A. Dunham, the county engineer of roads. The farmer pond, as in the days gone by, who had used the lake for skating purposes principally, had known it as Guinea Egg Pond, but this name Mr. Bacon considered too prosaic, to appropriately express its beauties, and changed it to Elysium Lake.

The tract lies on both sides of West Fourth street, and consists of 122 lots, 40 feet wide and 125 feet long. Rushmore avenue, which leads directly to the Evons station, has been opened up through the property and surveyors and contractors are now engaged in opening and grading a new street to be called Elk street, and which will extend from Rock avenue to Rushmore avenue and West Fourth street. In all about one mile of new streets will be opened and graded.

The lake is 1,300 feet long and varies from 200 to 300 feet in width. The water is from four to eight feet deep and is pure spring water. Pleasure boats are used on the lake, and it is surrounded by a heavy growth of oak.

During the past two months hundreds of men have been busy clearing and grading the property. The land is situated to be twenty-five feet higher than the city of Plainfield, and the Central Railroad engineers say it is the highest point along the line from Jersey City to Somerville. Negotiations are now being conducted with the Edison Electric Light Company to light the streets.

Contracts have already been given out for the immediate erection of four new dwellings, and several more will be placed in a few weeks. About seventy-two lots have already been sold. These are to have houses on them within a year. Two extra large corner lots have been reserved for a school house and a church.

The Central New Jersey Land and Improvement Company own the adjoining tract, and contemplate opening up a belt property in the near future.

There is talk of a new factory being located between Evons station and Rock avenue, and parties representing the factory are negotiating for a site along the railroad at that point, and the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company have under contemplation a branch line running from New Market and crossing the Central Railroad near the Evons station.

STATE FIREMEN TO CONVENE.

The Exercises Will Be Varied by a Tournament and Parade.

The Firemen's Tournament in connection with the State Firemen's Convention, which assembles at Atlantic City Tuesday next, promises to be one of the largest gatherings ever held in New Jersey. No public parade of the firemen has heretofore been given, the thirteen previous Conventions having been mostly devoted to business.

Companies from almost every section in the State are to be there in full uniform and will bring their apparatus. The Convention is under the management of a special committee, consisting of T. A. Barnes, Ed. F. Kline and Louis Kuehne, while Chief Engineer Jacob Young will have charge of the grand parade.

The Finance Committee is under the direction of ex-Chief C. S. Lockey and Alderman John Goudley, and the other committees are composed of Chief Archer Whippey, Isaac F. Shaner, Councilman Lewis Groff and Chief Lackey. The reunion will continue four days. There will be purses for horse races, running teams, steamer trials and drills. A musical concert, torchlight procession, and a grand marine excursion will be given. Three hundred delegates are expected to be present. Among them will be ex-Chief of Police, Supt. George W. Walling, of New York, now Engineer of the Fire Department of Newport; Chief William M. Foster, Chief George A. Brannigan, ex-Assistant Chief P. Y. Everett, of the New York Fire Department; Chief J. V. West, Long Branch. The Convention will be called to order on Tuesday by President Bird W. Spencer, of Passaic.

Elston Committed.

Charles Elston, the young man who robbed the gentlemen's furnishing store belonging to Mr. G. M. Dunham of West Front street, of about three hundred dollars worth of jewelry on Saturday pleaded guilty to the charge and Justice Nash committed him to the county jail at Elizabeth to await sentence. Acting Captain of Police Lynch brought Elston down from Somerville Saturday morning, where he had been serving a five days sentence on the charge of trespassing on the cars.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Times appears to count for more than gold in Ohio just now.

The somewhat small supply of 4½ per cents. that are offered for continuance at 2 per cent. shows that money is bringing better prices than that for other investments.

"Increased length of leave will be in favor for all our big guns."—New York Sun. "Length of leave is what is the matter with too many of our big guns now, our little guns as well."

"Hold back your wheat for higher prices," says a mysterious circular to the farmers of the country. Have farmers then actually taken control of their own agricultural products? What are we coming to?

History does not seem to very old after all, when we recall that John H. B. La trobe, of Baltimore, who died lately at the age of eighty-eight years, was the man that founded the African republic of Liberia, and also one of the men who took the first railway ride in the world, in the car drawn by Peter Cooper's engine from Baltimore to Ellicott City.

At Faribault, Minn., Rev. Father Conroy has turned over all the parochial schools of the city to the public school board, and it will hereafter control the schools and school property as other public schools. Father Conroy is a Wisconsin born priest, intensely American and patriotic, and he takes the step of thus turning parochial schools into public schools "as an American citizen" interested for the best good of future American citizens. He was induced to do what he did because he wished to resist the foreigninizing influence of Bohemian, French, German, Polish and other schools in which the instruction was given in foreign languages. The effort made by an overzealous Senate priest to have Bishops for every nationality and language appointed in the United States so fired the patriotism of the American Catholics that they rose to a man in defense of the English language and republican institutions.

The President's Flag.

Why do we not have a flag, banner or standard for use of the president of the United States? An admiral has his own flag in the navy, a general has emblems to designate his rank, but the president, the highest official in the land, has nothing to distinguish him or his presence in a locality, whether he be in an official or private capacity, any more than the humblest John or William in the nation.

There is nothing snobbish or in any way savoring of the elder despotisms of Europe in the suggestion of a handsome distinctive flag for the use of the president. It should float over the White House when he is at his official residence; it should wave from his car or steamer when he is on his travels, just as a naval commander's flag is raised over the flag-ship. The president's standard should wave from his carriage when he is taking part in a procession of patriotic citizens, and should be turned with the stars and stripes upon a platform from which he reviews such spontaneous outpourings of patriotism.

There is something fitting and artistic in this idea of a president's standard. A beautiful design could be made by some artistic American. We have few enough different flags connected with our various departments of government, and might well add one more to the number. We commend this subject to the bipartisan consideration of congress.

The British Labor Parliament.

In one way deliberative bodies and councils have quite as much power as legislative assemblies, and that is in the line of forming the public opinion which the legislative organization formulates when it makes the laws. The proceedings of the British labor parliament have, therefore, a living interest for all.

The important measures recommended by the parliament may be summed up briefly. First there was the recommendation in favor of the international eight hour labor law, with the significant exception that when a majority of the workmen in any given trade should vote against its application in their particular case, this vote should decide the matter. Thus the various trades in the different localities are left free to adopt the eight hour law or let it alone.

Most important after this, perhaps, is the sentiment in favor of paying members of parliament for their services. In Great Britain members of parliament receive no salary. The charge here could be made with justice that the legislative assembly of the country was a millionaire club, as it is customary to accuse the United States senate of being. If members of parliament were paid, then the workingmen could feel free to send some of their own number to the national legislature. The recommend, therefore, that each candidate for parliament be required to pledge that he will vote for such a law before the workingmen agree to support him. The parliament, for the same reason, was in favor of paying members of school boards and county councils.

The curious and habitual aversion of the British workingman to having state supervision of his own and his employers' relations was also strikingly developed at the parliament.

GOV. PATTISON MOVES.

An Extra Session Called by Pennsylvania's Executive.

OFFICIALS TO BE INVESTIGATED

The Governor Believes That the Grave Charges Against the Auditor General and State Treasurer Should Be Looked Into by Keystone State Legislators.

HARRISBURG, Sept. 28.—Quite a sensation has been created here and throughout the state by the proclamation issued Saturday night by Governor Pattison convening the senate in extraordinary session on Tuesday, Oct. 13, 1891. The preamble sets forth that grave charges have been made against the auditor general and state treasurer, most seriously reflecting upon the discharge of their official duties; that it is proper diligent inquiry should be made to ascertain whether or not "reasonable cause" exists for their removal, that there is a conviction in the public mind that they have been grossly inefficient and entirely wanting in due fidelity, and that if the charges be established the senate should take action looking to the removal of the officials.

To Remove Them Both.

It is also set forth that much of the state money, lost through Bardsley, would be in the treasury if the auditor general and state treasurer had performed their duties with fidelity, and further that Bardsley's refusal to disclose any information whatever as to the conduct of these officials has compelled the abandonment of proposed criminal prosecutions, at least for a time. Proper inquiry by the senate, the governor thinks, may develop evidence sufficient to satisfy its members that reasonable cause exists for the removal of the auditor general and state treasurer.

The Governor to Aid Them.

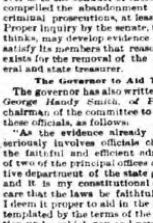
The governor has also written to Senator George Handy of Philadelphia, chairman of the committee to investigate these officials, as follows:

"As the evidence already made public seriously involves officials charged with the faithful and efficient administration of two of the principal offices of the executive department of the state government, and it is my constitutional duty to take care that the laws be faithfully executed, I deem it proper to aid in the inquiry contemplated by the terms of the joint resolution under which you and your colleagues are proceeding. I have requested the attorney general to appear at the next meeting of your committee, which I am informed will be held on the 28th inst., and I trust and believe that every facility will be afforded. He will, I am sure, be prepared to attend the sessions of your committee until a thorough and systematic investigation of the offices which are the subject of inquiry is completed."

No Trace of Livesey.

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 28.—A systematic and thorough search to find ex-Collector Livesey, of Pennsylvania, in this city has failed utterly, and there is the best of authority for the statement that he has never been in Milwaukee; that all of the letters addressed to him here have been forwarded to an address in Canada, where he has been for some time, presumably since he left Harrisburg and resigned his place as cashier in the treasury department there. It is said that he has been in the same neighborhood of Canada where State Treasurer Boyer was spending his vacation. Livesey has never been seen by any one in this city.

The Tutus.



NO ONE'S CERTAIN WHICH IS WHICH.

"How queer it is that we should look
So much alike—each other!
Most people get us all mixed up—
They can't tell us from brother.
And so we're constantly puzzled in which Excepting only—mother!"—St. Nicholas.

NEITHER SHY SANK.

Both the Circassia and the Daylight Badly Battered, but in Port.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—The Anchor line steamship Circassia, which sailed from here for Glasgow Saturday, returned to her pier Sunday with a hole seven feet long and five feet wide in her starboard bow. Projecting from the hole was a quantity of wreckage, including the bowsprit and jibboom of a sailing vessel. The Circassia came into collision with a lumber laden schooner outside of Sandy Hook Saturday night while the steamer was going at full speed.

The Circassia was left in a badly crippled condition. Her machinery was disarranged by the shock and it was decided to return here. The schooner colliding with the Circassia is the Daylight, of Boston, which is completely wrecked forward of the foremast. The buoyancy of her cargo kept her afloat, and she followed the steamer to port. The shock of the collision threw a number of the passengers of the Circassia out of their berths, but no one was injured.

"Red Mary" in the Toils.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—Thomas O'Brien, alias "Red Leary," one of the most desperate "crooks" in this city, has been arrested charged with the theft of $1,000 from an Albany merchant Feb. 1, 1890. The robbery was done by O'Brien and a "pal" named George Post. They induced their victim to draw the money from a bank and bring it to the hotel. He was then decoyed upstairs with a sandbag and robbed.

Mrs. Daly is Prostrated.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—The body of grocer James R. Daly, shot and killed at Port Chester, was buried by John Gleason, lay yesterday in the little Grace avenue cottage. Mrs. Daly is completely prostrated. Alexis being nursed by Mrs. Gleason, whom he had sheltered from her husband, which kindness led to the shooting.

ON BOTH SIDES AT THE SAME TIME

Strange Conduct of Two American Firms in the Chilian War.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—The Herald says: It has learned that William R. Grace & Co., the great American firm supposed to be engaged in supporting the Chilian Congressionalists, was secretly buying munitions of war for Balmaceda, and Charles R. Flint & Co., the great American firm supposed to be engaged in supporting Balmaceda, was secretly trying to buy munitions of war for the Congressionalists.

This singular revelation is incidental to a new discovery of the way Dictator Balmaceda played the merciless tyrant in the exercise of his absolute power.

Mr. Flint was the friend and avowed agent of Balmaceda, but The Herald has an admission from the agents he employed that Mr. Flint made overtures to assist Balmaceda's enemies. Grace & Co. and Flint & Co. are old rivals in the South American trade. Grace & Co. have large interests in Chili. Flint & Co. have long wanted to extend their business there. When the civil war broke out in Chili the two firms naturally took opposite sides.

Grace & Co. avowed a strictly neutral position. Nevertheless it was well known that the Congressionalist agents were on very friendly terms with the house. Flint & Co. made no bones of their friendship for Balmaceda. Mr. Flint's office was practically the headquarters of the Balmaceda party in this country. Mr. Flint's power of attorney in the Chili case was signed by Balmaceda himself, threatening to shoot the president of the company owning the vessel.

SHE SHEDS HER BONES.

Strange Story Told by a Physician in Tennessee.

BRISTOL, Tenn., Sept. 28.—Dr. B. F. Bell, of Paintsville, Tenn., read before the East Tennessee Medical society a paper on a wonderful case of exfoliation, or the ejection of bones from the human body. The subject of the peculiar disease is a lady named Sarah Hess, seventy-one years of age, residing in Caney Branch. About twenty-one years ago the doctor was first called to see his patient, and since that time he has given her ailment close attention.

During all these years more than six hundred bones have been expelled from different parts of Miss Hess' body. This exfoliation, Dr. Bell said, had taken place usually without pain or inflammation, and soon after the ejection of the bones the sores would quickly heal up and nothing more would be noticed till another batch of bones would start out.

The disease first began on the index finger of the left hand. Every bone in that hand disappeared and new ones took their place. The next member of the body attacked was the larynx. Then the shoulder blade and then the lower jaw bone. Some of the bones worked out through the throat and others through the chest.

The doctor said the process worked so rapidly that he had sat near the patient many times and watched the bones as they worked their way out. The pain was slight except that of nature itself. Some of them were six inches in length and one inch in diameter, while others were smaller. They were of every conceivable shape. When the doctor presented them to the fraternity for examination the display resembled the contents of an unearthed coffin. Few of those present believed that the bones were human bones.

THE LOSS IS $1,000,000.

A Big Fire in St. Louis and Two Firemen Reported Missing.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 28.—Two big fires last evening have caused a loss of over $1,000,000. The Planet milling company's establishment was burned to the ground. The lack of pressure in the water mains hindered the firemen and made it impossible to save the building. Two firemen are supposed to be buried underneath the roof of the main building, which, in its collapse, carried everything with it. The loss will be $400,000.

While the firemen were still busy at this fire the one story warehouse of the Missouri Pacific Railway company caught fire, and the Manser-Tibbett Implement company's seven story building adjoining was soon burning. The East St. Louis fire department was called upon, and the firemen worked only to prevent the spread of the fire to the lumber yards and warehouses of the neighborhood.

The Manser-Tibbett building collapsed at 7 o'clock. At 9 o'clock the fire was under control, though engines had been called away by three small fires in different parts of the city. The loss of the Manser-Tibbett company will amount to $500,000. Several persons were trampled upon, but not seriously injured in a stampede of the crowd at the Plant Milling company's building, caused by the report that a car of powder was on fire. The car was removed by means of a chain.

He Could Not Bear the Insult.

MILLVILLE, N. J., Sept. 28.—A fourteen-year-old boy named Ambrose Parr committed suicide here by hanging himself in the garret of his home, 40 Garfield street. He was employed as a tending boy at Whitall, Tatum & Co.'s flint glass works, and refused to go out with the other tending boys when they struck recently against the employment of Jews. The strikers called young Parr a "scab," and he brooded over the matter so much that it unbalanced his mind.

What Vice General Hughes Says.

HARTFORD, Sept. 28.—Vice General Hughes says that all the documents in the Grant divorce case were forwarded to Rome, both the original and Latin translations of them. He says that the Pope was to represent Mr. Grant's views, and every precaution was taken to give the case a fair and impartial trial. Regarding Mr. Grant's right to appeal, Vice General Hughes said these could be no appeal, the judgment of the holy see was final.

The Czar's Shrewd Move.

VIENNA, Sept. 28.—The order from Montenegro for the building of three volunteer cruisers in English yards is the subject of considerable discussion in official circles. Montenegro has no right to a separate navy. Her vessels must fly the Austrian flag. There is no doubt whatever that Russia advances the money to pay for these vessels. The czar, having no naval base in the Mediterranean is using Montenegro for that purpose.

A Texas Embezzler Goes Free.

KOUNTZE, Tex., Sept. 28.—John McMillan, ex-county treasurer, charged with misapplying funds to the amount of $70,000, has been acquitted by order of Judge Higginbotham, who held that the legal definition of money is legal tender coin and that bonds or coupons are not money.

SMOKED WHILE HE SHOT.

Lauken's Murderous Attack Upon His Pretty Wife.

A LITTLE GIRL WAS WOUNDED TOO

The Jealous Husband Fatally Assaults His Wife on the Street in New York Injured an Innocent Bystander and Then Pretended to Attempt Suicide.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—Jealous Frank Lauken, a good looking, solidly built German electrician, tried to murder his hand some, brown haired young wife last night He shot her down on the sidewalk in front of 377 Hudson street, and she was at the point of death when borne to St. Vincent's hospital. After shooting his wife Lauken continued his deadly fusillade in the crowded street, putting another bullet through a child's shoulder, smashing a plate glass window with a third and wind ing up by making a feint to shoot himself. He took good care not to injure himself he was in the clutches of a policeman.

Smoked While He Shot Her.

Faultlessly dressed in a dark suit with a red pink in the lapel of his coat, the prisoner seemed perfectly cool when arrested. A lighted cigar was in his left hand and as he was led before the prostrate form of the woman he had pledged himself only a few months ago to cherish and protect and was identified by her as her slayer, he smiled softly and said:

He Drove Her from Him.

"Yes, I shot her, but I did it only for fun—just to frighten her."

Lauken is thirty years old. Fifteen months ago, while he was living at the boarding house of Henry Sudan, 315 Hudson street, he wooed and married Mr. Sudan's eldest daughter, Annie.

The couple went to housekeeping at 341 Bleecker street, where the wife soon found that the jealousy of the peculiar Dane in a jolly family bather, Wyatt Roberts, have both left her, and from what was learned at the Barnum household it is a case of elopement beyond doubt.

Roberts is a fine looking colored man, and waited upon the great showman for the last fifteen years of his life. Whenever Mr. Barnum moved from place to place, wherever he went, the faithful body servant was with him. He was remembered with a handsome sum in the will of the showman.

When Mrs. Barnum went to Europe in the spring Roberts went with her. There she engaged the English maid Tourtellotte to travel through Europe, and the handsome colored butler and the English maid were thrown in each other's company a good deal. Before long Roberts began to notice that the maid and valet were on very friendly terms. It created a great amount of talk, and Mrs. Barnum, it is said, gave Roberts a choice of leaving her maid and the old servant of her husband. Roberts left this city yesterday. The maid was heard to say that she could not live without him. Later in the day, At Marina it was learned they were together in New York. The maid is twenty-two years old and quite a comely young woman.

THE EXPOSITION A PRIVATE AFFAIR.

Acting Secretary Grant's Odd Decision Concerning Proposed Official Visit.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—By a recent ruling Acting Secretary Grant, by reference, held that the World's Columbian exposition is a private affair, and not a national affair. If Assistant Secretary Grant is correct it raises the question with some people here how congress came to decide the location of the exposition, and how it was that the president named the commissioners and why Secretary Foster has been paying out moneys to the government's committee of citizens who went abroad in the interest of the exposition. Assistant Secretary Grant's decision came about in this way:

The exposition commissioners ask that the buildings erected were not safe, and the Chicago people assert that this complaint came from New York. In order to discover the reliability of all these charges the commissioners asked the secretary of war to detail a corps of engineers to inspect the buildings.

In replying to the request Secretary Grant stated that section 1,224 of the revised statutes forbade army officers from performing work of any kind for private persons or corporations, and for this reason he was compelled to decline.

To Close Up the Land League.

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—J. P. Sutton, secretary of the Irish Land League, says that he and President Fitzgerald will absolutely close up the affairs of the league's organization. He thinks the result of the convention will be a declaration of neutrality as between the two factions in Ireland, and that no organization may be effected on a strictly American basis. The main feature of the coming gathering would be to close up the records and career of the Land League and to liberate the large sum of money held in Paris.

A Policeman's Terrible Duty.

HOBOKEN, N. J., Sept. 28.—A young man and woman under the influence of liquor were being put off a horse car here when Policeman Quirk came along. He glanced at the woman and then moaned, "My God, Nellie, this is terrible." The young woman was his wife. The policeman turned pale, but straightened up and her paramour took the police station. The man said his name was Myles Sversaux, aged thirty-seven. Ryan will apply for a divorce.

Another Case Against Demarest.

NYACK, N. Y., Sept. 28.—The case against Assemblyman Frank P. Demarest, indicted for forgery in the first and second degrees, will come up again in the Rockland county court of sessions. The indictment on which Mr. Demarest is now to be tried is the one found against him by the grand jury for the passing of an alleged check on the Haverstraw National bank.

A Heroic Clergyman's Deed.

ALLEGAN, Mich., Sept. 28.—While trying to stop a runaway horse drawing a vehicle containing a man and three children, the Rev. M. A. Andrews' arm was knocked down and his scalp was torn from him from the back of the head. His right collar bone and three ribs were also broken. He cannot recover.

This Editor Will Teach.

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 28.—Frederick W. Moles, Yale, '92, has been appointed instructor in social sciences in the Wharton school of polytechnic science in the University of Pennsylvania. For some years Mr. Moles has been night editor of the New Haven Palladium.

Prince Hohenlohe Must Go.

LONDON, Sept. 28.—A Paris dispatch predicts that Prince Hohenlohe will have to abandon the office of governor of Alsace-Lorraine. The prince represents an iron Bismarck policy, and it was by Bismarck's direction that Hohenlohe created the severe system of passports which, next to the seizure of Alsace-Lorraine, has done most to irritate France. This policy the kaiser does not believe in.

Shot the Mayor in the Back.

SPARTANBURG, S. C., Sept. 28.—John Williams, a desperado negro, was making a disturbance at home with his wife when Mayor Henneman arrested Williams. During the struggle which followed Williams shot the mayor in the back, killing him instantly. The town is greatly excited and the jail is surrounded by a howling mob.

Davits at Chicago.

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—Michael Davitt, the well known Irish agitator, is stopping at the residence of Alexander Sullivan. Mr. Davitt is accompanied by his wife and two children. Mr. Davitt said his trip had no connection with politics.

Domestic Troubles Cause Suicide.

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 28.—Jacob Hager, thirty-six, a laborer, of 61 Pacific street, this city, committed suicide yesterday by shooting himself in the breast with a revolver. Domestic troubles was the cause of his act.

Killed While Walking Railroad Tracks.

JERSEY CITY, Sept. 28.—George Rich, thirty, of 14 Division street, New York, was killed near Marion station, in Jersey City, by a Pennsylvania freight train. He was walking on the tracks.

A Fresh Water Famine at Saratoga.

SARATOGA, Sept. 28.—Saratoga is in danger of a fresh water famine. The supply is obtained from Loughberry lake. Owing to the continued drought the water has fallen six feet lower than ever before, and should it be allowed to fall for the next week this village, so famous for its mineral fountains, will be destitute of fresh water.

WILLIAM KEMBLE DEAD.

He Was Pennsylvania's Treasurer for Two Terms.

HIS CAREER SUDDENLY CLOSED

Heart Failure Was the Cause of His Death—His Work as a Politician and Promoter of Gigantic Steel Railway Enterprises Throughout the Country.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 28. — Ex-State Treasurer William H. Kemble died sud denly Sunday of heart failure. Mr. Kemble's death occurred at his pretty country home "Maryland" shortly after midnight. He had been around as usual during the day and had retired about 10:30 o'clock. Shortly after going to bed he felt an attack of the heart trouble and his physician was sent for. His physician was power less, however, and he died soon afterward.

Mr. Kemble had been warned long ago that he must give up active participation in business affairs if he wished to prolong his life. He heeded this warning and was gradually severing his connection with the various street railway enterprises which he had, along with his partners, Messrs Elkins & Widener, connected himself. Mr Kemble was sixty-three years old. He had been identified with politics from his youth and was always high in the councils of the Republican party. He was twice elected state treasurer of Pennsylvania on the Republican ticket. He leaves a large family of children and grandchildren. His wealth is estimated at several millions of dollars.

The First to Go.

He is the first of the trio of street railway magnates—Widener, Elkins and Kemble—th succumb to the strain of business. Last spring he was attacked with pneumonia, but the disease left no bad effect, and until the last few days he had attended to his business affairs, even a few weeks ago giving important evidence before the Hardesty investigating committees.

Started a Poor Boy.

Mr. Kemble was born at Woodbury, N. J., sixty-three years ago. His father, Benjamin, was a poor cooper, and was of Welsh-English extraction. He graduated when fourteen years of age from the public school and came to Philadelphia, where he went to work as a clerk. Afterward he went to New York, finally starting a country store in Montgomery county. Later he married a country girl, and then started a silk and lace store in this city, where he succeeded beyond his expectations. Then he went into politics.

His Steel Railway Enterprises.

Almost thirty years ago he saw the possibilities of street railway traffic, and with Widener and Elkins started the lines which culminated in the organization of the traction company which has been so much importance in New York, Chicago, Pittsburg and other cities. In this way he built up a fortune. He leaves a widow, daughter and two sons.

Mr. Kemble was state treasurer of Pennsylvania from 1863 to 1868. Something over a year ago he erected a magnificent Presbyterian church to the town of his birth, Woodbury. His town residence was at 2,305 Green street, Philadelphia, but he spent a large part of the year at "Maryland," its beautiful grounds and picturesque situation having made it a well known landmark.

The Coffey Letter.

The incident in the life of Mr. Kemble that brought him notoriously to the attention of the people of the state was his famous letter to Tilton J. Coffey, of Washington, George G. Rowand, in his capacity as the fiscal agent of Pennsylvania, was commissioned to collect a claim from the government to reimburse Pennsylvania for certain bounty money that had been allowed to the state's account. The famous letter from Kemble read:

Mr. Dear Friend: The bill introduce to you Mr George O. Evans, he has a claim of some magnitude against the government. Treat him as you would me. He understands addition, division and silence.

Convicted and Pardoned.

It was a matter of some years before this remarkable correspondence introducing Evans came to light. In the year 1878 Mr. Kemble was convicted in the courts of Dauphin county, Pa., at Harrisburg, of bribing members of the legislature to vote for the famous riot bill, which, it is alleged, would have taken about $8,000,000 from the state for the benefit of the Pennsylvania Railroad company. Every effort was made to obtain a pardon for him before the case came to trial. Finding that this could not be done Kemble fled the state. After he had been sentenced he was promptly pardoned.

The Arrest of Baron Nordenajrod.

DURANGO, Colo., Sept. 28.—The arrest of Baron Nordenajrod, charged with removing relics from the ancient cliff dwellings in the Manicos canon in the reservation, is likely to assume international proportions, as the following telegram, received by the mayor, indicates:

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.

To His Honor, the Mayor of Durango:

DEAR SIR: Sheriff Kenney report by wire the facts in the case of Nordenajrod, a Swede, said to have been arrested in Durango.

WILLIAM WARTON,
Acting Secretary of State.

This dispatch indicates that the matter has been brought to the attention of the state department. The telegram arrived from Manicos last evening and will remain until his hearing, Oct. 28.

CABLE BREVITIES.

The Salvationists were again attacked in the streets of Gothenburg, Saturday, and several of the women soldiers fainted.

It is believed in German official circles that the government is secretly encouraging the newspaper opposition to the new Russian loan.

Oscar Wilde's house at Chalses, England, was robbed Friday night by burglars, who even entered the room where he was asleep and stole his clothes.

Considerable alarm has been created at Bucharest by the news that the Russians, in their midnight maneuvers on the banks of the Pruth, had actually crossed the river on more than one occasion into Roumanian territory.

The suicide Turkey is trying to break up brigandage in territory under his control.

M. Ribot, French minister of foreign affairs, made a speech at Bapaume, calling special attention to the good understanding existing between Russia and France.

The Junta has been trying to induce Minister Egan to arrange all the refugees in the United States legation at Santiago, Chili. It claims the right to arrest every one outside of the legation, and has locked up three Americans.

Widening the Baseball Breach.

BOSTON, Sept. 28.—President Prince, of the Boston Association Baseball club, recently addressed a letter to the Boston League club suggesting that a series of five games be played by the two clubs, the proceeds to be equally divided between the players and some charity. The League magnates have declined the proposition on the ground that as the Association team had withdrawn from the national agreement, they were, under the rules of the League, prohibited from playing with them.

Chicago's New Sporting Association.

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—The Eclipse Athletic and Racing association, a new racing association, has been organized and its first meeting will open on Oct. 3. Dash events between race horses, bicycle races, foot races, cab races, express races and other contests that will develop the speed of man and horse will be given, and purses will be hung up for the winners of events. No betting or wagering, exhibitions or prize fights will be tolerated.

THE WORLD OF POLITICS.

Mr. Fassett's Reference to That "Grand Giant Roscoe Conkling."

UTICA, N. Y. Sept. 28.—Hon. J. Sloat Fassett, United States Marshal Baxter and many prominent men from New York at 12:30 o'clock this morning and were met at the depot by a band and fully 1,000 people. A salute was fired as the party entered carriages and was being escorted to the Butterfield House where Mr. Fassett spoke briefly, concluding by saying:

"You need have no fear to build a fire that will swing old Oneida county into line with a Republican majority as large as in the palmy days of that grand giant, Roscoe Conkling."

The applause at this remark was deafening.

Halford Visits Fassett.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—Elijah Halford, the president's private secretary, had a conference Monday with Hon. J. Sloat Fassett. Just before his departure for Washington a reporter asked the secretary the object of his visit, and he replied that it was purely personal and without any political significance. A well known politician declared, however, that Mr. Halford's mission had something to do with Mr. Fassett's two weeks' campaign through the state.

Served Him Right.

"Have you got any stale bread?" asked Johnny Pinkleship, sticking his head into a baker's shop.

"Yes, I have five or six loaves."

"Serves you right. Why didn't you sell 'em while they were fresh."—Texas Siftings.

OLD ENGLISH EMBROIDERY.

The Symbolism Which Lent Its Peculiar Charm to the Embroiderer's Art.

The most ancient examples of embroidery that are preserved to us—of which we have any record are distinctly symbolic. The four winged cherubim standing on a wheel is a very early symbol of the Christian church. It appears under various modifications; the symbolism of the figure is described in the first chapter of Ezekiel. This symbol appears under somewhat modified forms until the close of the Fifteenth century. It is distinctly one of the characteristic allegorical decorations of early English work. The eagle displayed is another emblem of very frequent occurrence on ecclesiastical vestments of the Middle Ages, and seems to have been of considerable antiquity. It may have been adopted in the first instance to the eagle mentioned by Ezekiel, but it also had another significance. It was always an emblem of power and supremacy. Homer calls it the bird of Jove.

Birds of prey have always been regarded as emblems of good or evil, but the birds most venerated in the age of chivalry were the swan and the peacock. Around these gather romantic associations, and we may be quite sure whenever we meet with them—and we meet with them continually—in relics of the Middle Ages, that there is some touching or chivalrous story connected with them. We find examples of the swan and the peacock mingled with the heraldic devices of knights and noble families in the embroidery of the time of chivalry. The romances of the period abound with references to the "vowis of pecok and swan." The swan and the peacock were deemed royal birds and were usually royalty before prowess. The great warrior kings and their knights made their solemn vows of dedication or enterprise by the God of heaven and the royal birds.

Other birds are frequently introduced symbolically. Parrots are represented in ecclesiastical work in connection with the wise men of the Epiphany and gifts from Saba. They were fabled to have whispered to the Queen of Saba the doings of Solomon and brought around their necks letters from him. They appear on the vestments of old St., Paul's. Wherever met with, they have an eastern significance, and denote wealth and greatness with an especial reference to the glory of Solomon or the gifts of the magi.

The Star of Bethlehem often appears in connection with them, overtopping the Islam badge of the crescent moon on the blasons of the crusaders. The swan was also employed as a symbol of stainless purity and majestic beauty in women, and was therefore represented in connection with the Virgin. There are examples of swans with women's heads, and they often occur on orfrays of the Fourteenth century.

Mummies of Egyptian Kings.

In 1884 a number of mummies, believed to be those of royal personages, were found near Thebes, Egypt. They were removed to the Boulak museum, where they were examined one by one by Mr. Maspero, the director general of the excavations and antiquities of Egypt, assisted by other archæologists. Jan. 1, 1886, the mummy of Rameses II was unbandaged. The identity of the mummy was attested by the official entries bearing dates of the reigns of the high priests under whom they were made, written on the lid of the wooden mummy case, and also on the outer winding sheet of the mummy.

Rameses II was the "Pharaoh of the Oppression," who made the lives of the children of Israel "bitter with hard bondage, in mortar and in brick, and in all manner of service in the field," and who ordered that all the male children of the Hebrews should be killed to prevent the strengthening of the captive race. The mummy is described as being well preserved and giving a good idea of the kingly appearance when alive. The forehead is low and narrow, the eyebrows thick and white, the eyes small and close together, the nose long, thin and hooked, the cheek bones prominent, the mouth thick lipped and firm set, and the jaw bones massive and strong.—Inter-Ocean.

Catherine De Medici and Her Stockings.

Every one, at least every one who is a woman, knows that "Thou shalt not wear wrinkled and untidy hose," is the first and great commandment in the woman's decalogue—its violation the one unpardonable sin. The woman with wrinkled stockings, like the man who cheats at cards, is despised and disowned by her kind. But how many women know that it was a great lady who originated this test of womanly virtue, and that the lady was no less a personage than she of the ruffled collars—Catherine de Medici? Up to her time stockings were worn wrinkled upon the ankle like evening gloves, and what fleasy days it must have been for thin ladies of her court when this royal and doubtless shapely sovereign insisted on smooth, trim stockings!

Meaning of the Word Nosegay.

Here is an old definition of the word nosegay: "As to the latter part of the word nosegay, it is so transformed in sight and signification that only such a judicious writer and etymologist as Cleland would have traced it to its original." In his Celtic vocabulary, page 6, he says: "Gay, applied to nosegay, comes from the Erse tongue, in which gesch signifies a bough or bunch of flowers, which might be held to the nose."

Webster's substantially follows the above and The Century literally, a pretty thing to smell, or added to gay, a bough of flowers used to regale the sense of smell, a posy, a bouquet. It certainly is not in force to call a formally made bouquet a nosegay, says the Florists' Exchange.

Dagger Money.

Many curious incidents are related in the early diaries showing the social life of old English towns at the commencement of the century. From these diaries it is learned that it was once customary to present the mayor of the town, on grand occasions, such as an assize, with a dagger, actually for his defense. The custom had ceased by this time, but the remembrance remained in the fact of the continued payment of a sum of money as "dagger money."

Tulips and Carnations.

The tulip was introduced into England before 1577 from Vienna. Elizabeth assembled the Queen in 1559, received in 1600, that tulips would have been growing in England in her time. Carnations were brought over from Poland before 1597, according to an English writer, who adds that the rose was the special emblem of the house of Tudor.

Good Health

SEWER GAS IN THE HOUSEHOLD.

A Time When Fevers Are Frequent and One Probable Cause of Them.

It is a well known fact, to which an exchange calls attention, that many people, after spending the summer away from home, are on their return taken down with fever. Some of the reasons for this are known to us, but probably there are many yet to be discovered. An unmistakable cause is found in many city homes which are shut up for months, during a portion of which time they are filled with sewer gas. Very few, indeed, have the traps under their sinks sealed up when they leave home, nor are they filled during their absence. Of course the water in them soon evaporates, and there is no longer any obstruction against the free passage through the sewer gas from the sewer. With this pervading a house there is certainly a bad outlook for its returning tenants. In such a condition it ought to undergo fumigation; if that remedy is not applied, then all that is left is thorough airing of all the rooms and everything therein, with curtains up to admit every possible ray of sunlight. And the longer the windows are kept open the better. A house infected by sewer gas is scarcely likely to be made safe, even by thorough ventilation, unless it is professed for days and days.

Do Trees Strain Out Bacteria?

The Sanitary Inspector describes some investigations made by Serafini and Arata to determine the correctness of the belief that the foliage of trees has some influence in filtering out the bacterial contents of the atmosphere. Their method of procedure was to determine the number of bacteria in air under motion before and after it had reached the woods. The barometrical pressure, direction and strength of the wind, temperature at the edge and in the midst of the woods, humidity and rainfall were all taken into consideration. As the number of observations was only forty, the investigators give the results with some reserve; nevertheless, they believe that they are justified in affirming that forests do exercise the power of straining out the bacteria that are brought to them by the wind.

Poison in Moldy Bread.

The mold of bread, according to a foreign journal, is a veritable poison for man and beast, as witness the following instances: In 1887 three peasants—father, mother and little girl of five years of age—ate, after having carefully cleaned, some bread covered with green mold. They all three became very ill, and the little girl died. In 1872 two pigs and a horse were poisoned by moldy bread. In 1878 eight persons who ate pudding made with moldy bread were poisoned, and two died. In 1881, in the Second Hussars at Oran, there was much disease and damage, and the soldiers threw it away. Some horses ate a part and became seriously ill, one of them being paralyzed. It is easy, however, to avoid using this bread. Sight suffices, and at need can be aided by smell and taste.

Lime Water.

To prepare lime water for use in milk, put a lump about the size of an egg in a glass bottle (a fruit jar is convenient), add water until the lime is slaked and of the consistency of cream. The lime settles to the bottom, leaving the water clear. Three or four tablespoonfuls of this may be added to a goblet of milk.

Etiquette

THE SCIENCE OF MANNERS.

Of Interest to the Woman Who is an Untried Sphere of Work for Her Etiquette.

"Many a good soul gives herself great uneasiness upon being called into a new sphere of action, either through increase of wealth or through the husband's election to office or because of promotion in any way, or on occasion of a visit among those with whom much social usage has rubbed away the corners of conventionality. She is just what to do and how to do it at every point, and who, she fears, will either instruct her by her ignorance of the lesser details, or will scorn her ignorance, and her self with it."

Harper's Bazar, which thus describes a common difficulty, then gives the following advice: "There is an extraordinarily ready and short way out of every difficulty of the sort, for if the embarrassed individual will only ask for some special rule to reflect upon the various dicta of the regulations concerning which she feels herself uninformed, and which have seemed to her only a trap and pitfall for the unwary, she will come to the conclusion that none willingly hamper themselves with useless or capricious rules, which would only involve their own ire or speak well for it is there fore to be supposed that every one of these lesser details has sprung into being to an swer a need, to make things easier, to spare people's feelings, prejudices or exertions. That she must not break an engagement to dine, let us say, is not simply because she must never break any promise, but because doing so will disarrange the whole affair and make awkwardness and inconvenience for those that have been so kind as to ask her to their table. That certain ceremoniously on one member of a household, who is so either temporarily or permanently, she should leave her card, or ask for the lady who is the head of the house, even if quite indifferent as to whether she sees her or not, is not the nonsense it looks at first sight, but is to be done both because the courtesy is due to the person whose threshold is crossed, and because it makes the circumstances easy for the person on whom the call is really made, avoiding any disturbance or jealousy. That she may not refuse an invitation from one and accept it from another is not a rule for the arbitrary curtailment of her liberty and pleasure, but is one made for the sake of sparing the social blushes of the one whose invitation is not accepted. Indeed, this might go through the whole list of the things to be done and not to be done, and although one might be moved only by the lowest and lowest motive, yet upon searching into them, one would find that a single authority controlled them—the authority that is behind all good manners—the authority of the Golden Rule. They are the finest ladies, they are the gentlemen most without reproach, in relation to manners, whose whole behavior is modeled only upon the intention of doing to others as they would have others do to them."

Our Young Folks

The Best Prize.

Every session an award of prizes was made in Willie's school, and he was anxious to merit one of them. Willie was behind the other boys in all studies except writing. As he had no hope to excel in anything but writing, he made up his mind to try for the special prize for that with all his might. And he did try, so that his copy book would have done honor to a boy twice as age. When the prizes were awarded the chairman of the committee held up two copy books and said: "It would be difficult to say which of these two books is better than the other, but for one copy in Willie's, which is not only superior to Charlie's, but to every other copy in the same book. This copy, therefore, gains the prize."

Willie's heart beat high with hope, not unmixed with fear. Blushing to his temples, he said, "Please, sir, may I see that copy?"

"Certainly," said the chairman, looking somewhat surprised.

Willie glanced at the copy, and then, handing the book, he said: "Please, sir, that is not my writing. It was written by an upper class boy who took my book by mistake one day instead of his own."

The chairman and committee were so pleased with Willie's honesty and truthfulness that although they could not give him what was called "the first prize," they gave him another, and it was really "the best prize."—The School Visitor.

Taught by an Insect.

Mark Gambeard Brunel, the famous engineer, claimed that he was indebted to an insect for a great and useful invention. The story, as told in Golden Days, is as follows.

Brunel was one day in a shipyard watching the movements of an insect known as the teredo navalis—in English, the naval wood worm—when a brilliant thought suddenly occurred to him. He saw that this creature bored its way into a piece of wood upon which it was operating by means of a very extraordinary mechanical apparatus.

Looking at the animal attentively through a microscope, he found that it was covered in front with a pair of circular shells that, with its foot as a purchase, it communicated a rotary motion and a forward impulse to the valves, which, acting upon the wood like a gimlet, penetrated its substance, and that, as the particles of wood were loosened, they passed through a flue in the foot, and thence through the body of the borer to its mouth, where they were expelled.

"Here," said Brunel to himself, "is the sort of thing I want. Can I reproduce it in an artificial form?"

He forthwith set to work, and the final result of his labors, after many failures, was the famous boring shield with which the Thames tunnel was excavated.

A Chip Off the Old Block.

"How old are you, sonny?"

"Twelve years old, sir."

"You are very small for your age. What is your name?"

"Johnny Smith. My father is a baker on Manhattan avenue."

"So your father is a baker? I might have guessed it by your size. You remind me of one of his loaves."—Texas Siftings.

THE WRONG BOX.

He Turned Out to Be Some Other Girl's Brother.

The following is the experience of a boy who had sense enough to keep his mouth shut at the proper time:

"I war waitin on Johnny Greene's step," he said, "jest you like I started from my house, fur Johnny. Up comes a nice looking fellow in his best clothes.

"'How's your sister today?' says he, as I says she was very well, for I thort at first that he did mean my sister.

"Jess then the door was opened and he says to me, 'Come in, Johnny,' and talk to me while I an waitin for my cool to go up. So I went in with him.

"'You're a nice little chap,' says he, 'as I've got a pocketknife which I'll give you if you promise not to lose it,' an so I promised not to lose it an he gave it to me, an I felt of the blades an saw it was a beauty.

"'I like boys,' says he, smilin at me friendly.

"'An I like you,' says I. 'You seem like a nice fellar, an this knife is a dandy.'

"'I'm glad you like it,' says he, 'an perhaps you would like some candy, an wouldn't you take this quarter an get some pretty soon?'

"An then Johnny Greene's sister comes in an she spoke to me nice, 'cause she likes me, an I showed her my knife an he smiled at me till I wanted to laff right out, but I didn't say anything about the quarter, 'cause I knew she wouldn't like that.

"He says to her, 'You have a fine little brother, haven't you?' An she looked pleased but kind o' surprised, an says that Johnny was a little bit mischievous but meant well. I jest grinned again.

"In about a minute Johnny came down stairs, an when I heard him in the hall I said I guessed I'd go now, but she called Johnny in, 'cause the man seemed to like him.

"'Johnny,' says she, 'come and speak to Mr. Doolittle,' an Mr. Doolittle jess looked so 'cause I was snappin the big blade in my knife.

"'Er—an this ain't your brother?' says he, looking sour at me.

"'Oh, no,' says she, 'this is Johnny's chum, who lives across the street.'

"'Come on, Johnny,' says I, for I thort it was time to go. 'Come on down to the Italian fruit stand an get some fruit.'

"Johnny was mad when I told him about the knife. 'But never mind,' says I. 'Don't you see he's got to give you one now?'"—New York Tribune.

The Gander and the Ducks.

Some Ducks were one day Enjoying themselves in a pond of water when a Gander came down among them and put on such airs that the indignant Ducks finally cried out to one another:

"Behold the Gander! He would have us believe that he belongs to the Nobility!"

"Ladies and Gentlemen," replied the Gander, with added Dignity, "I beg to inform you that I have been Tracing my Genealogy back for Several Years, and I am directly Descended from the Eagle."

"Ha! ha! ha!" cried the Ducks in chorus. "While it may be true that your Ancestors were Eagles, the fact remains that you are only a Goose!" and they fell upon him with beak and wing and drove him away.

PLAINFIELD EVENING NEWS.

CITY COMMON COUNCIL.

A SPECIAL MEETING LAST NIGHT.

Judge VanSyckel's Order.—Streets to be Macadamized.—About Widening Peace Street.—Ridiculous Ballsing Again.—The Combine Still at That Mysterious Sewerage Scheme.—Street Railway Petition.

The City Common Council met in special session last evening. It was 8.40 o'clock when the meeting was called to order. Besides the President, Councilmen Ackerman, Gallup, Ginna, Hetfield, Johnston, Moffett, Roberts, Rushmore, See and Spangenberg responded to roll call.

Judge VanSyckel's Order.

A communication from Judge VanSyckel addressed to the Corporation Counsel in reference to the Water Works injunction granting the writ of certorari, was read.

Mr. Hetfield moved that the taking of testimony in the case be begun as speedily as possible in order that it could be argued at the November term of the Supreme Court.

Mr. Ginna required for what reason.

To Prevent the People Preventing the Combine.

Mr. Hetfield replied in order that there would be no delay, as in case it was not argued at the November term it would have to lay over until the February term.

The vote was carried by a vote of six to five.

To Macadamize Thoroughfares.

The ordinance in relation to the macadamizing of Third street, Muhlenberg place and South Second street was taken up passed on its third reading and final passage.

Wrangle about Widening Peace Street.

In reference the widening and opening of Peace street Mr. Rushmore, the chairman of the Committee on Laws and Ordinances, reported that the Committee from the borough were in doubt and that the Committee did not wish to report until the return of the Corporation Counsel from Europe. He further stated that the ordinance in their hands was not in a shape to present to Council and that the Committee had decided not to report on it until the next meeting night. He further stated that it had not as yet been examined by Council, but that the committee had arranged to have duplicate copies printed to be placed at the disposal of Council at the meeting to be held next Monday evening.

Mr. Hetfield thought that there should be no delay and was in favor of presenting the ordinance at the present meeting.

Mr. Ackerman stated that the committee were desirous of having the ordinance signed by the Mayor and not referred and for that reason they refrained from presenting it in its present form. He further stated that the committee had held several meetings and that they were handicapped by not having maps, etc., obtaining, he said, "if we passed it to-night and then it was wrong we would be compelled to pay a useless expense of advertising it." [That has been the result in nearly every other ordinance acted upon by the present Council.—Ed.]

Mr. Hetfield said that the property-owners claimed that the committee were delaying action in the matter and that they charged the committee with unfairness. "They come to me" he continued "and want to know why its passage is delayed."

Mr. Rushmore retaliated by informing Mr. Hetfield that if the property owners had any grievances they should make them known to the Committee and the Committee only. He further stated that in a communication the Corporation Counsel had informed the Committee that they should not act any further in the matter at present.

Mr. Hetfield replied by saying that he understood that the maps had been in the hands of the Committee since June last and that if that was the case he thought the Corporation Counsel had had sufficient time to prepare the ordinance.

Mr. Rushmore—"I desire to inform the gentleman that we did not receive the maps until July. If we did not present this ordinance to-night it is only a matter of a few days until our next meeting. It will make no material difference if we delay it a few days. As a member of the Committee I do not wish to present any ordinance in an incomplete form. There are interlinenations in it which may be misunderstood."

Corporation Counsel Marsh was given the privilege of the floor. He stated that the borough had not the power to open streets in cases where it was necessary to remove houses, according to a law passed in 1873. Continuing he said it was a matter for six commissioners to decide; that no ordinance was necessary and that the power already had been drafted at the instance of the Law and Ordinance Committee in order to give Council power to open the street as far as the brook and to then let the borough authorities open the street from there if they so wished. He stated further that when he received the description and maps from the surveyors they needed changing to make them legal.

Mr. Ginna inquired of what particular benefit it would be to open the street as far as the brook and then to stop. He thought it would be far better to wait and see what the borough authorities proposed doing and then for Council to take similar action.

Mr. Hetfield thought that the street should be open to the brook; that Council would attend to the assessing of damages and benefits on this side and the borough authorities could attend to their side. The street he thought would certainly go through and if Council waited until the Y. M. C. A. began to build it would be more expensive.

Mr. Ginna said that Borough Counsel Reed had told the Corporation Counsel the borough's position and it would be unwise to open the street until they decide what they propose to do in the matter. "Should we take action in the matter and then they should refuse," he said, "we would greatly injure the Y. M. C. A. If each member of the Council was supplied with a printed copy of the ordinance Council could go over it carefully while the clerk was reading it and could vote intelligibly on the matter. I don't think much of the first reading anyhow."

Mr. Hetfield said the minority could not claim that the majority were rushing this matter as the Committee on Laws and Ordinances had had the matter under consideration since last June. We could assess on this side for benefits and damages and the borough could attend to the other.

Mr. Ginna—"The gentleman seems to want to lay stress on the Committee holding the matter back since last June. The Committee had no meeting until July and since then on account of the absence of the members on their vacations they could hold no meetings."

Mr. Ackerman inquired what would be gained by acting on the ordinance to-night.

Mr. Hetfield replied that one week would be gained by having the ordinance read and then published.

Mr. Hetfield renewed his motion that the ordinance be taken up and read.

Mr. Ackerman quietly asked him how he was going to get it.

Mr. Hetfield moved that the Committee be instructed to return the ordinance to the Council.

The President so instructed Mr. Rushmore.

Mr. Rushmore refused to return it and stated that he had no ordinance in his possession. It being a memorandum only.

Mr. Hetfield moved to reconsider his motion. It was so ordered.

He then moved that all the papers be taken out of the hands of the Committee and referred back to the Council.

Mr. See inquired what ordinance.

Mr. Hetfield—"The Committee reported that they had an ordinance in their possession. This, it seems to me, is boy's play. The motion compels the Committee to return the papers."

Mr. See—"It does not."

Mr. Rushmore—"The motion on the books instructs the Committee to return ordinance drawn up. The paper I have in my possession is only a memorandum."

Mr. Hetfield—"The Corporation Counsel said he had drawn an ordinance."

Mr. Ackerman laughed.

Mr. Hetfield—"This is all boys' play and very small boys play at that."

Mr. Rushmore—"I am willing to return the maps but will not return anything the Council has never seen."

Mr. Hetfield inquired if they had the ordinance in their possession.

Mr. See—"As an ordinance, no."

Mr. Hetfield—"The committee refuse to return it to Council."

Mr. Rushmore—"I refuse to return any thing that has never seen the light of this Council Chamber."

Cornering the Combine President by His Own Absurd Rulings.

Mr. Ackerman—Early last March the minority tried to compel the Committee on Water, Printing and Stationery to report on the Water Works matter.

Mr. Hetfield—"The gentleman is out of order he should confine himself to the question.

Mr. Ackerman—"I have the floor Mr. President. We tried to compel them to report and the president ruled that we could not.

Mr. Hetfield—"It's not so."

Mr. See—"It is so."

Mr. Rushmore—"I wish to be set right in this matter. The committee is willing to return anything the Council gave it,but the members will not be forced to report."

Mr. Hetfield—"Since the Laws and Ordinance Committee refuse to read the ordinance I move that the Corporation Counsel be instructed to draw up another ordinance to be presented next Monday evening."

How Much Does He Care about Constituents?

Mr. Hetfield—I am surprised at the stand Mr. See has taken to-night. Our constituents live in that ward and they want the street cut through."

Mr. Ackerman laughed outright.

Mr. Hetfield—"I think that very impudent. I see why Mr. See wants to be willing. They are afraid we will get the credit of passing it."

Mr. See—"I have the opening of that street as much at heart as Mr. Hetfield has. I want the ordinance to go through but I want it to go through in the proper shape."

The President—"The chairman of the committee will please return what papers are in his possession."

Mr. Rushmore returned the maps but withheld the ordinance.

The Corporation Counsel was instructed to draft a new ordinance by a vote of six to five.

Still at it Regardless of the Court's Order.

J. M. Low and six associates applied for a sewerage franchise.

The specifications were read.

Mr. Ackerman moved that the matter be delayed for one month as he did not hear the reading distinctly.

Mr. Hetfield—"I could have heard it if you were paying attention.

Only the Stupid Blunders Corrected.

Mr. Hetfield said the specifications were the same as those previously presented. That the dates only were changed.

Mr. Ginna said they appeared to read different.

Mr. Hetfield moved that the proposition of J. M. Low be accepted.

Mr. Ackerman called for the ayes and nays on the question.

The roll was called and the proposition was accepted by the usual vote of 6 to 5.

But in the Public Interest They Won't Just Now.

Mr. Hetfield offered a resolution to the effect that the Mayor and the Clerk be instructed to enter into contract with J. M. Low & Co.

Mr. Ackerman inquired if the sewerage would be put in irrespective of the water contract.

Only His Word.

Mr. Hetfield said he had Mr. Low's word that the contract would be carried out.

Mr. Rushmore requested him to state positively.

Mr. Hetfield said if he understood the matter right one was dependent on the other.

The motion was then adopted by a vote of six to five.

The Mysterious Unknown.

Mr. Hetfield offered an ordinance to grant J. M. Low and six others a franchise to erect a system of sewerage.

Mr. Ackerman moved that it lay on the table and called for the ayes and nays. The motion was lost by a vote of six to five.

The ordinance was adopted on its first reading.

Mr. Hetfield moved that the rules be suspended and that the ordinance be placed on its second reading.

Mr. Ackerman—"I object. Don't dare suspend those rules."

Determined to Force it Through Anyhow.

Mr. Hetfield moved that it be placed on its second reading without suspending the rules. The motion prevailed by a vote of six to five.

It was then ordered engrossed and advertised.

Who Is This?

The Columbia Commercial and Navigation Co., of New York, in a communication, asked for a street railway franchise. The matter was referred to the Street Committee.

The meeting then adjourned.

A TRESTLE FELL ON HIM

AND MAY MAKE HIM A CRIPPLE FOR LIFE, IF HE LIVES.

The Awful Accident Which Befell Hans Anderson at Pond's Last Night.—He Refused to Have His Leg Amputated.

While a heavy trestle was being lifted last night, at about twelve o'clock, at the Pond Machine Tool Works, it slipped, or something holding it broke, and it fell.

It had been raised to a height of about twenty-five feet when the accident occurred.

Hans Anderson, a Dane, aged 49 years, and residing at 208 West Front street, was almost directly underneath the weighty mass.

He was struck down and was thought at first to have been instantly killed. This, fortunately, was not the case, but the man's injuries are very serious. His scalp was almost torn from his head and there was a compound fracture of the left leg.

He was taken to the Muhlenberg Hospital where he, as is usual at that institution, received the best attendance.

A consultation of doctors was held and it was decided that Anderson's leg must be amputated. Ten o'clock this morning was the time set.

LATER.—When the doctors approached, Anderson refused to allow them to amputate his leg, and the crushed and broken limb was therefore patched as well as possible.

AN IMPUDENT PEDDLER.

He Attempted to Force a Woman to Buy his Merchandise.

This morning an itinerant peddler visited a house on West Third street and insisted on selling some writing paper to the woman who lives there. She told him that she did not care to purchase any. He forced his way past her and seated himself on a chair again insisted on her purchasing some of his goods. She went up stairs and the house threatening with arrest. When he reached the street he picked up a large stone and was in the act of throwing it at her when Policeman Giese happened along. The officer placed him under arrest and took him before City Judge Codington. The woman refused to make a charge against him stating that she was afraid her name would get in the newspapers. The police made a charge of disorderly conduct and City Judge Codington gave him a sentence of two dollars or spending ten days in the county jail. When the Judge pronounced sentence the prisoner misunderstood him and cried like a child. He thought the sentence was ten days in the county jail instead of two dollars fine. He said he would sooner pay ten dollars than to go to jail. He paid his fine and was released.

PATIENCE ON A WAGON

THE LAUGHABLE OBSTINACY OF TWO DRIVERS.

Caught in a Narrow Road, Neither Would Give Way.—One Philosophically Took a Paper.—The Other Equally so, Prepared to Take a Nap.—The Deadlock Broken.

Monday afternoon a prominent hardware merchant, Mr. A. M. Griffen, had a wagon loaded with pipe and started to drive it himself through a narrow lane by his store to the street. He had gone half-way through the lane, when he was confronted with a lumbering water wagon coming in from the street. It took up all the little roadway, and overshadowed the footpath.

Both drivers were very good natured men, and each requested the other to back out of the way. Both objected. Each insisted. The other fellow had no business, no right of way, there, and again each positively declined to get out of the way. The other fellow was wrong.

"No sir'ee! Be hornswoggled 'f I'll get out of the way," said one.

"You may drive on either side if you can, or under me, but I stay right here or go ahead," said the other.

Then they sat and glared at each other for awhile, but didn't say soft things under their breath; that wouldn't look nice in print, of course not. The silence became so thick it was oppressive. The man on the water-wagon broke it into small chunks by exclaiming—

"Are'ye' going to get out of m'way?"

The driver of the hardware wagon smiled. Some how this seemed to exasperate the other fellow for he looked naughty and said—well he probably started his sentence with something that would appear naughtier than he did. The closing part of it was "if I wait a year."

"Oh! time's no object,"replied the hardware man jauntily as he fixed himself comfortably, drew a newspaper from his pocket and prepared for a good comfortable read.

The driver on the big wagon snorted defiantly and then went the one on the little wagon one better. He fixed himself comfortably, real comfortably, for a nap. Then the silence got quite solid again. A crowd gathered. They made remarks like these:

"Get him a pillow!"

"What's the politics of that paper."

"Prickle his feet with a straw."

"What's the 2.4 slow race! I bet on the other fellow!"

"Oh! shut up! this is Maud S. doin'a mile in 2.10. The other horse is pacing her."

The "sleeper" took a squint at the hardware man and then rolled over to find a softer spot on the plank covered wagon.

The paper rustled slightly as the reader turned it to find a new article.

The crowd thickened. The silence became the two drivers was solid enough to make one with. The crowd appreciated the joke.

"See the sleeping beauty!" said one.

"Wonder if the're wax figures?"

"What a chance to advertise! Wonder what they would charge to hire a signs?"

"That fellow on the wagon would be a dandy sign "for that tired feeling."

Then a policeman forced his way through the crowd, and spoiled the circus, by making the water wagon driver back out.

THE THIRD ANNIVERSARY.

The Young People's Society to Celebrate It.

The Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of the Park avenue Baptist church will celebrate its third anniversary on Thursday evening, October first. All the young people's organizations of Plainfield and vicinity have a special invitation to be present. The exercises which will begin at eight o'clock, promise to be very interesting. Mr. James A. Quinkanbk, District Secretary of Kings county, Brooklyn, N.Y., will address the meeting. A reception will be held in the lecture room and all will be very welcome.

Dunellen Notes.

Mr. Wm. E. Ryder is making extensive improvements on his Prospect avenue home.

Dr. Nelson is talking of opening a street through his property between the old New Market road and Prospect avenue.

Mr. Arthur K. Rodgers, a graduate of Colby University, who has been spending the Summer at the home of L. D. Titsworth, left this morning for Baltimore. He expects to enter John Hopkins' University and complete his education.

There is some talk of building a bridge over the Lehigh Valley Railroad at Prospect avenue, New Market.

A Painful Foot.

"Howie" Drake, the young son of Mr. Henry C. Drake of North avenue, about two months ago while at play ran a large splinter of wood into the ball of his foot. His parents could not extract it and a day or two ago the foot began to swell and became very painful. This morning Mr. Drake spoke to Dr. Berg and the physician succeeded in extracting the splinter. The little fellow stood the operation bravely.

Lucky Fishermen.

Mr. Rudolph Laurent of Somerset street in company with two friends went to Russell's lake in the vicinity of Rahway yesterday on a fishing expedition and when they returned last evening they exhibited seventeen large pike. Mr. Laurent is an expert fisherman.

WHERE WERE THE POLICE?

Two Men Badly Beaten on the Street at New Brunswick.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Sept. 29th. (Special.)—Last evening Mr. E. S. Hammill, and his brother, J. E. Hammill, visited this city to attend a rehearsal of a musical society. As they were walking along on one of the most prominent thoroughfares at about 10.15 o'clock, they were set upon by four roughs and badly beaten.

TALK OF THE TOWN

—The Plainfield Reform Club will hold its regular mid-week meeting Thursday evening at eight o'clock.

—The cornet band connected with the Salvation Army will play in this city to-night and to-morrow night.

—The Committee of the Masonic Association in this city held a meeting last evening and transacted business of a routine nature only.

—A grand vocal and instrumental concert will be given at Reform Hall Thursday, Oct. 1. The advertisement in another column will give particulars.

—The annual meeting of the Congregational Church and Society will be held this evening at eight o'clock in the church. C. L. GOODRICH.

—The Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of the Warren Mission chapel will hold a meeting in the parlors of the chapel this evening at eight o'clock.

—All young men and boys interested in the study of short hand, mechanical drawing, bookkeeping and penmanship are requested to apply at once at the Y. M. C. A. rooms. The membership fee ($2) entitles to all privileges in the association.

—United Tea and Coffee Growers' Association advertise their Second Great Special Sale of Teas, Coffees and a Fine Line of Groceries, to take place on Thursday, Friday and Saturday next, and cordially invite everybody to call and get a catalogue of prices for those days.

—A party of young people from New Market and Plainfield, while boating on New Market pond yesterday, were stranded in the sand, and got ashore with difficulty. Then they visited the Sampton cemetery. They were compelled to climb over the barbed wire fence to enter. Returning they decorated their boat with flowers and grasses and all agreed they had a good time, even if nearly all were wet, by the boat beginning to leak before they got home.

—The patrons of Music Hall will positively get in a rare treat Thursday night. The event will be the peerless Janauschek, considered the dramatic queen of the English and German stage. She will present her selected company of players in her new romantic drama, "The Harvest Moon," by Sydney Grundy. The play has been written expressly to fit her talents, and it is promised that in making the new departure, the great artist has shown skill in her selection of her company and play. By the pure and public of every city in which "The Harvest Moon" has been produced her decision has been endorsed. The interest of the audience is held from the rise of the curtain to the finale of the last act. There is a strong vein of good and clean comedy running through the play, and the parts are in able hands throughout.

—Policeman Giese owns a cow of which he is very fond. During the day he ties the cow to a stake with a long rope and allows her to graze in the vacant roadside. Some person made it his business to report the matter to the Police Board of Common Council and last evening President Smith took the trouble to inform Mr. Giese that he was violating the city ordinances by allowing his cow to run at large. Mr. Giese quietly informed the president that he had read the ordinance and that he knew he was not violating it. Mr. Smith—"The cow eats on the sidewalk." Mr. Giese—"She does not. There is no grass on the sidewalk. Grass don't grow on stones. She eats in the gutter." A number of bystanders began laughing and the president walked away. In conversation with a friend afterward Mr. Giese laughingly said "my golly, they got my cow before the Police Board."

The Dog Disappears and Then the Cellar is Robbed.

Major Paul, of East Front street, President of the Steel Wheel Company of Boston, has a Scotch collie which he prizes very highly. The dog is afraid of thunderstorms. The servant girl thought it would cure him to give him one in the stomach and Saturday night the dog was left out. He has not been seen since. It is supposed that he was stolen. Sunday night thieves cut the screens out of the cellar and stole articles of no great value, which they found there. They did the same at the cellar of Mrs. Elwin Leland, who resides next door. This made the dog missed all the more. He is a pet in the family, and he and young Master Paul were playmates much attached to each other. A reward is elsewhere offered for his return.

I have recommended Dr. David Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" to many in Shelton and Birmingham, and I have yet to find one who has not been benefitted by it.—C. L. Beaver, Birmingham, Conn.—ADV.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The eyes of the country are on New York and Ohio this fall.

A young lady writes to the woman's column of a newspaper that every young man whosoever a soul ought to be cremated. This is a truly awful sentiment. Why not bashes for men in these days when women are going into divided skirts?

It was a Michigan man this time who blew out the gas at a hotel instead of turning it off, and was found at 5 o'clock in the morning sweetly sleeping his last sleep.

Rev. J. W. Arney, the Michigan Methodist preacher, who loves horses, and even squints favorably at a good horse race when there is no betting, has been admonished by his bishop; but Mr. Arney will not obey. He sees no sin in trotting stock. He even says that if worst comes to worst he may quit the ministry and go into horse breeding regularly. Well, it is useful work; improving the horse-flesh of America.

Bicycle records have been broken in England again for the quarter mile record and others. A. J. Mole made the quarter mile on a safety with pneumatic tire in 30 3-5 seconds, while W. L. Lambley went on an ordinary machine three miles in 9 minutes 3 2-5 seconds. The four and five mile records have also been broken. In America it is the wheels that are broken instead of the records. Our roads are so bad that heavier wheels are required here than in England. The Bicyclers' union there pays a fund yearly for the repair of the roads. In case a wheelman on a bicycling trip finds a road not in his satisfaction he has the road superior arrested and fined. In that well regulated old country, too, when a wheelman approaches a steep declivity at full speed a warning sign posted near by informs him that here is danger. In case of a very steep descent there are two such signs.

The Old, Old Story.

On the same night, recently, in two different quarters of a large city, two farmers were robbed, nearly beaten to death and left on the sidewalk for dead. Both had brought a fine wagon load of produce to market. The gentleman from the rural districts, who comes to the city and gets rid of all his money and sends it murdered, only less familiar to newspaper readers than the individual who is bunkoed or he who blows out the gas at a hotel, or perhaps the girl who pours kerosene on the kitchen fire.

But none of these familiar examples ever do any good to the person who desires to see how it is himself. In case of the rural man the story is always the same substantially. He sells his produce, packed in barrels, and then goes out to "take a stroll." It is a little old that his fancy for a place to "stroll" in always leads him to a district which no resident of the city would be apt to visit unless he was armed, or accompanied by a policeman and had left all his valuables at home. But the guileless rustic individual "strolls" into the queer and pokerish region with his pocket full of money, just as if he had never read a newspaper in his life and did not know how to read, in fact. He lets strangers "treat" him. Then he treats strangers; "pulls out a roll of bills." That is the end of the story till some policeman finds him, bleeding, stripped even of his clothing sometimes, and lying senseless on the sidewalk.

This is the old story; the moral the rural individual can pick out for himself.

Captain Kidd on Deck Again.

This time it is not on the shores of Rhode Island or Long Island or Connecticut that he buried his money. It is, of all places, away up on the shores of Nova Scotia. It was revealed in a dream to a young man, who being a coldblooded, sensible Nova Scotian, might have been expected to know better, but who seems not to have, nevertheless.

Captain Kidd and his wicked mate, Red Beard, took the young man in a dream through tunnel after tunnel, so many as to suggest that those old pirates must have been fond of digging, just for exercise, and showed to his dazzled eyes boxes of treasure which the old rascal promised to young Nova Scotia if he would give half to the church. This, of course any right minded person would promise readily to do, and so the search was actually begun for Captain Kidd's treasures once more.

When they are found, doubtless it will be published in all the journals of the day, and here will be the biggest lift the society for psychic research ever had. That young man's talents as the boss dreamer will be in demand at all points, and even if he was not a millionaire already from the pirate's treasure he could shortly become one by reason of fees showered on him by grateful clients for whom he had dreamed certain things.

We hope the treasure will be found. If, however, unfortunately through some untowardness of pesky "conditions" this spook money should fail to materialize, there will be left to all parties still the philosophical reflection that if all the time, exertion and thought that have been spent on Captain Kidd expeditions had been employed in honest, steady work and business enterprise it certainly would have made somebody rich.

SHE SEEKS A DIVORCE.

Unhappy Marriage of John Jacob Astor's Niece.

TRADED HER MONEY FOR A TITLE

Allegations of Cruelty and Conspiracy Made By Baroness De Stuers Against Her Husband, the Belgian Minister to Paris—A Plot to Put Her in an Asylum.

STOCK FALLS, S. D., Sept. 29.—The romance of at least one American girl who gave wealth for a title has been grievously dispelled. Baroness de Stuers, wife of the Belgian minister in Paris and niece of the late John Jacob Astor, the New York millionaire, has filed papers in a suit for divorce against her husband. The papers were served on the baron in Paris today, and he has cabled instructions to an attorney to make an appearance and defense. The complaint recites that the baron and baroness were married in New York May 30, 1875, and that ever since their marriage the baron has pursued a course of extreme cruelty toward the plaintiff.

To Living Death.

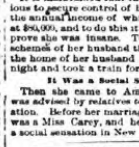
While in Paris she says that the baron applied foul epithets and accused his wife of not being chaste; that on June 24, 1890, defendant by fraud and false representation attempted to procure her incarceration in an institution for the confinement of insane persons. This last fact will be brought out at the trial.

After His Wife's Estate.

It is maintained that the baron was anxious to secure control of his wife's estate, the small fortune of which is said to be not at $50,000, and to do this it was necessary to prove she was insane. To escape the evil schemes of her husband Miss Astor has left the home of her husband in Paris at midnight and took a train for Germany.

It Was a Social Sensation.

Then she came to America, where she was advised by counsel to secure a separation. Before her marriage the baroness was a Miss Carey, and her marriage was a social sensation in New York.



FRENCH MILLINERY.

Suitable for Early Autumn—Who Says They Are not Pretty?

Here is the latest imported millinery now on view in New York's "set." How easy it is for your own milliner to duplicate any one of them from the pictures and description herewith.

SHAPES HANDILY MADE.

No. 1 is a becoming hat of biscuit-colored velvet, lined underneath with black velvet, and trimmed on the brim with a pleated frill of fine black lace, and loops of jet. A jetted osprey of black ocque feathers may be seen at the back of this hat.

No. 2 is a useful and yet becoming bonnet which can be copied in various colors to match any dress one may own. The trimming simply of frills of velvet and twisted ribbon with bows in front, together with an aigrette of sprays and small wings.

The Train Skirt Must Go.

The trailed street skirt has had a heavy foot set upon its graceful sweep. Valued medical authority asserts that disease and death lurk in every fold of the skirt as it sweeps over the dirty pavements, gathering all the city's refuse. Said a physician talking on the subject: "Women who have the street sweepings also will take off their soiled skirts to their own rooms, throw them carelessly across a chair and breathe for hours the atmosphere that can not avoid being vitiated thereby.

Well, the discarding of the trained skirt will be a hardship only to the few. It is a pity to make the assertion, but the woman who lifts her skirts gracefully is a rare exception. Most women snatch and under stress firmly in one hand and to hold them so that no part nor portion slips its moorings is a matter of concern. "Practice and perseverance will overcome the difficulty," suggests the train admirer; and even granting this we may conclude that only the few, the very few, of the sex have time to conquer the obstacles, who will continue to patronize the trained street skirt.—Table Talk.

Separated in Death.

Mme. Martin, the old lady who recently died at Villeneuve, France, bequeathing her fortune of 200,000 francs to her native town of Vodi, left 1,200 francs for the expenses of her funeral and Pincennes, coupled with the condition that she was to be buried "as far as possible from her late husband."

An Autumn Ode.

Now the forest leaves are falling
(Soaps steeps, I grieve to say),
Blackbirds join in the uproar calling
(So are creditors to-day).

Chilly winds o'er the mountain sighing
(Like my heart, oh, sad to tell),
Summer days are flying, flying
(Nonplus summer hops as well).

HALF A MILLION GONE.

Valuable Philadelphia Property Vanishes in Smoke.

EIGHT FIREMEN WERE INJURED.

The Entire Department and Two Fire Boats Battled with the Fierce Flames Before They Were at Last Subdued. Rivers of Oil Ran Through the Streets.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 29.—A long, old, and dangerous fire licked up $500,000 worth of property and injured several firemen. The flames started in the basement of the large building 136 North Delaware avenue. It is used by Messrs. Phillips & Cunningham as a warehouse for lard, linseed and other oils. The structure was four stories in height and extended through to Water street, and was packed with barrels of oil on every floor. A corps of firemen conveyed a line of hose up to the second and then to the third story. They broke in the sashes and entered with their stream and directed it upon the blazing oil.

They Leaped for Life.

The water seemed only to make the flames more wicked, and at a flash they enveloped the firemen and drove them back to the ladders, down which they leaped and tumbled in their frantic efforts to save their lives.

In all eight firemen were injured. The hospital ambulances were on the ground and the injured men were promptly removed. Every bit of water that could be obtained was now poured into the burning building, and Delaware avenue became a rivulet of oil and water. The police boats Stockley and King were soon at the scene throwing big streams of water, and the entire department was called out.

Three Blocks Destroyed.

In rapid succession the flames enveloped the stores of Jessup, Moore & Co., in which is Armour & Co.'s beef packing agency, and leaping across Water street attacked the rear of the grocery stores of Fitz & Kennedy at 141 and 143 Front street.

At 8 o'clock the walls of the buildings on Water street fell with a fearful crash, and several of the firemen working beneath were more or less severely injured. The fire continued to spread until it reached the top warehouse of George Wilkens and the offices of J. Walworth & Son, both on Front street. Before the fire department could get the flames under any control they had destroyed three entire business blocks.

Several Bodies May Be Buried.

It is thought that several bodies may be buried beneath the ruins of the fallen walls. A rough estimate of the losses places it at over $500,000, the insurance being little over half of the loss.

Among the firemen hurt were Philip and Charles Porter, of Engine Company 29, who were injured by exploding oil, and Frank Lowrey, of Truck D, who was hurt by a fall from a ladder.

SHOT HER SERVANT GIRL.

Belle Jamison Fired at Mrs. White, but the Latter Killed Her.

SHAWNEETOWN, Ills., Sept. 29.—Mrs. White shot and instantly killed Miss Belle Jamison here. Miss Jamison attacked Mrs. White with a club, then drew a pistol and fired one shot at Mrs. White. The latter drew a pistol and shot the assailant twice in the breast and through the head, death ensuing instantly.

The girl had been working for Mrs. Wright and became enraged at being discharged. The coroner's jury returned a verdict of justifiable homicide.

She Was Not Lured to the Harem.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Mme. Lanra Schirmer-Mapleson, the American singer about whom such sensational stories were circulated a few years ago to the effect that she had been poisoned in the harem of the sultan of Turkey, arrived yesterday on the Arizona. She says the story that she was lured to the harem of the sultan and detained there is absurd.

Jersey City Wants Better Water.

JERSEY CITY, Sept. 29.—A committee of the Jersey City board of trade, consisting of Dr. L. S. Gordon, Joseph A. Dear, Henry Lembeck, Alderman S. H. Smith and Lawyer James Flemming, waited upon the street and water commissioners and urged them to take some immediate action toward furnishing Jersey City with a better water supply.

A Newark Brewery Sold.

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 29.—Erastus Wiman and Brewers Bachman and Bailey, of Staten Island, have been floating the heads of a syndicate, purchased the Citizens' Brewing company at 99-103 Springfield avenue, Newark, for $800,000. It is proposed to increase the output of the brewery to 150,000 barrels per annum.

The Gold Is Coming Back.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—La Bourgogne brought with her in gold from Paris $1,770,000, making $4,020,000 in gold received. And $7,383,000 is known to be on the way to this country.

Freight Handlers on Strike.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 29.—The freight handlers employed at the New England freight house have struck work because they were not paid for overtime. Their places have been filled.

CABLE BREVITIES.

A dispatch from St. Petersburg announces the death of Alexsievitch Gontcharoff, the Russian author. He was born in 1822.

The English postal service is in a very demoralized condition.

Parnell is writing a book giving a history of his political career and pen photographs of some of his former associates.

Berlin advices state that the speech of Chancellor Caprivi, reiterating assurances of peace, has had a very good effect upon the public mind in view of the activity of military preparations.

Frederick Henry Paul Methuen, second Baron Methuen, is dead.

The report that the Duke of Cambridge may resign his office as commander in chief of the British forces is again in circulation, but Lord Wolseley denies prevents him from fulfilling his duties.

A dispatch from St. Petersburg says the police are showing great activity in searching for suspected nihilists. It is said that the police have received information that a plot is on foot against the life of the czar.

James Stephens, the former leader of the Fenians, has arrived in Dublin, where the government has given him a permit to remain during the rest of his life.

A MAN AT CROSS PURPOSES.

He Broke That Bachelor Resolution Made Some Months Ago.

HARRISBURG, Sept. 29.—Auditor General McCamant was last night again before the legislative committee investigating the auditor general's and state treasurer's departments. He emphatically denied that he had ever received any checks from ex-City Treasurer Bardsley, of Philadelphia, or that he had ever shared in any newspaper rebates on public advertising bills. He said he never took any rebates, and that he never had conversation with any one as to the price of the advertisements being paid by printers out.

The "burn this letter" postcript to one of his letters to Bardsley was written only because he did not want the letter made public.

Nothing of importance was developed by this examination except that the state treasurer had paid to Bardsley the school warrants, aggregating $435,000, at a time when Bardsley was owing the state treasury over $774,000 of personal property tax.

After an hour or more spent in cross examining McCamant Captain Skinner rose and made a motion that the attorney general be invited to appear before the committee. This motion was seconded and Attorney General Hensel, who was present, rose and, addressing Chairman Smith, stated that he desired, if allowed to appear, to suggest the name of a few witnesses he wished the committee to call, and if they were called he would be ready to proceed with his examination tomorrow morning.

It was now necessary for the committee to act, and Captain Skinner pressed his motion. Mr. Flinn said he feared there was a good deal of politics in this move on the part of the governor, and that he wanted to go slow in voting in the matter, and that other witnesses should be called. An executive session to consider the request.

The yeas and nays were called, and Flinn's motion was carried by a strictly party vote, Messrs. Flinn, Hall, Irvin and Keyser voting yea, and Monaghan, Skinner and Fow voting nay.

THEY BELIEVE SAM AND EVA.

The Church Authorities Declare Them Innocent Until Proved Guilty.

BROOKLYN, Sept. 29.—The elders, deacons and trustees of the Mt. Olivet Presbyterian church, Evergreen avenue and Troutman street, held a meeting last night, and after hearing Samuel Thornton's story of the alleged rescue of himself and Eva Jewell from drowning by Sam Hamilton, the doors were closed tight against reporters, but at 10:45 o'clock a gray bearded, solemn man opened the door and said, "A statement for the press." The reporters were then permitted to enter.

Mr. Thornton had gone, but Pastor Junor said, "At this session we passed this minute for the press and resolved that no other statement should be made." Thereupon he read: "We, the pastor and elders of the Mt. Olivet church, having heard Elder Samuel W. Thornton's statement, made at his own request, concerning his remarkable preservation from death, about which such conflicting statements have been made in the press, do hereby unanimously declare our belief in its truthfulness, our conviction that it can be verified and over determination to spare no pains to have such verification made as speedily as possible."

Pastor Junor then explained: "We believe this story because we have a right to as Christian brothers. It can be disproved if it is for the honor of Jesus Christ to deal with it accordingly. But when the honor of the man and of the woman are at stake we believe in it until fully investigated."

A Big Sale of Autographs.

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 29.—At the time of the death of Edward H. Leffingwell, of this city, he had probably the largest collection of autographs in the world. There were signatures of from 15,000 to 20,000 distinguished men. They were placed in the hands of a Boston firm and in two sales in that city and New York in the first $22,240.79, and in the second, $38,800.26, or a total of $61,101.07.

A Robber's Cave in New York.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Detectives, while searching for $500 worth of costumes stolen from Colonel McAuli, have discovered a den on Thirty-ninth street, in the West Thirty-ninth street. The costumes were found in the cave, and Charles Fisher and Edward Ryan were arrested. The vault was formerly used by smugglers.

Says He Will Sue for Libel.

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 29.—The Union announces that City Attorney Daly is found to bring action for criminal libel against R. B. Davenport, editor of the New Haven News. Mr. Daly thinks the paper charged him with having been bribed to refrain from prosecuting the proprietors of certain alleged gambling houses.

Dr. McGlynn's Birthday.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—The East Side branch of the Anti-Poverty society gave a birthday reception and entertainment to Dr. McGlynn last night at Nilsson hall. The doctor was fifty-four years old yesterday. About $1,200 was realized by the entertainment, and a purse will be tendered to Dr. McGlynn.

A Man and Woman Lynched.

HOLLANDALE, Miss., Sept. 29.—A white bartender named Davis was called outside of his saloon by a quadroon woman named Lucy Harrison, and was shot dead by a negro named Grant White. The couple who had conspired to kill Davis were captured by a mob, taken to a railroad bridge and hanged.

Ramona Blaine's New Position.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 29.—The Sun announces that Emmons Blaine, son of Secretary Blaine, has accepted a position with the Baltimore and Ohio railroad. Mr. Blaine is to be assistant to President Charles F. Mayer, having general supervision over the western department of the road.

Rev. Howie Mulcted.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., Sept. 29.—The trial for damages for alleged defamation of character, brought by ex-Assemblyman James Mallaniffe against the Rev. William Howie, has resulted in a verdict for the plaintiff, who gets $500 damages. Howie charged Mallaniffe with immorality.

A Woman Burned to Death.

ERIE, Pa., Sept. 29.—Mrs. Henry Keesler, wife of a leading business man of this city, was burned to death through a gasoline accident. Mr. Keesler, in trying to save his wife, was disfigured.

McNaughton Will Not Run.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Sept. 29.—Senator Donald McNaughton, who has twice been elected in this Twenty-ninth senate district, has refused to run again.

FASSETT AT FLOWER'S HOME.

Dined with the Governor and Party.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., Sept. 29.—The city where Hon. Roswell P. Flower lives was ablaze with fireworks and the scene of the most enthusiastic political demonstration on the occasion of the visit of Hon. J. Sloat Fassett and Hon. J. W. Vrooman, last night. Two immense meetings were held, one within the opera house and another without. Mr. Fassett captured his hearers completely. He praised the city of Watertown for its beauty and eulogized Mr. Flower. He said:

I am wearing this flower in my buttonhole tonight. [Applause.] It is a beautiful flower for it is named after a statesman, illustrious for the excellencies of the individual character of Roswell P. Flower, your distinguished citizen. I know not, I care not, what party managers may say, it is my right to say pleasant things about Mr. Flower, about Mr. Sheehan, and about every one on either ticket whom I know. It is my right if I please to say that Governor David B. Hill is a delightful conversationist and a pleasant gentleman to meet. It is my right to call the attention of the people to the excellent work he has done and in the interest of the opposing party. It is also my right and I reserve it as a partial gift and privilege of every citizen of this free republic to criticise and crucifixion that which I believe to be dread and vicious in the measures and in the principles of certain men as my political opponents. [Applause.]

Bay State Democrats Meet.

WORCESTER, Mass., Sept. 29.—The Democratic state convention opened here today. Hon. P. A. Collins is the chair. Governor Russell will be renominated and John W. Corcoran, of Clinton, will be nominated for lieutenant governor. Elbridge Cushman will be nominated for secretary of the commonwealth and D. W. Bell, of Marblehead, will get the nomination for auditor. All of these were on last year's ticket. New men will be selected for attorney general and for state treasurer.

Scott, of Omaha, is attending the Republican state convention at Glenwood Springs today and will try to have the convention of the commercial travelers of the city, of Marblehead, will get the nomination for auditor. All of these were on last year's ticket. New men will be selected for attorney general and for state treasurer.

Whitechapel Not So Bad.

LONDON, Sept. 29.—The London Chronicle, in commenting on Dr. Depew's visit to Whitechapel, declares that while that portion of London is no doubt wretched enough, the learned doctor would not have to travel far from the Grand Central station, New York, to find sights quite as horrible. It adds that a recent visitor to the slums of the East End from Chicago stated that he saw nothing so revolting as he had witnessed in his native city.

A Nail Keg Full of Old Cash.

BEAVER FALLS, Pa., Sept. 29.—The Economites have shipped to the Economy Savings bank of this city a nail keg full of old United States silver coins as bright and new as when they left the mint. The keg contained principally half dollars dated 1823, showing that they have been hoarded away in Economy for nearly seventy years. A small run on the bank caused the Economites to send out the money.

More British Troops at Sigri.

LONDON, Sept. 29.—The official report to the British office of the operations at Sigri shows that by permission of the Turkish authorities the British landed eight guns on the island for practice purposes. The electro-contact mines were placed across the mouth of the harbor to protect the works, and the usual mining operations were executed.

Powder in Her Stove Wood.

RONDOUT, N. Y., Sept. 29.—A dastardly attempt was made by Patrick Lavin to blow up the two story frame building occupied by Ann Walsh, a widow, and her daughter by placing a block of wood loaded with powder where it would be used in starting the fire. The attempt was unsuccessful, as a neighbor noticed the suspicious actions of Larkin.

He Was Praised by Grant.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 29.—Captain Gustavus A. Hull, U. S. A. (retired), died of pneumonia at his home in this city. He was born in Fredonia, N. Y., in 1827. Throughout the war he handled vast quantities of army supplies, and his efficient services brought him praise from Generals Grant and Sherman.

A Warrant for Knox.

TOPEKA, Kan., Sept. 29.—A warrant was issued for the arrest of Rev. John D. Knox for embezzlement. The complaint is made by L. P. Fisk, of Topeka, who charges Knox, as his agent, collected money and refused to turn it over. Knox's principal business was the negotiation of loans for eastern investors.

Immigration on the Increase.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—During August last 46,148 immigrants arrived in the United States, against 37,387 in August, 1890. Russia during the past month furnished 8,146 immigrants; Germany, 8,430; England and Wales, 3,396; Ireland, 3,850; Sweden and Norway, 3,751, and Poland, 2,784.

Exports and Imports for August.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—Exports of merchandise from the United States during August last aggregated in value $90,750,753, against $86,189,345 in August, 1890. Imports during August last were valued at $68,904,754, against $64,200,440 in August, 1890.

Shot Six Times by His Son.

LAUREL GROVE, W. Va., Sept. 29.—Robert Wilkinson while drunk made a desperate attack on his son and the young man shot him five times with a pistol and once with a shotgun. The wounds are fatal. Wilkinson shot his son seriously about a year ago.

They Blew Open the Safe.

BELVIDERE, N. J., Sept. 29.—Burglars entered the Oxford postoffice and drilled and blew open the safe, taking everything of value, viz., postage stamps, and stamps, considerable money and postal orders. There is no clew to the burglars.

She Abandoned Forty Infants.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Mrs. Dell, the sister of a notorious who is suspected of having abandoned forty infants in the past six months, in Brooklyn and Jersey City, was arrested after leaving a babe four days' old on a door step.

Daring Rescue of a Prisoner.

ST. STEPHEN, N. B., Sept. 29.—Thomas Mahan, proprietor of an illicit liquor shop, was taken from officers by three men with blackened faces, who covered the escort with revolvers and took the prisoner across the border into Maine.

King Kelly Wins a Lawsuit.

BOSTON, Sept. 29.—In the municipal court this morning Mr. James Stevenson brought suit against Mike Kelly, the baseball player, for room rent in the International hotel for seventeen days at $2 a day. Kelly testified that he lodged there about seventeen days, but the price was $1.50 a day instead of $2, and settled for the same. Then Judge Ely said, "Enter judgment for the defendant." Kelly thought that Judge Ely would make a good umpire.

A Few Pittsburg's Star Players.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 29.—It is said that during the recent trip of the Pittsburg club to Chicago no less than six agents of the American association attempted to decoy four of the best Pittsburg players into the Association camp for next season. The players approached were Shugart, Bierbauer, Beckley and Mark Baldwin. Bald win was offered $17,500 to sign a three years' contract.

Lord Hawke's Men Defeated.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 29.—A well earned victory was achieved by the Philadelphians over the Gentlemen of England at the Manheim grounds yesterday. George Patterson made the winning hit for the home team, and the American amateurs had defeated their English cousins by eight wickets.

This Is a Big Flywheel.

BOSTON, Sept. 29.—The biggest flywheel in the United States was turned in the morning in response to the touch of President Pillsbury, of the West End Street Railway company, at the new power house. The wheel is 28 feet in diameter, 10 feet 7 inches face and weighs eighty tons, with a rim 2 feet 6 inches in width and running 6,000 feet per minute.

Mobile Will Have a Steamship Line.

MOBILE, Sept. 29.—A convention of merchants here has resolved to subsidize a steamship line from this port to South America. A fund sufficient to make most of the payments of the first year was subscribed and a committee appointed to close a contract with the Pan American Transportation company, which promises to start the first steamer Jan. 31.

Almost a Lynching in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Sept. 29.—During a riot among dock laborers at the Western Transit company's shed Joseph Balca, a colored youth, stabbed and instantly killed James Kelly, a white laborer. Balca was assisted by Kelly's friends, and escaped being lynched by getting into a buggy. Several shots were fired at the fleeing murderer and one took effect in his right arm.

An Old Civil Engineer Gone.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., Sept. 29.—Archibald B. Crawford, civil engineer, died at his home in Pine Brush Sept. 28, aged eighty years. He assisted in the original survey of the Erie railroad and was the first man to drive a railroad stake in Chicago, after a tedious tramp of forty days, in 1837. Mr. Taylor was under sheriff of Orange county in 1863.

To Investigate the Poisoning.

PLAINFIELD, Conn., Sept. 29.—The excitement over the wholesale poisoning is still very great, although most of the persons who partook of Major Pickett's supper are coming around all right. Major Pickett and his cousin, Thomas Dooley, are still very weak from the effects of the poison. The town authorities will investigate.

THAT AFFAIR IN CHILL.

Uncle Sam Will Brook No Outrages There.

THE PRESIDENT IS ON THE ALERT.

An Important Conference at the White House at Which the Arrests of Americans by the Junta Were Considered. No Warships Will Be Sent South.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—The Harrison administration has a foreign policy. It is a vigorous one, too, as the dominant party in Chili will speedily learn to its cost, if it fails to accord our citizens there a proper measure of protection and respect. Several days ago Minister Egan sent to the state department a cable message in which he detailed at length the recent actions of the junta toward himself and other Americans resident at Santiago.

Americans Under Arrest.

That it was an important dispatch was evidenced by the secrecy with which its contents are guarded. It is stated that the junta is endeavoring to embarrass Mr. Egan; that it claims control of the refugees who have sought shelter at the American legation; that a force of police had patroled the block in which the legation is located, and that three Americans have been arrested.

A Conference with the President.

Acting Secretary Wharton consulted with President Harrison regarding the situation. The president decided to take no action until Secretary Tracy's presence could be secured. Secretary Tracy was in New York and a dispatch was sent to him asking him to return immediately. The secretary came on, and he, in company with Commodore Ramsey, John W. Foster and Acting Secretary Wharton, met the president at the White House.

The conference lasted an hour and a half. Mr. Egan's dispatch was produced and each member of the quintet expressed his views regarding it. It was stated by one of the gentlemen present that it is no uncommon occurrence in the Spanish American countries upon changes of government for refugees to seek an asylum under the several foreign flags represented there. In giving shelter to such members of the Balmaceda party as may have asked his protection Mr. Egan simply followed numerous precedents extending back for half a century.

The Junta Must Stop It.

The next question was as to the right of the junta to embarrass Mr. Egan by arresting persons who called upon him and annoying him in other ways. It was decided without any question that the junta could not properly do this, and furthermore that this government must at once assert its dignity by insisting that these persecutions stop. Upon this point no one spoke with more emphasis than President Harrison.

It was urged in extenuation of the junta's course that party feeling at this juncture is running high, and that Mr. Egan's attitude during the recent troubles had not been calculated to promote the friendliest relations between himself and the adherents of the Congressional party.

A Vigorous Protest.

It was agreed that the administration ought not to act hastily, but that it should at present content itself with a vigorous protest and wait the result. A message was then sent to Minister Egan instructing him as to the course he shall pursue and telling him to acquaint the department fully at each stage of the proceedings.

What the department's ultimate action will be if this system of espionage continues to be practiced upon the American minister can only be conjectured. Our naval force in Chilian waters is badly scattered. Two months ago Admiral McCann had four vessels—the Baltimore, the San Francisco, the Charleston and the Pensacola—under his command at Iquique. Since that time the two latter have returned to Mare Island, the San Francisco is now en route to that point, and the Baltimore, alone of the quartet, is left.

Secretary Tracy, while declining to make any statement relative to the conference, said that he did not intend to send any more ships to Chili and that he did not regard the situation there as threatening.

Parliament to Be Prorogued.

OTTAWA, Sept. 29.—Parliament will be prorogued next Wednesday afternoon. It is learned on excellent authority that the reconstruction of the cabinet will take place almost immediately. Peter White, speaker of the house, will succeed Senator Frank Smith as minister of public works. J. F. Wood, M. P., will be speaker and Senator Carling, minister of agriculture, will be succeeded by Hugh John Macdonald, M. P.

HOUSEKEEPERS' FACTS.

THESE SHOULD BE READ, REMEMBERED AND RESORTED TO.

Further Additions to the Scrap-Book—Receipts That Have Been Often Tried.

Also Much Other Priceless Information.

Here is another remedy for the fagged-out woman, who dashes off to the morning without any breakfast, to go to the dentist, the oculist, the butcher and the dressmaker, shops until the matinee begins, forgets to eat her lunch, makes a call here and another there, and reaches home to dress for dinner, wondering what makes her so tired: Drop a fresh raw egg into a glass of lemonade, shake all well together, be careful with the sugar, and drink it slowly and without ice when you begin to dress. It is astonishing how the dreary tiredness will leave your tired head and the bright things will come trooping into your mind to say over the coffee. It is infinitely better dose than sherry or claret or quinine, acting permanently as well as quickly.

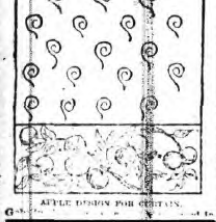
People who are coming back to town are beginning already to attend to their window gardening. Palms are good window plants, and, ferns, oxalis, ivy and myrtle for vases, hanging pots of geraniums, carnations, coleus, heliotrope and fuchsias bloom profusely with ordinary care. Pots of asparagus are delightful for vases, and so is the ivy geranium, which grows rapidly and covers a window frame.

An easy method for covering jam-pots and one which many housekeepers use is to dip the cut papers into a little boiled milk and lightly press them round the pot to which they will adhere and in this way keep the jam quite air-tight.

DESIGNS FROM FRUIT.

Nature Furnishes the Best Patterns—Art Cannot Improve Them.

No wonder fruit is the fashion. Dame Nature has done her best possible to make it so. And the designers are giving her a helping hand second. Here is a curtain suited to either the breakfast or the dining-room. It is made of Irish sheeting.



APPLE DESIGN FOR CURTAIN.

this pattern of apples and leaves and powdering scarlet-rose, with rope linen floss. For the entire figures and the border lines choose floss of a rich olive tone. Work the apples solid in their natural hue—they give the certain tint accent of color. Their rich red is peculiarly striking against the dull-blue background and olive foliage. Outline and vein the leaves with floss matching the centre figure, work the stems solid with wood brown, and you will have a curtain to be proud of—full of harmonious beauty, something to delight the eye and make glad the heart.

Rope silk makes a very handsome bit of drapery, but be sure to add a little wool to make the beauty dearly bought. For effect with the least possible trouble paint the design in flat tans of natural color, then outline and shade it with the needle.

A BLACKBERRY BORDER.

It is the fully-blackberry, plump and luscious, that straggles in beauty over the end of this scarf. It is made of lemon-colored cotton rep, and may be painted or embroidered at your good pleasure. Either way it will wash if you use wash silks or indelible paint. Outline the borders, the centre figure, the veins, with wood brown, with green leaves and very black berries, high above the surface. If you paint them let the berries hang from the bunch, put in the leaves flat, and vein and outline them with olive silk.

Another design—likewise a curtain—is something unique. It is made in stripes of old rose sateen, embroidered with long trails of red strawberries, set off with their own blossoms and leaves. When all are done press them smooth, line them to suit your taste, then join one to the other by sewing a row of brass rings between. You may leave the rings uncovered to form a chain effect or crochet them over with silk matching either tone of the embroidery.

Use twisted silk for it, working flowers and fruit solid, leaves in outline. The color shown is almost too dainty for the dining room. For boudoir or breakfast room nothing could be more delicately beautiful. In a bedroom its light would be hidden as under a bushel.

Fried Squash.

Squash, fried in the same way as is eggplant, will probably be new to many readers. The small, white squash is the variety usually used. Pare and cut the squash into rather thick slices, lay in cold salt and water half an hour, wipe each slice dry, dip into beaten egg and then into cracker crumbs; fry to a light brown in a pan of hot lard.

OYSTERS VERY TOOTHSOME.

Cooked This Way You Will Find Now Never to Them.

A new of oysters so unlike the ordinary stew that it deserves another name is made as follows: Strain the juice from two dozen oysters and put it to simmer very gently with four pepper corns, a tiny blade of mace, a pinch of cayenne, a dash of grated nutmeg and the veriest bit of yellow lemon peel. Meantime the oysters should simmer in their own liquor and be sprinkled with a teaspoonful of lemon juice. In another saucepan melt an ounce of butter, stir in a heaping tablespoonful of flour; when it bubbles strain over it the oyster liquor and add a gill of hot cream; stir until it reaches the boiling point, when set back and add the oysters. As soon as these are hot through pour into a hot dish over hot buttered toast.

Earth Worms from Flower Pots.

The presence of earthworms in a flower-pot is sometimes very injurious to plants. A simple way to get rid of them is to put a quart of lime in a gallon of water, let it stand till the water is clear on top; then dip off the clear water into another pail into which sink the flower-pot up to its rim. The lime will not hurt the plant, and the worms disliking it will come to the top, where they may be shaken right out. The best time, as a general rule, to water house plants is early in the morning. Palms and ferns require a great deal of water and should be watered every day in summer and often in winter. The best way to determine when to water them is to tap the pots with the knuckles. If it gives forth a "dull thud," the soil is sufficiently moist. If the sound is sharp and hollow water is needed, as the soil is dry.

Quince Honey.

I wish that every housekeeper [or every one that reads our little paper and does not already know it] would try my "quince honey." I first learned to make it about three years ago, and should not know how to do without it. It is so simply made—here is the recipe:

Pare and grate the outsides of three large quinces; take three pounds of white sugar and one quart of water, and put them in a preserving kettle together with the grated quinces, and boil about thirty minutes. When done it will have the appearance of very light jelly. Put it up in fruit cans the same as canned fruit.

For an Invalid.

Milk punch for an invalid is more efficacious if given hot, and the following method is the best way of preparing it: If possible have the milk warm from the cow, take one quart and add a couple glasses of sherry and the yolks of three eggs, with sugar to taste. First beat the eggs and sugar together; then add the wine, and while you are stirring it, pour in the milk, which has been brought to the boiling point, but not allowed to boil. If preferred, put in nutmeg and cinnamon to taste.—N. Y. Tribune.

To Remove Spots From Velvet.

Of all the provoking spots, those that appear on velvet are the most irritating. A simple drop of water will produce a deep dent which looks as if it would never disappear. So simple a thing as a light touch will "out" the spot provided a soft cloth be wet with boiling water and rubbed gently over, merely touching the garment. Wipe with a clean cloth. Raise the pile by holding the velvet over a kettle of boiling water.

A New Hard Sauce.

Take a large round steak, cover it with a dressing made of bread-crumbs, seasoned with sage, salt and pepper. Roll up the steak, tying each end like a bolster and put it on to boil in very little water. Cook it slowly for three hours, then put it in the oven to brown, basting it with dripping. Make a gravy of the fluid in the pot and serve separately. Tomatoes are liked stewed by some and mixed with the gravy.

Chicken Broth.

When a patient is very weak chicken broth is ordered instead of beef tea. It is easily made if a few small points are attended to. Cover the bones and a generous pound of the lean meat in a saucepan with three pints of cold water. Leave on a cool part of the range for an hour, not allowing it to become really hot. After this draw it forward and let simmer for three hours. Strain and salt to taste.

Coconut Cake.

One cup sugar, one-half cup butter, one-half cup sweet milk, one and one-half cups flour, one teaspoonful baking powder, whites of four eggs. Bake in three layers. Beat the whites of two eggs stiff, thicken with eight tablespoonfuls powdered sugar; spread between the layers and on the top, sprinkling plentifully with cocoanut.

How Goose Was Cooked A. D. 1300.

Stew your young goose in water and a little wine. When half cooked, okrve and fry. Then take a pinch of cinnamon, some cloves, a good handful of minced sage and parsley, and boil with a large cupful of brown stock. Pour in a deep dish, add the goose, grate a little parmesan cheese, and serve very hot.

Dyspepsia Remedy.

A new remedy for catarrh and dyspepsia is to put a tablespoonful of forty-pound bran in a glass of water; take after each meal. The bran may be bought at any feed store, but be sure to get the forty-pound, as the sixty-pound contains too much flour. Persons who are using the remedy are deriving much benefit from it.

To Make an Old Fowl Young.

An old fowl may be made as tender as a young one by preparing it as follows: Dress and stuff it, cover with a thin cloth and place in a steamer over a kettle of boiling water; steam for three-quarters of an hour; put it in the oven and roast as usual.

Around the House.

If a box of lime is placed in pantry or cellar and changed occasionally, it will insure dryness and sweetness.

When a cake is thickly iced, cut it with a knife that has been dipped in boiling water. This will prevent the icing from cracking.

A brown crust boiled in the water with cauliflower will help to subdue the strong smell.

In answer to several readers: Lanolin made from the fat of lamb's wool may be obtained at any first class druggist's. Rubbed well into the face it heals and removes any pimples, and clears the complexion.

If one has walked an unusual distance and the feet are very tired, the following treatment will bring relief: Put a good handful of salt into a gallon of hot water; plunge the feet in and bathe the limbs up to the knees. When the water gets cold rub the feet with a rough towel. This is an easy remedy and very efficacious.

A DYNAMITE DEMON.

A FIEND WHO WRECKS TRAINS FOR FUN.

His Strange Mania for Destroying Human Life—A Wizard in Locomotives—He Played the Role of a French Nobleman.

Wrecking trains with dynamite is the favorite pastime of Aline Louis Barrand.

It may seem a singular amusement, but Barrand enjoys it more than anything else in life.

He is never so happy as when sitting upon some elevation at the edge of a railroad, watching an express train coming thundering down the track right upon the dynamite cartridges he has placed there.

But his joy knows no bounds when the engine explodes the cartridges, and the scene of horror that ensues causes his eyes to blaze with pleasure.

This pastime of his is by no means theoretical either. He carries it into effect at every possible opportunity. Over and over again he has been caught in the act, and many a year of his life he has spent in prison.

He is no stranger to the insane asylum either. It is a wonder why he was ever liberated when once securely behind the bars, for his passion is a dangerous one. A man who habitually travels with a trunkload of dynamite one would think ought to be kept in close confinement. Yet this man has been liberated from Blackwell's Island, from Flatbush Insane Asylum, and from an insane asylum in France.

ALINE LOUIS BARRAND.

He is crazy beyond a doubt. His reasons for blowing up trains are freely given whenever he is arrested.

"Just for fun," is his answer, and he seems to think the whole affair a magnificent joke.

Barrand is now in jail at Belvidere, N. J., for wrecking the Lehigh Valley express, near Kennedy, on September 9.

He has many aliases. Louis Ramel is one, but he is best known as "The man from Peru." Other names under which he has traveled are Henry Evans, L. D. Barran, and Henry Descouvelles. His right name is Aline Louis Barrand.

This man has a wonderful history. It is checkered all over with the most atrocious crimes. If crimes they can be called, for there can be no doubt that he is not responsible for his actions.

Barrand was born in Switzerland in 1846. When he was only five years old his parents came to this country and made New York their home. While still a boy he showed remarkable aptitude for learning, and soon picked up not only several languages, but a thorough knowledge of the details of a number of mechanical trades. This knowledge has proved of great use to him in his fiendish schemes for wholesale slaughter later in life.

At an early age he developed symptoms of insanity, and in 1865 he was sent to Blackwell's Island. There he stayed for a year. His parents went to France and took him with them. On their arrival there they had him placed in an insane asylum. He was then twenty-one years old, and his innate shrewdness enabled him to effect his escape.

Back to America he came at once and began a career of crime that has scarcely a parallel. For ten years he practised his profession of dead beat, spending his time alternately in jail and in clover. For Barrand had a peculiar faculty for ingratiating himself with wealthy people and bleeding them by the cleverest kind of swindles.

Every time he was liberated from jail he changed his name and began his career again. Died in New York and in Concord, N. H., he worked his games, posing now as a French nobleman, now as a scion of a wealthy family, and now as a political refugee from Russia. The best people received him gladly into their houses—and repented of it. Jail had no terrors for him. He would spend a year there and quickly resume business under another name as soon as he got out.

But his career of crime is now locked up, is the placing of three cartridges upon the track of the Lehigh Valley Railroad. After placing them there, he sat down upon the top of a wood development. The express came along and the engine was blown up. The fireman jumped out of the window in his fright, and it is a miracle that no one was killed.

After his arrest he admitted to General Superintendent Goodwin, of the Lehigh Valley road, that he had done the deed, and said he had not selected that road or that train for any particular reason, but came to the conclusion after a careful inspection of the surrounding country, that that was a perfect spot for a very pretty explosion, and that was why he selected it.

Just Like the Brute.

"Is it becoming to me?" asked she, as she paraded in the costume of 100 years ago before the man who is not her lord and master, but is her husband.

"Yes, my dear," said he meekly.

"Don't you wish I could dress this way all the time?" she asked.

"No, my dear," he replied; "but I wish you had lived when that was the style."—Buffalo Commercial.

An Appropriate Place.

A countryman and his bride applied at the box office for tickets.

"Orchestra chairs, parquet or family circle?" asked the ticket seller.

"Which'll it be Maria?" asked the groom.

"Well," she replied, with a blush, "bein' as how we're married now, perhaps we had better buy the family circle.—Texas Siftings.

Not Ladylike.

She (at the races)—Oh, I'm getting awfully interested! I want to bet on the next race. Here're five dollars.

He—Certainly. Which horse?

"Which one is going to win?"

"I don't know."

"How stupid! Ask somebody."

"No one knows."

"No one at all?"

"Not a soul."

"Um—well, I guess I won't bet myself. It isn't very ladylike anyhow. You bet for me."—New York Weekly.

A Slamper.

An eccentric old gentleman placed in a field on his estate a board with the following generous offer painted thereon:

"I will give this field to any man who is contented."

It was not long before he had an applicant.

"Well, my man, you are a contented fellow?"

"Yes, sir; very."

"Then why do you want my field?"

The applicant did not wait to reply.—Exchange.

TALK OF THE TOWN

—The Harvest Moon is to be interpreted at Music Hall to-morrow evening.

—The October term of the Union county court will begin next Tuesday.

—The City Common Council will meet in regular session next Monday evening at eight o'clock.

—A new lodge of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows will be shortly instituted in this city.

—Saturday will be the Jewish New Year and will be generally observed by the Hebrews of this city.

—The Union County Board of Freeholders will hold a meeting in the Court House next Thursday afternoon.

—There is to be a vocal and instrumental concert in Reform Hall to-morrow evening. Admission 25 cents.

—Go to Sherwin's to-night and get what you want in the shoe line at the reduced prices. To-day is the last day of the special sale.

—There is said to be a gambling den on Somerset street which is being run nightly. The police should investigate the matter. It has become common talk of the city.

—The members of the Crescent base ball team will be given a benefit on the grounds in this city next Saturday afternoon. The New Brunswick team will be their opponents.

—The large table which was cast in the moulding department of the Pond Machine Tool Works Saturday was taken out of the mould yesterday and it proved to be a first-class piece of work.

—"Our Good Reads; how we got them and how you can get them," is the name of a bright little pamphlet by Editor Charles C. McBride of the Elizabeth Journal descriptive of the unsurpassed road system of Union county.

—On account of a holiday (Jewish New Year) the store of Schwed Brothers, the clothiers, will be closed from 6 o'clock Friday evening, Oct. 2d, till 6 o'clock Saturday evening, Oct. 3d; intending buyers will be served until 11:30 Saturday night.

—What is the use scrambling away out west for town lots that are a little more than alkali dust and sage brush, when there are Union county lots, equally as fertile plots in any quantity, all within easy reach of everything that modern progress can suggest? Union county property is simply turning itself into cash, and there is every reason why it should double in value, over and again, within the next few years.—Elizabeth Journal.

—The Y. M. C. A. would remind all young men that the advantages to be derived from the study of short hand are inestimable and any who have the necessary foundation of a common school education and who are going to enter business or any of the professions should seriously consider this opportunity that is so generously placed before them. As is well-known the cost is merely nominal—being simply the price of membership in the association. All interested in the classes are requested to apply at the rooms this or to-morrow evening.

—Probably the most timely feature of the October number of that peculiarly timely periodical, the Review of Reviews, is the group of articles apropos of the great Methodist International Conference that opens in Washington on October 7th, and lasts two weeks. Besides a general account of the Conference, in which some thirty different Methodist denominations participate, and a remarkable article by Mr. Stead upon the progress and influence of Methodism, there is a very brilliant character sketch of that young Bonaerges of British Methodism, the Rev. Hugh Price Hughes of London. Mr. Hughes will be in many respects the most conspicuous man in the Washington assembly. He has been characterized as the "livest of living Methodists." The Review of Reviews illustrates these articles on Methodism with portraits of more than fifty of the most prominent Methodists of the present day, all of whom are expected to participate in the work of the Conference at Washington. The illustrations include all the Bishops of the Northern church, ten Southern Bishops, eleven of the most prominent visiting clergymen from Great Britain, and various others.

PLAINFIELD THE PLACE.

To Grow Ripe and Die Happy.

Four men, a few days ago, stood on the corner of Front street and Park avenue, chatting, and their combined ages aggregated 335 years, as follows:

	Years
Timothy Morse, (nearly).....	91
Manning Verrapulle, ...	88
Augustus Swaim, ...	83
A. J. Mello	73
Total years	335

They were as jolly as kittens, and evidently had no idea of shaking off this mortal coil for some time to come.

Sentence Suspended.

In the case of Peter Brunn, who was indicted by the Somerset county Grand Jury on the charge of assault and battery on his wife, sentence was suspended by the court, owing to his previous good character. He was required to furnish one hundred dollars bonds, however, to keep the peace.

THE PROPOSED ROUTE.

Another Application for a Street Railway Franchise.

As reported in THE NEWS of yesterday the Columbia Navigation Company of New York applied to Council for a franchise to build and control a system of street cars in this city. The proposed route is as follows:

ROUTE 1.—Beginning at the intersection of Broadway and East Fourth street, passing through East Fourth street, through West Fourth street, through Plainfield avenue, through West Third street, through Rushmore avenue (a new street the other side of Clinton avenue, where real estate is being "boomed"), to the city limits.

ROUTE 2.—Beginning at the city limits, passing through West Fifth and East Fifth streets, through Broadway, through East Fourth and Sheriff streets, through Richmond street, through Putnam avenue, through Hillside avenue, through Broadway, through Woodland avenue, through South avenue, to the city limits.

ROUTE 3.—Beginning at the city limits, passing through East Front street to Johnson avenue, through Broadway, through North avenue, to Park avenue.

MORE MISPLACED CONFIDENCE.

Two Female Impostors Deceive the Guests of a Hotel.

The clerks, bartenders and guests of Ryan's Hotel, at Elizabeth, were neatly victimized on Thursday last by two well-dressed female impostors, who said they were collecting for a Catholic church in Plainfield.

They got $13.25 in the hotel. They then went to the Waverly fair, where they were seen spending money freely around the bars by Elizabeth officers, who described their appearance accurately to the hotel people.

It is thought the pair may try to work the same game in order to get money to go to the Inter-State fair at Trenton, and that the public should be warned against them.

Gen. Fay's Funeral.

The funeral of Gen. J. Augustus Fay took place yesterday afternoon at St. John's church, Elizabeth. The church was filled with friends of the dead soldier and politician. The casket was borne into the church by three members of the Grand Army and three survivors of the Twenty-fifth New Jersey Regiment. The pall-bearers were ex-Gov. Green, ex-Chancellor Runyon, Judge W. J. Magee, Judge P. D. Gilhooly, Gen. Frank Price, Col. Charles C. Stoffan, Counsellor James R. English and Counsellor E. S. Atwater. The services were conducted by the Rev. Otis A. Glazebrooke. The interment was at Evergreen Cemetery.

Rowland Stover a Candidate.

The announcement that ex-Surrogate James J. Gerber, of Elizabeth, would be a candidate next year for the office, has stirred up the Democratic politicians of Plainfield, who don't propose to let "Sandling James" capture the nomination if they can prevent it. The Plainfield Democracy will claim the office of Surrogate and present the name of Rowland M. Stover to the nominating convention. Even Republicans admit that that would be a good nomination.

SOCIAL & PERSONAL

Miss Jennie Waters has returned to her home in this city after Summering at Chatham, N. J.

Miss Angie Feytel of West Front street is spending a week with the Misses Tierney of Brooklyn, N. Y.

Mr. Edward Bowman, formerly of this city but now of Roselle, paid a flying visit to friends here yesterday.

Mrs. L Brokaw of West Fourth street returned home yesterday, after a week's visit with her brother at Dover, N. J.

Mrs. Andrew McCardle has returned to her home on North avenue from a pleasant visit to friends a Worcester, Mass.

Mr. A. M. Vanderbeck, the proprietor of the well-known sporting goods store on Park avenue, is slowly recovering from his recent serious illness.

Miss Carrie Knowland, formerly of this city, returned to her home yesterday from a very pleasant visit with Mrs. J. K. Myers of East Front street.

Mr. S. Wolff of Philadelphia was yesterday the guest of Mr. Harry Werner, the proprietor of Werner's Mammoth Clothing House on West Front street.

Mr. W. F. Trust and a party of friends are enjoying to-day angling for the finny tribe at Greenbrook. They expect to return this evening with the usual fisherman's luck.

The funeral of Andrew, the fifteen months old son of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Thorp of West Fourth street, took place from his parents residence this afternoon at two o'clock.

Judge Bartine, of Somerville, and Mr. Louis R. Blackford of North Plainfield, were recently the guests of Grand Chancellor John Ulrich of the Knights of Pythias at Belmar, his Summer residence.

Miss Florence Potter, daughter of Mr. Charles Potter, Jr., has made up a theatre party comprising fifteen of her friends to witness the "Harvest Moon," which is to be interpreted at Music Hall to-morrow evening. At the conclusion of the play the party will adjourn to the residence of Miss Potter on West Seventh street where supper will be served.

A VERY HOT SEPTEMBER

THE WEATHER INFLICTIONS WHICH PEOPLE HAVE ENDURED.

Figures Which Bear Thinking About —How the Muggy Misery Has Been Felt—Reflections on the Discomforts of a Hot Autumn—Sweating, Sweltering and Suffering in the City.

In an endeavor to do justice to the weather of the present never-to-be-forgotten melting and moist September, says the Trenton Times, the inquiring and perspiring student into meteorological causes and effects needs to pull off his coat, roll up his cuffs and wrap a wet towel around his throbbing temples before he can grapple with the warmly, clammy theme or get a hold upon its sticky miseries.

"The weather will be fine and cooler." This has been the stereotyped daily prediction which has met his eyes every morning for the past week, and that cast-iron old autocrat, Uncle Jerry, has as yet made no apology for his humorous provarications. "Fine and cooler," indeed! Why, the miscreant head of a predicting bureau who will issue such misleading promises ought to suffer a "fine" to the extent of a year's salary, and be laid away in the "cooler" until he repents of his unblushing mendacity.

Figures do not tell the tale or statistics relieve the sufferings of such a sweltering period as people have passed through since August was crossed off the almanac and September began to run the weather on its own account. Of course people expect it to be hot and uncomfortable in August, but when the middle of September has been passed they quite as naturally expect and look for climatic change which will give them bright and breezy days, tempered with cooling and consoling winds, and nights when an extra blanket is not to be scorned as a comforting solace. But have these hopes been realized?

Ask the business man who has had to rush around all day if he ever experienced such a sweltering season of suffering suffocation as he has had to fight against in his office, his store or in his trade engagements. Ask the mother of a little family who happens to live in a crowded city, what she thinks of having a broil, bake and stew and to do the work of her household while the thermometer has been glued fast at the 85 mark and the air has been loaded down with moisture and mosquitoes. And ask the doctors who have their long list of patients in crowded courts, stuffy back street and noisome alleys, what they think of the effect of such weather upon weak and worn stricken ones in their poor and wretched homes? God help the sick poor who long for a breath of pure air, yearn for a cooling, bracing breeze, and hunger for ozone and re-invigorating cold waves. To such as these the September weather we have experienced has been a time of untold sufferings, when "physicians were in vain," because they did not bring with them frost-kissed evening airs and days of delicious softness foreshadowing of an autumn free from enervating heat and mildewed mugginess.

But coming down to hard pen and figured facts, what do the comparative returns really show when the September of 1891 is put into the balance as against the Septembers of the previous seventeen years? Let the figures speak for themselves in these returns of the mean, maximum and minimum temperatures for the months of September from the year 1874 to the present time.

The Tappen-Comer Scandal.

The Tappen-Comer scandal, of New Brooklyn, came to the surface again yesterday in a complaint of assault and battery made before Justice Mitchell, of New Brunswick, by Rev. George Comer and Mrs. Mary A. Tappen against George W. Tappen. The friends of Mr. Tappen allege that this charge is brought merely to prejudice his case in the suit which he is trying to recover his property, now in the hands of his wife, with whom he quarrelled over her intimacy with Comer.

A New Stock Company.

Articles of incorporation were filed yesterday with the County Clerk at Elizabeth by the American Manufacturing Company, which will do business in Elizabeth and Plainfield in New Jersey, and in New York city. The capital is $100,000. The plant will be located at Elizabeth. The company will manufacture mechanical and electrical apparatus. The incorporators and stockholders are Samuel D. Hillman, of New York; Asa D. Phillips, of Plainfield, and Charles W. Leveridge, of Brooklyn.

ONLY A RIPE TOMATO.

But a Small Boy Found It—and Used It.

Yesterday afternoon an ice wagon rumbled along Somerset street. A small boy, half a block behind, ran swiftly forward, caught up and sprang on the step in back. He wanted some ice.

A block ahead of the ice wagon, on a corner, a group of small boys had gathered. One had a tomato which was large, plump, red, juicy—and soft. It was too good to waste on ordinary objects. The small boy held it in anticipation of something worthy.

The ice wagon rumbled by. Two black-stocking legs were visible on the step in back. So was that part of the small boy usually hidden by his coat. That was prominent. The rest of the boy was out of sight, leaning in the wagon, probably reaching for a piece of ice.

The scamp on the corner would have hugged himself for joy if he had the time. Instead, he grinned, ran a few steps forward, and to one side, so as to have an unobstructed view, his arm came back and then swung swiftly forward. There was a gleam of red in the air. A brief expectant pause. Then that tomato, that ripe, juicy tomato landed on the broad part of those exposed knickerbockers and changed their color from black to red in the twinkling of an eye. You can imagine the rest.

Charges Against a "Fraternal Circle."

BALTIMORE, Sept. 27th. (Special.)—Over $50,000 is involved in an application to the courts for the appointment of a receiver for the American Fraternal Circle, a beneficial organization, in which many prominent merchants, lawyers and politicians of Baltimore are interested. The bill charges that the conduct of the concern is fraudulent; that it imposes on and makes misrepresentations to the public in claiming in its circulars and pamphlets that the Rev. Thomas Myers, of the Bible House, is one of the directors, though that gentleman has protested against the use of his name in any of its literature; that from the date of organization until about June 1, 1891, a period of nearly three years, Charles W. S. Banks was the assistant secretary of the corporation; that prior to such connection he was entirely insolvent, and that while secretary and since that he compromised or settled with his creditors and made large compacts in that way; that he has handled a large portion of the funds and deposited them in different banks in this city to his private account, and that he appropriated the same for his own purposes. This money, the petitioners assert, amounted to many thousands of dollars, and was sufficiently large to cripple the corporation and render it insolvent. The petitions further state that Banks was forced to resign his position, and with him left the officers concealed the true reason and required Banks to sign a circular letter to the members of the corporation giving the reason of his resignation as ill-health.

General Latrobe, the chairman of the Board of Directors, will be the Democratic candidate for Mayor this Fall, and he has already occupied the Mayoralty chair four times. All the officers say the institution is perfectly solvent.—New York Tribune.

There is a branch of the above organization in this city.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

Declined the Call.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—I wish to inform you that on account of an urgent request of both German congregations I have charge of here and in Somerville, I declined the call of a prosperous German church in New York City. I dare say that it would have been to my advantage to accept, and the circumstances under which it was extended to me were very satisfactory, not to say flattering, but I could not come to the conclusion to quit Plainfield yet.

Truly yours,
F. KOECHEL.

General Crop Conditions.

*The observers and crop correspond*ents of the New Jersey Weather Service report for the week ending Friday, Sept. 25th, 1891, that abnormally high temperature and generally clear weather have prevailed, with a total absence of rainfall. These favorable conditions have caused the late corn to mature rapidly and it is now considered out of all danger from frost; great progress has been made in cutting and stacking the earlier varieties. The harvesting of buckwheat is progressing and the yield considered up to the average. The warm and foggy mornings, followed by bright sunshine, have been of great benefit to Winter wheat and rye; these conditions also greatly improve the quality of late fruits and sweet tomatoes. The picking of cranberries is progressing and the indications point to a good yield upon most of the bogs.

White farm work is well up with the season, in a few sections plowing has been retarded, owing to the very dry condition of the ground. The season on the whole, has been a most bountiful one, and in some sections "the oldest inhabitant" can remember nothing to excel it. The yield of all crops, except hay, has been remarkable, and it is next to never that so high an average is reached. The farmers most certainly have cause for rejoicing and thanksgiving.

As this is the last issue of the Bulletin during the present season, it is with pleasure the board of directors extend their warmest thanks to the observers and crop correspondents, who, in their performance of a gratuitous service, have greatly contributed to the welfare of the whole State.

I have recommended Dr. David Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" to many in Shelton and Birmingham, and I have yet to find one who has not been benefited by it.—C. L. Sexer, Birmingham, Conn.—Adv.

EQUINOCTIAL STORMS.

A Scholarly Clerk of the Weather Office Says They are Myths.

[From the Chicago News.]

Mr. Frankenfield, of the Weather Bureau, is quite a firm believer in the influence on the weather of the sun's position. He treats the subject lightly, for he deems it merely an aged superstition.

"It is a time-honored habit," said he, "to call any storm that might happen to come within two or three weeks of that time the equinoctial storm. But I believe our modern writers on meteorology do not give the matter any special attention. It belongs more properly to an economy than to our department. Still I'll look it up a little."

He went to the book shelves and began looking over the standard meteorological works. Barham, Kaemtz and Loomis were taken down and their indices thoroughly examined, but nothing about the equinoxes could be found. "This," said Mr. Frankenfield, taking down a larger book than the others, "is Farrel's last issue on the subject. It is considered very scientific." But a careful investigation seemed to strengthen the idea that the equinoctial storm has no place in science.

"We'll go back to some of the older fellows," he continued, "perhaps they will have something to say about it. Here's 'Old Probabilities' Almanack,' published in 1809." There was a record of cyclones for the last 333 years, but nothing about equinoxes. Then Daniel, of 1845 was tried, with no better result.

"There is only one more chance," he remarked as he took out an old, calf-bound volume. "Here is our oldest work. It is 'John Poynter, and was printed in 1738. If there is anything in there we shall have to give it up."

The pages were yellow with age and the letters were old-fashioned, but they betrayed no secrets about equinoctial storms, and Mr. Frankenfield was soon given to the realm of legendary mythology.

Two Valuable Vegetables.

The watercress is a plant containing very sanitary qualities. A curious characteristic of it is that, if grown in a free, rapid stream, it absorbs into itself five times the amount of iron than any other plant does. For all anæmic constitutions it is, therefore, specially of value. But it also contains proportions of garlic and sulphur, of iodine and phosphates, and is a blood purifier, while abroad it is thought to make wholesome condiment with meat, roast or grilled. The cultivated plant is rather more easy of digestion than the wild one.

Botanically, the onion belongs to the lily family. Boiled onions are the least objectionable in regard to odor, and are as easily digested as any. The oil in the onion passes off in the water in which the vegetables are boiled, and if the latter is changed after the onion is cooked and the water changed after they have boiled five minutes, and then again ten minutes later, there will be no odor through the house, and the onions will be white instead of gray, as they so often are. Besides being fairly nutritious, the aromatic elements, raw onions are especially good in breaking up a heavy cold; they are also stimulating to fatigued persons and are otherwise beneficial.

A Quaint Inscription.

In the graveyard at Basking Ridge, may be seen the quaint inscription on the tomb of an early settler. The spelling and capital letters are the same as on the stone:

Here lies ye Body of John McCullum, who Departed this Life April ye 18, A. D. 1760, in the 103 Year of his Age.

You Old, you Young, You Middle Aged, Great and Small,
Take up warning & be ready for Death's Call.

I once was Young, and
Many Days did Pass
I Dy'd when old, No Age
Fr m Death being free.

I'm now Intom'd in Earth,
Dark Grave my Bed
Conquered by Death, Make ready All to Dye.

A Special Election.

Judge McCormick yesterday, in the Union County Court, granted an order for a special election to be held in Westfield October 20 to determine if certain parts of that township shall be formed into a borough by the name of Westfield. This section of the court was based on a petition signed by one-tenth of the property owners of the township, asking that a borough be formed. Chauncey B. Ripley, E. Whitehead and Lodlow J. Clark are the moving spirits in the project, which will undoubtedly prove successful. In fact, speculation has already begun as to who shall be Mayor of the new borough. Chauncey B. Ripley seems to be the favorite, if he will accept the honor. There will also be Councilmen chosen.

City Court Notes.

Policeman Lynch arrested three tramps on West Front street last evening. They were given the choice of liquor and soliciting alms from pedestrians. This morning when arraigned in court they pleaded guilty to the charges preferred against them and City Judge Codington imposed a sentence of thirty days in the county jail in each case.

John Doty was arraigned in court this morning on the charge of using profane and indecent language. He pleaded guilty and City Judge Codington fined him three dollars.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Two Kinds of Federation.

Full of interest are the contributions of the Rt. Hon. Lord Brassey and Andrew Carnegie to The Nineteenth Century, on the subject of federation. Brassey is in favor of a huge federation of all the colonies of Great Britain with the home government. This must be either a trade federation or a federation for military defense. The first is inadmissible, as even so devoted an imperialist as Lord Brassey acknowledges. The mother country won't ever let the colonies go to themselves, he declares. They are necessary to her as a field for enterprise, also as a field on which her surplus population may step over. To make a united empire both a trade union and a union for military defense would be necessary, he confesses. But he also confesses that the high tariff colonies would not listen for a moment to proposals for a union with free trade England. To make a united empire both a zollverein and a kriegsverein would be necessary. Since the colonies would not listen to the zollverein, then let us fall back on a kriegsverein. Oh, yes, by all means let us have a kriegsverein.

So far, Lord Brassey.

Next comes Andrew Carnegie, with the free spirit born of American independence and 20,000,000 American dollars, and whistles down the wind the hint of any sort of union except one that shall include the whole English speaking race in all parts of the world. "English speaking unity" is the grand dream that hovers in the brain of Mr. Carnegie and many another generous idealist. There can be a greater federation than that of England and her colonies against the world—that of all the English speaking people, each with its own proper political government, just as the states of the Union in Mr. Carnegie's adopted country now have, but invincible against the united powers of all the outside world, just as Mr. Carnegie's adopted country has a prospect of shortly becoming.

England fondly hopes still to retain her remaining colonies under her wing and ownership. Carnegie's reference to this hope is significant. He says:

What lesson has the East to teach us upon this point? Spain had great colonies upon the American continent, but where are they? Seventeen republics occupy Central and South America. Five of these have prospered plane after planning, and have had a magnificent empire, which is now the Brazilian republic. Britain had a colony. It has passed from its mother's apron strings and set up for itself, and now the majority of all our race are gathered under its republican flag. What is there in the future of Britain's colonies of Australia and Canada that justifies the belief that any different result is possible with them? I know of none. On the contrary, all I know of the sentiment of the people in the colonies leads me to believe that there exists a healthy growth toward national life. They would be unworthy of their sires if they did not possess it.

It is a thousand pities that the majority of our race is to learn first that the parent land was the country to only feel. Britain can choose whether Australia and Canada and her other colonies, as they grow to maturity, can set up for themselves, full of friendly feeling and devotion toward her, or whether every child born in these lands is to be born to regard Britain as the cruel oppressor of his country. There is no other alternative, and I beseech our friends of the British federation to pause ere they involve their country and her children in the disappointment and humiliation which must come if a nation refuses to let its own children the development and independent existence of the colonies, for independence they must and will seek and obtain, even by force, if necessary.

Very learned, indeed, is that scientific essay that proves mankind has had teeth, because the said teeth are "the terminal points of the bony structure" and therefore of no use after the nourishment till it has gone the rounds of the blood and been used up. That is all well enough for science; but the fact remains that mankind's teeth decay because they have not hard work enough to give them healthy exercise. Let people eat hard crusts and tough food enough to develop the strength of the teeth and jaws. Then let them brush with a stiff brush every night, not only their teeth, but their gums as well, removing every particle of food, and the chances are that their teeth will remain white and firm. Animals and negroes in the wilds of Africa do not need toothbrushes because they eat the hard food that makes the jaws strong. But the stiff brush itself will be a help to civilized beings. It does part of the work of giving exercise. It may be painful at first, but it will toughen the gums.

A rare bird is Abe Buzzard, the Pennsylvania outlaw. Since he has been trapped and lodged in jail for what promises to be the remainder of his life he has solemnly repented. Not only that, but he has taken to writing letters to newspapers. In a communication to a Philadelphia journal he announces that if he can only be pardoned out he will dead sure devote the rest of his life to being a utilodanal, going around among sinners urging them to repent. It would, indeed, be ungracious to hint that the reformed outlaw is not sincere. If he is, however, exactly there is prison among his fellow convicts, of the toughest lot of sinners he can find, for where to begin on.

Bishop Foster, of the Methodist church declares, according to the Cincinnati Enquirer, that traveling evangelists and revivalists are a curse to the church. He even goes so far as to call them vampires.

That reverend old gentleman, Dr. Watts, who wrote the hymns, said something that is better than almost any of his hymns. It was this: "If you would convince a person of his mistake, accost him not upon that subject when his spirit is ruffled."

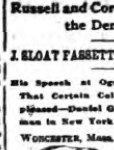
THE BAY STATE TICKET.

Russell and Corcoran Will Lead the Democrats.

J. SLOAT FASSETT'S STUMPING TOUR

His Speech at Ogdensburg—A Report That Certain Colored Men Are Displeased—Daniel G. Griffin Made Chairman in New York State.

WORCESTER, Mass., Sept. 30.—The Democratic state convention at Mechanics' hall nominated the following ticket: William E. Russell for governor, General John W. Corcoran for lieutenant governor, Elbridge Cushman for secretary of state, James S. Grinnell for treasurer and receiver general, W. D. T. Treiry for auditor, George M. Stearns for attorney general. The last four nominated were reported by the committee on balance of tickets, and on motion of Hon. T. J. Corgan the report was unanimously adopted. Mr. Corcoran is at present chairman of the Democratic state committee.



W. E. RUSSELL.

Governor Russell's Speech.

In the course of his speech of acceptance Governor Russell, after referring to state issues, said:

We unhesitatingly declare for a sound currency and an honest dollar, and we protest not only against the free coinage of silver, but against the current legislation, the effect of which is bringing us dangerously near to a silver basis and an unsound currency. I believe that in this contention both parties are honestly opposed to any legislation, present or prospective, which threatens these consequences. Then let the Republican party declare this conviction and repudiate such legislation, that the unanimous voice of the commonwealth may be heard to protest against dangerous financial doctrines with no discordant note or uncertain sound, and to use the means of carrying out her wish.

We believe that revision and reduction of tariff taxation are the supreme political issue, and we again declare that it should be on lines of free raw material and cheapening the cost of the necessaries of life. We confidently believe that this will be a benefit not only to all our people, but especially to New England industries, the demand of which for such reduction has been unheeded in the McKinley bill.

Chairman Collins to Mr. Lodge.

Chairman P. A. Collins delivered an address in which he challenged Mr. Lodge and his Republican associates to indicate the legitimate industry that has benefited by the wages idea. He said that after a year's operation of the McKinley bill. The interests of this state, he said, were sacrificed because it was necessary to pay the debts of the administration to monopoly. The indignant uprising of the people that astonished Mr. Lodge and his confederates was the intelligent protest of Massachusetts against the treachery of her Republican congressmen, and her demand for relief will not be abated until the last cruel, crushing, tariff on wool shall come to revive her injured industries.

Fassett at Ogdensburg.

OGDENSBURG, N. Y., Sept. 30.—J. Sloat Fassett and J. W. Vrooman were accorded a magnificent reception in this city. In the evening the opera house was packed to overflowing to listen to Mr. Fassett's speech. He said:

I came up here from my home and New York city that I might get near to the great Republican heart, to hear its throb, to feel its pulse here in St Lawrence. There is no trouble here among your people with 126,000 acres of Republican soil, with a majority that is large in your generosity. You stand here in the north the northern light of New York state Republicanism—an outcrop of generosity—in the darkness on Manhattan island. They are afraid of you down there in New York, and they look with appreheusion to the returns from St. Lawrence. The issue this fall is, shall we have a good government? It was much simplified for us by our friends at Saratoga. There was no room in that convention for any member of any delegation out of twenty-five assembly districts who decided to befriend ex-President Cleveland; there was no room there for an organization friendly to Tammany Hall.

Tammany Hall's Alleged Rule.

There was no room there for the Democracy representing half of the Democracy of New York, who stand to-day in open defiance of the purpose of fighting Tammany Hall. Their cries consisted in not bowing the knee to Tammany Hall. There was no reward paid to the Kings county Democracy. Never did a rider in the saddle, booted and spurred, ride so roughly shod over all obstacles as Richard Croker, the chief sachem of Tammany Hall, rode at Saratoga over every one who dared to oppose Hill and be made to yield in one or two minor matters. And so Tammany Hall has put under her feet all but a little brush every single Democrat who is obedience. Her leading orator, Bourke Cockran, in the convention denounced as traitors and assassins the men from Kings county who dared to speak their minds freely as Americans on the floor of the convention, dared to call them traitors because they had threatened that they might split. Now they appeal to the Democracy of the state to support them. They have forgotten that there is a limit even to the loyalty of a Democrat.

Tariff Reform and Silver.

Mr. Fassett charged that the Democratic platform was as silent as the grave on the question of tariff reform. He said that no one knew what the silver plank meant. But Mr. Hill and his friends said that it should read:

"We are against the coinage of any dollar which is not of the same intrinsic value as any other dollar."

Continuing, Mr. Fassett said:

Our friend, the governor, would like to say to the people of the south and west why this plank does not read anything. Of course we are against the coinage of any dollar that is not of the same intrinsic value of any other dollar. Neither are we for the dollar coined and its intrinsic value we don't discuss.

The Associated Press agent says that as soon as the governor can get to Albany from the governor's private secretary. And Mr. Tracy, a member of the committee, remembers says that the words were not in the platform as it was adopted in the committee. Is it possible that Governor Hill has been guilty of tampering with such an important document as the Democratic platform?

Griffin for Chairman.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—The long deferred meeting of the Democratic state executive committee was held at the Hoffman House. William F Sheehan, S. W. Rosenbaum, D. Cady Herrick, Daniel Lamont, Amos J. Cummings, Edward Murphy and Senator Stadler were among those who paced the famous corridors early. D. G Griffin, of Watertown, secured the chairmanship.

Following are the committees appointed: On literature—Messrs. Cummings, Mc-Lean, Lamont, Meyer, Stading, Kenney, Lacy and Preston. On registration—McLaughlin, Herrick, Voorhees and Sullivan. The last member of the committee will be opened as soon as Clerk De Freest returns from Troy, whence he went to order desks and other furniture.

May Republicate Mr. Fassett.

ALBANY, Sept. 30.—It is said that at the annual meeting next week the Afro-American league may republicate Mr. Fassett, the Republican nominee for governor. In 1889 the league introduced into the legislature a bill preventing the life insurance companies of this state from discriminating against the colored race. A committee was favorably received by the Democratic assembly, but the Republicans soon refused to report favorably. The legislative committee of the state league wrote a letter to Mr. Fassett asking his attitude upon the measures demanded by the league, but no answer has been received.

To Fight Warden Brown.

SING SING, N. Y., Sept. 30.—Five ex-keepers of Sing Sing prison, recently dismissed by Warden Brown, are making a fight for reinstatement. The men are Samuel R. Smith, commander of Post 6, G. A. R., of Sing Sing; Garrett Tenhagen, James Whaley, Frank Patridge and John Griffin. All of these men are members of the G. A. R., and they declare that their discharge was in direct violation of the provision of the civil service law.

Hudson County Republicans Meet.

JERSEY CITY, Sept. 30.—The Republican party of Hudson county, N. J., had a convention in Wood's hall to revise its constitution. Ex-Mayor Collins presided and said that one of the objects of the revising was to stop the indorsement or nomination of Democratic candidates by Republicans. At the evening session the revision committee was not prepared to report. The convention will therefore meet again on Oct. 7.

FASHIONS

PRETTY COSTUMES FOR MISSES.

Garments That Will Be Stylish Without the Charge of "Overdressing."

One of the chief dangers in choosing costumes for the miss of from fourteen to sixteen years is in not keeping them plain and yet have them pretty. We give here two costumes that will be fashionable this season and that are neat and not too dressy. The first is suitable for plain or fancy materials, particularly velvet and cord. Fitting bodice to the waist, let in with a V-shaped velvet vest, fastened invisibly up the left side, and trimmed cord. Gigot sleeves, trimmed with the cord at the wrist. A small frill is arranged round the waist, finished by a band of velvet. Round skirt, gathered in at the waist, and ornamented on the left side.

FOR OUR GIRLS.

The second design is suitable for cashmere or any woolen material, trimmed with embroidery. Full bodice, cut V-shape at the neck and fastened invisibly up the centre of the front. Full sleeves, gathered into a double band of embroidery at the wrist and a frill at the top at the waist. Round skirt, gathered into the waist.

Lawyer Monaghan Missing.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—A general order was sent out from police headquarters last night, directing that an examination be made of all the hospitals and hotels for Robert Jones Monaghan, of West Chester, Pa. Mr. Monaghan is one of the most prominent Democratic lawyers in Pennsylvania. Since Friday he has been completely missing in New York as though the earth had opened and swallowed him up, and yesterday his brother and a party of friends came to this city to look for him.

Civil Service Reform Men Meet.

BUFFALO, Sept. 30.—The Civil Service Reform league is in session here. President George William Curtis delivered his annual address. He was listened to by an intelligent audience composed mainly of well known professional and business men. His remarks were frequently applauded.

Revolutionist Garcia's Great Scheme.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Sept. 30.—Catarino Garcia, who was supposed to be the leader of the recent alleged revolution against the Mexican government, never crossed the Rio Grande, but remained safe on this side while the deluded converts to his fiery editorials invaded Tamaulipas to be shot at.

Lord Tennyson Was Pleased.

LONDON, Sept. 30.—Lord Tennyson, the poet laureate, was so delighted with Ada Cavendish's rendition of Mr. Irving's play that he has offered him a high price for his comedy he was induced to sell because of his conviction that the production would be presented in a worthy manner by the famous American company.

Gone with $2,000.

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 30.—Leonard P. Brown, Jr., formerly treasurer of the Newark and Bloomfield Gas company, and until a few days ago assistant treasurer of the Holbrook Printing company, of Manchanic street, it is said, has disappeared, leaving his employers $2,000 or more short.

The Airship Flew Away.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 30.—Pennington's airship, which was under a tent at the fair grounds in readiness for a trial to be made Saturday, was caught up by a storm and carried away. As no trace of the ship has been found it seems probable that it was destroyed. The ship cost $30,000.

THE TREASURER TALKS.

Boyer Denies All Knowledge of the Correspondence.

HE PAID WARRANTS IN ADVANCE

He Says $430,000 of School Moneys Were Handed Over to Barkley Six Months Before They Were Due to Keep Them Out of the Sinking Fund.

HARRISBURG, Sept. 30.—At last evening's session of the legislative investigating committee which is inquiring into the conduct of the auditor general's office and the state treasurer Captain Skinner offered a preamble and resolution setting forth that the state was annually losing about $80,000 in the advertising and collection of mercantile taxes in Philadelphia and other large sums by the retention of fees by the city treasurer and register of wills of Philadelphia, and requesting the governor to consider the expediency of convening both branches of the legislature by an order that the laws relative to the advertising of mercantile lists may be repealed and legislation enacted abolishing the fee system. The resolution was defeated by a strict party vote.

Treasurer Boyer Testifies.

Auditor General McCamant's examination was concluded early in the evening session, but nothing new was elicited. Treasurer Boyer was then called. He explained that he paid the school warrants of $430,000 to Bardsley in December, 1890, for the year 1891, a month or two before they were due, because he wished to keep the money out of the sinking fund. Had it been placed there there was danger that there would not be enough money in the general fund to meet all the appropriations of the legislature about to meet.

The Bardsley-Livesy Letters.

He denied that the letter Bardsley-Livsey correspondence and said he did not know the latter's whereabouts. He stated that the law compelling the investment of sinking fund moneys in United States bonds had never been complied with during his administration. The committee adjourned to meet in Philadelphia on Oct. 13.

Livesy Will Explain Later On.

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 30.—Eugene Jones is a son-in-law of the missing State Treasurer Livesy, of Philadelphia, who for some time past has been wanted as a witness in the investigation of affairs of the Keystone bank. Mr. Jones insists, despite the reports to the contrary, that Mr. Livesy was here until about three months ago and spent nearly a month at his home. Mr. Jones, however, maintained the utmost secrecy as to the whereabouts of his wife's father-in-law, and even the intimation that he is Canada met no denial. In due time, he says, Mr. Livesy will explain all about the affairs of the Keystone bank.

To Get Bardsley to Confess.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 30.—It is alleged here that a big effort is on foot to get Bardsley to turn state's evidence and tell all he knows at the extraordinary session of the senate, which has been called to try the two officials. The plan is to get members of two Republicans and two Democrats, and the Democrats, it is said, think that if they can get Bardsley to unseal his lips they can accomplish a reduction of his sentence. Several conferences have already been had with Bardsley in his cell at the Eastern penitentiary.

A Judgment Against Bardsley.

HARRISBURG, Sept. 30.—In the Dauphin county court of common pleas judgment was taken against John Bardsley for $594,019.40, being for license tax collected by him in 1890. This amount includes interest and the state treasurer's commission, the two items being over $28,000.

HE BOUGHT TWO GOLD BRICKS.

The Same Old Game Costs a Pennsylvania Farmer $3,500.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 30.—John Appleman, of Buckhorne, Columbia county, has been cheated by a couple of clever gold brick swindlers. A gang of counterfeiters in the mint for the purpose of selling to the government two gold bricks which he had purchased from a stranger in his town for $3,500. A simple test by the mint assayer revealed the fact that Mr. Appleman's bricks were a first class article of brass. Mr. Appleman was the most surprised man.

He said that a man giving his name as Joseph Parker had appeared in his village and made all the hospitals and hotels for Robert Jones Monaghan, of West Chester, Pa. Mr. Monaghan is one of the most prominent Democratic lawyers in Pennsylvania. Since Friday he has been completely missing in New York as though the earth had opened and swallowed him up, and yesterday his brother and a party of friends came to this city to look for him.

Arrested the Whole Circus.

JERSEY CITY, Sept. 30.—Jersey City police arrested the entire troupe of W. L. Main's circus for parading in this city without a permit. The manager claimed ignorance of the ordinance and all were released.

Barber for the Assembly.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Sept. 30.—Aaron Barber was nominated for assembly by the Democrats of Livingston county, as Avon.

DID THE HOE GIRLS ELOPE?

They Were Both Married Without Parental Consent. It is Said.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—Miss Olivia Hoe and Miss Laura Hoe, daughters of Robert Hoe, were married yesterday morning at St. Mark's church without notice, it is said, to their family.

Miss Olivia Hoe was married to Henry Lewis Slade of the Calumet club, the Rev. Dr. J. H. Rylance, rector of the church, performing the ceremony. Her sister was married by the Rev. Richard Cobden to Mr. Percival Lowell, a Harvard graduate, graduate at Princeton, class of 1888, and is a lawyer at 49 Broadway.

The news of the double marriage was certainly a surprise to a number of friends of the family of the brides, Mr. Robert Hoe, the father of the brides, who is the senior member of the printing presses, is out of town with his family.

At his residences at 11 East Thirty-sixth street it was said last night that all of the family were out of town. Miss Olivia Hoe and Mr. Slade called on the Rev. Dr. Rylance and told him that they were going to get married.

Dr. Rylance knew that Mrs. Hoe was opposed to the match. But as he saw that the two were firmly decided upon marrying, and as they were of lawful age, he agreed to perform the ceremony.

Mr. Battle Over a Gas Bill.

Andrew Carnegie Sued by George Westinghouse for the Sum of $100,000.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Sept. 30.—Andrew Carnegie and George Westinghouse have gone gunning for each other. The trouble is over a gas bill of $100,000 which Westinghouse's company claims Carnegie's plants owe it. Carnegie's people say they don't owe a cent, but declare that the Westinghouse folks owe them thousands of dollars for breach of contract.

The first speck of war appeared when Carnegie, Phipps & Co. secured a preliminary injunction restraining the Philadelphia Natural Gas company from shutting off the gas at four of Carnegie's plants on Oct. 1. Mr. Westinghouse is the president of the Philadelphia company. He came back at Mr. Carnegie with a suit for alleged unpaid gas bills covering a period of two years, and amounting with interest, to $100,000.

During that time the Carnegie concerns paid $818,810, but a bill for the balance has been ignored. The result will be to force the gas company to demonstrate that the natural gas supply is really becoming exhausted, and to prove that it has not been cutting off iron mills merely for the purpose of raising the price to consumers at the giltedge rates which natural gas here-abouts is now fetching.

MRS. THURMAN DYING.

The "Old Roman's" Helpmeet Cannot Recover, It Is Said.

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 30.—Mrs. Allen G. Thurman, wife of the "Old Roman," is at death's door and cannot recover. She has been quite low for several weeks from an attack of grip, coupled with the infirmities of her eighty years. Mrs. Thurman was born in Chillicothe in 1811, and was the daughter of Walter Dun, a wealthy merchant and landowner. During her early childhood she accompanied her parents to Lexington, Ky., where in after years she married a resident named Thompkins, by whom she had one daughter.

Her husband dying soon after their marriage, she returned to Chillicothe, and in 1844 was married to Judge T. Firman. From this union two children were born. The son, Allen W., well known from his connection with baseball circles, is the only one residing at home.

SECOND PRIZE AND SUICIDE.

Young Orator Gadd's Failure Stirs Up His Love and His Life.

LINCOLN, Neb., Sept. 30.—At the oratorical contest at Cotner university Marion Gadd took the second prize. The young man hastily left the room after the announcement. A pistol shot was heard, and when the students rushed out they discovered that Gadd had blown his brains out with a revolver.

It has been learned that Gadd was in love with Miss Hunter of a wealthy family of Lincoln man, and that she had promised to marry him in case he won she first prize in the oratorical contest, otherwise she would have nothing to do with him. He accepted the proposition, and his suicide was the result of his failure.

The President Would Not Interfere.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—A boyish escapade has brought on Thomas Pelham Curtis, son of Colonel Curtis, of the judge advocate's department of the army, dishonorable dismissal from the military academy at West Point, where he held a cadetship. He was found by New York papers then made a false entry in the hospital register. The greatest influence was brought to bear on President Harrison to get him to mitigate the punishment in Curtis' case, but the president refused to do so.

Grand Master Sweeny Re-elected.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 30.—The Switchmen's Mutual Association re-elected the general officers as follows: Grand master, Frank Sweeney, Minneapolis; vice grand master, John Downing, Chicago; second vice grand master, Thomas Howe, Kansas City; grand secretary and treasurer, William A. Simsrott, Chicago. The meeting indorsed the course of The Switchmen's Journal with reference to the trouble between the Switchmen's association and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen.

Is This Swift's Comet?

LICK OBSERVATORY, MOUNT HAMILTON, Cal., Sept. 30.—An exceedingly faint comet has been discovered by E. E. Barnard. Its position Sept. 28 was 8h. 38m. Mount Hamilton mean time; right ascension, 20h. 58m. 28s.; south declination, 1 deg. 23m. 38s. The comet is moving rapid to the northwest. It is possible that this is the long expected periodical comet of Swift, but if so, it is very far from its predicted place.

Dr. Falkner's Preferment.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 30.—The United States senate committee on finance has asked Dr. R. P. Falkner, professor of statistics in the Wharton school, University of Pennsylvania, to continue the charge of their investigation of wages and prices in this country and abroad for the past thirty years. Dr. Falkner will accept. His salary will be $6,000 a year.

Desperate Battle with a Hog.

CORTLAND, N. Y., Sept. 30.—John Jacobson, a farmer living near here, started out to the hogpen to kill one of the hogs. The animal showed fight, and in the struggle that followed Jacobson was severely bitten, one finger of his left hand being entirely chewed off. The struggle lasted fully five minutes, when the hog was finally killed.

The Knout Is Not Used.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 30.—While exaggerated reports of the famine in certain provinces of Russia have been given currency, the suffering is undoubtedly appalling. It is true, however, that starving peasants are subjected to the knout for non-payment of taxes, or that there is any danger of a revolution.

Attacked by a Bull.

PATERSON, N. J., Sept. 30.—Ex-Assemblyman Thomas McCrea, of this city, was painfully bruised by a bull at the poorhouse farm. He had entered a pen in which the animal was confined to examine it, when the bull attacked him from behind, butting him in the side. An attendant armed with a pitchfork beat the animal off.

A Matter on the Warship Pinta.

MANHATTAN, Sept. 30.—Much trouble have broken out on the Chilian cruiser President Pinta, which is moored in the River Elbe. The crew have refused to perform duty. The captain is unable to enforce discipline and has appealed to the authorities to assist him in confining the mutineers.

He Was Short $16,500.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—James Orr, a public accountant, who mysteriously disappeared on July 17 and was supposed to be insane, has been discovered to be short $16,500 in his accounts with the American Horse exchange.

CHILI SEEMS SORRY NOW

A Practical Apology for Insults to Uncle Sam.

THE WHITE SQUADRON WILL WAIT

Secretary Tracy's Fleet of Sixth War ships Could Get to Valparaiso in a Month, but They Will Not Go Unless the Junta Gets Saucy Again.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—Chili is coming to her senses. The junta has withdrawn the guard from Minister Egan's house and the petty persecutions to which he has been subjected have ceased. Such is the substance of a telegram received from Mr. Egan at a late hour. It is quite probable also that no further attempts will be made to molest the refugees who have sought shelter at the American legation. President Harrison believes that the troubles at Santiago are now practically over. He believes, too, that Chili's backdown is due to the firm stand taken by this government, and that, had we not acted so promptly, the gravest consequences must have ensued.

Minister Egan's Ultimatum.

The exact nature of Minister Egan's instructions are not made public. It is known, however, that he informed the junta that the United States would tolerate no further indignities either upon himself or the refugees who had sought the shelter of our flag. This brought the junta to its senses, and according to Mr. Egan's telegram it is now extricating itself as gracefully as possible from its awkward position. The troubles, of course, are not wholly over. More or less friction will no doubt result as long as Mr. Egan remains at Santiago, but the acute symptoms have passed.

The Case of the Refugees.

The difficulty growing out of the refugees who have found an asylum at Minister Egan's house is an important question to be handled. Notwithstanding the fact that the German minister opened his doors to the refugees, and that Balmaceda, the most conspicuous refugee of them all, sought safety at the Argentine legation, it is still a question with the administration whether Mr. Egan ought to have pursued the course he did.

This, however, was a minor matter so long as the junta showed a disposition to insult and annoy our representative. The president's first determination was to uphold our national honor. This being accomplished the rest of the problem is a matter of comparatively easy solution.

The President Was Angry.

At the cabinet meeting it was suggested that perhaps the persecution of Mr. Egan was due to personal reasons, and should not be construed as an insult to the United States. To this the president is said to have hotly replied:

"I don't care what Mr. Egan's shortcomings may have been. He represents the United States in Chili, and any insult offered to him is an insult to the United States that we cannot and will not overlook."

If preparations were being made for actual war the actions of the state and navy departments officials could not have been more strangely mysterious. Since the conference at the White House every move of these officials has been suggestive of important doings.

The only steps that have been taken to increase the naval force are the orders sent to the San Francisco to return to Valparaiso. She was intercepted at Payti, Peru.

Sense of the Outrages.

From Minister Egan's dispatches and from those of Captain Schley, of the Baltimore, the junta placed a guard around the American legation at Santiago and arrested two of Minister Egan's servants. The junta also put a guard around the Baltimore to prevent refugees from going aboard, and Captain Schley complains of insolent and harsh treatment generally of the officers and men of the vessel and other Americans in that vicinity. There seems to be no doubt that the junta has been unnecessarily severe and uncivil in its treatment of Americans.

Denied by Secretary Tracy.

The report that orders have been issued to the squadron to prepare for war of the vessels thereof to prepare for service at Valparaiso is positively denied by both Secretary Tracy and Commander Ramsey. The departments will wait for further development before anything of this kind is done. There is nothing that would please naval officers here more than to see the squadron of evolution dispatched at once for Chilian waters in order to get a good practical test of what the new navy could do in the way of meeting an emergency. They claim the squadron could reach Valparaiso in thirty days.

The Uprising in Guatemala.

CITY OF MEXICO, via GALVESTON, TEXAS, Sept. 30.—A dispatch by courier to Newton, on the frontier, from Guatemala and having diplomatic origin, fully confirms the reported civil war in Guatemala on Sept. 15. It seems that Manuel Montufar, the son of a former Guatemala minister in Washington and a strong partisan of Barrios, was addressing a the multitude on Sept. 15, which is Independence Day, when some of his remarks were hissed by the opposition and a struggle commenced for the possession of the platform.

Artillery Brought Into Play.

It was finally held by the rioters, and the mob was augmented in numbers and threatened the palace. Artillery was brought into play and soon cleared the main plaza. The main streets were cleared by the infantry, but the rioters held many alleys and buildings. Throughout the night and the following two days there were small mobs in various parts of the city which were promptly dispersed by the military.

Several persons were killed. The loss of life seems to have been almost entirely on the part of the mob.

Another Louisville Bank Failure.

LOUISVILLE, Sept. 30.—The Kastuckey Savings bank, the fourth bank that has failed in Louisville inside of six months, has closed its doors. Unlike the other failures, however, the depositors in this institution will be paid in full.

Gave Her Life for Her Child.

LEBANON, Pa., Sept. 30.—Mrs. Thomas Bachberger while endeavoring to save her fourtyear-old son, who had strayed on the track of the electric railroad, was struck by a car and instantly killed. The child was fatally injured.

A Grain Elevator Burned.

DANBURY, Conn., Sept. 30.—Anderson & Co.'s grain elevator was burned last night. Loss, $30,000; insured.

Getting Around Papa.

"O papa, let me kiss you right on that dear little bald spot."

"Whose bill is it, and how much?"—Life.

Be Different.

She said "good night;" she said it o'er,
As to minutes she drew near;
She said it twenty times or more,
And still she wasn't through.

'Tis strange how different people are:
Her father big and gruff,
Exclaimed in tones you've heard afar,
And that proved quite enough.
—Washington Star.

William Gould, Jr., of Albany, who was found guilty of aiding and abetting Book keeper Whitney in falsifying the accounts of the Albany City National bank, was sentenced to six years' imprisonment.

Hands of colored negroes have almost taken possession of Lee county, Ark. The killing of Tom Miller, a white man and agent for J. F. Frank by the rioters and strikers of Marianna, precipitated a serious state of affairs.

Thomas J. Marsh, a well known figure in Massachusetts politics, died very suddenly at Boston, Wis.

It is again rumored in Washington that the president will ask for the resignation of Pension Commissioner Raum.

Two steerage passengers on the Wasa land are attacked with smallpox after landing in New York. There were 18 other immigrants on the vessel.

It is denied that Convict Meredith, who shot Phil Daly, was transferred from Sing Sing to Auburn asylum because he knew dangerous prison secrets, and asserted that he stole and falsified the prison books while in Sing Sing.

A Big World's Fair Banquet.

CHICAGO, Sept. 30.—The banquet tendered by the citizens of Chicago to the European envoys to the Columbian exposition at the Palmer House last night was one of the most magnificent ever given in this city. The royal and imperial commissioners left for New York today and will sail for Europe on Oct. 7. England gets 203,000, Germany 150,000 and Denmark 30,500 square feet of World's fair land for their exhibits.

FOR THE FAIR SEX.

FASHIONS FOR FALL WEAR. FACTS ABOUT DRESS.

The Freshest and Brightest Gossip in Women's World, Gathered and Condensed From the Most Authoritative Sources.

Blue English serge costumes, with neat and dark blue felt hat to match, will be fashionable during the autumn and winter season. Tweeds in brown and blue mixtures are also popular. Golden browns aroused with red also forms another pretty combination. These tweeds are of various qualities, but a special sort is that woven by the fishermen in the Orkney Islands during the winter, when they are unable to carry on their ordinary vocation. The Orkney tweeds have a very rough appearance, and that done by the women is of soft texture, yet it is considered very stylish and quiet-looking, and the sudden popularity it attains has tended to many imitations. As a guide to those who wish the genuine article, exporters of the fabric call attention to a briny odor that clings to the real cloth. Then for association with bonfires, netting and other recognized property of the sons of Neptune.

Rules for Waist Lines.

"I think there is the most urgent need of a radical reform in dress," said a clear-headed, far-seeing woman as she let out her breath in order to bonder correctly, "but I tell you in all frankness I don't know how the people who advocate it are going to succeed in the lines they have adopted at present. You may paper the rooms of the women of all creation with Venuses de Milo, Greek slaves and all of the other ideal figures in creation, and it will never amount to shucks. They are not beginning at the right place to edjucate. They must make the the first move on the forces of the lords of creation, you must educate them before you can ever hope to reform the attire of womenkind.

"You may meet and converse and debate would without end, but you will never make out anything, even though Chautauquas may plant and Frances Willard may water and Kate Field and all of the rest, with their eccentric, wheel-like line of battle and fight never so valiantly in the good cause."—N. Y. Ledger.

Why Sue Never.

Many years ago, when boundary lines between different States were being arranged, the final settlement of a line carried a certain house that had always stood in one State almost across into another. In the house there lived a good old woman. She used to live in South Carolina, but was thus suddenly made a resident of North Carolina. When she heard of the change, she said:

"Now I'm never going out of it. It's a good thing I've lived in one State all my life. I always heard North Carolina was a despera-ate unhealthy place to live in."—Harper's Young People.

One Thing a Man Can't Do.

A man may drink with a man and grade,
Man may drink with a man and be true,
Or, by strange coincidence, do both at once,
Man may drink with a man and be true.
But I know one thing a man can't do,
And that is a thing he can't do,
He can't drink with a man
And then lick the man he drank with.
You can't do that, you know.

A CARNIVAL OF SPORT.

THE GREATEST ATHLETIC MEETING EVER HELD IN THIS COUNTRY.

Walter Schock's Running Was the Feature of the Day—Some of the Men Who Broke Records—Sport on Land and Water.

The first annual carnival of amateur sports, held under the auspices of the Manhattan Athletic Club of New York City, on Saturday, Sept. 19, brought out the greatest crowd that has ever witnessed an athletic meeting in America.

There were naphtha launch, canoe, eight-oared shell and swimming races on the Harlem River; athletic and cycling events on the new and handsome running track, and field sports and football, baseball and lacrosse matches on the field. Besides all these there was a mammoth competition in which the crack marksmen of the club took part.

And the records, several of them were smashed, the handicaps forcing the best athletes to extend themselves.

In the first heat of the 100 yard dash Luther Carey, the phenomenal sprinter of the team's pretty-but-it-gets-there stride, was announced to have run in 9¾ seconds. This would have equalled the world's amateur record for the distance made by John Owen, Jr., of the Detroit Athletic Club, at Washington, D. C., October 11, 1890.

CONNEFF ON SCRATCH.

In the one mile walk H. Curtis, the English champion, who now wears the cherry diamond of the M. A. C., also displayed magnificent form. Only recently Curtis was disgracefully beaten by T. Shearman and C. L. Nicoll, his club mates. Saturday he started off like a steam engine. At the quarter mile his time was 1m. 22s., two seconds faster than the best previous record for the distance. Curtis finally was beaten by twenty yards in 6m. 36 2-5s. Shearman was second in 6m. 42 4-5s. The world's amateur record for this event is 6m. 39 2-5s., by F. P. Murray, October 27, 1888.

"Tommy" Conneff, as usual, distinguished himself in the one mile run. There were a dozen starters in the race, with handicaps ranging from twenty-five to sixty yards.

Conneff started off at the crack of the pistol as though for a half mile race. He did the first quarter in 58½ seconds, and was then with the leaders. He stayed with them for another lap, finishing the half in 2m. 4½s. Three-quarters were done in 3m. 15 4-5s., and the plucky little fellow began the struggle home. It was slip and tuck with Tims down the stretch, but Conneff got the verdict by the narrowest margin. His time was 4m. 29½s. This now is the world's amateur record, supplanting J. G. Gamge's 4m. 31 2-5s., made November 11, 1889. The world's amateur record, also by George is 4m. 19 2-5s.

The two mile run was tried in vain, a record was broken was the half mile run. W. C. Bates, N. Y. A. C., was scratch in a field of seven starters. The finish was a fairly reach. T. B. Turner, M. A. C., was nearest scratch, with fifteen. The scratch man finished the quarter mile in 56 seconds. Then he got in a "pocket" and was forced to slow up. He soon extricated himself, however, and took the lead entering upon the last furlong. Turner was beaten one inch. The winner's time was 1m. 56½s., supplanting his own American record of 1m. 58½s., made at Travers Island, June 20, 1889. F. J. Cross in a special trial at Oxford, England, March 9, 1886, ran a half mile in 1m. 54 2-5s., which is the world's record. Turner's running was a surprise, his performance being equal to 1m. 53s. for the full distance.

George Gray, N. Y. A. C., competed in the sixteen pound putting competition. It goes without saying that he broke the record. He was rather awkward about it, though, and added a full 6½ inches to his record breaking put of the week before, his figures being 46 ft. 7¾ inches. Gray's usual scheme is to add half an inch or so to each throw, whereby he is enabled to break the record oftener.

Big "Jim" Mitchell also beat his record performance of the Metropolitan championship by throwing the fifty-six pound weight 34 ft. 4¾ inches. His former best threw was 33 ft. 8½ inches. In the hammer throwing Ned Queisburner, M. A. C., had an allowance of 8 feet on Mitchell. With the help of this handicap the Manhattan man won by 6 inches. Mitchell's best throw was 103 ft. 9¾ in.

Defends the Umpire.

"The people's opinion seems to be that the umpires take special delight in giving unfair decisions and for that reason should be roasted on every occasion," remarked Captain Anson one day this week. "It is a ridiculous notion, but many of the cranks cling to it like grim death. The whole trouble is caused by the fact that every few enthusiasts went an even thing. They go to a game to see the home club win, and if it fails to show up in good form, they commence to hunt up excuses. The umpire is usually the first victim, and as a general thing the storm of indignation against his work is caused by the pantomime acting on the part of a player. This arouses a crowd more than a ten minutes' speech. When a player throws down his glove, digs a hole in the ground with the toe of his shoe, or flings his hat away, the spectators conclude that he is too much overcome by indignation to protest in any other way and they take up his cause. As a result the umpire has to stand a roast during the entire game."

Another Record Gone.

The opening day of the bicycle tournament at Peoria, Ill., on Sept. 17, was a great one and 7,500 people were in attendance. The weather was perfect, the track very fast and the enthusiasm of the spectators unbounded. Everything had been led to expect that at least one world's record would be broken and they were not disappointed. It was not only broken, but badly shattered. This was the two-mile Safety record. W. F. Murphy was the only man and he went against a two-mile Safety record of 5m. 2 4-5s., making the distance in 4m. 59 3-5s., ending amidst a shout which almost made the hills around the Illinois River tremble.

CHIPS FROM THE DIAMOND.

Wilmot and Findley came off the bulk of Chicago's base-stealing honors.

Pouts seems to have retained considerable of his former pitching skill.

John Corkhill, has lately been batting in some fine form for his old-time form.

The Bostons say the Louisville grounds are the finest to play on in the Association.

Emslie has the best, clearest and loudest voice of any umpire now in the League.

Baldwin, King and Hutchison are just now the most effective pitchers in the League.

Pitcher Stein, formerly of Chicago, has been pitching well in the Western Association.

Tebeau and Bennett are the only League third basemen who are accepting over 80 chances in 100.

Tim O'Rourke, of Columbus, seems able to hold his own among American Association third basemen.

Catcher Ryan, of Louisville, has been totally incapacitated for duty by a strained and swollen knee.

Pittsburg, this year, is entitled to the credit of having supported a losing team better than any other city.

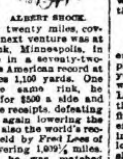
So far from being released, Joe Quinn has agreed upon terms for next season with Boston's League club.

Billy Shindle can have a berth next season with the Baltimore Club if he desires to play for a reasonable salary.

A CHAMPION BICYCLIST.

He Rode 1403 Miles in 168 Hours and Made a Record.

Albert Shock, the long-distance champion of the world, was born in Berlin, Germany, March 4, 1859. In five feet eight inches tall, weighs 150 pounds, and rides a 52-inch wheel. Shock commenced his racing career in Chicago, Oct. 26, 1883. It was in a six-days race of twelve hours a day. Shock rode 855 miles and secured third place. In March, 1884, at Memphis, he rode six-days, eight hours a day, against Dan O'Leary, the pedestrian, who rode ten hours, changing every mile. Shock defeating O'Leary by some twenty miles, covering 611 miles. His next venture was at the Washington Rink, Minneapolis, in January, 1885, where in a seventy-two-hour race, he made the American record at that time of 922 miles 1,100 yards. One month later, at the same rink, he won a match race for $500 a side and 65 per cent. of the gate receipts, defeating W. M. Woodside, and again lowering the American record and also the world's record of 1,000 miles, held by Fred Lees of England, Schock covering 1,039¼ miles. The following April he was matched against John S. Prince of Boston for a six-day race, twelve hours per day, for $1,000 a side and the 72-hour championship of the world. The race took place in the rink at Minneapolis. Prince won and lowered the world's record to 1,043 miles, where it now stands. Schock covered 1,029½ miles. At Omaha, in 1887, Schock was again defeated by Prince in a six-days race of eight hours a day. Schock's greatest performance was at Minneapolis, when he defeated W. J. Morgan in the last 147-hour race ever run in the world. Morgan rode 20 miles without stopping, and Schock rested 15 hours. Up to Friday morning, when Schock came to the front and won the race, riding 1,403 miles, the best record in the world.



ALBERT SHOCK.

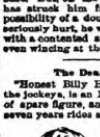
Players Tricks.

There are tricks in all trades. Whenever any Cleveland pitcher needs a breathing spell McKean will likely find both his shoestrings untied, and it takes him so long to fix them as it does a girl to put her bangs up in curl papers.

It is funny to watch the actions of a ball-player who has been hit. If the ball has only touched him and there is any possibility of doubt as to whether he has been hit or not he will dance wildly around and moan and roll over—in fact, do everything to arouse sympathy, and what is more to the purpose, get him his base. But, on the other hand, if the ball has struck him fairly and without the possibility of a doubt, unless he has been seriously hurt, he will trot down the lines with a contented smile on his face, never even wincing at the pain.

The Dean of Jockeys.

"Honest Billy Hayward," the dean of the jockeys, is an Englishman, short and of spare figure, and at the age of forty-seven years rides at 115 pounds with ease.



HAYWARD.

He is a man of many years of riding and much ill-tutored mud sling-ing, his reputation has remained untarnished. He is an artist in the saddle, has a wonderful knowledge of pace, the lightest and best of hands, the seat of an accomplished rider, as well as jockey, and a clearness of judgment and coolness of nerve that is even largely to the riding of long distance races in vogue when he began riding in this country.

He is quiet and reserved, and has handled his earnings with prudence. He says the most exciting race he ever rode was on a horse called Bingaman, "way back in '73, while he was in Mr. Sanford's employ. It was a purse race for $400. The race was a dead heat between Bingaman and Marty Jordan, and the owners decided to run it off. This resulted in three more trials, a mile and three-quarters each time, two of which also resulted in dead heats, and in the third Bingaman won by a length.

A Pitcher's Debut.

Hutchison, Chicago's phenomenal pitcher, although considered a "colt" has been playing ball since 1878. It was in that year that he first became a pitcher. He was then playing at short for Yale, and Lamb of Chicago, was Yale's pitcher. In this year they removed the pitcher's box five feet and Lamb was unable to pitch effectively from that distance. Yale was in a predicament for a pitcher, and it looked as if their hopes for the championship had been shattered when Hutchison essayed to try his hand at pitching. To say that he was a success would be putting it mild. I believe he won every game he pitched. His speed was something terrible, and the college nine could not touch his speedy and masterly delivery. This was the beginning of Hutchison's wrestling career with twirler, and at that time he certainly had no idea that in a few years he would be the best pitcher in the land.

HOW TO EAT CHERRIES.

A Drummer Seeks Some Points on Stoning and Goes Home.

The drummer was bidden to that festively known as a lawn party, and among the refreshments provided upon that festive occasion were some cherries. The drummer was considerous that there were depths of social etiquette which he had never been able to sound, and as he was after all a fellow of means, with the American adaptability, and did not wish to do that which was not according to the best usage, he bethought him that it were well to watch and learn about him a view to getting clews. In the matter of cherries he was especially troubled, as he did not in the least know what was the proper method of disposing of the stones when once the fruit had passed his lips. He decided, therefore, that before he attempted to eat any of the luscious looking fruit, he would wait and see what his young and beautiful hostess did in this delicate matter.

"I watched her," he goes on to say, "and soon had the pleasure of seeing her slip a cherry between her lips, rather daintily, aboard the Whopper, our lookout cried land ahead! an' ours enough right over on our starboard bow. There was an island an no one ever seed afore, an' which our skipper said warn't down on none o' his charts. We have to, right in the eye of a blow' wins an' six of us was sent out in the skipper's gig to make observations. We made direct for the island an' landed an' discovered about the as fairies morals' without disk iverin no signs o' hanimal life or vegetation. We got chilled through an' purceeded to build a fire which we had scarcely lighted when the island began to squirm as' to sink as if by magic. To make a long story short what we took for an island was a whale; I guess he couldn't stand the hot fire in the small of his back, so he sank to the bottom of the ocean. We all escaped exceptin' our cook, poor Tommy Riley, he fell into the hole the fire made into the whale's back an' was drowned. (Contemptuously) Have I seen whales?—Life.
